ACCUSTOMED in the present day to the highest degree of civil and religious liberty that man perhaps can ever expect to enjoy, free to express our opinions without the terrors of the stake or the tortures of the rack, to awe us into silence, or force us into dissimulation, it is with a mixture of curiosity and indignant surprise that we cast back our glance over a space of centuries, and see our ancestors struggling in all the mazes of ignorance and the labyrinths of superstition, alike passive under the mental tyranny of their monkish rulers and the bodily servitude of their despotic Lords.

But every thing in this world changes, and excessive tyranny only more effectually prepares the way for perfect freedom. The minds of men in some degree induced to reason by the measures of Henry the Eighth, were no longer to be blinded by false pretences or intimidated by impotent threats ; and the commencement of the Reformation dawned steadily and beautifully through the mists of papistic craft that the mental sloth of ages had permitted to accumulate.

It is difficult for us to imagine the despotic control at that time exercised over the whole faculties, whether physical or mental, of our ancestors ; and it requires some effort to picture to ourselves the revivifying effect that must have attended the spreading of the reformed doctrines. Men, who had seldom exerted their reasoning powers, were at once invited to discuss theological difficulties, and to solve the deepest mysteries of religion : and as by the reformed tenets every matter was open for discussion, there were few bounds set to inquiry ; but various tenets and various opinions were as quickly spread, as eagerly adopted.

At this critical moment a translation of that Book, by all allowed to be the only proper guide of conduct, the only safe chart by whose aid man could hope to steer through the stormy seas and dangerous shoals with which his course is surrounded, was published and set forth : and its effect in hushing controversy and silencing factious clamour, may not unaptly be compared to that of the sun, when he breaks through the fast flitting clouds, and shining forth, dispels them by his brightness; and day, beautiful day, reigns in all its splendour.

The light that thus broke through the mental darkness of the reign of Henry the Eighth, fed as it was by the Holy Word of God, burnt purely and steadily; and although adverse winds and hostile gusts shook its flame for a time during the reign of Mary, they could not extinguish it, but left it to throw its calm and heavenly rays on our own and future ages.

That translation of the Bible is now for the first time reprinted,* and words of ours are not necessary either to point out its worth or to extol its merit, to cite it for its interest or celebrate it for its rarity—but it goes forth once again into the world as the labour of a man eminent for his piety and learning, as a faithful version of the original Scriptures, and as one of those means to which we may gratefully ascribe the establishment of our present national religion.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL DESCRIPTION

WHILE the reprint of this Bible cannot fail to be welcome to the public generally, there are many who, we feel certain, will not be dissatisfied to have some bibliographical details concerning so curious and valuable a book.

The following account will be purely and strictly of a bibliographical nature; both because it would exceed our limits to give any other, and because a work has been recently published,* in which full information on the subject renders any further notice on our part unnecessary.

The book itself is printed in a very peculiar angular Swiss or German type. Its size is a small folio, and there is no name of place or printer in it.

Many and various are the suppositions as to where it was printed. Some say Zurich, others Frankfort, and indeed most of the principal cities in Germany, in their turn, come in for a share of the honour. The only circumstance from which any satisfactory conclusion can be drawn, is the resemblance existing between the type or wood-cuts contained in it, and those in any work of which the printer is known. Proof of this description exists in favour of Frankfort, where some works were printed in the years 1533, 1539, and 1551, by Christian Egenolph, in which similar wood-cuts appear; but on very close examination, although seemingly precisely alike, they will be found to be different wood-cuts, copies of each other; so that this proof is of very little value, even independent of the fact, that other books, printed at other places, are to be found, which have some of the wood-cuts in them, apparently the same as those used in the Bible. Then as to the resemblance of the type, which was indeed what induced Mr. Wanley to conclude it was printed at Zurich; it appears to be no better criterion than that of the wood-cuts, since somewhat similar type is to be found in books printed at several different places.

The only satisfactory proof that could be relied on, would be, tracing in the work of some known printer, precisely the same type as that used in this edition. Meantime we should be content to allow Zurich to enjoy the honour so long generally ascribed to it, of having put forth this volume; at least until such time as its rivals shall bring forward some stronger proof of their claims than any hitherto adduced. Indeed it seems to be somewhat in favour of the title of Zurich, that the only other edition of this Bible, printed abroad (in 1550), was printed at that place, in the house of Christopher Forshower, or Froschover, in a similar type, only smaller and sharper. Although this circumstance is indeed urged by some as first giving rise to the report, that the present edition had likewise been printed there.

The copies of this Bible known to exist, are those in the Libraries of the British Museum.—Bodleian. Public Library, Cambridge.—King's College, Cambridge.—Sion College.—All Souls' College.—Trinity College, Dublin.—Lambeth Library.—Bapt. Mus. Bristol.—DUKE OF SUSSEX.—Earl Jersey.—Earl Spencer.—Dr. Coombe.—The late William Coombes, Esq.—George Offor, Esq.—B. Harrison, Esq.—Rev. R. Daley.—Lea Wilson, Esq.; and Mr. Reed.<sup>b</sup>

Bibliographical Description.

"Of seven copies of this edition," says Mr. Cotton, "which I have seen, that in the British Museum is the only one that has the title-page, and even that is made up from two copies. Of the others, the Bodleian copy is by far the finest." Not only is the title-page of the one in the Museum made up from two copies, but it is even made up from two separate wood-cuts of the same design; for in the one, as will presently be seen, the texts in the scrolls are in English, in the other, in Latin.

"BIBLIA

The Bible, that is, the holy Scripture of the Olde and New Testament, faith fully and truly translated out of Douche and Latyn

in to English.

M.D.XXXV.

S. Paul. II. Tessa. III.

Praie for vs, that the worde of God maie haue fre passage, and be glorified &c.

S. Paul Col. III.

Let the worde of Christ dwell in you plen teously in all wysdome &c.

Josue I.

Let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exerceyse thyselfe therin daye and night &c."

This mention of its being translated "out of Douche and Latyn," was no doubt a bookselling artifice of the time, to make the work circulate better, as being intimately connected with the reformed doctrines, which were then equally well known by the term of German or Dutch doctrines. Nay, we are even told that the early reformers of that day were commonly called Germans, on account of their adoption of those reformed opinions which first sprung up in Germany. That Coverdale did not follow Luther's version, it only requires a very slight comparison of texts to prove; but he no doubt availed himself, where there occurred any difficult reading, of all the different means of assistance within his power, as indeed he himself intimates in his prologue to the reader.

The above title is printed in a compartment of six wood-cuts, of which the top and bottom ones are of the whole width of the page. The wood-cut at the top represents original sin, and Christ's resurrection; the one at the bottom represents the king seated on his throne, the bishops on his right hand, and the peers on his left, kneeling. The bishops are in the act of presenting the Bible to his Majesty, which he graciously receives. The royal arms underneath. A scroll on the bishops' side with the text, "O how swete are thy wordes vnto my throte: yee more then honey &c. Psal. 118." On the other side a scroll, of which the Latin is, "Non enim erubescio Euangelii, virtus enim dei est in salutem Rom. i." On the right of this wood-cut, outside of the scroll, is a whole-length figure of St. Paul; on the left, also outside of the scroll, the figure of David playing on the harp. The other four wood-cuts represent Moses receiving the tables; Aaron reading the law to the people; our Saviour giving his disciples power to preach and heal; and St. Paul preaching. These cuts, as well as others, occurring throughout the work, are well executed, and Sebald Behem of Nuremberg was most probably the artist employed.

On the reverse of the title is, "The boke of the whole Byble, how they are named in Englysh and Latyn, how longe they are wrytten in the allegacions, how many chapters euery boke hath, and in what leafe every one begynneth." It contains, however, only references to the first four parts; those to the Apocrypha and the New Testament were probably on another leaf, which is missing in this copy (the Museum one).

Then comes the dedication, "Vnto the most victorious Prynce and oure most gracyous soueraigne Lorde, kynge Henry the eyght, kynge of Englonde and of Fraunce, lorde of Irlonde, &c." signed "Youre graces humble subiecte and daylye oratour, Myles Couerdale." 5 pages. The Museum copy has "Quene Anne" in the dedication; Sion College has "Quene Jane;" Lambeth Library has a copy with each; the Bodleian has "Quene Anne;" All Souls' College has neither; Dr. Coombe's has neither; the late Mr. Coombe's has "Quene Anne."

Bibliographical Description.

Then "A prologe. Myles Couerdale Unto the Christen reader." 6 pages.

Then "The boke of the hole Byble" &c., 2 pages. This is evidently part of another edition inserted in this copy (the Museum one), or rather this set of preliminary pieces do not belong to this title-page; since a portion of the same information is to be found printed on the reverse of the title-page.

The contents of "The first boke of Moses," 1 page.

"The first boke of Moses, called Genesis." Then should come, according to Herbert, a map of the Holy land. The four other books of Moses follow, with tables of contents prefixed to each: in all, fol. i—xc. Signature a i, to p vi, in sixes. The first leaf appears not to have any signature, or else it has been rubbed out in this copy (the Museum one), the second leaf being marked a ii.

Then comes a title-page: "The seconde parte of the olde Testament." with the names of the books contained underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse "The boke of Josua. What this boke conteyneth." Joshua to Hester, fol. ii—cxx (the reverse of). Tables of contents at the commencement of each book. Signature a a ij, to v v vi, in sixes.

"The boke of Job," table of contents. "The Psalter." "The Prouerbes of Salomon," table of contents. "Ecclesiastes," table of contents. "Salomons Ballettes." From Job to Salomons Balettes, fol. i—lii. Signature A a, to Ji iij, in sixes.

Then comes another title-page: "All the Prophetes in Englishe." with the names of the books contained, underneath. This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "the Prophet Esay." The contents prefixed to each Prophet. In all, fol. ii—cii, (the reverse of). Signature A a a ij, to Rrrvi, in sixes.

Another title-page: "Apocripha The boke and treatises which amonge the fathers of olde are not rekened to be of like authorite with the other boke of the byble, nether are they foude in the Canon of the Hebrue." Then follow the names of the books. At the bottom, "Vnto these also belongeth Baruc, whom we hane set amōge the prophctes next vnto Jeremy, because he was his scribe, and in his tyme." This in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, "The translatoure vnto the reader." containing some observations on the nature of these books. Underneath the contents of the first book. The contents are prefixed to each book, except to "Certayne chapters of Hester." "The songe of the iij children." "The story of Susanna" and "The story of Bel," In all, fol. ii—lxxxiii (the reverse of), falsely numbered lxxxi. Signature A ij to O v, in sixes, the last leaf blank.

Then the title page: "The new testament." underneath, the books named. Also in a compartment of wood-cuts. On the reverse, the contents of "The gospell of S. Mathew." The contents before each book. In all, fol. ii—cxiii (the reverse of). Signature AA ij, to TT v, in sixes.

On the reverse of the last leaf; "Printed in the yeare of oure LORDE M.D.XXXV. and fynished the fourth daye of October."

At the beginning of Genesis are six cuts in wood, describing the six days' work of the creation; and in different parts of the work are other cuts, also in wood, some of them very spirited and well executed, representing the history therein mentioned, and most probably done, as before stated, by Sebald Behem of Nurembergh. There are also some initial letters of a very elegant character, from designs of Holbein.

This Bible, as will be seen by the above description, is divided into six parts, of which four have separate title-pages. That there should be no separate title-page to the first part is not odd, as it scarcely seemed to want one; but it is rather curious that there should be none to the third part; and that there never was any printed, and that it is not missing from the present copies, is clear, since the first leaf is numbered fol. i, which would not otherwise have been the case. The type, as before mentioned, is an angular Swiss or German. The title-page and its reverse are in the same letter as the body of the text. But the dedication, the prologue, the names of "the bokes of the whole Byble," and the contents of Genesis, are in a different character, and were most probably printed after the arrival of the volume in England. There are a few marginal references, which are in Roman letters. On fol. xli. of part I. is a large wood-cut of the Tabernacle and its contents; this is repeated on the reverse of fol. lvi. The initial letter of Genesis is a large flourished text capital. A full page contains fifty-seven lines.

Whether this edition ever had a table of the Epistles and Gospels for the Sundays, &c. at the end, is not known. No copy has yet been found, that we are aware of, containing any such table; but it seems not improbable that it had, since we find one in the reprints in quarto and in folio, by Nicholson, in 1537; and also in the edition of 1550.

It is not known how many copies of this edition were issued from the press, but the number must have been very great, when we consider that it was the first edition of the whole Bible in English ever offered to the public, at a time, when, excited by the writings daily put forth by the reformers, they were most eager to peruse it; and that Grafton, when he published Matthew's Bible in 1537, although of a much larger size, and consequently more expensive, ventured to print as many as 1500 copies.

This Bible was reprinted in folio and in quarto in 1537, by Nicholson, in Southwark, with a very few slight and trifling alterations. It was also printed again in 1550, which last edition was put forth anew in 1553, with a reprinted title-page and preliminary pieces. The edition of 1535, as we find by a copy in the library of Earl Jersey, had also a reprinted title-page in 1536.

VNTO THE MOST VICTORIOUS PRYNCE AND OURE MOST GRACYOUS SOUERAIGNE LORDE,

KYNGE HENRY THE EYGT,

KYNGE OF ENGLONDE AND OF FRAUNCE, LORDE OF IRLONDE. ꝓ. DEFENDOUR OF THE FAYTH, AND VNDER GOD THE CHEFE AND SUPPREME HEADE OF THE CHURCH OF ENGLONDE.

CAIPHAS beyng bysshope of that yere, lyke a blynde prophete (not vnderstandyng what he sayd) prophecied,<sup>a</sup> that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that all the people shulde perysshe : he meanyng, that Christ was an heretike, a deceauer of the people, & a destroyer of the lawe, and that it was better therfore to put Christ vnto death, thā to suffre hym for to lyue, and to deceaue the people. ꝓ. where in very dede Christ was the true prophete, the true Messias, and the onely true Sauour of the worlde, sent of his heauenly father to suffre the moste cruell, most shamefull, and most necessary death for our redempcyon : accordyng to y<sup>e</sup> meanyng of the prophecie truly vnderstonde.

Euen after the same maner y<sup>e</sup> blynde bysshope of Rome, (that blynde Baalam I saye) not vnderstandyng what he dyd, gaue vnto your grace this tytyle : Defendour of the fayth, onely because your hyghnes suffred your bysshoppes to burne Gods worde the rote of fayth, and to persecute the louers and mynisters of y<sup>e</sup> same. where in very dede the blynde bysshope (though he knewe not what he dyd) prophecied, that by the ryghteous admystracyon and contynuall diligence of youre grace, the fayth shulde so be defended, that Gods worde the mother of Fayth with the frutes therof, shulde haue his fre course thorowe out all Christendome, but specially in your realme.

Yf your hyghnesse now of your pryncely benigne wyll pardon me to compare these two bysshoppes (I meane bysshope Caiphas and the bysshope of Rome) & theyr prophecies together, I doute not but we shal fynde them agree lyke brethren, though the one be a Iewe and the other a counterfayte Christian. Fyrst, Caiphas prophecied that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that the people shulde perysshe. The bysshope of Rome also, not knowyng what he prophecied, gaue youre grace this tytyle : Defendour of the fayth. The trueth of both these prophecies is of the holy goost (as was Baalams prophecie) though they that spake thē, knewe not what they sayd. The trueth of Caiphas prophecie is, that it was necessary for mans saluacyon, that Christ by his death shulde ouercome death, and redeme vs. And the trueth of oure Baalams prophecie is, <sup>b</sup> y<sup>e</sup> your grace in very dede shulde defende the Fayth, Yee euen the true fayth of Christ, no dreames, no fables, no heresie, no papisticall inuencions, but the vncorrupte fayth of Gods most holy worde, which to set forth (prayed be the goodnes of God, and increace youre gracyous purpose) your hyghnes with youre most honorable counsell, applyeth all his studye and endeouore.

These two blynde bysshopes now agree in y<sup>e</sup> vnderstādyng of theyr prophecies : for Caiphas taketh Christ for an heretike, Oure Balaā taketh the worde of Christ for heresie. Caiphas iudgeth it to be a good dede to put Christ vnto death, that he shulde not deceaue the people. Oure Balaam calleth defendynge of the fayth, the suppressyng, keepyng secrete, and burnyng of the worde of fayth: lest the lyght thereof shulde vtter his darknes: lest his owne Decretales & Decrees, his owne lawes and constitucions, his owne statutes and inuencions shulde come to none effecte: lest his intollerable exactions and vsurpacions shulde lose theyr strengthe: lest it shulde be knowen what a thefe and murtherer he is in the cause of Christ, and how haynous a traytoure to God and man in defrauding all Christen kynges & prynces of theyr due obedience: lest we youre graces subiectes shulde haue eyes in the worde of God, at the last to spye out his crafty conueyaunce and iuglynges: and lest men shulde se, how sore he and his false Apostles haue deceaued all Christendome, specyally youre noble realme of Englonde.

An Epistle

Thus your grace seyth how brotherly the Iewysh bysshoppe and oure Balaam agree together, not onely in myter and outwarde apperance: but as the one persecuted the Lorde Iesus in his owne persone, so doth the other persecute his worde and resysteth his holy ordynance in the auctorite of his anoynted kynges. For so moche nowe as the worde of God is the onely trueth that dryueth awaye all lyes, and discloseth all iuglyng and disceate, therefore is oure Balaam of Rome so lothe that the scripture shulde be knowen in the mother tonge: lest yf kynges and prynces (specyally aboute all other) were exercysed therein, they shulde reclame and chalenge agayne theyr due auctorite, which he falsely hath vsurped so many yeres, and so to tie hym shorter: and lest the people beyng taught by the worde of God, shulde fall from y<sup>e</sup> fayned obediēce of hym and his dysguysed Apostles, vnto the true obedience commanded by Gods owne mouthe: as namely, to obey theyr prynce, to obey father and mother. &c. and not to steppe ouer father and mothers bely to enter in to his paynted religions, as his ypocrites teache: For he knoweth well ynough, that yf the cleare Sonne of Gods worde come ones to the heate of the daye, it shal dryue awaye all the foule myst of his deuelysh doctrines. Therefore were it more to the mayntenaunce of Antichristes kyngdome, that the worlde were styll in ignorance and blyndnes, and that the scripture shulde neuer come to lyghte. For the scripture (both in the olde testament and in the new) declareth most aboūdauntly that the office, auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges, is in earth aboue all other powers: let them call the selues Popes, Cardynalles, or what so euer they will, <sup>a</sup> the worde of god declareth them (yee and commaundeth them vnder payne of dampnacion) to be obedient vnto the temporall swerde: As in the olde Testament all the Prophetes, Prestes and Leuites were. And in the new Testament <sup>b</sup> Christ & his Apostles both were obedient them selues, and taught obedience of all men vnto theyr prynces and temporall rulers: which here vnto vs in the worlde present the persone of God, and are called <sup>c</sup> Goddes in the scripture, because of the excellēcy of theyr office. And though there were no mo auctorities but the same, to proue the p̄minence of the temporall swerde, Yet by this the scripture declareth playnly, that as there is nothyng aboue God, so is there no man aboue the kyng in his realme but that he onely vnder God is the chefe heade of all the cōgregacyon and church of the same. And in token that this is true, there hath ben of olde antiquite (and is yet vnto this daye) a lounyng ceremonye vsed in your realme of Englonde, y<sup>t</sup> whā your graces subiectes reade your letters, or begynne to talke or comē of your hyghnes, they moue theyr bonettes for a signe & token of reuerence vnto your grace, as to their most soueraigne lorde & heade vnder God. which thyng no man vseth to do to eny bysshoppe, wherby (yf oure vnderstandyng were nat blynded) we myght euidently perceauē, that euen very nature teacheth vs the same, that scripture cōmaūdeth vs: and that lyke as it is agaynst Gods worde that a kyng shulde not be the chefe heade of his people, euen so (I saye) is it agaynst kynde that we shulde knowe any other heade aboue hym vnder God.

And that no prest nor bysshoppe is exempte (nor can be lawfully) from the obedience of his prynce, the scripture is full both of straye cōmaundemētes, & practises of the holiest men. *Aaron was obedient vnto Moses, and called hym his lorde, though he was his owne brother. <sup>a</sup> Eleasar and Phineas were vnder the obediēce of Iosua. *Nathan the prophete fell downe to the grounde before kyng David, he had his Prynce in such reuerence (He made not the kyng for to kysse his fote as the bysshoppe of Rome maketh Emperours to do) Notwithstandyng he spared not to rebuke hym, and that ryght sharply when he fell from the worde of God to adultery & manslaughter. For he was not afraied to reprove hym of his synnes, nomore than Helyas the prophete stode in feare to saye vnto kyng Achab: †It is thou and thy fathers house that trouble Israel, because ye haue forsaken y<sup>e</sup> commaundementes of the Lorde, and walke after Baal. And as Johan Baptyste durst saye vnto Kyng Herode: <sup>b</sup>It is not lawfull for the to take thy brothers wyfe. But to my purpose I passe ouer innumerable mo ensāples both of the olde Testament and of the new, for feare lest I be to tedyous vnto your grace. Sūma, in all godly regimentes of olde tyme the kyng and tēporall iudge was obeyed of euery man, and was alwaye vnder God the chefe and supreme heade of the whole congregacyon, and deposed euen prestes when he sawe an vrgent cause, as Salomon dyd vnto Abiathar. who coulde than stonde agaynst the godly obediēce of his prynce (excepte he wolde be at defyanne with God and all his holy ordinaunces) that were well acquaynted with the holy scripture, which so earnestly cōmendeth vnto euery one of vs the auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges and temporall rulers? Therefore doth Moses so strately <sup>d</sup>forbyde the Israelites to speake so moche as an euell worde agaynst the prynce of y<sup>e</sup> people, moche lesse than to disobeye hym, or to withstonde hym. Doth not <sup>c</sup>Ieremy the prophete and <sup>f</sup>Baruc also exhorte the people in captiuite, to praye for the prosperous welfare of the kyng of Babilon, and to obeye hym, though he was an infidele? In the new Testament whā oure sauioure Christ (beyng yet fre & Lorde of al kynges & prynces) shewed his obediēce in payenge the trybute to oure ensample, ‡dyd he not a miracle there in puttynge the peece of money in the fysshes mouth (that Peter myght paye the customer therewith) and all to stablysshe the obediēce due vnto prynces? § Dyd not Ioseph and Mary the mother of our sauiour Christ departe frō Nazareth vnto Bethlēe, so farre from home, to shewe theyr obediēce in payenge the taxe to the prynce? And wolde not oure Sauioure be borne in the same obediēce? || Doth not Paule pronounce hym to resyste God hym selfe, that resysteth the auctorite of his prynce? And (to be shorte) the Apostle Peter <sup>e</sup>dothe not onely stablysshe the obediēce vnto prynces and temporall rulers but affirmeth playnly the kyng (and no bysshoppe) to be the chefe heade. Innumerable places mo are there in scripture, which bynde vs to the obediēce of oure prynce, and declare vnto vs, that no man is nor can be lawfully excepte from the same: but that all the mynisters of Goddes worde are vnder the tēporall swerde: & Prynces onely to owe obediēce vnto God & his worde.

And where as Antichrist vnto youre graces tyme dyd thrust his heade into y<sup>e</sup> imperiall crowne of your hyghnes (as he doth yet with other noble prynces mo) that lerned he of Sathā the authour of pryde, and therin doth he both agaynst the doctryne & also agaynst y<sup>e</sup> ensample of Christe: whiche because his kyngdome was not of this worlde, medled with no temporall matters, as it is euydent both by his wordes and practyse: Luc. xii. Math. xxvi. Ioh. vi. Ioh. xviii, where he y<sup>t</sup> hath eyes to se, maye se: & he y<sup>t</sup> hath eares to heare, maye heare, y<sup>t</sup> Christes admystration was nothing tēporall, but playne spiritual, as he hym selfe affirmeth & proueth in the fourth chapter of saynt Luke out of the prophete Esay: where all bysshoppes and prestes maye se, how farre theyr byndyng and lowsynge extendeth, and where in theyr office consisteth, namely in preachynge the Gospell. &c.

wherefore (most gracyous prynce) there is no tounge I thynke, that can fully expresse and declare the vntollerable iniuries, which haue bene done vnto God, to al prynces and to the conynalties of all christen realmes, sence they which shulde be onely the ministers of Gods worde, became lordes of the worlde, and thrust y<sup>e</sup> true and iust prynces out of theyr rowmes, whose herte wolde not pitie it (yee enū with lamentacyon) to remember but onely the vntollerable wrouge done by that Antychrist of Rome vnto youre graces most noble predecessoure kynge Iohn? I passe ouer his pestilente pykynge of Peter pens out of youre realme: his stealynge awaye of youre money for pardons: benefices and bysshopykes: his disceauynge of youre subiectes soules with his deuelyshe doctrynes and sectes of his false religions: his blonsheddynge of so many of your graces people, for bokes of the scripture. whose herte wolde not be greued (yee and that out of measure) to call to remēbraunce, how obstinate and disobedient, how presumptuous & stubburne that Antychrist made the bysshoppes of youre realme agaynst your graces noble predecessours in tymes past, as it is manyfest in y<sup>e</sup> Cronicles? I trust verely there be no suche now within youre realme: Yf there be, let them remembre these wordes of scripture: "Presumptuousnes goeth before destrucciō, & after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall.

what is now the cause of all these vntollerable and nomore to be suffred abominacions? Truly euen the ignorance of the scripture of God. For how had it els ben possyble, that such blyndnes shulde haue come in to y<sup>e</sup> worlde, had not y<sup>e</sup> lyghte of Gods worde bene extyncte? How coude men (I saye) haue bene so farre from the true seruyce of God, and from the due obedience of theyr prynce, had not the lawe of God bene clene shut vp, depressed, cast asyde, and put out of remembraunce? As it was afore the tyme of that noble kynge Iosias, and as it hath bene also amonge vs vnto youre graces tyme: by whose most ryghteous admystracyon (thorowe the mercifull goodnes of God) it is now founde agayne, *as it was in the dayes of that most vertuous kynge Iosias. And praysed be the father, the sonne, and the holy goost worlde without ende, which so excellently hath endewed youre Pryncely hert with such feruentnes to his honoure, and to the welth of youre louyng subiectes, that I maye ryghtuously (by iust occasyons in youre persone) cōpare youre hyghnes vnto that noble and gracious kynge, y<sup>e</sup> lanternie of lyghte amonge prynces, that feruent protectour and defender of the lawes of God: which cōmaunded straitly (as youre grace doth) that the lawe of God shulde be redde and taught vnto all y<sup>e</sup> people: set the prestes to theyr office in the worde of god: destroyed Idolatry and false ydols: put downe all euell customes and abusyons: set vp the true honoure of God: applyed all his studye and endeuoure to the ryghtuous admystracyon of the most vncorrupte lawe of God. &c. O what felicitye was amonge y<sup>e</sup> people of Ierusalem in his dayes? And what prosperous health both of soule & body foloweth the lyke mynistracion in youre hyghnes, we begynne now (praysed be God) to haue experience. <sup>b</sup> For as false doctryne is the origenall cause of all euell plages and destruccyon, so is y<sup>e</sup> true executynge of the lawe of God ad the preachynge of the same, the mother of all godly prosperite. The onely worde of god (I saye) is the cause of all felicitye, <sup>c</sup> it bryngeth all goodnes with it, it bryngeth lernynge, it gēdrea vnderstandynge, it causeth good workes, it maketh chyldren of obedience, breuely, it teacheth all estates theyr office and duty. Seynge then that the scripture of God teacheth vs every thyng sufficiently, both what we oughte to do, and what we oughte to leaue vndone: whome we are bounde to obey, and whome we shulde not obeye: therfore (I saye) it causeth all prosperite, and setteth euery thyng in frame: and where it is taught and knowen, it lyghteneth all darkenesses, cōforteth all sory hertes, leaueth no poore man vnhelpe, suffreth nothyng amysse vnamented, letteth no prynce be disobeyed, permytteth no heresie to be preached: but reformmeth all thynges, amēdeth that is amysse, and setteth euery thyng in order. And why? because it is geuen by the inspiracyon of God, therfore is it euer bryngynge profyte and frute, by teachynge, by improuynge, by amendynge and reformyng all thē y<sup>e</sup> wyl receaue it, <sup>d</sup> to make them perfecte & mete vnto all good workes.

Considerynge now (most gracious prynce) the inestimable treasure, frute & prosperite euerlastynge, that God geueth with his worde, and trustynge in his infynite goodnes that he wolde bryng my synple and rude laboure herin to good effecte, therfore as the holy goost moued other mē to do the cost herof, so was I holdened in God, to labour in the same. Agayne, consyderynge youre Imperiall maiestye not onely to be my naturall soueraigne liege Lorde & chefe heade of y<sup>e</sup> church of Englōde, but also the true defender and maynteyner of Gods lawes, I thought it my dutye and to belonge vnto my allegiaunce, whan I had translated this Bible, not onely to dedicate this translacyon vnto youre hyghnesse, but wholly to com- mytte it vnto the same: to the intent that yf any thyng therin be translated amysse (for in many thynges we fayle, euen whan we thinke to be sure) it may stōde in youre graces handes, to correcte it, to amende it, to improue it, yee & cleane to reiecte it, yf youre godly wysdome shall thinke it necessary. And as I do with all humblenes submitte myne vnder- stondynge and my poore translacyon vnto y<sup>e</sup> spirite of trueth in your grace, so make I this protestacyon (hauyng God to recorde in my cōscience) that I haue nether wrested nor altered so moch as one worde for the mayntenaūce of any maner of secte: but haue with a cleare conscience purely & faythfully trans- lated this out of fyue sundry interpreters, hauyng onely the manyfest trueth of the scripture before myne eyes: Trustynge in the goodnes of God, that it shalbe vnto his worshippe: quietnes and tranquillite vnto your hyghnes: a perfecte stablyshment of all Gods ordy-naunces within youre graces domynion: a generall comforte to all Christen hertes, and a continuall thank- fulnesse both of olde and yonge vnto god, and to youre grace, for beyng oure Moses, and for bringynge vs out of this olde Egypte from the cruell handes of our spirituall Pharaο. For where were the Iewes (by ten thousande partes) so moch bounde vnto <sup>a</sup> Kyngē Dauid, for subduynge of greate Goliath and all theyr enemyes, as we are to your grace, for delyuerynge vs out of oure olde Babylonycall captiuyte? For y<sup>e</sup> which delyueraunce and victory I beseke oure onely medyatoure Iesus Christ, to make soch meanes for vs vnto his heauenly father, y<sup>t</sup> we neuer be vnthankfull vnto him ner vnto youre grace: but that we euer increace in the feare of him, in obedience vnto your hyghnesse, in lone vnfayned vnto oure neighbours: and in all vertue that commeth of God. To whom for y<sup>e</sup> defendynge of his blessed worde (by your graces most rightfull administracyon) be honoure and thankes, glory and dominyon, worlde without ende, Amen.

MYLES COUERDALE

A P R O L O G E.

MYLES COUERDALE VNTO THE CHRISTEN READER.

CONSIDERYNge how excellent knowlege and lernynge an interpreter of scripture oughte to haue in the tongues, and ponderyng also myne owne insufficiency therin, & how weake I am to perfourme y<sup>e</sup> office of a translatoure, I was the more lothe to medle with this worke. Notwithstandynge whan I cōsidered how greate pytie it was that we shulde wante it so longe, & called to my remembrance y<sup>e</sup> aduersite of them, which were not onely of rype knowlege, but wolde also with all theyr hertes haue perfourmed y<sup>t</sup> they beganne, yf they had not had impediment: considerynge (I saye) that by reason of theyr aduersyte it coulde not so soone haue bene broughte to an ende, as oure most prosperous nacyon wolde fayne haue had it: these and other reasonable causes considered, I was the more bolde to take it in hande. And to helpe me herin, I haue had sondrye translacions, not onely in latyn, but also of the Donche interpreters: whom (because of theyr singuler gyftes & speciall diligence in the Bible) I haue ben the more glad to folowe for the most parte, accordynge as I was requyred. But to saye the trueth before God, it was nether my labour nor desyre, to haue this worke put in my hande: neuertheles it greued me y<sup>t</sup> other nacyōs shulde be more plenteously prouyded for with y<sup>e</sup> scripture in theyr mother tongue, then we: therefore whan I was instantly requyred, though I coulde not do so well as I wolde, I thought it yet my dewtye to do my best, and that with a good wyll.

where as some men thynke now y<sup>e</sup> many translacions make diuysion in y<sup>e</sup> fayth and in the people of God, y<sup>t</sup> is not so: for it was neuer better with the congregacion of god, then whan euery church almost had y<sup>e</sup> Byble of a sondrye trāslacion. Amonge the Grekes had not Origen a specyall translacyon? Had not Vulgarius one peculiar, & lykewyse Chrysostom? Besyde the seuentye interpreters, is there not the translacyon of Aquila, of Theodotio, of Symachus, and of sondrye other? Agayne amonge the Latyn men, thou findest y<sup>t</sup> euery one almost vsed a specyall

Therefore oughte it not to be taken as euell, y<sup>t</sup> such men as haue vnderstandynge now in oure tyme, exercise them selues in y<sup>e</sup> tongues, & geue their diligence to translate out of one language in to another. Yee we ought rather to geue god hye thanks therefore, which thorow his sprete stereth vp mēs myndes, so to exercise them selues therin. wolde god it had neuer bene left of after y<sup>e</sup> tyme of S. Augustine, then shulde we neuer haue come in to soch blindnes & ignoraūce, in to soch erroures & delusyons. For as soone as the Byble was cast asyde, & nomore put in exercise, then beganne euery one of his awne heade to wryte what so euer came in to his brayne and y<sup>t</sup> semed to be good in his awne eyes: and so grewe y<sup>e</sup> darknes of mēs tradiciōs. And this same is y<sup>e</sup> cause y<sup>t</sup> we haue had so many wryters, which seldome made mēcyon of y<sup>e</sup> scripture of the Byble: & though they some tyme aleged it, yet was it done so farre out of season & so wyde from y<sup>e</sup> purpose, that a mā maye well perceaue, how that they neuer sawe the orygynall.

Seynge then y<sup>t</sup> this diligent exercise of translatynge doth so moch good & edifyeth in other languages, why shulde it do euell in oures? Doubtes lyke as all nacyons in y<sup>e</sup> dyuersite of speaches maye knowe one God in the vnyte of faith, and be one in loue: euen so maye dyuerse translacions vnderstonde one another, & that in the head articles & grounde of oure most blessed faith, though they vse sondrye wordes. wherfore me thynke we haue greate occasyon to geue thanks vnto God, that he hath opened vnto his church the gyfte of interpretacyon & of pryntynge, and that there are now at this tyme so many, which with soch diligēce and faithfulness interpret y<sup>e</sup> scripture to the honoure of god and edifyenge of his people, where as (lyke as whan many are shut-ynge together) euery one doth his best to be nyest the marke. And though they can not all attayne therto, yet shuteh one nyer then another, and hytteth it better then another, yee one can do it better thē another. who is now then so vureasonable, so despytefull, or enuyous, as to abhorre him y<sup>t</sup> doth all his diligence to hytte y<sup>e</sup> prycke, and to shute nyest?

To the Reader.

though he mysse & come not nyest the mark?
Ought not soch one rather to be commēded, and to be helped forwarde, that he maye exercyse himselfe the more therin?

For the which cause (acordyng as I was desyred)
I toke the more vpon me to set forth this speciall translacyon, not as a cheeker, not as a reprobuer, or despyser of other mens translacyons (for amonge many as yet I haue founde none without occasion of greate thankesgeuynge vnto god) but lowly & fayth-fully haue I folowed myne interpreters, & that vnder correccyon. And though I haue fayled eny where (as there is noman but he mysseth in some thyng) loue shall constyre all to y<sup>e</sup> best without eny peruerse iudgment. There is noman luyng y<sup>t</sup> can se all thynges, nether hath god geuen eny man to knowe euery thyng. One seyth more clearly then another, one hath more vnderstandyng then another, one can ytter a thyng better then another, but noman ought to ennye, or dispyse another. He that can do better then another, shulde not set him at naught y<sup>t</sup> vnderstandeth lesse: Yee he that hath y<sup>e</sup> more vnderstandyng, ought to remembre that the same gyfte is not his but Gods, and y<sup>t</sup> God hath geuē it him to teach & enforme the ignoraunt. Yf thou hast knowlege therfore to iudge where eny faute is made, I doute not but thou wilt helpe to amende it, yf loue be ioyned with thy knowlege. Howbeit wherin so euer
I can perceaue by my selfe, or by the informacon of other, that I haue fayled (as it is no wonder) I shall now by the helpe of God ouerloke it better & amende it.

Now wil I exhorte the (who so euer thou be y<sup>t</sup> readest scripture) yf thou fynde oughte therin y<sup>t</sup> thou vnderstondest not, or that apereh to be repugnaunt, geue no temerarious ner haystye iudgmēt therof: but ascrybe it to thyne awne ignorance, not to the scripture, thinke y<sup>t</sup> thou vnderstondest it not, or y<sup>t</sup> it hath some other meanyng, or y<sup>t</sup> it is happlye ouersene of y<sup>e</sup> interpreters, or wronge prynted. Agayne, it shall greatly helpe y<sup>e</sup> to vnderstande scripture, yf thou marke not ouely what is spoken or wrytten, but of whom, & vnto whom, with what wordes, at what tyme, where, to what intent, with what circumstance, consyderynge what goeth before, and what foloweth after.

For there be some thynges which are done & wryttē, to the intente y<sup>t</sup> we shulde do lykewyse: as whan Abraham beleueth God, is obedient vnto his worde, & defendeth Loth his kynsman from violent wronge.
There be some thynges also which are wryttē, to the intente y<sup>t</sup> we shulde eschue soch lyke. As whan Dauid lyeth with Vrias wyfe, & causeth him to be slayne.
Therefore (I saye) whan thou readest scripture, be wyse & circumspect: & whan thou comest to soch straunge maners of speakyng & darke sentences, to soch parables & similitudes, to soch dreames or visions as are hyd from thy vnderstandyng, cōmytte them vnto God or to the gyfte of his holy sprete in them
y<sup>t</sup> are better lerned then thou.

As for the commendacyon of Gods holy scripture,
I wolde fayne magnifye it as it is worthy, but I am farre vnufficiēt therto. & therfore I thoughte it better for me to holde my tounge, then with few wordes to prayse or commēde it: exhortyng y<sup>e</sup> (most deare reader) so to loue it, so to cleue vnto it, & so to folowe it in thy daylye conuersacyon, y<sup>t</sup> other men seyuge thy good workes & the frutes of y<sup>e</sup> holy goost in the, maye prayse the father of heauen, & geue his worde a good reporte: for to lyue after the lawe of God, & to leade a vertuous conuersacyon, is the greatest prayse y<sup>t</sup> thou canst geue vnto his doctryne.

But as touchyng the euell reporte and dispraise that the good worde of God hath by the corrupte and euell conuersacyon of some, y<sup>t</sup> daylye heare it and professe it outwardly with their mouthes, I exhorte
withdrawe thy mynde frō the loue of y<sup>e</sup> trneth, nether moue y<sup>e</sup> to be partaker in lyke vnthankfulnes: but seyng y<sup>e</sup> lighte is come in to the world, loue no-more the workes of darknes, receaue not the grace of god in vayne. Call to thy remembrance how louyng & mercifull God is vnto the, how kyndly and fatherly he helpeth the in all trouble, teacheth thyne ignorance, healeth the in all thy sycknesse, forgeneth the all thy synnes, fedeth y<sup>e</sup>, geneth the drynke, helpeth y<sup>e</sup> out of preson, norysheth the in straunge countrees, careth for the, & seyth y<sup>t</sup> thou wante nothyng. Call this to mynde (I saye) & that earnestly, and consyde how thou hast receaued of god all these benefites (yee and many mo then thou canst desyre) how thou art bounde lykewyse to shewe

A Prologe.

thy selfe vnto thy neighbour as farre as thou canst, to teach him yf he be ignoraunt, to helpe him in all his trouble, to heale his sycknes, to forgeue him his offences, and that hartely, to fede him, to cherish him, to care for him, and to se y<sup>e</sup> he wante nothing. And on this behalfe I beseeke the (thou y<sup>e</sup> hast y<sup>e</sup> ryches of this worlde, and louest God with thy harte) to lyfte vp thyne eyes, and se how greate a multitude of poore people renne thorow euery towne: haue pitie on thyne awne flesh, helpe them with a good harte, and do with thy counsell all that euer thou canst, that this vnshamefast beggyng maye be put downe, that these ydle folkes maye be set to labour, & that such as are not able to get theyr lyuynge, maye be prouyded for. At the leest thou y<sup>e</sup> art of counsell with such as are in auctoryte, geue them some occasion to cast theyr heades together, and to make prouysyon for the poore. Put the in remembraunce of those noble cities in other countrees, that by the auctoryte of theyr prynces haue so richely ad well prouided for theyr poore people, to the greate shame & dishonestye of vs, yf we lykewyse receauynge y<sup>e</sup> worde of God, shewe not soch lyke frutes therof. wolde God y<sup>e</sup> those men (whose office is to maynteyne y<sup>e</sup> comon welth) were as diligent in this cause as they are in other. Let vs beware by tymes, for after vnthankfulnes ther foloweth euer a plage: the merciful bande of God be with vs, & defende vs that we be not partakers therof.

Go to now (most deare reader) & syt the downe at the Lordes fete and reade his wordes, & (*as Moses teacheth the Iewes) take them in to theyr herte, & let thy talkynge & communicacion be of them whan thou syttest in thyne house, or goest by y<sup>e</sup> waye, whan thou lyst downe, & whan thou ryseth vp. And aboue all thynges fasshyon thy lyfe, & cōuersacion acording to the doctryne of the holy goost therin, that thou mayest be partaker of y<sup>e</sup> good promyses of god in the Byble, & be heyre of his blessing in Christ. In whom yf thou put thy trust, & be an vnfynded reader or hearer of hys worde with thy bert, thou shalt fynde swetenesse thereyn, & spye wōderous thynges, to thy vnderstondynge, to the auoydynge of all sedycious sectes, to the abhorrynge of thy olde synfull lyfe, & to the stablyshynge of thy godly conuersacion.

In the first boke of Moses (called Genesis) thou mayest lerne to knowe the almighty power of god in creatynge all of naught, his infinite wysdome in ordryng the same, his ryghteousnes in punyshynge y<sup>e</sup> vngodly, his loue & fatherly mercy in comfortynge the righteous with his promes. &c.

In the seconde boke (called Exodus) we se the myghty arme of god, in delyueryng his people from so greate bondage out of Egypte, and what prouysyon he maketh for them in the wildernes, how he teacheth them with his wholsome worde and how the Tabernacle was made and set vp.

In the thyrd boke (called Leuiticus) is declared what sacrifices the prestes & Leuites vsed, and what theyr office & ministracyon was.

In the fourth boke (called Numerus) is declared how the people are nombred and mustred, how the captaynes are chosen after y<sup>e</sup> trybes & kynreds, how they wete forth to y<sup>e</sup> battayll, how they pitched theyr tentes, & how they brake vp.

The fyfth boke (called Deuteronomium) sheweth how that Moses now beyng olde, rehearseth the lawe of god vnto y<sup>e</sup> people, putteth them in remembraunce agayne of all the wonders & benefites that god had shewed for them, and exhorteth them earnestly to loue y<sup>e</sup> Lorde theyr god, to cleue vnto him, to put theyr trust in him and to herken vnto his voyce.

After the death of Moses doth Iosue bryng the people in to the lōde of promes where God doth wonderous thynges for his people by Iosue, which distributeth y<sup>e</sup> londe vnto them, vnto euery trybe theyr possession. But in theyr wealth they forgat the goodnes of God, so that oft tymes he gauē the ouer in to the hande of theyr enemies. Nenertheles whan so euer they called faithfully vpon him, and conuerted, he delyuered them agayne, as the boke of Iudges declareth.

In the bores of the kynges, is describied the regimēt of good and euell prynces, and how the decaye of all nacions cometh by euell kynges. For in Ieroboam thou seyst what myschefe, what ydolatrie & soch like abhominacyon foloweth, whā the kyng is a maynteyner of false doctryne, ad causeth the people to synne agaynst God, which fallinge awaye from gods worde, increased so sore amonge them, that it was the cause of all theyr sorowe and misery, & the very occasion why Israel first and then Iuda, were carryed awaye in to captiuite. <sup>a</sup> Agayne, in Iosa-phat, in Ezechias and in Iosias thou seyst the nature of a vertuous kynge. He putteth downe the houses of ydolatrie, seyth that his prestes teach nothyng but y<sup>e</sup> lawe of God, commaundeth his lordes to go with them, and to se that they teach the people. In these kynges (I saye) thou seyst the cōdicyon of a true defender of y<sup>e</sup> fayth, for he spareth nether cost ner labour, to manteyne the lawes of God, to seke the welth & prosperite of his people, and to rote out the wicked. And where such a prince is, thou seyst agayne, how God defendeth him and his people, though he haue neuer so many enemies. Thus wente it with thē in the olde tyme, and euen after y<sup>e</sup> same maner goeth it now with vs: God be prayed therefore, ād graunte vs of his fatherly mercy, that we be not vnthankfull: lest where he now getteth vs a Iosaphat, an Ezechias, yee a very Iosias, he sende vs a Pharaο, a Ieroboam, or an Achab.

To the Reader.

In the two first boke of Esdras & in Hester thou seyst the delyuerance of the people, which though they were but fewe, yet is it vnto vs all a speciall cōforte, for so moch as God is not forgetfull of his promes, but bryngeth them out of captiuite, accordyng as he had tolde them before.

In the boke of Iob we lerne comforte and patience, in that God not onely punysheth the wicked, but proueth & tryeth the iust and righteous (howbeit there is noman innocent in his sighte) by dyuerse troubles in this lyfe, declaryng thereby, y<sup>e</sup> they are not his bastardes, but his deare sonnes, and that he loueth them.

In the Psalmes we lerne how to resorte onely vnto God in all oure troubles, to seke helpe at him, to call onely vpon him, to satle oure myndes by paciēce, & how we ought in prosperite to be thankfull vnto him.

The Prouerbes and the Preacher of Salomon teach vs wysdome, to knowe God, oure owne selues, and the worlde, and how vayne all thynges are, saue onely to cleue vnto God.

As for the doctryne of the Prophetes, what is it els, but an earnest exhortation to eschue synne, & to turne vnto God? a faythfull promes of the mercy ād pardon of God, vnto all them y<sup>e</sup> turne vnto him, and a threatenynge of his wrath to the vngodly? sauynge that here and there they prophecie also manifestly of Christ, of y<sup>e</sup> expulsion of the Iewes, and callynge of the Heythen.

Thus moch thought I to speake of y<sup>e</sup> olde Testament, wherin almyghtie God openeth vnto vs his myghtye power, his wysdome, his lounge mercy & righteousnesse; for the which cause it oughte of no man to be abhorred, despysed, or lightly regarded, as though it were an olde scripture y<sup>e</sup> nothyng belōged vnto vs, or y<sup>e</sup> now were to be refused. For it is Gods true scripture & testimony, which the Lorde Iesus "commaundeth the Iewes to search. who so euer beleueth not the scripture, beleueth not Christ, and who so refuseth it, refuseth God also.

The New Testament or Gospell, is a manyfest and cleare testimony of Christ how God perfourmeth his ooth and promes made in the olde Testament, how the New is declared and included in the Olde, and the Olde fulfilled and verified in the New.

Now where as the most famous interpreters of all geue sondrye iudgmentes of the texte (so farre as it is done by y<sup>e</sup> sprete of knowlege in the holy goost) me thyne noman shulde be offended there at, for they referre theyr doinges in mekenes to the sprete of trueth in the congregacyon of god: & sure I am, that there commeth more knowlege and vnderstandinge of the scripture by theyr sondrie translaconys, then by all the gloses of oure sophisticall doctours. For that one interpreteth somthyng obscurely in one place, the same translateth another (or els he him selfe) more manifestly by a more playne vocable of the same meaning in another place. Be not thou offended therfore (good Reader) though one call a scribe, that another calleth a lawyer: or elders, that another calleth father & mother: or repentaunce, that another calleth pennaunce or amendment. For yf thou be not disceaued by mens tradiciōs, thou shalt fynde no more dyuersite betwene these termes then betwene foure pens and a grote. And this maner haue I vsed in my translacon, callynge it in some place pennaunce, that in another place I call repentaunce, and that not onely because the interpreters haue done so before me, but that the aduersaries of the trueth maye se, how that we abhorre not this worde pennaunce (as they vntulyrly reporte of vs) no more then the interpreters of latyn abhorre penitere, when they reade resipiscere. Onely our hertes desyre vnto God, is, that his people be not blynded in theyr vnderstandyng, lest they beleue pennaunce to be ought saue a very repētaunce, amēdment, or conuersyon vnto God, and to be an vnfayned new creature in Christ, and to lyue accordyng to his lawe. For els shall they fal in to the olde blasphemy of Christes bloude, and beleue, that they the selues are able to make satisfacion vnto God for theyr awne synnes, from the which erreure god of his mercy and pléteous goodnes perseruc all his.

Now to conelude : for so moch as all the scripture is wrytten for thy doctryne & ensample, it shalbe necessary for the, to take holde vpon it, whyle it is offred the, yee and with ten handes thankfully to receaue it. And though it be not worthely ministred vnto the in this translaeyon (by reason of my rudnes) Yet yf thou be seruēt in thy prayer, God shal not onely sende it the in a better shappe, by the mynistracyon of other that begame it afore, but shall also moue the hertes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of theyr vnderstandynge theron, as well in oure language as other famous interpreters do in other languages. And I praye God, that thorow my poore ministracyon here in, I maye geue them that can do better, some occasyon so to do: exhortyng the (most deare reader) in the meane whyle on Gods behalfe, yf thou be a heade, a Iudge, or ruler of y<sup>e</sup> people, that thou <sup>a</sup> let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercise thyselfe therin both daye and nyghte, and be euer readyng in it as longe as thou lyuest: that thou mayest lerne to feare the Lorde thy God, & not to turne asyde from the commaundement, neether to the right hande ner to the left: lest thou be a knower of personnes in iudgmēt, <sup>b</sup> and wrest the righte of the straunger, of the fatherles or of the wedowe, and so y<sup>e</sup> curse to come vpon the. But what office so euer thou hast <sup>c</sup> wayte vpon it, and execute it, to the mayntenance of peace, to the welth of thy people, defendyng the lawes of God, and the louers therof, and to the destruccyon of the wicked.

then thou woldest teach the people eny other thyng then Gods worde take the boke in thyne hande, & reade the wordes euē as they stonde therin (for it is no shame so to do, it is more shame to make a lye) This I saye for soch, as are not yet experte in the scripture, for I reprove no preachyng without the boke as longe as they saye the trueth.

Yf thou be a man that hast wyfe and childrē, first loue thy wyfe, acordyng to the ensample of the lone, wherwith Christ loved the cōgregaeyon, and remembre that so doynge, thou louest euen thyselfe: yf thou hate her, thou hatest thine awne flesh: yf thou cherishe her and make moch of her, thou cherisest & makest moch of thyselfe, for she is bone of thy bones, & flesh of thy flesh. And who so euer thou be that hast children, <sup>f</sup> bryng them vp in the nurtour and informacion of the Lorde. And yf thou be ignorant, or art otherwyse occupied lafully that thou canst not teach them thy selfe, then be euen as diligent to seke a good master for thy childrē, as thou wast to seke a mother to beare them: for there lieth as great weight in the one as in y<sup>e</sup> other. Yee better it were for the to be vnborne, then not to feare God, or to be euil brought vp. which thyng (I meane bryngyng vp well of children) yf it be diligently looked to, it is the vpholdinge of all comon welthes: and the negligence of the same, the very decaye of all realmes.

Fynally, who so euer thou be, take these wordes of scripture in to thy herte, and be not onely an outwarde hearer, but a doer thereafter, and praetyse thyselfe therin: that thou mayest fele in thine hert, the swete promyses therof for thy consolacion in all trouble, & for the sure stablyshinge of thy hope in Christ, and haue euer an eye to y<sup>e</sup> wordes of scripture, that yf thou be a teacher of other thou mayest be within the boundes of the trueth, or at the leest though thou be but an hearer or reader of another mans doynge, thou mayest yet haue knowlege to iudge all spretes, and be fre from euery erreure, to the vtter destruccyon of all sedecious seetes & straunge doctrynes, that the holy scriptrue maye haue fre passage, and be had in reputacion, to the worshippe of the author therof, which is enen God himselfe: to whom for his most blessed worde be glory & domynion now & euer. Amen.

The first booke of Moses, called Genesis.

The first Chapter.

IN þy begynnynge God created heauen ⁊ earth: and þy earth was voyde and emptie, and dareknes was vpon the depe, ⁊ þy sprete of God moued vpō the water.

And God sayde: let there be light, ⁊ there was light. And God sawe the light that it was good. Then God deuyded þy light from the dareknes, and called the light, Daye: and the dareknes, Night. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the first daye.

And God sayde: let there be a firmament betwene the waters, and let it deuyde þy waters a sunder. Then God made þy firmamēt, and parted the waters vnder the firmamēt, from the waters aboue the firmament: And so it came to passe. And God called þy firmament, Heauen. Then of the euenynge ⁊ mornynge was made the seconde daye.

And God sayde: let the waters vnder heauen gather thē selues vnto one place, þy the drye londe maye appeare. And so it came to passe. And God called þy drye londe, Earth: and the gatheringe together of waters called he, þy See. And God sawe þy it was good.

B And God sayde: let þy earth bringe forth grene grasse and herbe, that beareth sēde: ⁊ frutefull trees, that maye beare frute, euery one after his kynde, hauynge their owne sēde in them selues vpon the earth. And so it came to passe. And the earth brought forth grene grasse and herbe, þy beareth sēde euery one after his kynde, ⁊ trees bearinge frute, ⁊ hauynge their owne sēde in them selues, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euenynge ⁊ mornynge was made the thirde daye.

And God sayde: let there be lightes in þy firmament of heauen, to deuyde the daye fro the night, that they maye be vnto tokēs, seasons, dayes, and yeaeres. And let them be lightes in þy firmament of heauen, to shyne vpon the earth: And so it came to passe. And God made two greate lightes: one greater light to rule the daye, and a lesse light to rule the night, and (he made) starres also. And God set them in the firmament of heauen, þy they might shyne vpō earth, and to rule the daye and the night, and to deuyde the light from dareknes. And God sawe that it was good. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the fourth daye.

C And God sayde: let the waters brynge forth creatures that moue and haue life, ⁊ foules for to flye aboue the earth vnder the firmamēt of heauen. And God created greate whalles, and all maner of creatures that lyue and moue, which the waters brought forth euery one after his kynde: and all maner of fethered foules, euery one after his kynde. And God sawe that it was good, and blessed them, sayenge: Growe, and multiplie, and fyll the waters of the sees, and let the foules multiplie vpon the earth. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the fifth daye.

And God sayde: let þy earth brynge forth lyuynge soules, euery one after his kynde: catell, wormes ⁊ what as hath life vpon earth, euery one after his kynde. And so it came to passe. And God made þy beastes of the earth euery one after his kynde, and catell after their kynde, and all maner wormes of the earth after their kynde. And God sawe that it was good.

similitude after oure licknesse, that he maye haue rule ouer the fysh of the see, and ouer the foules vnder y<sup>e</sup> heauen, and ouer eatell, and ouer all the earth, and ouer all wormes that crepe on y<sup>e</sup> earth. " And God created man after his licknesse: after y<sup>e</sup> licknesse of God created he him, male ⁊ female created he them.

And God blessed them, and sayde vnto them: " Growe, and multiplie, and fyll the earth, and subdue it, ⁊ haue domynion ouer the fish of the see, and ouer the foules of the ayre, and ouer all the beastes that crepe vpō the earth.

" And God sayde: lo, I haue geuen you all maner herbes that beare sēde vpon the whole earth, and all maner frutefull trees that beare sēde, to be meate for you. And to all beastes of the earth, and to all foules vnder the heauen, and to euery worme that hath life (vpon earth) all maner grene herbes to eate. And so it came to passe. " And God behelde all y<sup>e</sup> he had made, and lo, they were exceedinge good. Then of the euenynge and mornynge was made the sixte day.

The ij. Chapter.

THUS was heauē and earth fynished with all their hoost, and thus in the seuenth daye God ended his worke, which he had made, ⁊ rested in the seuenth daye from all his workes which he had made: And blessed the seuenth daye, ⁊ sanctified it, because y<sup>e</sup> in it he rested from all his workes, which God created and made.

These are the generacions of heauē and earth when they were created, in the tyme when the LORDE God made heauen and earth: before there was eny twygg vpon earth, and or euer there grew eny grene herbe vpon the felde. For the LORDE God had yet sent no rayne vpon y<sup>e</sup> earth, nether was there eny man to tylie the earth. But there arose a myst from the earth, ⁊ watered all the londe. And y<sup>e</sup> LORDE God shope man euē of the moulde of the earth, ⁊ brethed in to his face y<sup>e</sup> breth of life. " And so was man made a luyunge soule.

The LORDE God also planted a gardē of pleasure in Eden, towarde y<sup>e</sup> east, and set man therein whom he had made. And the LORDE God caused to sprynge out of the earth all maner trees, pleasūt to loke vpō, and good to eate: and the tre of life in the myddest of the garden, ⁊ the tre of knowlege of good and euell.

And out of Eden there wente a ryuer, to water the garden, and there deuyded it selfe in to foure heade waters. The first is called Phison, which renneth aboute all the londe of Heuyla. " And there is founde golde, (⁊ the golde of that cōtre is precious,) and there is founde Bedellion, and the precious stone * Onix. The second water is called Gihon, which runneth aboute the whole londe of y<sup>e</sup> Moriās. The thirde water is called Hydeckell, which runneth towarde the east syde of y<sup>e</sup> Assiriās. The fourth water is Euphrates.

And the LORDE God toke man, ⁊ set him in the pleasant garden of Eden, to dresse it ⁊ to kepe it. And the LORDE God commaunded man, sayēge: " Thou shalt eate of all maner trees in y<sup>e</sup> garden: But of y<sup>e</sup> tre of knowlege of good and euell, shalt thou not eate. For loke in what daye so euer thou eatest therof, thou shalt dye the death.

And the LORDE God sayde: It is not good y<sup>e</sup> mā shulde be alone. I wil make him an helpe, ⁊ to beare him cōpany. And when God the LORDE had made of the earth all maner beastes of the felde, ⁊ all maner foules vnder the heauē, he brought them vnto man, to se what he wolde call thē: For as mā called all maner of liuinge soules, so are their names. And man gaue names vnto all maner catell, ⁊ vnto the foules vnder the heauē, and vnto all maner beastes of y<sup>e</sup> felde. But vnto man there was founde no helpe, to beare him company.

Then the LORDE God caused an herde slepe to fall vpon man, and he slepte. And he toke out one of his rybbes, and (in steade therof) he fylled vp y<sup>e</sup> place with flesh. And the LORDE God made a woman, of y<sup>e</sup> rybbe that he toke out of man, and brought her vnto him. Then sayde man: This is once bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was takē of man. " For this cause shal a man leaue father and mother, and cleue vnto his wife, ⁊

A BUT the serpent was sotyller then all the beastes of the felde<sup>a</sup> (which  $\S$  LORDE God had made) and sayde vnto <sup>b</sup>the woman: Yee, hath God sayde in dede: Ye shall not eate of all maner trees in the garden? Then sayde the woman vnto the serpent: We eate of the frute of the trees in the garden: But as for the frute of the tre that is in the myddes of the garden, God hath sayde: Eate not ye of it, and touch it not, lest ye dye.

Then saide the serpent vnto the woman: <sup>c</sup>Tush, ye shall not dye the death. For God doth knowe, that in what daye so euer ye eate of it, youre eyes shalbe opened, and ye shal be as God, and knowe both good and euell. And the woman sawe that  $\S$  tre was good to eate of, and lustye vnto the eyes, and a pleasaunt tre <sup>d</sup> to make wyse, and toke of the frute of it, and ate, and gaue vnto hir husbände also therof, and he ate. Then were the eyes of them both opened, and they perceaued that they were naked,<sup>e</sup> and sowed fygge leaues together, and made them apurns.

B And they herde the voyce of the LORDE God, which walked in the garden in the coole of the daye. And Adam hyd him self with his wyfe, from the presence of  $\S$  LORDE God amonge the trees of the garden. And  $\S$  LORDE God called Adam, and sayde vnto him: Where art thou? And he saide: I herde thy voyce in the garden, and was afrayed, because I am naked, and therefore I hyd my self. And he sayde: who tolde the, that thou art naked? Hast thou not eaten of the tre, wherof I commaunded the,  $\S$  thou shuldest not eate?

C Then sayde Adam: The woman which thou gauest me (to beare me company) gaue me of the tre, and I ate. And the LORDE God sayde vnto the woman: wherfore hast thou done this? The woman sayde: the serpent disceaue me so, that I ate.<sup>d</sup> Then sayde the LORDE God vnto the serpent: Because thou hast done this, cursed be thou aboute all catell and aboute all beastes of the felde. Vpon thy bely shalt thou go,  $\tau$  earth shalt thou eate all the dayes of thy life. And I wyll put enemyte betwene the and the woman, and betwene thy sece<sup>e</sup> and hir sece.<sup>f</sup> The same shal treade downe thy heade, and thou shalt treade him on the hele.

And vnto the woman he sayde: I will increase thy sorow, whan thou art with childe: with payne shalt thou beare thy childre, and  $\S$  thy lust shal pertayne vnto thy huszbande, and he shal rule the.

And vnto Adam he sayde: For so moch as thou hast herkened vnto the voyce of thy wyfe, and hast eaten of the tre, wherof I commaunded the, sayenge: thou shalt not eate of it. Cursed be  $\S$  earth for thy sake. With sorowe shalt thou eate therof, all the dayes of thy life. Thornes and thistles shalt it beare vnto the, and thou shalt eate the herbes of the felde. In the sweate of thy face shalt thou eate thy bred, tyll thou be turned agayne vnto earth, whēce thou art takē: <sup>g</sup>for earth thou art, and vnto earth shalt thou be turned agayne.

And Adam called his wyfe Heua, because she is the mother of all lyuynge. And the LORDE God made Adam  $\tau$  his wyfe garments of skynnes,  $\tau$  those he put on them. And the LORDE God sayde: lo, Adam is become as it were one of vs,  $\tau$  knoweth good  $\tau$  euell. But now lest he stretch his hande, and take also of the tre of life, and eate, and lyue for euer. Then the LORDE God put him out of the garden of Eden, to tyll  $\S$  earth, whēce he was takē. And he cast Adam out. And before the garden of Eden he set Cherubes, and a naked fyrie swerde, to kepe  $\S$  waye vnto the tre of life.

The iij. Chapter.

MOROUER Adam laye with Heua his wyfe, which cōceaued  $\tau$  bare Cain, and sayde, I haue opteyned  $\S$  man of the LORDE. And she proceeded forth,  $\tau$  bare his brother Abell. And Abell became a shepherde, but Cain became an huszbande man.

And it fortunede after certaine daies, that Cain brought of the frute of the earth, an offrynge vnto  $\S$  LORDE. And Abell brought also of the firstlinges of his shepe, and of f fat of them. "And the LORDE had respecte vnto Abell and to his offeringe: but vnto Cain and his offerynge he loked not. Then was Cain exceedinge wroth, and his countenance chaunged. And the LORDE sayde vnto Cain: Why art thou angrie? and why doth thy countenance chaunge? Is it not so? that yf thou do well, thou shalt receaue it: but and yf thou do euell, thy synne lyeth open in the dore? \*Shal he then be subdued vnto the? and wilt thou rule him? And Cain talked with Abell his brother.

B And it happened, that when they were in the felde, Cain arose agaynst Abell his brother, and slew him. Then sayde the LORDE vnto Cain: Where is Abell thy brother? He sayde: I can not tell. <sup>a</sup>Am I my brothers keper? And he sayde: What hast thou done? <sup>b</sup>The voyce of thy brothers bloude crieth vnto me out of the earth. And now shalt thou be cursed vpon the earth, which hath opened hir mouth, and receaued thy brothers bloude of thine hande. When thou tyllest f grounde, she shall hensforth not geue hir power vnto the. <sup>c</sup>A vagabunde and a rennagate shalt thou be vpon f earth. And Cain sayde vnto f LORDE: <sup>d</sup>my synne is greater, then that it maye be foregeuen me. Beholde, thou castest me out this daye from out of f londe, and from thy sight must I hyde my self, and must be a vagabunde and a rennagate vpon f earth. And thus shal it go with me: that who so fyndeth me, shal slaye me.

C But the LORDE sayde thus vnto him: <sup>e</sup>Who so euer slayeth Cain, it shalbe auenged seuenfold. And the LORDE put a marck vpon Cain, that no man which founde him, shulde kyll him. So Cain wente out from f face of the LORDE, and dwelt in the lande Nod, vpon the east syde of Eden.

And Cain laye with his wyfe, which conceived and bare Henoch. And he buylded a cite, and called it after the name of his sonne Henoch. And Henoch begat Irad, Irad begat Mahuiael. Mahuiael begat Mathusael. Mathusael begat Lamech.

And Lamech toke him two wyues: f one was called Ada, <sup>f</sup> the other Zilla. And Ada bare Iabel, of whom came they that dwelt in tentes and had catell. And his brothers name was Iuball: Of him came they that occupied harpes <sup>g</sup> and pypes. And Zilla she also bare Tubalcain, a worker in all counynge poyntes of metall <sup>h</sup> and yron. And Tubalcains sister was called Naema.

And Lamech sayde vnto his wyues Ada and Zilla: Heare my voyce (ye wyues of Lamech) and herken vnto my wordes: for I haue slayne a man, and wounded my selfe: and (haue kyllled) a yonge man, and gottē my self strypes. Cain shalbe auēged seue tynes: but Lamech seuen and seuentie tymes.

Adam laye yet with his wyfe agayne, <sup>i</sup> and she bare a sonne, and called him Seth. For God (sayde she) hath apoynted me another sede. for Abell, whom Cain slew. And Seth begat a sonne also, and called him Enos. At the same tyme beganne men to call vpon the name of the LORDE.

The b. Chapter.

THIS is the boke of the generacion of man, in the tyme whan God created man, and made him after the symilitude of God. Male and female made he them, and blessed thē, <sup>j</sup> and called their names Man, in the tyme whan they were created. <sup>k</sup> And Adam was an hundreth and thirtie yeare olde, and begat a sonne, which was like his owne ymage, and called his name Seth: <sup>l</sup> and lyued thereafter eight hūdreth yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundreth and thirtie yeares, and so he dyed.

Seth was an hundreth and fyue yeare olde, and begat Enos: <sup>m</sup> and lyued thereafter eight hundreth and seuen yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hūdreth and twolue yeares, and so he dyed.

B Enos was nyentie yeare olde, and begat Kenan: and lyued thereafter eight hundreth <sup>n</sup> and fyftene yeare, and begat sonnes <sup>o</sup> and daughters. And his whole age was nyene hūdreth and fyue yeares, and so he dyed.

Kenan was seutētie yeare olde, and begat Mahalael: and lyued thereafter eight hundreth and fourtie yeare, and begat sonnes <sup>p</sup> and daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundreth and ten yeares, and so he dyed.

Mahalael was thre score yeare olde <sup>q</sup> and fyue, and begat Iared: and lyued thereafter eight hundredth and thirtie yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was eight hundredth, nyentie and fyue yeares, and so he dyed.

C Jared was an hundredth and two  $\tau$  sixtie yeare olde, and begat Henoch:  $\tau$  lyued thereafter eight hundredth yeare, and begat sonnes  $\tau$  daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundredth and two and sixtie yeare, and so he dyed.

<sup>a</sup> Henoch was fyue and thre score yeare olde, and begat Mathusalah: and led a godly conversacion thre hundredth yeaes thereafter, and begat sonnes  $\tau$  daughters. And his whole age was thre hundredth and fyue and thre score yeares. \*And for so much as he lyued a godly life, God toke him awaye,  $\tau$  he was nomore sene.

Mathusalah was an hundredth  $\tau$  seuē and foure score yeare olde,  $\tau$  begat Lamech: and lyued thereafter seuē hundredth and two and foure score yeare, and begat sonnes  $\tau$  daughters. And his whole age was nyene hundredth and nyene and tre score yeares, and so he dyed.

Lamech was an hundredth and two and foure score yeare olde, and begat a sonne,  $\tau$  called him Noe, and sayde: This same shall cōforte vs in oure workes, and in the sorowe of oure hondes vpon the earth, <sup>c</sup>which the LORDE hath cursed. After this he lyued fyue hundredth and fyue  $\tau$  nyentie yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was seuē hundredth seuē and seuentie yeares, and so he dyed.

Noe was fyue hundredth yeare olde, and begat Sem, Ham and Iaphet.

The vi. Chapter.

A SO whan men beganne to multiplie vpon the earth, and had begot them daughters, the children of God sawe the daughters of men, that they were fayre, and toke vnto the wyues such as they liked. Then sayde  $\gamma$  LORDE: My sprete shal not awaye strye with man, for he is but flesh also. <sup>c</sup>I wil yet geue him respyte an hundredth and twēty yeares. There were giantes also in the worlde at that tyme. For whan the children of God had lyen with the daughters of men, and begotten them children,  $\gamma$  same (children)

But whan the LORDE sawe  $\gamma$  the wickednes of man was increased vpon  $\gamma$  earth, and that all  $\gamma$  thought and imagination of their hert was but onely euell contynually, <sup>d</sup>it repented him, that he had made man vpon the earth, and he sorowed in his hert, and sayde: I wyll destroye man kynde which I haue made, from the earth: both man, beast, worme, and foule vnder the heauen: for it repenteth me, that I haue made them. <sup>e</sup>Neuertheles Noe founde grace in the sight of the LORDE.

This is  $\gamma$  generacion of Noe. Noe was a righteous and perfecte mā, <sup>f</sup>and led a godly life in his tyme, and begat thre sonnes: Sem, Ham and Iaphet. Notwithstandinge  $\gamma$  earth was corrupte in  $\gamma$  sight of God, and full of myschefe. Then God lokyd vpon  $\gamma$  earth: and lo, it was corrupte (for all flesh had corrupte his waye vpon the earth.)

Then sayde God vnto Noe: The ende of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is full of myschefe before them. And lo, I wyll destroye them with the earth. Make the Arcke of Pyne tre, and make chambers in it, and pitch it within and without with pitch and make it after this fashion: The length shal be thre hundredth cubites, the bredth fiftie cubites, and the heygth thirtie cubites. A wyndow shalt thou make aboue of a cubyte greate: but the dore shalt thou set in the myddest in the syde of it: And the Arke shalt thou make with thre loftes one aboue another. For lo, I wyll bringe a floude of water vpon the earth, to destroye all flesh (wherin the breth of life is) vnder the heauē: All that is vpon earth, shal perishe.

But with the wyl I make a couenaunt, and thou shalt go in to the Arke with thy sonnes, with thy wyfe, and with thy sonnes wyues. And of all creatures what so euer flesh it be, thou shalt bringe in to the Arcke, euen a payre: the male and the female, that they maye lyue with the: Of foules after their kynde, of beastes after their kynde, and of all maner wormes of the earth after their kinde. Of euery one of these shal there a payre go in vnto the, that they maye lyue. And thou shalt take vnto the all maner of meate that maye be eaten, and shalt laye it vp in stoare by the, that it maye be meate for the and them. And Noe dyd accordinge to all that God commaunded him.

The viij. Chapter.

AND  $\hat{y}$  LORDE sayde vnto Noe: Go in to the Arcke thou  $\tau$  thy whole house: <sup>a</sup>for the hane I sene righteous before me at this tyme. <sup>b</sup>Of all cleane beastes take vnto the seuen and seuen, the male and his female. And of vncleane beastes a payre, the male and his female. Like wyse of the foules vnder the heauen, seuen and seuen, the male and his female, that there maye be sede left a lyue vpon the whole earth.

For yet after seuen dayes, I wil sende raine vpon the earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes, and wyll destroye all maner of thynges that I haue made, from of the face of the earth.

B And Noe dyd all that the LORDE commaunded him. Sixe hundreth yere olde was he, when the water floude came vpon earth. <sup>c</sup>And he wente in to the Arcke, with his sonnes, his wyfe, and his sonnes wyues, for the waters of the floude. Of cleane beastes and of vncleane, of all fethered foules,  $\tau$  of all that crepeth vpon earth, wente in vnto him to the Arcke by pares, a male and a female, as  $\hat{y}$  LORDE comaunded him. And when the seuen dayes were past, the water floude came vpon the earth.

In the sixe hundreth yere of Noes age, vpon the seuentene daye of the seconde moneth, that same daye were all  $\hat{y}$  fountaynes of the greate depe broken vp, and the wyndowes of heauen were opened, and there came a rayne vpon  $\hat{y}$  earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes.

C Vpon the selfe same daye wete Noe in to the Arcke, with Sem, Ham and Iaphet his sonnes, and with his wyfe, and the thre wyues of his sonnes, and all maner of beastes after their kynde, all maner of catell after their kynde, all maner of crepyng thynges (that crepe vpō the earth) after their kynde, and all maner of foules (what so euer coude flye  $\tau$  what so euer had fethers) after their kynde: These wente all vnto Noe in to the Arcke by cooples, of all flesh in whom was the breth of life. And these were the male  $\tau$  the female of all maner of flesh, and wente in, accordinge as God commaunded him. And the LORDE shut (the dore) vpon him.

<sup>d</sup>Then came the water floude fourtie dayes vpon the earth, and the water increased, and bare vp the Arcke, and lift it vp ouer  $\hat{y}$  earth. Thus the water preuayled, and increased sore vpon the earth, so that the Arcke wente vpon the waters. Yee the waters preuayled and increased so sore vpon earth, that all the hye mountaynes vnder the whole heauen were couered. Fyftene cubytes hye preuayled  $\hat{y}$  waters ouer the mountaynes, which were couered.

Then all flesh that crepte vpon earth, perished, both foules, catell, beastes, and all  $\hat{y}$  moued vpon earth, and all men. What so euer had the breth of life vpon the drye londe, dyed.

<sup>e</sup>Thus was destroyed all that was vpon the earth, both man and beast, both wormes and foules vnder  $\hat{y}$  heauē: all these were destroyed from the earth, Saue Noe onely remayned, and they that were with him in the Arcke. And the waters preuayled vpon the earth, an hundreth and fiftie dayes.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN God remembred Noe and all the beastes, and all the catell that were with him in the Arcke, and caused a wynde to come vpon the earth: and  $\hat{y}$  waters ceased, and the fountaynes of the depe and the wyndowes of heauen were stoppe, and the rayne of heauē was forbydden, and the waters raine styll awaye from  $\hat{y}$  earth, and decreased after an hundreth and fiftie dayes.

Vpon the seuentene daye of the seuenth moneth rested the Arcke vpon the mountaynes of Ararat. And the waters wete awaye and decreased vntyll the tenth moneth: for the first daye of the tenth moneth, the toppes of the mountaynes appeared.

After fourtie dayes Noe opened  $\hat{y}$  wyndow of the Arcke which he had made,  $\tau$  sent forth a rauē, which flew out, and <sup>f</sup>came agayne, vntyll the waters were dried vp vpō the earth.

B Then sent he forth a doue from him, to wete, whether the waters were fallē vpon the earth. But when  $\hat{y}$  doue coude fynde no restynge place for hir fete, she came agayne vnto him in to the Arke, for the waters were yet vpon the face of all the earth. And he put out his hande, and toke her to him in to the Arke.

Then he abode yet seuen dayes mo, & sent out the doue agayne out of the Arke: & she returned vnto him aboute the euen tyde: and beholde, she had broken of a leaf of an olyue tre. & bare it in hir nebb. Then Noe perceived, that the waters were abated vpon the earth. Neuertheles he taried yet seuen other dayes, and sent forth the doue, which came nomore to him agayne.

In the sixte hundredth and one yere of Noes age, vpon the first daye of y first moneth, the waters were dried vp vpon the earth. Then Noe toke of the hatches of the Arke, and sawe y the face of the earth was drye. So vpon the seuen and twente daye of the secoude moneth the whole earth was drye.

<sup>C</sup> Then spake God vnto Noe, and sayde: Go out of the Arke, thou and thy wyfe, and thy sonnes, and thy sonnes wyues with the. As for all the beastes that are with the, what so euer flesh it be (both foule & catell and all maner of wormes that crepe vpon the earth) let them go out with the, and be ye occupied vpon the earth, <sup>a</sup>growe and multiplye vpon the earth.

So Noe wente out, with his sonnes, and with his wife, and with his sonnes wyues. All the beastes also and all the wormes, and all the foules, and all that crepte vpon the earth, wente out of the Arke, eueri one vnto his like.

The ir. Chapter.

tiplie, and fyll the earth. The feare also and drede of you be vpon all beastes of the earth, vpon all foules vnder the heauen, and vpon all that crepeth on the earth, and all fshes of the see be genen in to youre hādes. All that moueth and hath life, be youre meate. <sup>c</sup>Euen as the grene herbe, so haue I geuē you all. <sup>d</sup>Onely eate not the flesh with the bloude, wherein the soule is: For the bloude of you wherein your soule is, wyl I requyre of the hande of all beastes: and the soule of mā wyl I requyre of mans hande, <sup>e</sup>yee eueri mans soule of anothers hande.

<sup>f</sup>He that sheddeth mā's bloude, his bloude shal be shed by man agayne, for God made man after his owne likenesse. As for you, be ye frutefull, and increace, <sup>g</sup>and be occupied vpon the earth, that ye maye multiplye therin.

<sup>B</sup> Farthermore, God sayde vnto Noe and to his sonnes with him: <sup>h</sup>Beholde, I make my couenaunt with you, and with youre sede after you, and with eueri lyuyng creature that is with you, both foule, catell, and all beastes vpon the earth with you, of all that is gone out of the Arke, what so euer beast of the earth it be: <sup>i</sup>And thus I make my couenaunt with you, that hence forth all flesh shal not be destroyed with the waters of eny floude, and from hence forth there shall come no floude to destroye the earth.

And God sayde: This is the token of my couenaunt which I haue made betwene me and you, and all lyuyng creatures amonge you for euermore: My bowe wyl I set in the cloudes, and it shal be the token of my couenaunt betwene me and y<sup>e</sup> earth: so that whā I bryngne cloudes vpon the earth, the bowe shal appeare in the cloudes. And then wyl I thynke vpon my couenaunt betwixte me and you and all lyuyng creatures in all maner of flesh: so that from hence forth there shall nomore come eny floude of water to destroye all flesh. Therefore shall my bowe be in the cloudes, that I maye loke vpon it, and remembre the euerlastynge couenaunt, betwixte God and all lyuyng creatures in all flesh that is vpon earth. God sayde also vnto Noe: This is the tokē of the couenaunt, which I haue made betwene me and all flesh vpon earth.

So whan Noe awaked from his wyne, and perceaued what his younger sonne had done vnto him, he sayde: Cursed be Canaan, and a seruauunt of seruauantes be he vnto his brethren. He sayde morouer: Praysed be the LORDE God of Sem, and Canaan be his seruauunt. God increase Iaphet, and let him dwell in the tentes of Sem, and Canaan be his seruauunt.

And Noe lyued after the floude thre hundredeth τ fiftie yeare, so ȝ his whole age was ix. hūdreth and fyftie yeare, and so he dyed.

The x. Chapter.

T HIS is the generacion of the childrē of Noe, Sem, Ham, and Iaphet, τ they begat children after the floude.

<sup>b</sup> The children of Iaphet are these: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Iauan, Tubal, Mesech, and Thyras. The childrē of Gomer are these: Ascenas, Riphath and Togarma. The children of Iauan are these: Elisa, Tharsis, Cithim and Dodanim: Of these are deuided the lles of ȝ Heithen in their countrees, euery one after his speach, kynred and people.

The childrē of Ham are these: Chus, Misraim, Phut and Canaan. The children of Chus are these: Seba, Heuila Sabtha, Reyma and Sabthecha.

B The children of Reyma are these: Sheba and Dedā. Chus also begat Nemrod, which beganne to be mightie in the earth, and was a mightie hunter in the sight of the LORDE. Therof commeth the prouerbe: This is a mightie hunter before the LORDE like as Nemrod. And the originall of his kyngdome was <sup>c</sup> Babel, Erech, Acad τ Chalne in ȝ londe of Synear. Out of that lōde came Assur, and buylded Ninieue, and ȝ stretes of ȝ cite, and Calah, and Resen betwene Ninieue τ Calah: This is a greate cite.<sup>d</sup> Mizraim begat Ludim, Enamim, Leabim, Naphtuhim, Patrusim τ Casluhim, from whence came the Philistynes and Capthorims. Canaā also begat Zidon his eldest sonne, τ Heth, Iebusi, Emori, Girgosi, Hiuī, Arki, Sini, Aruadi, Zemari τ Hamati: frō whence ȝ kynreds of ȝ Cananites are disperd abrode. And ȝ Coastes of ȝ Cananites were frō Sidō forth thorow Gerar vnto Gasa, tyll thou cōmest vnto Sodoma, Gomorra, Adama, Zeboim, τ vnto Lasa. These are the children of Ham in their kynreds, tungen, londes τ people. And Sem which is ȝ father of all the children of Eber, τ the elder brother of Iaphet, begat childrē also. And these are his children: Elā, Assur, Arphachad, Lud τ Aram. The childrē of Aram are these: Vz, Hul, Gether τ Mas.

And Arphachsad begat Sala, and Sala begat Eber. Eber begat two sounes: the name of the one was Peleg, because that in his tyme the worlde was deuýded, and his brothers name was Iaketan, And Iaketan begat Almodad, Saleph, Hazarnaphet, Iarah, Hadoram, Vsal, Dikela, Obal, Abinuel, Seba, Ophir, Heuila τ Iobab: All these are ȝ childrē of Iaketan. And their dwellynge was from Mesa, tyll thou come vnto Sephar a mountayne of ȝ east. These are ȝ children of Sem in their generacions, tungen, londes and people.

This is now ȝ generacion of ȝ children of Noe in their kynredes τ people. Of these were ȝ people vpon earth spred a brode after ȝ floude.

 13 Come on, let vs go downe, ¶ cōfounde their frō thēce in all lōdes, so ȳ they left of to because the LORDE cōfounded there the language of all the worlde, and from thēce scatred them abrode in to all lōdes.

These are ȳ geueracions of Sem. Sem was an hundreth yeare olde, and begat Ar-phachsad two yeare after the floude, and lyued therafter fyue hūdreth yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Arphachsad was fyue ¶ thirtie yeare olde, and begat Salah, and lyued therafter foure hundreth and thre yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Salah was thirtie yeare olde, and begat
 Eber, ¶ lyued therafter foure hūdreth ¶ thre yeare, ¶ begat sonnes and daughters.

Eber was foure and thirtie yeare olde, ¶ begat Peleg, and lyued therafter foure hun-dreth and thirtie yeare, and begat sonnes ¶
 daughters.

Peleg was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Regu, and lyued therafter two hūdreth and nyene yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Regu was two and thirtie yeare olde, and begat Serug, and lyued therafter two hun-dreth and seuen yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Serug was thirtie yeare olde, and begat
 Nahor, and lyued therafter two hundreth yeare, and begat sonnes ¶ daughters.

Nahor was nyene and twenty yeare olde, and begat Terah, and lyued therafter an hundreth and nyentene yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters.

Terah was seuentie yeare olde, and begat
 Abram, Nahor and Haran.

These are the generations of Terah: Terah
 begat Abram, Nahor and Haran. ¶ And Haran begat Lot, but Harā dyed before Terah his father in ȳ londe where he was borne, at Vr in Chaldea.

Then Abram and Nahor toke their wyues.
 Abrams wife was called Sarai, ¶ Nahors wyfe

Milea the daughter of Haran, which was father of Milea and Isca. But Sarai was baren, and had no childe.

¶ Then toke Terah Abrā his sonne, ¶ Lot his sonne Harans sonne, ¶ Sarai his daughter in lawe, his sonne Abrams wife, ¶ caried them with him from Vr in Chaldea, to go in to the lande of Canaan. And they came to Haran, ¶ dwelt there. And Terah was two hundreth
 ¶ fyue yeare olde, and dyed in Haran.

The xij. Chapter.

AND ȳ LORDE sayde vnto Abram: ¶ Get the out of thy countre, and from thy kynred, and out of thy fathers house, in to a londe which I wil shew the. And I wil make of the a mighty people, and wyll blesse the, and make the a greute name, yee thou shalt be a very blessinge. ¶ I wil blesse them that blesse the, and curse them that curse the: and in the shal all the generacions of the earth be blessed.

Then wente Abram out, as the LORDE commaunded him, and Lot wente with him.
 Fyue ¶ seuentie yeare olde was Abrā, whan he wente out of Haran. So Abram toke Sarai his wife, and Lot his brothers sonne, with all their goodes which they had gotten, and soules which they begat in Harā, and departed to go in to ȳ londe of Canaan. ¶ And whē they were come in to the same londe, he wente thorow, tyll he came vnto the place of Sichem, and vnto the Okegroue of More: ¶ for ȳ Cananites dwelt in ȳ lōde at ȳ same time.

Then the LORDE appeared vnto Abrā, ¶ sayde: ¶ This londe wil I geue vnto thy sede.
 And there he buylded an altur vnto ȳ
 LORDE, which appeared vnto him. Thē brake he vp frō thēce, vnto a mountayne ȳ laye on ȳ east syde of the cite of Bethel, ¶ pitched his tent: so ȳ he had Bethel on the west side, and Ay on ȳ east syde: ¶ there buylded he an altare also vnto the LORDE, ¶ called vpon the name of the LORDE.
 Afterwarde departed Abram farther, ¶ toke his iourneys southwarde. But there came a derth in the londe.

Then wente Abram downe in to Egipte to kepe himself there as a straunger, for the derth was sore in the londe. And whan he was come nye for to entre in to Egipte, he sayde vnto Sarai his wife: Beholde, I knowe y<sup>e</sup> thou art a fayre woman to loke vpon. Now whan the Egiptians se the,<sup>a</sup> they wil saye: She is his wife, and so shal they slaye me, and saue the alyue. Therefore (I pray y<sup>e</sup>) saye thou art my sister, that I maye fare the better by reason of the, and that my soule maye lyue for thy sake.

D Now whan he came in to Egipte, y<sup>e</sup> Egiptians sawe y<sup>e</sup> woman, y<sup>e</sup> she was very faire: ⁊ Pharaos prynces sawe her also, ⁊ praysed her before him. Then was she brought in to Pharaos house, and Abram was well intreated for hir sake: and he had shepe, oxē, and he Asses, seruauntes, maydēs, she Asses and Camels.

But y<sup>e</sup> LORDE plagued Pharao ⁊ his house with greate plagēs, because of Sarai Abrās wife. Then Pharao called Abrā vnto him, and sayde: Why hast thou dealt thus with me? Wherefore toldest thou not me at the first, y<sup>e</sup> she was thy wife? Why saydest thou then, that she was thy sister? Wherefore I toke her to my wife. And now lo, there is thy wife, take her, and go thy waye. He gaue his officers also a charge ouer him, to conueye him out, and his wife, and all that he had.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A SO Abrā departed out of Egipte, with his wife, ⁊ with all y<sup>e</sup> he had, ⁊ Lot with him also, towarde y<sup>e</sup> south. Abram was very rich in catell, siluer ⁊ golde. And he wente on forth from the south vnto Bethel, vnto the place where his tent was at y<sup>e</sup> first, betwene Bethel and Ay: euen vnto y<sup>e</sup> place where he had made the altare before, ⁊ where he called vpon the name of the LORDE. Lot also which wente with him, had shepe, greate catell ⁊ tentes: so y<sup>e</sup> the londe was not able to receaue them, that they might dwell together: for the substance of their riches was so greate, that they coude not dwell together. And there fell a strife betwene the hirdmen of Abrams catell, and the hirdmen of Lots catell. The Cananites also and the Pheresites dwelt at that tyme in the londe.<sup>a</sup>

B Then sayde Abram vnto Lot: O let there be no strife betwene me and the, and betwene my hyrdmen and thine, for we are brethrē. Is not all the whole londe open before the?

Departē from me, I praye the. Yf thou wilt go to the left hande, I wil take the right: Or yf thou wilt go to the right hande, I wil take the left. Then Lot lift vp his eyes, and behelde all the countre rounde aboute Iordā, that it was a plenteous countre of water. For before the LORDE destroyed Sodoma and Gomorra, it was rounde aboute Zoar, euen as the pleasaunt garden of the LORDE, and as the londe of Egipte.

Then Lot chose all the coastes of Iordā, and toke his iourney towarde y<sup>e</sup> East. And so the one brother departed from the other. Abram dwelt in the lande of Canaan, and Lot in the cities of the same coastes, and pitched his tent towarde Sodome. But y<sup>e</sup> men of Sodome were wicked, and synned exceedingly agaynst the LORDE.

Now whan Lot was departed from Abram, the LORDE saide vnto Abram: Lift vp thine eyes, and loke from the place where thou dwellest, northwarde, southwarde, eastwarde, and westwarde: for all the londe that thou seist, wyl I geue vnto the and to thy sede for euer, and wyl make thy sede as the dust of the earth: so that yf a man can nombre the dust of the earth, he shall nombre thy sede also. Arise, and go thorow the londe, in the length and bredth, for I wyl geue it vnto the.

So Abram remoued his tent, and wente and dwelt in y<sup>e</sup> Okegroue of Mamre, which is in Ebron, and buydeth there an altare vnto the LORDE.

A ND it chauned in the tyme of Amraphel the kynge of Synear, Arioch the kynge of Ellasar, Kedorlaomer the kynge of Elam, ⁊ Thydeal the kynge of y<sup>e</sup> Heithen. These came all together in to the brode valley, where now the salt see is: for twolue yeares were they subiectes vnto kinge Kedorlaomer. ⁊ in the thirteenth yeare they fell from him. Therefore in the fourteenth yeare came Kedorlaomer, and the kynges y<sup>e</sup> were with him, ⁊ smote the Giauntes in Astaroth Karnaim, ⁊

Susin at Ham, ⁊ Emim in the felde of Kiriathaim, and ŷ Horites in their owne mount Seir vnto the playne of Pharan, which bordreth vpō the wilderness. And then they turned, ⁊ came to the well of iudgment (which is Cades) ⁊ smote all the countre of the Amalechites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in Hazezon Thamar.

B Then wente out the kynge of Sodome, ⁊ the kynge of Gomorra, ⁊ the kynge of Adama, and the kynge of Zeboim, and the kynge of Bela (called Zoar) ⁊ prepared them selues to fight in the brode valley with Kedorlaomer the kynge of Elam, ⁊ with Thideal ŷ kynge of the Heithen, ⁊ with Amraphel ŷ kynge of Seneir, ⁊ with Arioch the kynge of Ellasar: foure kynges with fyue. And ŷ brode valley had many slyne pyttes. But the kynge of Sodoma and Gomorra were put to flight, ⁊ fell there, ⁊ the residue fled vnto ŷ mountaynes. Then toke they all the goodes at Sodoma and Gomorra, ⁊ all their vytales, ⁊ wente their waye. They toke Lot also Abrahams brothers sonne, ⁊ his good (for he dwelt at Sodome) and departed.

C Then came one that had escaped, and tolde Abram the Aleaunt, which dwelt in the Okegroue of Maure the Amoryte, which was the brother of Escol ⁊ Aner: for these were confederate with Abram.

D But Melchisedech the kynge of Salem brought forth bred and wyne. And he beyng the prest of the most hye God, <sup>a</sup> blessed him and sayde: Blessed be thou Abram vnto the most hye God possessor of heauen and earth.

And praysed be God the Hyest, which hath deliuered thine enemies in to thy handes. And Abram gaue him tythes of all.

Then sayde the kynge of Sodome vnto Abram: Geue me the soules, and take ŷ goodes vnto thy self. But Abram sayde vnto the kinge of Sodome: I lift vp my honde vnto the LORDE the most hye God, possessor of heauen and earth, that I wyll not take of all that is thyne, so moch as a threde or a shue lachet, lest thou shuldest saye: I haue made Abram ryche: Saue onely that which the yonge men haue spent, and the men Aner Escol and Manre, that wente with me, let them take their parte.

The xv. Chapter.

IT happened after these actes, ŷ the worde A of ŷ LORDE came vnto Abra in a vysion, and sayde: Feare not Abram, I am thy shyld and thy exceedinge greate rewarde. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, what wilt thou geue me? I go childles, and the seruaunt of my house (this Eleasar of Damascos) hath a sonne. And Abram sayde morouer: Beholde, vnto me hast thou geuen no sede: and lo, the sonne of my housholde shal be myne heyre. And beholde, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto him, and saide: He shal not be thine heyre, but one that shal come out of thine owne body, he shal be thine heyre. And he bad him go forth, and sayde: Loke vp vnto heauen, ⁊ tell ŷ starres: Canst thou nombre them? And he sayde vnto him: *Euen so shal thy sede be.

Abram beleued the LORDE, and ŷ was counted vnto him for righteousnes. <sup>a</sup> And he sayde vnto him: I am ŷ LORDE, † ŷ brought the from Vr out of Chaldea, to geue ŷ this londe to possesse it. And he sayde vnto him: Take a cow of three year olde, <sup>a</sup> and a she goate of three year olde, and a ramme of three year olde, and a turtill doue, and a yonge pigeon. And he toke all these, and deuyded them in the myddes, and layde the one parte ouer agaynst the other, but the foules deuyded he not. And the foules fell vpō the flesh, but Abram droue them awaye.

So whan the Sonne was downe, and it was waxed darcke: Beholde, there smoked a fornice, and a fyre brande wente betwene <sup>f</sup>partes. "The same daye made the LORDE a couenaunt with Abram, and sayde: Vnto thy sede wil I geue this lode, from the water of Egipte, vnto the greate water Euphrates: the Kenytes, the Kenizites, the Kychmonites, the Hethites, the Pherezites, the Giautes, the Amorites, the Cananites, the Gergesites, and the Iebusites.

The xvi. Chapter.

A SARAI Abrams wife bare him no children: but she had an handmaye an Egipcian, whose name was Agar, and sayde vnto Abram: "Beholde, the LORDE hath closed me, that I can not beare. <sup>g</sup>Go in (I praye the) vnto my mayde: peradventure I shalbe multiplied by her, more then by myself. And Abram herkened vnto the voyce of Sarai. Than Sarai Abrams wife toke Agar hir mayde <sup>h</sup>Egipcian (after they had dwelt ten yeare in the londe of Canaan) and gaue her vnto hir huszbande Abrā, to be his wife. And he wente in vnto Agar, and she conceaued. Now whan she sawe <sup>i</sup>she had conceyued, she despyed hir mastresse.

B Then sayde Sarai vnto Abram: I must suffre wronge for thy sake. I layde my mayde by the: but now because she seyth, that she hath conceaued, I must be despyed in hir sight: the LORDE be iudge betwene me and the. And Abram sayde vnto Sarai: Be-holde, thy mayde is vnder thine auctorite, do with her, as it pleaseth the.

Now whan Sarai dealt hardly with her, she fled from her. But the angell of the LORDE founde her besyde a well of water in the wilderness (euery by the well in the waye to Sur) and sayde vnto her: Agar Sarais maide, whence comest thou? <sup>j</sup>and whyther wyll thou go? She sayde: I fle fro my mastresse Sarai. And the angel of the LORDE sayde C vnto her: Returne to thy mastresse agayne, and submitte thyself vnder hir hande.

And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Beholde, I wil so encrease thy sede, that it shall not be nombred for multitude. And the angel of the LORDE sayde further vnto her: Beholde, thou art with childe,<sup>k</sup> <sup>l</sup>and shalt bringe forth a sone, and shalt call his name Ismael, because the LORDE hath herde thy trouble. He shal be a wyld man. His hande agaynst euery man, and euery mans hande agaynst him: and he shal dwell ouer agaynst all his brethren.

And she called the name of the LORDE <sup>m</sup>spake vnto her: Thou art the God that seist me. For she sayde: Of a suertye I haue sene the back partes of him that sawe me. Therefore called she the well: The well of the liuing that sawe me. Which (well) is betwene Cades and Bared.

And Agar bare Abram a sone,<sup>n</sup> and Abram called his sonnes name which Agar bare him, Ismael. And Abram was foure score yeare olde and sixe, whan Agar bare him Ismael.

And vnto the and to thy sede after the, will I geue the lande, wherin thou art a stranger: euen all the lande of Canaan for an euerlastinge possession, and will be their God.

33 And God sayde morouer vnto Abraham: Kepe my couenaunt then, thou and thy sede after the. This is my couenaunt which ye shal kepe betwene me and you, and thy sede after y thorow out their posterities. Euery manchild that is amonge you, shalbe circumcyded: and ye shall circumcyde the foreskynne of youre flesh. This same shalbe a token of the couenaunt betwene me and you. Euery manchild whan it is eight dayes olde, ⁊ shalbe circūcyded thorow out youre posterities: In like maner all houszholde folkes borne at home, or bought, or eny other also that is a straiger and not of thy sede. And yf there shalbe any manchild vncircumcided in the foreskinne of his flesh, his soule shalbe roted out from his people, because he hath broken my couenaunt.

© And God sayde vnto Abraham: Sarai thy wyfe shall nomore be called Sarai, but Sara shalbe hir name: for I will blesse her, and geue the a sonne of her. ⁊ I wil blesse her, and people shall come of her, yee and kynges of many people. Then fell Abrahā vpō his face, and laughed, and sayde in his hert: Shal a childe be borne vnto me that am an hundreth yere olde? And shall Sara y is nyente yere olde, beare? And Abrahā sayde vnto God: O that Ismael might lyue in thy sight. Then sayde God: Yee euen Sara thy wyfe shal beare the a sonne, and thou shalt call his name Isaac: for with him wil I make my euerlastinge couenaunt, and with his sede after him. But my couenaunt wyll I make with Isaac, whom Sara shal beare vnto the, eue this tyme twolue moneth. And he left of talkyng with him, and God wente vp from Abraham. Than toke Abraham his sonne Ismael, and all the seruantes borne in his house, and all that were bought, (as many as were men children in his house,) and circumcyded the foreskynne of their flesh, euen the same daye, as God had sayde vnto him. And Abraham was nyente yere olde and nyue, whan he cut of the foreskynne of his flesh. As for Ismael, he was thirteue yere olde, whan the foreskynne of his flesh was circumcyded. Euen vpon one daye were they all circumcyded: Abraham, and Ismael his sonne, and all the men in his house, (whether they were borne at home, bought, or eny other stranger:) they were all circumcyded with him.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE apared vnto him in the Okegrone of Mamre, as he sat in his tent dore in the heate of y daie. And as he lift vp his eyes, and looked, beholde, there stode thre men ouer agaynst him. And whan he sawe them, he ranne to mete them from his tent dore, and bowed him self downe vpon the grounde, and sayde: LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, go not by thy seruaut. Abraham wente a pace in to the tent to Sara, and sayde: Make haist, ⁊ mengle thre peckes of fyne meele, knede it, and bake cakes. And he ranne to the beastes, ⁊ fet a calf that was tender and good, and gaue it vnto a yonge man, which made it ready at once. And Abraham and Sara were both olde,  $\tau$  well stryken in age: so that it wente nomore with Sara after  $\hat{y}$  maner of women: therfore laughed she with in hir self, and sayde: Now that I am olde  $\tau$  my  $\hat{f}$ lorde olde also, shal I yet geue my self to lust?

Then sayde  $\hat{y}$  LORDE vnto Abraham: Wherefore doth Sara laugh, and saye: Is this true in dede, that I shal beare, and yet am olde? Shulde eny such thinge be to harde for the LORDE? <sup>a</sup> Aboute this tyme (yf I lyue) I will come to the agayne,  $\tau$  Sara shal haue a sonne. Then Sara denyed it, and sayde: I laughed not, for she was afraied. But he sayde: It is not so, thou dyldest laugh. Then the men stode vp from thence, and turned them towarde Sodome: and Abraham wente with them, to brynghe them on their waye.

C Then sayde the LORDE: How can I hyde from Abraham,  $\hat{y}$  thinge that I wil do? seynge he shal be a greate and mightie people, and all  $\hat{y}$  people vpō earth shalbe blessed in him? For I knowe him that he wil commaunde his children and his housholde after him, to kepe the waye of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and to do after right and conscience, that the LORDE maye bringe vpō Abraham what he hath promised him. And the LORDE sayde: There is a crye at Sodome and Gomorra, which is greate, <sup>b</sup>  $\tau$  their synnes are exceadinge greuous: therefore will I go downe  $\tau$  se, whether they haue done all together, accordinge to that crye, <sup>c</sup> which is come before me, or not, that I maye knowe. And the men turned their face, and wēte towarde Sodome. But Abraham stode still before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and stepte vnto him, and sayde:

Wilt thou then destroye the righteous with the vngodly? Peraduēture there maye be fiftie righteous within  $\hat{y}$  cite: wilt thou destroye those, and not spare the place, for fiftie righteous sake that are therein? That be farre frō the,  $\hat{y}$  thou shuldest do this, and to slaye the righteous with the vngodly, and that the righteous shulde be as the vngodly. That be farre from the. Shulde not the iudge of all the worlde do accordinge to right? And the LORDE sayde: Yf I fynde fiftie righteous at Sodome in the cite, I wil spare all the place for their sakes.

Abraham answered, and sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto the LORDE, howbeit I am but <sup>d</sup> dust and aszbes. Peraduēture there maye be fyue lesse then fiftie righteous therin: Wilt thou then destroye the whole cite because of those fyue? He sayde: yf I fynde fyue and fourtie therin, I will not destroye them.

And he proceeded further to speake vnto him, and sayde: Peraduēture there might be fourtie founde therin. And he sayde: I wil do nothinge vnto them for those fortyes sake. Abraham sayde: Oh let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet more. Peraduēture there might be thirtie founde therin. And he sayde: Yf I fynde thirtie therin, I will do nothinge vnto them. And he sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto my LORDE.

Peraduēture there might be twētie founde therin. He answered: I wyll not destroye them for those twentyes sake. And he sayde: O let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yet once more. Peraduēture there might be ten founde therin. He saide: I wil not destroye them for those ten sake.

And the LORDE weite his waye, when he had left talkynge with Abraham. And Abraham returned vnto his place.

The xii. Chapter.

IN the euenynge came the two angels vnto Sodome. And Lot sat vnder the gate of the cite. And whē he sawe them, he rose vp for to mete them, and bowed him self downe to the ground vpon his face,  $\tau$  sayde: Se lordes, turne in (I praye you) in to youre seruantes house, and tarye all night: let youre fete be waszshen, so maye ye ryse tomorrow by tymes, and go youre waye. Neuertheles they sayde: Nay, but we wyll byde in the stretes all night. Then compelled he them sore: and they turned in vnto him, and came in to his house. And he made them a feast, and baked swete cakes, and <sup>e</sup> they ate.

But before they wente to rest, the men of the cite of Sodome came and compased the house rounde aboute, yonge and olde, all the people from all quarters, and called Lot, and sayde vnto him: Where are the mē that came vnto the to night? Bring them out here vnto vs, *that we maye knowe them.

B And Lot wente out at the dore vnto thē, and shut the dore after him, and sayde: "O brethren, do not so wickedly. Beholde, I haue two daughters, which yet haue knowne no man: them will I brynge out vnto you, do with them as it liketh you. Onely do nothinge vnto these men of God, for therfore are they come vnder the shadowe of my rofe. But they sayde: Come thou hither. Then sayde they: Canest not thou onely herin as a strainger, and wilt thou now be a iudge? Wel, we will deale worse with the thē with them.

C And they pressed sore vpon f man Lot. And whan they rane to, and wolde haue broken vp the dore, the men put out their hondes, and pulled Lot vnto them in to the house, and shut to the dore. And the men at f dore of the house were smyttē with byndnesse both small and greate, so that they coude not fynde the dore.

And f men saide vnto Lot: Hast thou yet here eny soune in lawe, or sonnes or daughters? Who so euer belongeth vnto the in the cite, brynge him out of this place: for we must destroye this place, because the crye of them is greate before the LORDE, which hath sent vs to destroye them. Then wente Lot forth, and spake to his sonnes in lawe, which shulde haue married his daughters, and sayde: O stonde vp, and get you out of this place, for the LORDE wyll destroye this cite. Neuertheles they toke it but for a sporte.

Now whan the mornyng arose, the angels caused Lot to spede him, and sayde: "Stonde vp, take thy wife ⁊ thy two daughters which are at hande, that thou also perishe not in the synne of this cite. But whyle he prolonged the tyme, the men caught him and his wife, and his two daughters by the hande (because the LORDE was mercifull vnto him,) and brought him forth, ⁊ set him without the cite.

D And whē they had brought him out, they sayde: Saue thy soule, and loke not behynde the, neither stonde thou in all this countre: Saue thy self vpon the mountayne, that thou perish not. Then sayde Lot vnto thē: Oh no my LORDE, beholde, in as moch as thy seruait hath founde grace in thy sight, now make thy mercy greate, which thou hast shewed vnto me, in that thou sauest my soule alyue. I can not saue my self vpon the mountayne. There might some mysfortune fall vpon me, that I shulde dye. Beholde, here is a cite by, that I maye flye vnto, and it is a litle one: let me saue myself there in. Is it not a litle one, that my soule maye lyue?

Then sayde he vnto him: Beholde, I have E looked vpon the in this poynte also, that I will not ouerthrowe the cite, wherof thou hast spoken. Haist the, and saue thy self there: for I can do nothinge tyll thou be come thither. Therfore is the cite called Zoar. And the Sonne was vp vpon the earth, whan Lot came in to Zoar.

Then the LORDE caused brymstone and fyre to rayne downe from the LORDE out of heauen vpon Sodoma and Gomorra, and ouerthrew those cities, the whole region, and all that dwelt in the cities, and that that grew vpon the earth. And his wife looked behynde her, and was turned in to a pillar of salt.

Abraham rose vp early in the mornyng, and gat him vnto the place, where he had stonde before the LORDE, and turned his face toward Sodoma and Gomorra, and all f londe of that countre, and looked. And beholde, there rose vp a smoke from f countre, as it had bene f smoke of a fornice. For whan God destroyed f cities of the region, he thought vpon Abraham, and conueyed Lot out of the cities which he ouerthrew, wherin Lot dwelt.

And Lot departed out of Zoar, and dwelt in the mountaynes with both his daughters (for he was afraied to tary at Zoar) and so remayned he in a caue with both his daughters.

Then sayde f elder vnto the yonger: Oure father is olde, and there is not a man more vpon earth, that can come in vnto vs after the maner of all the worlde. Come therfore, let vs geue oure father wyne to drynke, and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of oure father. So they gaue their father wyne to drynke that same night. And the elder daughter wente in, and laye with hir father:

and he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

On the morow the elder sayde vnto the yonger: Beholde, yesternight laye I with my father: let vs geue him wyne to drynke this night also: that thou mayest go in and lye with him, that we maye saue sede of onre father. So they gaue their father wyne to drynke that night also: And the yonger arose like wyse, and laye with him: ⁊ he perceaued it not, nether when she laye downe, ner when she rose vp.

Thus were both the daughters of Lot with childe by their father. And the elder bare a sonne, and called him Moab, of whom come ⁊ Moabytes vnto this daye. And ⁊ yonger bare a sonne also, and called him the sonne Ammi, of whom come the children of Ammon vnto this daye.

The xx. Chapter.

AS for Abraham, he departed thence, in to the south countre, and dwelt betwixte Cades and Sur, and was a straunger at Gerar, and sayde of Sara his wife: "She is my sister. Then Abimelech the kinge of Gerar sent for her, and caused her be fett awaye.

But God came to Abimelech by night in a dreame, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art but a deed man, for the womans sake which thou hast taken, for she is a mans wife. Neuertheles Abimelech had not yet touched her, and sayde: LORDE, wilt thou sleie a righteous people? Sayde not he vnto me: she is my sister? Yee and sayde not she her self also: he is my brother? With a pure hert ⁊ with innocent handes haue I done this.

3 And God sayde vnto him in a dreame: I knowe that thou dydest it with a pure hert, and therefore I kepte the, that thou shuldest not synne agaynst me, nether haue I suffred the to touch her. Now therefore delyner the man his wife ageyne, for he is a prophet: and let him pray for ⁊, and thou shalt lyue. But and yf thou delyuer her not ageyne, be sure, that thou shalt dye the death, and all that is thine.

Then Abimelech rose vp by tymes in the mornynge, and called all his seruantes, and tolde all these thinges in their eares, and the men were sore afraied, and Abimelech called Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs? And what haue I offended ⁊, that thou shuldest brynge on me and on my kyngdome so greate a synne? Thou hast not dealt with vs, as a man shulde deale. And Abimelech saide morouer vnto Abraham: What sawest thou, ⁊ thou hast done this thinge?

Abraham sayde: I thought: Peraduenture there is no feare of God in this place, ⁊ they shall sleie me for my wifes sake, And of a trneth she is my sister, for she is my fathers daughter, but not my mothers daughter, and is become my wife. So whan God charged me to wādre out of my fathers house, I sayde vnto her: Shew this kyndnes vpon me, that, where so euer we come, thou saye of me, that I am thy brother.

Then toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, seruantes and maydens, and gane them vnto Abraham, and delyuered him Sara his wife ageyne, and sayde: Beholde, my londe stondest open before the, dwell where it liketh the. And vnto Sara he sayde: Beholde, I haue geuen thy brother a thousande syluer pens: lo, he shalbe vnto the a couerynge of the eyes, for all that are with the, and euery where, and a sure excuse.

As for Abraham, he prayed vnto God: Then God healed Abimelech, and his wyfe, and his maydens, so that they bare childre. For afore the LORDE had closed all the matrices of Abimelechs house, because of Sara Abrahams wife.

The xxi. Chapter.

THE LORDE also vysited Sara, accordinge *as he had promysed: ⁊ dealt with her, euen as he had sayde. And Sara was with childe, and bare Abraham a sonne in his olde age, euen in the tyme appoynted, like as God had spoken vnto him afore. And Abraham called his sonne which was borne vnto him (whō Sara bare him) Isaac, and circumeided him the eight daye, †like as God commaunded him. An hundreth yere olde was Abrahā, whan his sonne Isaac was borne vnto him.

And Sara sayde: God hath prepared a ioye for me, for who so euer heareth of it, wyll reioyse with me. She sayde morouer: Who wolde haue saide vnto Abraham, that Sara shulde geue children sucke, and beare him a sonne in his olde age? And the childe grew, and was weened. And Abraham made a greate feast, in ȝ daye whan Isaac was weened.

33 And Sara sawe the sonne of Agar the Egipcian (whom she had borne vnto Abraham) that he was a mocker, and sayde vnto Abraham: "Cast out this bonde mayden and hir sonne, for this bonde maydes sonne shall not be heyre with my sonne Isaac. This worde displeased Abraham sore, because of his sonne.

Neuertheles God sayde vnto him: let it not displease the because of the childe and the hand mayde: What so euer Sara hath sayde vnto the, folowe it, <sup>b</sup>for in Isaac shall the sede be called vnto the. <sup>c</sup>As for the bonde maydens sonne, I wyll make a people of him also, because he is of thy sede.

Then Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and toke bred and a botell with water, and put it vpon Agars shulders, and gaue her the childe, and sent her awaye. Then departed she, and wandred out of the waye in ȝ wyldernes beside Berseba. Now whan the water in the botell was out, she layed the childe vnder a bush, and wente, and sat hir downe ouer on ȝ other syde, a bowe shote of. For she sayde: I can not se the childe dye. And she sat hir downe ouer on ȝ other syde, and lifte vp hir voyce, and wepte.

C Then God herde the voyce of the childe, and the angell of God called vnto Agar out of heauen, and sayde vnto her: What ayleth the, Agar? Feare not, for God hath herde ȝ voyce of the childe, where he lyeth. Aryse and take the childe, and holde him by the hande, <sup>d</sup>for I wyll make a greate people of him. And God opened hir eyes, that she sawe a well of water.

Then wente she and fylled ȝ botell with water, and gaue ȝ childe drynke. And God was with the childe, which grew vp, and dwelt in ȝ wyldernes, and became a conynge archer, and dwelt in ȝ wyldernes of Pharan, and his mother toke him a wyfe out of the londe of Egipite.

<sup>e</sup>At the same tyme talked Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne with Abraham, and sayde: God is with the in all that thou doest.

Therefore sweare now vnto me by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, ner my children, ner my childers children: but that thou shalt shewe vnto me (and to the londe wherin thou art a straunger) <sup>f</sup>the same kyndnesse that I haue done vnto the.

Then sayde Abraham: I wyll sweare. And Abraham rebuked Abimelech for the well of water, <sup>g</sup>which Abimelechs seruauantes had taken awaye by violence. Then answered Abimelech: I knewe not who dyd it, nether dyddest thou tell me, and I haue not herde of it but this daye.

D Thē toke Abraham shepe and oxen, and gaue them vnto Abimelech, and they both made a bonde together. And Abraham set seuen lambes by them selues. Then sayde Abimelech vnto Abraham: What meane those seuen lambes, which thou hast set by them selues? He answered: seūc lambes shalt thou take of my hande, that they maye be wytnes vnto me, that I haue dygged this well. Therefore is the place called Berseba, because they sware there both together. And so they made the bonde at Berseba.

Then rose Abimelech and Phicol his chefe captayne, and departed agayne in to the londe of ȝ Phillistynes. And Abraham planted trees at Berseba, and called vpon the name of the LORDE ȝ euerlastinge God, and was a straunger in ȝ londe of the Phillistynes a longe season.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes God tempted Abraham, <sup>h</sup>and sayde vnto him: Abraham. And he answered: I am here. And he sayde: Take thy sonne, this onely sonne of thine, euē Isaac whom thou louest, and go thy waye in to the londe of Moria, and offere him there for a burntofferynge, vpon a mountayne that I shal shew the. Then Abraham stode vp by tynes in the mornynge, and saddled his Asse, and toke with him two yonge men, and his sonne Isaac, and cloue wodd for the brent offerynge, gat him vp, and wente on vnto the place, wherof the LORDE had sayde vnto him.

Vpon the thirde daye Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe the place a farre of, and sayde vnto his yonge mē: Tary ye here with the Asse: as for me and the childe, we wyl go yonder: and whan we haue worshipped, we wyl come to you agayne. And Abraham toke the wodd to the brentofferynge, and layed it vpon Isaac his sonne. As for him self, he toke the fyre and a knyfe in his hande, and wente on both together.

Then sayde Isaac vnto his father Abraham: My father. Abraham answered: here I am, my sonne. And he sayde: lo, here is fyre and wodd, but where is the shepe for the brentofferynge? Abraham answered: My sonne, God shall prouyde him a shepe for the brentofferynge. And they wente both together.

And whan they came to the place which God shewed him, Abraham buylded there an altare, and layed the wodd vpon it, and bande his sonne Isaac, layed him on the altare, aboue vpō the wodd, and stretched out his hande, and toke the knyfe, to haue slayne his sonne.

Then the angell of the LORDE called from heauen vnto him, and sayde: Abraham Abraham. He answered: Here am I. He sayde: Laye not thy handes vpon the childe, ⁊ do nothinge vnto him: "for now I knowe that thou fearest God, and hast not *spared thine onely sonne for my sake. Then Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe behynde him a ramme, holdē fast by the hornes in the breres, and wente, and toke the ramme, and offred him for a brent sacrifice, in steade of his sonne. And Abraham called the place: The LORDE shall prouyde. Therefore it is a comon sayenge yet this daye: Vpon the mountayne shal the LORDE prouyde.

And the angell of the LORDE cryed vnto Abraham from heauen the seconde tyme, and sayde: <sup>b</sup>I haue sworn by myne owne self (sayeth the LORDE) that for so moch as thou hast done this, and hast not spared thine onely sonne, I wyl prosper and multiplie thy sede as the starres of heauen, and as the sonde vpon the see shore. <sup>c</sup>And thy sede shall possesse the gates of his enemies: and <sup>d</sup>in thy sede shal all the nacions of the earth be blessed, because thou hast herkened vnto my voyce.

So Abraham turned ageyne to the yonge men, and they gat vp, and wente together vnto Berseba, and dwelt there.

After these actes it fortunēd, that it was tolde Abraham: Beholde, Milca hath borne children also vnto thy brother Nahor: namely, <sup>e</sup>Hus <sup>f</sup>⁊ eldest, and <sup>g</sup>Bus his brother, and Kemuel, of whom came the Syrians: and Cesed, and Haso, and Pildas, and Iedlaph and Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebecca. These eight dyd Milca beare vnto Nahor Abrahams brother. And his concubynne called Rehuma, bare also: namely, Theba, Sahan, Thahas, and Maacha.

The xxiij. Chapter.

SARA was an hundreth and seuē and <sup>a</sup>twentye yere olde: so longe lyued she, and dyed in the head cite which is called Hebron, in the lande of Canaan. <sup>b</sup>Then wente Abraham, to mourne and wepe for her. Afterwarde he stode vp from his coarse, and talked with the Hethites, ⁊ sayde: I am a straüger and an indweller amonge you, geue me a possession to bury in with you, that I maye bury <sup>c</sup>my coarse by me.

Then the Hethites answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: O heare lorde, thou art a pryncē of God amonge vs: bury thy dead in the best of oure sepulchres, there shall none of vs forbyd <sup>d</sup>⁊, that thou shuldest not bury thy deed in his sepulchre. Then Abraham stode vp, and thanked the people of <sup>e</sup>⁊ londe: namely the Hethites.

And he talked with them, and sayde: Yf <sup>f</sup>it be youre wyll that I burye my coarse by me, heare me the, ⁊ speake for me to Ephron the sonne of Zoar, that he maye geue me the dubble caue, which he hath in <sup>g</sup>⁊ ende of his felde. For a reasonable money let him geue it me, for a possession to burye in amōge you. For Ephron dwelt amonge the Hethites.

Then answered Ephron the Hethite vnto Abraham, that the Hethites might heare, before all that wente out and in at the gates of his cite, and sayde: No my lorde, but heare me: As for the felde, and the caue also that is therin, I geue it the: and in the sight of my people I geue it the, to burye thy deed in.

Then Abraham thanked the people of the londe, and talked with Ephron, that the people of the londe might heare, and sayde: Heare me then, Receaue of me the money that I ¶ Ephron answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Heare me my lorde: The felde is worth foure hundredth Sycles of syluer: but what is that betwixte me and the? Burye thy deed. Abraham herkened vnto Ephron, and weyed him the money which he had sayde, that the Hethites might heare: namely foure hundredth syluer sycles of currant money amonge marchauntes.

Thus Ephrons felde (where in the dubble caue is) which lyeth ouer before Mamre, euen the felde and the caue, was made sure for Abrahams owne good, with all the trees of the felde also rounde aboute, in the sight of the Hethites, and of all that go out and in at the gates of his cite. Then Abraham buried Sara his wife in the dubble caue of the felde, that lyeth ouer before Mamre (that is, Hebron) in the londe of Canaan. So the felde and the caue therin was made sure of the Hethites vnto Abraham, for a possession to bury in.

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ ABRAHAM was olde and well stricken in age, and the LORDE had blessed him in all thinges. And he sayde vnto his eldest seruaunt of his house, which had the rule of all his goodes: "Laye thine hāde vnder my thye, that I maye make the sweare by ŷ LORDE the God of heauen and earth. that thou take no wife vnto my sonne amonge ŷ daughters of ŷ Cananites, (amonge whom I dwell) but that thou go in to my countre, and * to myne owne kynred, and brynge my sonne Isaac a wife.

The seruaunt sayde: What and the woman wyl not folowe me in to this countre? shal I then cary thy sonne agayne in to yonder londe, where thou camest out of? Abraham sayde vnto him: Beware of that, that thou brynge not my sonne thither agayne. The LORDE, the God of heauen, which toke me fro my fathers house and from the londe of my kynred, and that talked with me, and sware also vnto me, and sayde: 'Vnto thy sede wyll I geue this londe: Euen he shall sende his angell before the, that thou maiest brynge my sonne a wife from thence. But yf the woman wyll not folowe the, thou art discharged of this ooth: onely brynge not my sonne thither agayne. Then ŷ seruaunt layed his hāde vnder his master Abrahams thye, and sware the same vnto him.

So the seruaunt toke ten Camels of the Camels of his master and departed, and had with him of all maner of goodes of his master, and gat him vp, and departed vnto Mesopotamia, to the cite of Nabor. Then let he the Camels lye downe without before the cite besyde a well of water in the euenyng, aboute the tyme that the women vsed to go forth, and to drawe water. And he sayde:

O LORDE, thou God of my master Abraham, mete me to daye, and shew mercy vnto my master Abraham. Lo, I stonde here besyde the well of water, & the mens daughters of this cite wyll come forth to drawe water: Now yf there come a damsell, to whom I saye: bowe downe thy pytcher, & let me drynke, and yf she saye: drynke, and I wyll geue thy Camels drynke also: That ŷ same be she, whom thou hast prouyd for thy seruaunt Isaac: & that I maye knowe by ŷ same that thou hast shewed mercy vpon my master.

And or euer he had left of speakyng, beholde, Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel (which was the sonne of Milca, that was the wyfe of Nabor Abrahams brother) came forth, and bare a pytcher vpon hir shulder, and she was a very fayre damsell of face, and yet a virgin, and vnknowne of eny man: She wente downe to the well, and fylled hir pitcher, and came vp agayne. Then ranne the seruaunt to mete her, and sayde: Let me drynke a litle water out of thy pitcher. And she sayde: drynke syr.

And haistely let she downe the pitcher in hir hande, and gaue him drynke. And whan she had geuen him drynke, she sayde: I wyll drawe for thy Camels also, tyll they haue dronke ynough. And she made haist, and poured out hir pitcher in to the trough, and ranne agayne to the well to drawe, and drew for all his Camels. The mā marueyled at her, and helde his tonge, tyll he knewe whether the LORDE had prospered his iourney or not.

Now whan the Camels had all dronken, he toke a goldē earynge of half a Sycele weight, and two braceletes for hir handes, weyng ten Sycles of golde, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? tell me. Is there rowme for vs in thy fathers house to lodge in? She sayde vnto him: I am the daughter of Bethuel, the sonne of Mylea, whom she bare vnto Nahor. And sayde morouer vnto him: We haue plentye of litter and prouender, and rowne ynough to lodge in.

Then the man bowed himself, and thanked the LORDE, and sayde: Praysed be the LORDE the God of my master Abraham, which hath not withdrawn his mercy and his trueth fro my master, for the LORDE hath brought me the waye to my masters brothers house. And the damsell ranne and tolde all this in hir mothers house. And Rebecca had a brother called Laban.

And Laban ranne to the man without by the well syde: and that came by the reason that he sawe the earynges, and the bracelettes vpon his sisters handes, and herde the wordes of Rebecca his syster. that she sayde: thus spake the man vnto me.

And whan he came to the man, beholde, he stode by the Camels at the well syde. And he sayde: Come in *thou blessed of the LORDE, wherefore stondest thou without? I haue dressed the house, and made rowne for fy Camels. So he brought the man in to fy house, and vnbridled the Camels, and gaue them litter and prouender, and water to wash his fete, and the mens that were with him, and set meate before him.

Neuertheles he sayde: I wil not eate, tyll I haue fyrst tolde myne earade.<sup>a</sup> They answered: Tell on. He sayde: I am Abrahams seruauant, and the LORDE hath prospered my master richely, so fy he is become greate: and he hath geuen him shepe and oxē, syluer and golde, seruantes and maidens, Camels and Asses: yee and Sara my masters wife hath borne my master a sonne in hir olde age: vnto him hath he geuen all that he hath.

And my master hath taken an ooth of me and saide: Thou shalt not take a wife for my sonne amonge the daughters of the Cananites, in whose lande I dwell, but go thy waye to my fathers house and to myne owne kynred, and there take a wyfe for my sonne. But I sayde vnto my master: What and the woman wyl not folowe me? Then sayde he vnto me: The LORDE (before whom I walke) shall sende his angell with the, and prospere thy iourney, that thou mayest take a wife for my sonne of myne owne kynred, and of my fathers house. And so whan thou comest to my kynred, yf they geue her not vnto fy, thou shalt be discharged of myne ooth.

So I came this daye vnto the well of water, and sayde: O LORDE thou God of my master Abraham, Yf thou hast prospered my iourney that I go: Beholde, I stonde here by the well of water: Now yf there come forth a virgin to draw water, and I saye vnto her: geue me a litle water to drinke out of thy piteher, and she saye vnto me: Drynke thou, and I wyll drawe water for thy Camels also: that the same be the womā, which the LORDE hath prouyded for my masters sonne. Now or euer I had spoken out these wordes in my hert, beholde, Rebecca cometh forth with a piteher vpon hir shulder, and goeth downe to the well, and draweth.

Then sayde I: geue me a drynke. And immediarly she toke downe the piteher fro hir shulder, and sayde: drynke, and I wyll geue thy Camels drynke also. So I dranke, and she gaue the Camels also to drynke. And I axed her, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? She answered: I am fy daughter of Bethuel the sonne of Nahor, whom Milca bare vnto him. Then layed I the earinge vpon hir face, and the bracelettes vpon hir handes, and bowed myself, and thanked the LORDE, and praysed the God of my master Abraham, which had brought me fy right waye, to take my masters brothers doughter vnto his sonne.

Yf ye be they then that shew mercy and faithfulness vnto my master, tell me: Yf not, yet tell me, that I maye turne me to fy right hande or to the left.

Then answered Laban and Bethuel, and sayde: This is come of the LORDE, therefore can we saye nothinge agaynst the, nether cuell ner good. There is Rebecca before the, take her, and go thy waye, that she maye be thy masters sonnes wife, as the LORDE hath sayde. When Abrahams seruauant herde these wordes, he bowed him self vnto the LORDE flat vpon the earth, and toke forth Iewels of syluer and golde, and rayment, and gaue them vnto Rebecca. But vnto hir brethren and the mother, he gaue spyes. Then he ate and dronke, and the men also that were with him, and taried there all night.

¶ But in the mornynge he arose, and sayde: Let me departe vnto my master. Neuertheless hir brother and hir mother sayde: Let the damsell tary with vs at the leest ten dayes, and then shall she go. Then sayde he vnto them: holde me not, for the LORDE hath prospered my iourney: let me go, that I maye departe vnto my master. Then sayde they: let vs call the damsell, and axe her, what she sayeth therto. And they called Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Wilt thou go with this man?

And she answered: Yee I wyll go with him. So they let Rebecca their syster go with hir horse and Abrahams seruauant, and his men. And they blessed Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Thou art oure syster, growe in to many thousande tymes thousandes, and thy seide possesse the gates of his enemies.

So Rebecca gat hir vp with hir damself, and satt them vpon the Camels, and wente their waye after the man. And the seruauant toke Rebecca, and departed.

As for Isaac, he was commynge from \* the well of y liuyng  $\tau$  seynge, for he dwelt in the south countre, and was gone forth to his meditations in the felde aboute the euen tyde. And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe, that there were Camels commynge. And Rebecca lift vp hir eyes, and sawe Isaac. Then lighted she of the Camell, and sayde vnto y seruauant: What man is this, that commeth agaynst vs in the felde? The seruauant sayde: The same is my master.

Then toke she hir cloke, and put it aboute her. And the seruauant tolde Isaac all the earande that he had done. Then Isaac brought her in to his mother Saras tent, and toke Rebecca, and she became his wife, and he loued her. So Isaac was comforted ouer his mother.

The xrb. Chapter.

¶ ABRAHAM toke another wife called Ketura, which bare him Simram  $\tau$  Iaksan, Medan  $\tau$  Midian, Ieszbak and Suah. Iaksan begat Seba and Dedan. The children of Dedan were Assurim, Latusim, and Leunim. The children of Midian were Ephraim, Hanoch, Abida and Eldaa. All these are the children of Ketura. And Abraham gaue all his goodes vnto Isaac: As for the children that he had of the concubynes, he gaue them giftes, and (whyle he yet lyued) he sent the awaye from his sonne Isaac, eastwarde in to the east countre.

This is the age of Abraham which he lyued: euen an hundreth and fyue and seuentye yere, and fell sicke and dyed in a good age, whan he was olde,  $\tau$  had lyued ynough and was gathered vnto his people. And his sonnes Isaac and Ismael buried him in the dubble caue in the felde of Ephron the sonne of Zoar the Hethite, which lyeth ouer before Mamre,  $\tau$  in the felde that Abraham bought of the Hethites. There was Abraham buried with Sara his wife. And after the death of Abraham God blessed his sonne Isaac. And he dwelt by the well of the liuyng and seynge.

This is the generacion of Ismael Abrahams sonne, whom Agar Saras mayde the Egipcian bare vnto him. And these are the names of Isaels children, of whom their kynredes are named. The eldest sonne of Ismael, Nebaioth, Cedar, Abdeel, Mibsan, Misma, Duma, Masa, Hadar, Thema, Iethur, Naphis, and Kedma. These are the childre of Ismael with their names in their courtes and cities  $\tau$  twolue londeprynces. And this is the age of Ismael, euen an hundreth and seuen and thirtie yere, and he fell sicke and dyed, and was gathered vnto his people. He dwelt from Heuila vnto Sur towarde Egipte, as men go to the Assirians. And he dyed in the presence of all his brethren.

This is the generacion of Isaac the sonne of Abraham. Abraham begat Isaac. Isaac was fortye yere olde, whan he toke to wyfe Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel y Syrian of Mesopotamia,  $\tau$  Sister of Laban the Syrian.

Isaac besought the LORDE for his wyfe (because she was baren) and the LORDE was intreated, and Rebecca his wyfe conceaued. And the children stroue together in hir wombe. Then sayde she: Yf it shulde go so with me, why am I then with child? And she wente for to axe the LORDE. And the LORDE sayde vnto her: Two maner of folke are in thy wombe, and two maner of people shall be deuyded out of thy body, and the one nacion shall ouercome the other,  $\tau$  and the greater shall serue the lesse.

A WHAN Esau was fourtye yeare olde, he toke wyues: Iudith the daughter of Beri the Hethite, and Basmath the daughter of Elon the Hethite: both these were disobedient vnto the sprete of Isaac and Rebecca.

And it came to passe when Isaac was olde, his eyes waxed dymme of sight, and he called Esau his greater sonne, and sayde vnto him: My sonne. He answered him: Here am I. And he sayde: Beholde, I am olde, and knowe not whan I shal dye. Now therefore take thy geer. thy quyuer and thy bowe, and get the forth to the felde, and take me some venyson, and make me meate (soch as I loue) and brynge it me herein, that I may eate, ȝ my soule maye blesse the, before I dye.

But Rebecca herde these wordes, that Isaac sayde vnto his sonne. And Esau wente his waye in to the felde, to hunte venyson, and to brynge it home. Then sayde Rebecca vnto Iacob hir sonne: beholde, I haue herde thy father talkinge with Esau thy brother, and sayenge: Brynge me venyson, and make me meate, that I maye eate, and blesse the before ȝ LORDE, yer I dye. Now therefore my sonne, heare my voyce, what I commaunde the: Go thy waye to the flocke, and fetch me two good kyddes, that I maye make meate of them for thy father, soch as he loueth: this shalt thou brynge in vnto thy father, that he maye eate, that he maye blesse the before his death.

Neuertheles Iacob sayde vnto Rebecca his mother: Beholde, my brother Esau is rough, and I am smooth: then might my father peradventure fele me, and I shulde seme vnto him as though I begyled him, and so brynge a curse vpon me and not a blessinge. Then sayde his mother vnto him: That curse be vpon me my sonne, folowe thou my voyce: go thy waye and fetch it me. So he wente his waye, and fetched it, and brought it vnto his mother.

Iacob sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne, I haue done as thou saydest vnto me: aryse, syt vp, and eate of my venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. D And he sayde vnto him: art thou my sonne Esau? He answered: Yee I am. Then sayde he: Bringe me here then to eate of thy venyson my sonne,* that my soule maye blesse the. Then he brought it him, and he ate: and he brought him wyne also, and he dranke. And Isaac his father sayde vnto him: Come nye, and kysse me my sonne. So he came nye, and he kyssed him.

Then smelled he the sauoure of his clothes, and blessed him, and sayde: Beholde, the smell of my sonne is as  $\text{f}$  smell of the felde, which  $\text{f}$  LORDE hath blessed.<sup>a</sup> God geue the of the dew of heauen, and of the fatnesse of the earth, and plenteousnes of corne and wyne. Be thou lord over thy brethren, and thy mothers children fall downe at thy fote. <sup>b</sup>Cursed be he, that curseth the: and blessed be he, that blesseth the.

E Now whan Isaac had made an ende of blessinge, and Iacob was seace gone out from his father Isaac, his brother Esau came from his huntinge, and made meate also, and brought it vnto his father, and sayde vnto him: Aryse my father, and eate of thy sonnes venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. Then answered him Isaac his father: Who art thou? He sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne. Then was Isaac exceedingly anased aboue measure, and saide: Who? Where is then the hunter that brought me, and I haue eaten of all afore thou camest, and haue blessed him? And he shall be blessed still.

Whan Esau herde these wordes of his father, he cried loude, and was excedyng sory, and sayde vnto his father: O blesse me also my father. But he sayde: Thy brother came with sotylye, and hath taken thy blessinge awaye. Then sayde he: He maye well be called Iacob, for he hath vndermined me now two tymes. My byrth right hath be awaye, and beholde, now taketh he awaye my blessinge also.

F And he sayde: Hast thou not kepte one blessyng for me? Isaac answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue made him lord ouer  $\text{f}$ , and all his brethren haue I made his seruantes. With corne  $\text{t}$  wine haue I prouyded him. What shal I do vnto the now my sonne? Esau sayde vnto his father? Hast thou not one blessinge more my father? O blesse me also my father.

And he lift vp his voyce,  $\text{t}$  wepte.<sup>c</sup> Then Isaac his father answered and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou shalt haue a fat dwellinge vpon earth,  $\text{t}$  of  $\text{f}$  dew of heauen from aboue: with thy swerde shalt thou get thy luyng, and shalt serue thy brother. And it shall come to passe,  $\text{f}$  thou shalt put of his yock,<sup>d</sup> and plucke it from thy neck.

And Esau bare euell wyll vnto Iacob, G because of the blessinge that his father had blessed him withall,<sup>e</sup> and sayde in his herte: The tyme wyll come shortly, that my father shal mourne, for I wil slaye my brother Iacob. Thē was it tolde Rebecca of these wordes of hir elder sonne, and she sent, and bad call for Iacob hir yonger sonne, and saide vnto him: Beholde, thy brother Esau threateneth the, that he wil slaye the. And now my sonne heare my voyce: Get the vp, and fye vnto my brother Laban in Haran, and tary there with him a whyle, <sup>f</sup>tyll the furiousnes of thy brother be swaged, and till his wrath agaynst  $\text{f}$  be turned from the, and he forget what thou hast done vnto him. So wyll I then sende for the, and cause the be fetched from thēce. Why shulde I be robbed of you both in one daye?

And Rebecca sayde vnto Isaac: I am weery of my life, because of the daughters of Heth: Yf Iacob take a wife of the daughters of Heth,  $\text{f}$  which are as the daughters of this loude, what shall this life then profit me?

The xxviii. Chapter.

THEN called Isaac his sonne Iacob and A  $\text{t}$  blessed him, and charged him,  $\text{t}$  sayde vnto him: Take not a wife of the daughters of Canaan, but get the vp, and go in to Mesopotamia vnto the house of Bethuel thy mothers father, and take  $\text{f}$  there a wife of  $\text{f}$  daughters of Laban thy mothers brother. And the Almightye God blesse the, and make the frutefull, and multiplye the, (that thou mayest be a multitude of people) and geue the the blesnyng of Abraham vnto  $\text{f}$   $\tau$  thy sede with the, that thou mayest possesse the lande, wherin thou art a stranger,\* which God gaue vnto Abraham. So Isaac let Iacob departe, that he might go in to Mesopotamia vnto Laban the sonne of Bethuel of Siria,  $\text{f}$  brother of Rebecca, his and Esaus mother.

B Now when Esau sawe that Isaac had blessed Iacob, and let him departe in to Mesopotamia, that he might take a wife there: and  $\text{f}$ , as he blessed him, he charged him,  $\tau$  sayde: Thou shalt not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan, and that Iacob obeyed his father and his mother, and was gone vnto Mesopotamia: seynge also that Isaac his father looked not gladly vpon the daughters of Canaan, he wente his waye vnto Ismael, and besyde the wyues that he had afore, he toke  $\text{f}$  Mahaloth the daughter of Ismael (Abrahams sonne) the sister of Nebaioth, to wife.

C As for Iacob, he departed from Bersaba, and wente vnto Haran and came to a place, where he taried all night: for the Sonne was downe. And he toke a stone of  $\text{f}$  place,  $\tau$  put it vnder his heade, and layed him downe in  $\text{f}$  same place to slepe. And he dreamed, and beholde, there stode vpon  $\text{f}$  earth, a ladder, whose toppes reached vnto the heauen. And beholde, the angels of God  $\text{b}$  wente vp and downe vpon it, and the LORDE stode vpon it, and sayde:

'I am the LORDE God of thy father Abraham, and the God of Isaac: The londe  $\text{f}$  thou lyst vpon, wyl I geue vnto the, $\text{f}$  and to thy sede: and thy sede shal be as  $\text{f}$  dust of  $\text{f}$  earth. And thou shalt sprede forth towarde the west, east, north, and south: and  $\text{f}$  thorow the and thy sede shall all the kynreds vpon earth be blessed. And beholde, I am with  $\text{f}$ , and wyl kepe the where so euer thou goest,  $\tau$  wyl brynge the hither agayne in to this lande: for I wil not leaue the, tyll I haue made good, all that I haue promysed the.

D Now whan Iacob awaked from his slepe, he saide: Surely the LORDE is in this place, and I knew not. And he was afraied, and sayde: How fearfull is this place? here is no thinge els but an house of God,  $\tau$  a gate vnto heauē. And Iacob arose early in the mornynge, and toke the stone $\text{f}$  that he had layed vnder his heade, and set it vp, and poured oyle vpon it. And he called the place Bethel, but afore the cite was called Lais. And Iacob made a vowe, and sayde:  $\text{f}$  Yf God wyl be with me, and kepe me in this iourney  $\text{f}$  I go  $\tau$  geue me bred to eate, and clothinge to put on, and brynge me peaceably home agayne vnto my father: The shall the LORDE be my God, and this stone that I haue set vp, shal be an house of God: and all that thou geuest me, I wyl geue the the tenth therof.

The xxix. Chapter.

THEN Iacob gat him vp vpon his fete,  $\tau$  wente in to the east countrie,  $\tau$  looked aboute him, and beholde, there was a well in the felde, and  $\text{f}$  flockes of shepe therby, for the flockes dranke of the well. And there laye a greate stone at the welles mouth, and thither they vsed to brynge the flockes, and to roule the stone from  $\text{f}$  mouth of the well, and to geue the shepe drynke,  $\tau$  so they put the stone agayne vpon the welles mouth in to his place.

And Iacob sayde vnto them: Brethren, whēce be ye? They answered: we are of Haran. He sayde vnto them: Knowe ye Laban the sonne of Nahor? They answered: We knowe him well. He sayde:  $\text{b}$  Is he in good health? They answered: he is in good health. And lo, there commeth his daughter Rachel with the shepe. He sayde: It is yet hie daye,  $\tau$  is not yet tyme to dryue in the catell: geue the shepe to drynke,  $\tau$  go youre waye,  $\tau$  fede them. They answered: We can not, tyll all the flockes be brought together, and tyll we roule the stone from the welles mouth,  $\tau$  so geue the shepe drynke.

B Why he yet talked with them, Rachel came with hir fathers shepe, for she kepte  $\text{f}$  shepe. Whan Iacob sawe Rachel  $\text{f}$  daughter of Laban his mothers brother, and the shepe of Laban his mothers brother, he wite,  $\tau$  rouled the stone from the welles mouth, and gaue his mothers brother shepe to drynke, and kyssed Rachel, lift vp his voyce, and wepte, and tolde her,  $\text{f}$  he was hir fathers brother, and  $\text{f}$  sonne of Rebecca. Then ranne she, and tolde her father.

Whā Laban herde of Iacob his sisters sonne, he ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and kyssed him, and brought him in to his house.

And so he tolde him all this matter. The sayde Laban vnto him: Wel, thou art my bone and my flesh. Abyde with me a moneth longe. But after that saide he vnto Iacob: Because thou art my brother, shalt thou therefore serue me for nought? Tell me, what shall thy wages be. Laban had two daughters, the eldest was called Lea, & the yongest Rachel. And Lea was tender eyed, but Rachel was beutyfull & well fauoured of face, and Iacob loued her well, and sayde: I will serue the seven years, for Rachel thy yongest daughter. Laban answered: It is better that I geue her the, then vnto another: tary thou with me.

C So Iacob serued seven yeare for Rachel, and they semed vnto him but few dayes, he loued her so well. And Iacob saide vnto Laban: geue me my wyfe, for the tyme is come that I shulde lye with her. The Laban bad all the people of that place, and made a mariage. But at euē he toke his daughter Lea, and brought her in vnto him, and he laye with her. And Laban gaue Zilpa his mayde vnto his daughter Lea to be hir mayde.

But on the morow, beholde, it was Lea. And he sayde vnto Laban: Why hast thou done this vnto me? Haue not I serued y for Rachel? Why hast thou then begyled me? Laban answered: It is not the maner in oure countre, to mary the yongest before the eldest. Holde out this weke, & I will geue the this also, for the seruyce y thou shalt do me yet seven yeares more. Iacob dyd so, & helde out y weke. Then gaue he him Rachel his daughter to wyfe. And Laban gaue Bilha his mayden vnto Rachel his daughter to be hir mayden. So he laye with Rachel also, & loued Rachel more the Lea, and serued him yet seven yeares more.

D But when the LORDE sawe, that Lea was nothinge regarded, he made her frutefull, and Rachel baren. And Lea cōceaued, and bare a sonne, whom she called Ruben, and sayde: "The LORDE hath loked vpon my aduersite. Now wyll my huszbande loue me. And she cōceaued agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: The LORDE hath herde that I am despyed, and hath geuē me this also, and she called him Symeon. She cōceaued yet agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll my huszbande kepe me company agayne, for I haue borne him thre sonnes, therefore called she his name Leui. She conceaued y fourth tyme, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll I geue thanks vnto the LORDE, therefore called she him Iuda, and left bearynge.

The rrr. Chapter.

W HEN Rachel sawe that she bare no children vnto Iacob, she had enuye at hir sister, & saide vnto Iacob: Geue me childrē also, or els I am but deed. But Iacob was very wroth at Rachel, & sayde: Am I then in Gods steade, which kepeth y frute of thy wombe from y? Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, there is Bilha my mayden, lye with her, y she maye beare vpon my lappe, & that I maye be increased by her. And so she gaue him Bilha hir mayden to wyfe.

And Iacob laye with her. So Bilha cōceaued, and bare Iacob a sonne. Then sayde Rachel: God hath geuen sentence on my syde, and herde my voyce, and geuē me a sonne, therefore called she him Dan. Bilha Rachels mayde cōceaued agayne, and bare another sonne vnto Iacob. Then sayde Rachel: God hath turned it with me, and my sister, and I haue gottē the vpper hande. And she called him Nephthali.

Now whan Lea sawe that she had left bearynge, she toke Silpa hir mayde, and gaue her vnto Iacob to wyfe. So Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob a sonne. Then saide Lea: This is good lucke, & she called him Gad. After this Silpa Leas mayde bare Iacob another sonne. Then sayde Lea: Well is me, for the daughters will call me blessed, and she called him Asser.

Ruben wente out in the tyme of y wheate haruest, and founde Mandragoras in the felde, and brought them home vnto his mother Lea. Then sayde Rachel vnto Lea: Geue me some of thy sonnes Mādragoras. She answered: Hast thou not ynough that thou hast taken awaye my huszbande, but wilt take awaye my sonnes Mādragoras also? Rachel saide: Wel, let him lye with the this night for thy sonnes Mādragoras. Now whan Iacob came home at euen from the felde, Lea wente forth to mete him, and sayde: Thou shalt lye with me, for I haue bought the for my sonnes Mādragoras.

And he slepte with her that night. And God herde Lea, and she cōceaued, and bare Jacob the fifth sonne, & sayde: God hath rewarded me, because I gaue my mayden vnto my huszbande, and she called him Isachar. Lea conceaued yet agayne, and bare Jacob the sixte sonne, and sayde: God hath endewed me with a good dowry. Now wyll my huszbande dwell with me agayne, for I haue borne him sixe sonnes, & she called him Zabulon. After that she bare a doughter, whom she called * Dina.

D Neuertheles God thought vpō Rachel, and herde her, and made her frutefull. Then she conceaued, and bare a sonne, and sayde: God hath taken away my rebuke, and she called him Joseph,<sup>a</sup> and sayde: God geue me yet another sonne.

Now whan Rachel had borne Joseph, Iacob sayde vnto Laban: <sup>b</sup> Let me go, & departe in to my place and vnto myne owne lande: geue me my wyues and my children, (for the which I haue serued the) & I maye go: for thou knowest, what sernyce I haue done the. Laban sayde vnto him: Can I not fynde fauoure in thy sight? I perceaue, that God hath blessed me for thy sake. Appoynte thou the rewarde, & I shal geue the. But he saide vnto him: Thou knowest how I haue serued the, and what maner of catell thou hast vnder me. Thou haddest but litle afore I came hither, but now is it growne in to a multitude, and the LORD<sup>e</sup> hath blessed & for my sake. And now whan shall I loke to myne owne house also? He saide: What shal I then geue the?

Jacob sayde: Thou shalt geue me nothinge at all, but yf thou wilt do this for me & I saye, then wyll I fede and kepe thy shepe agayne. I wyll go thorow all thy flockes to daye, and separate thou from amonge them all the shepe that be spotted and partye coloured, and all blacke shepe amonge the lambes. Now loke what shalbe partie coloured and spotted amonge the kyddes, the same shal be my rewarde: so shal my righteousnes testifie with me to daye or tomorrow, whan it cometh vnto my rewarde before the, so that, what so euer is not spotted and partye coloured amonge the kyddes, and blacke amonge the lambes, let that be theft with me.

J Then sayde Laban: Beholde, let it be so as thou hast sayde. And that same daye he sundered out the speckled and partye coloured goates, and all the spotted and partye coloured kyddes (where there was eny whyte vpon them) and all that was blacke amonge the lambes, and put them vnder the hande of his children, and made rowme of three dayes journey wyde betwixte him and Iacob. So Iacob kepthe the residue of Labans flocke.

But Iacob toke stau<sup>e</sup>s of grene wyllies, hasell and of chestnottrees, and pylled whyte strekes in them, and layed the stau<sup>e</sup>s that he had pylled, in the drynkinge troughes before the flocke, which came there to drynke, that they shulde conceaue, whan they came to drynke. So the flockes conceaued ouer & stau<sup>e</sup>s, and brought forth speckelde, spotted and partye coloured.

Then Iacob parted & lambes, and put them to the flocke vnto the spotted: and all that was blacke in Labans flocke, that put he vnto the spotted. And he made him a flocke of his owne, which he put not vnto Labans flocke. Neuertheles in the first buckynge tyme of the flockes, he layed the stau<sup>e</sup>s in the drynkinge troughes before the eyes of the flockes, that they shulde conceaue ouer the stau<sup>e</sup>s. But in the latter buckynge tyme he layed them not in. So the later were Labans, but the firstinges were Iacobs. Thus the man became excedeinge riche, so that he had many shepe, maydens & seruauntes, Camels and Asses.

The rrrr. Chapter.

HE herde also of & wordes of Labans children, that they sayde: Iacob hath brought all oure fathers good vnto him self, & of oure fathers good hath he gotten these riches. And Iacob behelde Labans countenance, & beholde, it was not towarde him as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye.

And the LORD<sup>e</sup> sayde vnto him: <sup>d</sup> Departe agayne to thy fatherlāde, and to thy kynred, I wyll be with the. Then sent Iacob and bad calf Rachel and Lea in to the felde to his flockes, and sayde vnto them: I se youre fathers countenance, that it is not towarde me like as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye: but the God of my father hath bene with me. And ye knowe, that I haue serued youre father with all my power.

And he hath disceaused me, and chaunged my wages now ten tymes. But God hath not suffred him, to do me harme. Yf he sayde: The partye coloured shalbe thy rewarde, then the whole flocke bare partye coloured. Yf he sayde: The speckelde shalbe thy rewarde, thē the whole flocke bare speckelde. Thus hath God withdrawn youre fathers goodes from him, and geuen them vnto me. For whan the buckynge tyme came, I lift vp myne eyes and sawe in a dreame, and beholde, the rammes leapte vpon the flocke that was speckelde, spotted, & partye coloured.

And the angel of God sayde vnto me in a dreame: Iacob. And I answered: here am I. He sayde: lift vp thine eyes, and beholde, the rammes leape vpon the speckelde, spotted, and partie coloured flocke: for I haue sene all y Laban doth vnto the. I am y God at * Bethel, where thou dydest anyoute the stone. & maydest a vowe there vnto me. Get the vp now, & departe out of this londe, & go agayne in to the londe of thy kyured.

Then answered Rachel and Lea, and sayde vnto him: As for vs, we haue no porcion ur inheritaunce more in oure fathers house, & he hath coited vs as straungers, for he hath solde vs, & spent vp oure wages. Therefore hath God withdrawe oure fathers riches from him vnto vs & oure children. What so euer now God hath sayde vnto the, that do.

So Iacob gat vp, and set his children and wyues vpon Camels, and caried awaye all his catell and all his substaunce, that he had gotten at Mesopotamia, y he might come vnto Isaac his father in the lande of Canaan. Labā was gone to clyppe his flocke,* and Rachel stole hir fathers ymages. Thus dyd Iacob steale awaie y hert of Laban y Syrian, in y he tolde him not that he fled. So he fled, & all that was his, gat vp, and passed ouer the water, & wente straight towarde the mount Gilead.

Vpon the thirde daye it was tolde Laban, that Iacob fled. And he toke his brethre vnto him, and folowed after him seuen dayes journey, and ouertoke him vpon the mount Gilead. But God came vnto Laban the Syrian in a dreame by night, & sayde vnto him: Bewarre, that thou speake nothinge to Iacob but good. And Labā drew nye vnto Iacob. As for Iacob, he had pyched his tente vpon the mount. And Laban with his brethre pyched his tent also vpon the same mount Gilead.

Then sayde Laban vnto Iacob: What hast thou done, that thou hast stollen awaie my hert, and caried awaye my daughters, as though they had bene taken captiue with y swerde? Wherefore kepest thou that secrete, that thou woldest flye, and hast stollen awaye fro me, and toldest me not, that I might haue brought the on the waye with myrth, with synginge, with tabrettes and harpes? and hast not suffred me to kysse my children and daughters? Thou hast done foolishly, and so moch might I haue made, that I coude haue done you euell: but youre fathers God saide yesterdaye vnto me: Bewarre, that thou speake nothinge vnto Iacob but good. And for so moch then as thou woldest nedes departe, and longedest sore after thy fathers house, why hast thou stollen awaye my goddes?

Iacob answered and sayde vnto Laban: I was afraied, that thou shuldest haue taken awaye thy daughters fro me: but loke by whom thou fyndest thy goddes, let the same dye here before oure brethren. Seke that thine is by me, and take it awaye. (But he knew not, that Rachel had stollen them.) Then wente Laban in to Iacobs tent and in to Leas tent, and in to both the maydens tētes, and founde nothinge: and out of Leas tente he wente in to Rachels tent. Then toke Rachel the ymages, and layed them vnder the Camels strawe, and sat downe vpon them. But Laban searched the whole tent, and founde nothinge. Then sayde she vnto hir father: Be not angrie my lorde, that I can not ryse vp vnto the: for it goeth with me after the maner of women. So he sought, and founde not the ymages.

And Iacob was wroth, and chode with Laban, answered & sayde vnto him: What haue I trespassed or offended, y thou art so whote vpon me? Thou hast searched all my housholde stuff: & what hast thou founde of thy housholde stuff? Laye it here before my brethren & thine, y they maye iudge betwene vs both. Twentye yere haue I bene with the: thy shepe & goates haue not bene vnfrutefull, the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten: Loke what was torne of bestes, I brought it not vnto y, I was fayne to paie it my self: thou requyrest it of my hande, whether it were stollen fro me by daye or by night. On the daye tyme the heate consumed me, and the frost on the night, and my slepe departed fro myne eyes.

¶ Thus haue I serued twente yeare in thy house, fourtene yeares for thy daughters, & sixe for thy flocke, and ten tymes hast thou chaunged my rewarde: & yf the God of my father the God of Abraham, and the feare of Isaac had not bene on my syde, thou haddest latten me go awaye emptye. But God hath loked vpon myne aduersite and laboure, and rebuked the yesterdaye.

Laban answered and sayde: The daughters are my daughters, & the children are my childre, and the flockes are my flockes, & all that thou seist is myne. What can I do this daye vnto these my daughters, or to their children whom they haue borne? Now therefore come on, let vs make a couenant (I & thou) which maye be a wytnesse betwene me and the. Then toke Iacob a stone, & set it vp (for a pilor or markstone) and sayde vnto his brethren: Gather stones. And they toke the stones, and made an heape, & ate vpon the same heape. And Labā called it Iegar Sahadutha, but Iacob called it Gilead: (either of them after the properte of his language.)

¶ Then sayde Laban: * This heape be wytnesse betwene me and the this daye (therefore is it called Gilead) and a testimony, for he sayde: The LORDE loke betwene me and yf whan we are departed yf one from yf other: yf, thou vexe my daughters, or take other wyues vnto them. There is no mā with vs, but lo, God is the wytnesse betwene me and the. And Laban sayde morouer vnto Iacob: Beholde, this is the heape, and this is the markstone that I haue set vp betwixte me and the: the same heape be wytnesse, and the same markstone also be wytnesse, yf I passe ouer vnto the, or yf thou passe ouer this heape & markstone vnto me, to do eny harme. The God of Abraham, and the God of Nahor, and the God of their fathers, be iudge betwene vs.

And Iacob sware vnto him by the feare of his father Isaac. And Iacob offred an offerynge vpon the mount, and called his brethrē to eate bred. And whan they had eaten, they taried vpon the mount all night. But vpon the morow Laban rose vp early, kyssed his childrē & daughters, & blessed the, & departed, and came agayne vnto his place. As for Iacob, he wente on his iourney, & the angels of God met him. And whan he sawe them, he sayde: It is Gods hoost, & called the same place Mahanaim.

The rrrij. Chapter.

IACOB sent messaungers before him to his brother Esau †in to the lande of Seir, of the felde of Edom, & commaunded the, & sayde: Saye thus vnto my lorde Esau: Thy seruauant Iacob sendeth yf this worde: I haue bene out with Laban, & haue bene hither to amonge straungers, & haue oxen & Asses, shepe, seruauantes & maydēs, and haue sent forth to shewe it the my lorde, yf I might fynde fauoure in thy sight.

The messaungers came agayne vnto Iacob, and sayde: We came vnto thy brother Esau, & he commeth forth also agaynst the with foure hundred men. Then was Iacob sore afrayed, and wyst not what waye to turne him self, & deuyded the people that was with him, and the shepe, and the oxen, & the Camels in to two droues, & sayde: Yf Esau come vpon the one droue, and smyte it, the other shal escape.

Iacob sayde morouer: O God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac, LORDE thou that saydest vnto me: †Depart agayne to thine owne londe and to thy kynred, and I wyl do the good: I am to litle for all the mercies and all the trueth that thou hast shewed vnto thy seruauant (for I had nomore but this staff whan I wente ouer this Iordan, and now am I become two droues) delyuer me from yf hande of my brother, frō the hāde of Esau, for I am afrayed of him, lest he come and smyte me the mother with the children. Thou saydest: I wyll do the good, and wyll make thy sede as the sonde of yf see, which can not be nombred for multitude.

And there he taried that night, and toke of soch as came to hande, †a present vnto his brother Esau, two hundred she goates, twentye he goates, two hundred shepe, twentye rammes and thirtie mylke camels with their foales, fortye kyne, ten bullokes, twentye she Asses with ten foales, and put them in the handes of his seruauantes, euery flock by them selues, & sayde vnto them: Go ye forth before me, & put a space betwixte one floeke after the other, and commaunded the first and sayde:

Whan my brother Esau meteth the, and axeth the: Whose art thou? ⁊ whyther goest thou? and whose are these that thou dryuest before the? Thou shalt saye: They be thy seruauit Iacobs, which sendeth a present vnto his lorde Esau, and commeth behynde vs him self.

D Thus commaunded he the seconde also, and the thirde, and all them that folowed the flockes, and sayde: Like as I haue tolde you, so speake ye vnto Esau, whan ye mete him, and saye vnto him also: Beholde, thy seruauit Iacob is behynde vs. For he thought: I wyll reconeyle him with the present that goeth before me, after warde wyll I se him my self, peraduenture he shall receaue me to grace.

So the present wente before him, but he taried in the tente the same night, and rose vp in ȝ night, and toke his two wyues and the two maydens and his eleuen sonnes, and wente vnto the foorde of Iacob, toke them and caried them ouer the water, so that all that he had came ouer, and taried him self alone on this syde.

Then wrestled there a man with him vntyll the breake of ȝ daye. And whan he sawe ȝ he might not ouercome him, he touched the senowe of his thyne, and ȝ senowe of his thyne shrancke in wrestlinge with him. And he sayde: Let me go, for ȝ daye breaketh on. But he answered: I will not let ȝ go, excepte thou blesse me. He sayde: What is thy name? He answered: Iacob. He sayde: Thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel, for thou hast stryuen with God and with men, and hast preuayled. And Iacob axed him, ⁊ sayde: Tell me, what is thy name? But he sayde: Why axest thou what my name is? And he blessed him there. And Iacob called the place Peniel, for I haue sene God face to face, ⁊ my soule is recovered. And as he came ouer frō Peniel, ȝ Sonne rose vpō him, ⁊ he halted vpon his thyne. Therefore eate the children of Israel no vane vpon the senow of ȝ thyne vnto this daye, because ȝ vane vpon the senow of Iacobs thyne was touched.

The xxxij. Chapter.

A IACOB lift vp his eyes, ⁊ sawe his brother Esau comyng with foure hundreth men: and he deuyded his children vnto Lea vnto Rachel, and to both the maydcē, and set the maydens with their children before, and Lea with hir childrē after, and Rachel with Ioseph hynder most. And he wente before them, and bowed him self to the grounde seuen tymes, tyll he came to his brother. * But Esau ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and fell aboute his neck, ⁊ kyssed him, and wepte, and lift vp his eyes, and sawe the wyues with the children, and sayde: What are these with the? He answered: They are the children, which God hath geuen vnto thy seruauit. And the maydens came forth with their children, and dyd their obeysamee vnto him.

Lea came forth also with hir childrē, and kneled vnto him. Afterwarde came Ioseph and Rachel forth, and kneled vnto him likewise. And he sayde: What meanest thou with all the droue that I met? He answered: that I might fynde grace in the sight of my lorde. Esau sayde: I haue ynough my brother, kepe that thou hast. Iacob answered: Oh nay, but yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, receaue my present of my haude (for I sawe thy face, as though I had sene the face of God) and be at one with me. Take this present in good worth, that I haue brought ȝ, for God hath geuen it me, ⁊ I haue ynough of all thinges. So he compelled him to take it.

And he sayde: Let vs go on and take oure iourney, I wyll go in thy company. But he sayde vnto him: My lorde, thou knowest that I haue tender children by me, and small and greate cattell also, which are yet but yonge: yf they shulde be dryuē ouer in one daye, the whole flocke wolde dye. Let my lorde go on before his seruauit. I wyll dryue after fayre and softly, (there after as the cattell ⁊ the children can go,) tyll I come to my lorde in Seir. Esau sayde: Yet wil I leaue some of my people with the. He answered: What nede is it? Let me but onely fynde grace in the sight of my lorde.

So Esau departed againe the same daye towarde Seir, and Iacob toke his iourney towarde Sucoth, and buylded him an house, and made tētes for his cattell. Therefore is the place called Sucoth.

Afterwarde came Iacob peaceably into the cite of Sichem, which lyeth in ȝ lande of Cauaan, after that he was come agayne out of Mesopotamia, and pitched before the cite,

"and bought a pece of londe of the children of Hemor & father of Sichem for * an hundreth pens. There pitched he his tent, and there he set vp an altare, and called vpon the name of the mightie God of Israel.

The rrriii. Chapter.

DINA & daughter of Lea, which she bare vnto Iacob, wente out to beholde the daughters of the londe. Whan Sichem the sonne of Hemor the Hewite (which was lorde of the lode) sawe her, he toke her, and laye with her, and forced her, and his hert hanged vpon her, and he loued & damsell, and talked louyngly with her, and spake to his father Hemor: Get me this mayden to wife.

And Iacob vnderstode, that Dina his daughter was defyled, and his sonnes were with the catell in the felde, and Iacob helde his tonge tyll they came. Then Hemor the father of Sichem wente forth vnto Iacob to comen with him. In the meane season came Iacobs sonnes from & felde. And whan they herde it, it greued the men, and they were very wroth, that he had wrought folly in Israel, and lyen with Iacobs daughter: for so was not the vse to do.

35 Then comened Hemor with thē, and sayde: My sonne Sichems hert longeth for youre daughter, O geue hir him to wife: make frendshippe with vs, geue vs youre daughters, and take ye oure daughters, and dwell with vs, the londe shall be open vnto you, dwell and occupie, and haue youre possessions therin. And Sichem sayde vnto hir father and brethren: Let me fynde grace with you: loke what ye appoynte me, I will geue it: requyre the dowrye and gift of me hardely, I will geue it acordinge as ye wyll axe, onely geue me the damsell to wife.

Then Iacobs sonnes answered Sichem and Hemor his father (and spake disceatfully, because their sister Dina was defyled) & sayde vnto them: That can we not do, to geue oure sister to an vncircumcised man: for that were a shame vnto vs.

C Neuertheles we wyll consente vnto you, yf ye wyll be like vnto vs, and be circumcised as many as are males amonge you: then will we geue you oure daughters, and take youre daughters vnto vs, and dwell with you, and be one people. But yf ye wyll not herken vnto vs, to be circumcised, then wyl we take oure daughter, and go oure waye.

These wordes pleased Hemor and his sonne wel, and the yonge man deferde not to do the same, for he had lust to Iacobs daughter: and he was holden in honoure aboue all in his fathers house. Then came Hemor and Sichem his sonne vnder & gate of cite, and comened with the citisens of the cite, and saide: These men are peaceable with vs, and will dwell in the lande and occupye: now is the londe brode of both the sydes, we wyl take their daughters vnto vs, and geue them oure daughters.

But then wyl they consent vnto vs, to dwell by vs, and to be one people with vs, yf we circumeise all the men children amonge vs, like as they are circumeysed: their catell and goodes, and all that they haue, shal be ours, yf we consent vnto them, that they maye dwel with vs.

And they herkened vnto Hemor and Sichem his sonne, as many as wente out and in at & gate of his cite, and circumcised all the males, that wente out and in at his cite. And vpon the thirde daye (whan it was panefull to them) <sup>b</sup> the two sonnes of Iacob Simeon and Leui Dinas brethren, toke euery man his swerde, and wente boldly in to the cite, and slew all the males, and slew Hemor also and Sichem his sonne with the edge of the swerde, and toke their sister Dina out of Sichems house, and wente their waye.

36 Then came Iacobs sonnes ouer the slayne, and spoyled the cite (because they had defyled their sister) and toke their shepe, oxen, Asses, and what so euer was in the cite and in the londe, and all maner of goodes: All their children and wyues toke they captyue, and spoyled all & was in the houses.

And Iacob sayde vnto Symeon and Leui: Ye haue brought it so to passe, & I stynte before the inhabitants of this lande, & Cananites and Pheresites, & I am but a small nombre: Yf they gather them selues now together against me, they shal slaye me, so shal I be destroyed with my house. But they answered: Shulde they thē deale with oure sister as with an whoore?

The rrrb. Chapter.

AND God sayde vnto Iacob: Get the vp, and go vnto Bethel, & dwell there, and make there an altare vnto the God, that appeared vnto the, \*whan thou fleddest from thy brother Esau. Then sayde Iacob vnto his housholde and to all  $\hat{y}$  were with him: Put away from you  $\hat{y}$  straunge  $\dagger$ goddes, that are amonge you, and cleanse youre selues, and chaunge youre clothes, and let vs get vp, and go vnto Bethel, that I maye there make an altare vnto the God,  $\dagger$ which herde me in the tyme of my trouble, and bath bene with me in the waye that I haue gone.

B Then gaue they him all the straunge golddes that were vnder their handes, and their earynges, and he buried them vnder an Oke that stode besyde Sichem,  $\dagger$  and departed. And there came a feare of God vpon the cities that laye route aboute, so that they folowed not after  $\hat{y}$  sonnes of Iacob. So came Iacob vnto Lus in  $\hat{y}$  lande of Canaan (which is called Bethel) and all the people that were with him, and there he buylded an altare, and called  $\hat{y}$  place Bethel, because the LORDE appeared vnto him there, whan he fled from his brother. Then dyed  $\dagger$ Debora Rebeccas nurse, and was buried beneth Bethel vnder the Oke, and it was called the Oke of lamentacion.

$\dagger$  And God appeared agayne vnto Iacob, after that he was come out of Mesopotamia, and blessed him,  $\dagger$  he saide vnto him: 'Thou art called Iacob, neuertheles thou shalt nomore be called Iacob, but Israel shal be thy name. And so was he called Israel.

C And God sayde vnto him:  $\S$  I am the All mightie God, be frutefull and multiplye: people and a multitude of people shal come of the, and  $\parallel$ kynges shall come out of thy loynes: and the lande that I gaue vnto Abraham and Isaac, wyl I geue vnto the,  $\dagger$  wyl geue it vnto thy sede after the. So God departed from him, from  $\hat{y}$  place where he talked with him. And Iacob set vp a piler of stone, in the place where he talked with him,  $\dagger$  and poured drynk-offerynges thereon, and poured oyle vpon it. And Iacob called  $\hat{y}$  place where God talked with him, Bethel.

D And he departed from Bethel: and whan he was yet a felde brode from Ephrath, Rachel traueyled,  $\dagger$  the byrth came harde vpon hir. But whan she had soch payne in traueylinge,  $\hat{y}$  myd wife sayde vnto her:  $\dagger$  feare not, for thou shalt haue this some also. But as hir soule was departyng,  $\hat{y}$  she must dye, she called him Ben Oni: neuertheles his father called hi Bē Iamin.  $\dagger$  So Rachel died,  $\dagger$  was buried in the waye towarde Ephrath, which now is called Bethlehē. And Iacob set vp a piler vpon hir graue, there is Rachels grauestone vnto this daye. And Israel departed, and pitched his tent beyonde the tower of  $\dagger$  Eder.

And it chaunced, that when Israel dwelt in that londe, Ruben wente  $\dagger\dagger$  and laye with Bilha his fathers concubyne, and that came to Israels eares.

And Iacob had twolue sonnes. The sonnes of Lea were these: Ruben Iacobs first borne sonne, Simeon, Leui, Iuda, Isachar,  $\dagger$  Zabulō. The sonnes of Rachel, were Ioseph and Ben Iamin. The sonnes of Bilha Rachels mayde: Dan, and Nephthali. The sonnes of Silpa Leas mayde: Gad and Aser. These are  $\hat{y}$  sonnes of Iacob, which were borne vnto him in Mesopotamia. And he came to his father Isaac to Mamre in to the head cite which is called Hebron, where in Abraham  $\dagger$  Isaac were straungers. And Isaac was an hundreth  $\dagger$  foure score yeare olde,  $\dagger$  fell sicke, and dyed,  $\dagger$  was gathered vnto his people, whan he was olde,  $\dagger$  had lyued ynough: and his sonnes Esau  $\dagger$  Iacob buried him.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

T HIS is the generaciō of Esau, which is called Edom. Esau toke wyues of the daughters of Canaan.  $\dagger\dagger$  Ada the daughter of Elō the Hethite:  $\dagger$  Ahalbama the daughter of Ana, the childes childe of Zibeon the Heuyte: And Basmath  $\dagger\dagger$  Isaels daughter, the sister of Nebaioth. And Ada bare Eliphas vnto Esau. Basmath bare Reguel. Ahalbama bare Ieus, Iaelan,  $\dagger$  Korah. These are the childrē of Esau,  $\hat{y}$  were borne vnto him in the lande of Canaan.

And Esau toke his wyues sonnes  $\dagger$  daughters, and all the soules of his house, his substance, and all the cattell with all the goodes that he had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and wente in to a countre awaye frō his brother Iacob: for their substance was so greate, that they coude not dwell together: and the londe wherin they were straungers, might not holde them because of their goodes. So Esau dwelt vpon mount Seir. And Esau is Edom.

B This is ꝑ generaciō of Esau, of whō are come ꝑ Edomites vpon ꝑ mount Seir. And these are ꝑ names of the childrē of Esau: Eliphaz ꝑ sonne of Ada Esaus wife: Reguel ꝑ sonne of Basmath Esaus wife: The sonnes of Eliphaz were these: Theman, Omar, Zepho, Gaethan ⁊ Kenas. And *Thimna was a concubine of Elyphas ꝑ sonne of Esau, and bare him Amaleck. These are ꝑ children of Ada Esaus wife.

The children of Reguel are these: Nahath, Serah, Samma, Misa. These are the children of Basmath Esaus wife.

The children of Ahalibama Esaus wife, the daughter of Ana, that was the childes child of Zibeon (which she bare vnto Esau) are these: Ieus, Iaelam and Korah.

C These are the prynces amōge the childrē of Esau. The children of Eliphaz the first sonne of Esau, were these: The pryncce Theman, ꝑ pryncce Omar, the pryncce Zepho, the pryncce Kenas, the pryncce Korah, the pryncce Gaethan, the pryncce Amaleck. These are the prynces of Eliphaz in the lāde of Edō, and are the children of Ada.

And these are the children of Reguel Esaus sonne: ꝑ pryncce Nahath, ꝑ pryncce Serah, ꝑ pryncce Sāma, ꝑ pryncce Misa. These are ꝑ prynces of Reguel in ꝑ londe of ꝑ Edomites, ⁊ they are ꝑ children of Basmath Esaus wife. These are the children of Ahalibama Esaus wife: The pryncce Ieus, ꝑ pryncce Iaelam, the pryncce Korah. These are the prynces of Ahalibama, ꝑ daughter of Ana Esaus wife.

D These are ꝑ childrē of Esau and their prynces. He is Edom. The children of Seir ꝑ Horite ꝑ dwelt in the londe, are these: Lothan, Sobal, Zibeon, Ana, Dison, Ezer ⁊ Disan. These are the prynces of the Horites, all children of Seir in the londe of Idumea. But ꝑ childrē of Lothan were these: Hori, ⁊ Hemā, ⁊ Lothāns sister was called †Thimna.

The children of Sobal were these: Aluā, Manahat, Ebal, Sepho ⁊ Onā. The childrē of Zibeō were: Aia ⁊ Ana. This is the same Ana ꝑ foude †Mules in ꝑ wyldernes, whā he kepte his fathers Zibeons Asses. The children of Ana were: Dison: ⁊ Ahalibama, ꝑ is ꝑ daughter of Ana. The childrē of Dison were: Hemdan, Eszban, Iethrā ⁊ Charan. The children of Ezer were: Bilhan, Seauā, ⁊ Ackan. The children of Disan were: Vz ⁊ Aran.

These are ꝑ prices of ꝑ Horites: The prince Lothan, ꝑ pryncce Sobal, ꝑ pryncce Zibeō, ꝑ pryncce Ana, ꝑ pryncce Dison, ꝑ prince Ezer, ꝑ pryncce Disan. These are the prynces of the Horites, which ruled in ꝑ londe of Seir.

E The kynges that reigned in the londe of Edumea (before the childrē of Israel had eny kyng) are these: Bela ꝑ sonne of Beor was kyng in Edumea, ⁊ ꝑ name of his cite was Dinhaba. And whā Bela died, Iobab ꝑ sonne of Serah of Bosra was kyng in his steade. When Iobab dyed, Husam out of ꝑ lōde of the Themanites was kyng in his steade. Whan Husam dyed, Hadad ꝑ sonne of Bedad (which slewe ꝑ Madianites in ꝑ Moabites felde) was kyng in his steade, ⁊ the name of his cite was Auith. Whan Hadad dyed, Samla of Masreck was kyng in his steade. Whā Samla died, Saul of Rehoboth by ꝑ water syde, was kyng in his steade. Whan Saul dyed, Baal Hanā the sonne of Achbor was kyng in his steade. Whā Baal Hanā the sonne of Achbor dyed, Hadad was kyng in his steade, ⁊ the name of his cite was Pagu, ⁊ his wifes name was Mehet Abeel, the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mesahab. Thus are the prynces of Esau called in their kyngreds, places ⁊ names: The pryncce Thymna, ꝑ pryncce Alua, ꝑ pryncce Ietheth, the pryncce Ahalibama, the pryncce Ela, the pryncce Pynon, the pryncce Kenas, ꝑ pryncce Theman, ꝑ prince Mibzar, the prince Magdiel, ꝑ pryncce Irā. These are the prynces in Edumea, like as they dwelt in ꝑ lāde of their possessions. And Esau is ꝑ father of ꝑ Edomites.

The rrrbij. Chapter.

I ACOB dwelt in ꝑ lande, wherin his father A was a straunger, namely in the lāde of Canaā. And these are ꝑ generaciōs of Jacob. Ioseph was seutene yeare olde, whā he became a keper of the catell with his brethren, ⁊ the lad was with the children of Bilha ⁊ Silpa his fathers wyues, and tolde their father of ꝑ euell reporte ꝑ was of thē. Israel loued Ioseph more thē all his childrē because he had begottē him in his olde age, and he made him a cote of many coloures.

Now whā his brethrē sawe, ꝑ his father loued him more thē all his brethrē, they had euell wyll at him, ⁊ coude not speake a frēdly worde vnto hi. * Ioseph also had once a dreame, and tolde his brethrē therof. Thē hated they him ⁊ more, for he sayde: Heare I praye you what I dreamed. Me thought we were byndinge sheeues vpō ⁊ felde, ⁊ my shefe arose, and stode vp, and youre sheeues rounde aboute made obysaunce vnto my shefe.

B Then sayde his brethrē vnto him: Shalt thou be oure kinge, and haue donyniō ouer vs? And they hated him yet ⁊ more, because of his dreame, ⁊ his wordes. And he had yet another dreame, which he tolde his brethrē, ⁊ saide: Beholde, I had yet another dreame: Me thought ⁊ Sonne ⁊ ⁊ Moone ⁊ eleuen starres made obeisaunce to me. And whā this was tolde his father and his brethrē, his father reproued him, ⁊ sayde vnto him: What maner of dreame is this, ⁊ thou hast dreamed? Shall I ⁊ thy mother, ⁊ thy brethren come ⁊ fall before ⁊ vpon the grōnde? And his brethrē had enuie at him. But his father marked this sayenge.

C Now whā his brethren were gone forth to kepe their fathers catell in Sichē, Israel sayde vnto Ioseph: Do not thy brethren kepe the catell in Sichem? Come, I wil sende the vnto thē. He answered: † Here am I. And he sayde: Go thy waye, and loke whether it be well with thy brethren and with ⁊ catell, and brynge me worde agayne how it is. And he sent him out of the valley of Hebron, to go vnto Sichem.

Then a certayne man founde him, wandringe out of his waye in the felde, which axed him, and sayde: Whom sekest thou? He answered: I seke my brethren: tell me I pray the where they kepe. The man sayde: They are gone from hence, for I herde them saye: let vs go vnto Dothan. Then folowed Ioseph after his brethren, and founde them at Dothan.

D Now whan they sawe him a farre of, afore he came at thē, they deuyced to sleve him, and sayde one to another: Lo, there cōmeth the dreamer. ‡ come on, and let vs sleve him, ⁊ cast him in a pytt, and saye: a wicked beast hath deuoured him: thē shal it be sene, what his dreames are.

When Ruben herde that, he wolde haue deluyered him out of their handes, ⁊ sayde: § O let vs not sleve a soule. Ruben sayde morouer vnto him: Shed no bloude, but cast him in to this pytt ⁊ is in the wyldernes, ⁊ laye ye no hādes vpon him. (He wolde haue deluyered him out of their hādes, ⁊ he might haue brought him agayne vnto his father.)

Whan Ioseph now came to his brethrē, they stryped him out of his cote, that partye coloured cote which he had vpon him, ⁊ toke him and cast him in to a pytt. But the same pytt was emptye, and no water in it, ⁊ they sat them downe to eate. In the meane season they lift vp their eyes, and sawe a cōpany of Ismaelites cōmynge from Gilead, with their camels, which bare spyes, balme, and myrre, and were goinge downe in to Egipte.

Then saide Iuda vnto his brethrē: what helpeth it vs, that we sleve oure brother, and hyde his bloude? Come, let vs sell him vnto the Ismaelites, that oure handes be not defyled vpon him, for he is oure brother, oure flesh and bloude. And they herkened vnto him.

And as the Madianites marchant men wente by, they drew Ioseph out of the pytt, and solde him vnto the Ismaelites (for twētye syluer pens) which brought him in to Egipte.

F Now whan Ruben came agayne vnto the pytt, ⁊ founde not Ioseph therein, he rent his clothes, and came agayne to his brethrē and sayde: The lad is not yonder, whyther shal I go? Then toke they Iosephs cote ⁊ slewe a goate, and dyped the cote in ⁊ bloude, and sent awaye that partie coloured cote, and caused it be brought vnto their father and sayde: This hane we founde, loke, whether it be thy sonnes coate, or no.

But he knewe it, and sayde: It is my sonnes coate, ⁊ a wicked beast hath deuoured him, a rauyshinge beast hath rauyshed Ioseph. And Iacob rēte his clothes, and put a sack cloth aboute his loynes, ⁊ mourned for his sonne a longe season. And all his sonnes ⁊ daughters came vnto him to cōforte him. But he wolde not be cōforted, ⁊ saide: With sorowe wil I go downe in to the graue vnto my sonne. And his father wepte for him. But the Madianites § solde him in Egipte vnto Potiphar Pharaos chefe Marshall.

called Hyra at Odollam. And there Iuda sawe a mā of Canaās daughter called Sua, and toke her. And whē he had lye with her, she conceaued and bare a sonne. whom she called Er.

And she conceaued agayne, & bare a sonne whō she called Onā. She proceeded yet further, & bare a sonne, whō she called Sela. And whā she had borne him, she left of bearinge.

And Iuda gaue his first sonne Er a wife, whose name was Thamar. But he was wicked before the LORDE, therefore the LORDE slew him. Then sayde Iuda vnto his sonne Onan: Go lie with thy brothers wife, and marye thyself with her, that thou mayest rayse vp sede vnto thy brother. But when Onan knewe that the sede "shulde not be his owne, whan he laye with his brothers wife, he let it fall vpon the earth and destroyed it, & he shulde not geue sede vnto his brother. This thinge that he dyd displeased the LORDE sore, and he slew him also.

Then sayde Iudas vnto Thamar his sonnes wyfe. Remayne a wyddow in thy fathers house, tyll my sonne Sela be growne: for he thought: peradventure he might dye also like as his brethren. So Thamar wente hir waye, and remained in hir fathers house. Now whā many dayes were past, & daughter of Sua Iudas wife dyed. And whan Iuda had left mournyng, he wente vp vnto Thimnath * to clyppe his shepe with his shepherde Hyra of Odollam.

For she sawe that Sela was growne, and she was not geuen vnto him to wife.

Now whan Iuda sawe her, he thought it had bene an whoore, for she had couered hir face: and he gat him to her in the waye, and saide: I praye the let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his daughter in lawe. She answered: What wilt thou geue me, that thou mayest lie with me? He sayde: I wil sende the a kydd from the flocke. She answered: Geue me a pledge then, tyll thou

She answered: Thy signet, and thy bracelet, and thy staff that thou hast in thy hāde. Then he gaue it her, and laye with her, and she was with childe of him. And she gat hir vp, and wente hir waye, and layed of hir cloke, and put on hir wyddowes garnētes agayne.

Iuda sent the kydd by his shepherde of Odolla, to fetch the pledge agayne from the woman, and he founde her not. Then axed he the men of the same place, & sayde: Where is the whoore & sat without in the waye? They answered: There hath no whoore bene here. And he came agayne vnto Iuda, and saide: I haue not founde her, morouer & men of the same place saide: that there hath no whoore bene there. Iuda sayde: Let her take it vnto her, lest we happily be shamed, for I haue sent the kydd, and thou hast not founde her.

After thre monethes it was tolde Iuda: Thamar thy daughter in lawe hath plaied the whoore: and beholde, by whordome is she gotten with childe. Iuda sayde: bryng her forth, that she maye be brent. And whan she was brought forth, she sent vnto hir father in lawe, and sayde: By the man & oweth these, am I with childe. And she sayde: Knowest thou whose is this signet, this bracelet & this staff? Iuda knewe thē, & sayde: She is more righteous thē I, for I gaue hir not my sonne Sela: But he laye nomore with her.

Whan the tyme came that she shulde be deliuered, there were two twyns founde in hir wombe. And as she was now in trauelynge, the one put out his hande. Then the mydwife toke and boude a reed threde aboute it, and saide: This shal come out first. But whan he pluckte in his hande agayne, his brother came forth. And she sayde: Wherefore is there a rent mayde for thy sake? And he was called † Phares. Afterwarde came his brother forth, which had & reed threde aboute his hande, and he was called Zarah.

The xxx. Chapter.

IOSEPH was brought downe in to Egipte, & Potiphar an Egipcīa † Pharaos chefe marshall bought him of & Ismaelites, & brought him downe. And & LORDE was with Ioseph, in so moch & he became a luckye mā, & was in his master's Egiptians house. And his master sawe y<sup>e</sup> the LORDE was with him: for what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to prospere in his hāde: so y<sup>e</sup> he founde fauoure in his masters sight, ⁊ was his seruauunt. He made him ruler of his house, and put all that he had, vnder his hande. And from the tyme forth that he had made him ruler of his house and all his goodes, y<sup>e</sup> LORDE blessed the Egiptians house for Iosephs sake: and there was nothyng but the very blessinge of the LORDE in all y<sup>e</sup> he had in y<sup>e</sup> house ⁊ in the felde, therefore left he all y<sup>e</sup> he had, in Iosephs hande. And medled with nothyng himself, saue onely the bred that he ate. And Ioseph was fayre of bewtye, and well fauoured of face.

And it fortunēd after these actes, that his masters wife cast hir eyes vpon Ioseph, and sayde: Slepe with me. But he denyed, and saide vnto her: Beholde, my master knoweth not what is in y<sup>e</sup> house, and all that he hath, that hath he put vnder my hande. And there is no man so greate in the house as I, and he hath kepte nothyng fro me, excepte the: for thou art his wife. How shulde I then do so greate euell, and synne agaynst God? But she spake such wordes vnto Ioseph daylie. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, to slepe by her, or to be in her company.

It fortunēd vpon a tyme, that Ioseph wente in to the house to do his busynesse, and there was none of y<sup>e</sup> folkes of the house thereby. And she caught him by his garment, ⁊ sayde: Slepe with me. But he left the garment in hir hande, and fled, and gat him out of the house.

Now whā she sawe that he had left his garmēt in hir hande, and fled out, she called the folkes in the house, and sayde vnto thē: Lo, he hath brought vs in the Hebrue, to do vs shame. He came in here vnto me, to slepe by me: but I cried with loude voyce. And whan he herde that I made a noyse ⁊ cried, he left his garmēt here by me, and fled, and ranne out.

And she layed vp his garmēt by her, tyll his master came home, and tolde him euen the same wordes, and sayde: The Hebrue seruauunt whom thou broughtest here vnto vs, came in here to me, for to do me shame. But whan I made a noyse and cried, he left his garment here by me, and fled out. Whan his master herde the wordes of his wife which she tolde him, and sayde: Thus hath the Hebrue seruauunt done vnto me, he was very wroth.

Then his master toke him, and put him in the preson, wherin the kinges presoners laie. And there he laye in preson. But the LORDE was with him, and had mercy vpon him, ⁊ caused him to fynde fauoure in the sight of the officer of y<sup>e</sup> preson, so that he committed all the presoners of the preson vnto his hādes: that what so euer were done, might be done by him. For the officer of the preson sawe, y<sup>e</sup> the LORDE was with him in all y<sup>e</sup> he vnder his handes, and that what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to come prosperously to passe.

The xl. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd after this, that y<sup>e</sup> kynge of Egiptes chefe butlar and y<sup>e</sup> chefe baker offended their lorde the kynge of Egipte. And Pharaō was angrie with them, ⁊ caused them be put in preson in y<sup>e</sup> chefe marshalls house, where Ioseph laye presoner. And the chefe marshall put Ioseph vnto them, y<sup>e</sup> he might serue them. And so they were in preson for a season.

And they dreamed, both the butlar ⁊ the baker in one night, euery mā his owne dreame, and euery dreame had his interpretaciō. Now in the moruynge whan Ioseph came in vnto them, and sawe that they loked sadly, he axed them and sayde: Why loke ye so sadly to daye? They answered: We haue dreamed, and haue no man to declare it vnto vs. Ioseph sayde: Interpretinge belongeth vnto God, but tell it me yet.

Then the chefe butlar tolde Ioseph his dreame, and saide vnto him: I dreamed that there was a vyne before me, which had thre braunches, and it budded, grewe and bare blossoms, and the grapes therof were ripe. And I had Pharaos cuppe in my hande, ⁊ toke (the grapes) and wronge thē in to y<sup>e</sup> cuppe. and gaue Pharaō the cuppe in his hāde.

Ioseph sayde: This is the interpretaciō: The thre braunches are thre dayes, and ouer thre dayes shall Pharaō take the, and putt the in thine office agayne, that thou mayest geue him the cuppe in his hande after the olde maner, whā thou wast his butlar. But whan thou art in thy prosperite. thyne vpon me, and shewe me kyndnesse, that thou mayest certifie Pharao of me. y he maie bringe me out of this house: for I was preuely caried out of the lande of the Hebrues. and here also haue I done nothinge, that they shulde haue put me in this dongeon.

C Whan the chefe baker sawe, that the interpretation was good. he sayde vnto Ioseph: I dreamed, that I bare thre wyker baskettes vpon my heade, and in y vppermost baszket all maner of bakē meates vnto Pharao, and the foules ate out of the baszket vpon my heade.

Ioseph answered, and sayde: This is the interpretacon: The thre baszkettes are thre dayes, and after thre dayes shall Pharao take the, and hange the vpon the galowe, and the foules shal eate thy flesh from of y.

And vpon the thirde daye it came to passe, that Pharao helde his * byrth daye, and made a feast vnto all his seruantes, and toke the chefe butlar and the chefe baker before all his seruantes, and restored the chefe butlar to his butlarshipe agayne, so that he reached the cuppe in to Pharaos hande. As for the chefe baker, he caused him be hanged like as Ioseph had interpreted vnto him. Neuerthelesse the chefe butlar thought not on Ioseph, but forgot him.

The xli. Chapter.

*A*ND after two yeares Pharao had a dreame, how that he stode by a water syde: and beholde, out of the water there came seuen goodly kyne, and fatted, and wente fedinge in the medowe. After these he sawe other seuen kyne come out of the water, which were euell fauoured and leane fleshed, and wente by the kyne vpon y water syde: and the euell fauoured leane kyne ate vp the seuen goodly and fatt kyne. Then Pharao awaked.

And he slepte agayne, and dreamed the seconde tyme. And he sawe that seuen eares of corne grewe vpon one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde he sawe seue thyne and blasted eares come vp, and the seuen thyne eares deuoured the seuen greate and full eares. Then Pharao awaked, and sawe that it was a dreame. And whan it was daye, his sprete was troubled, and he sente out, τ caused to call all the soithsayers in Egipte τ all the wyse men, and tolde them his dreame. But there was none, that coude tell Pharao the interpretation of it.

Then spake the chefe butlar vnto Pharao, and saide: This daye do I remembre my lawte. Whan Pharao was angrie with his seruantes, and put me in preson with y chefe baker in y chefe marshals house, we dreamed both in one night euery mā his dreame, hauinge his owne interpretation. Then was there with vs a younge man an Hebrue, the chefe marshals seruannt, vnto whom we tolde it, and he declared oure dreames vnto vs, vnto euery mā according to his dreame. And as he declared it vnto vs, so came it to passe. For I was restored vnto myne office, and he was hanged.

Then Pharao sent and called for Ioseph and they let him out of the dongeon. And he let himself be shauen, and chaunged his clothes, and came in vnto Pharao. Then saide Pharao vnto him: I haue dreamed a dreame, and there is no man that can interpret it: but I haue herde tell of the, that whā thou hearest a dreame, thou declarest it. Ioseph answered Pharao, and sayde: God shall geue Pharao a prosperous answer, yee well without me.

Pharao sayde vnto Ioseph: I dreamed that I stode by a water syde, and beholde, out of the water there came seuen kyne, fatted and goodly, and wente fedinge in y medowe. And after them I sawe other seue kyne come out, thyne, euell fauoured, and leenfleshed. So euell fauoured sawe I neuer in all the lande of Egipte. And the seuen leane and euell fauoured kyne, ate vp the seuen first fat kyne. And whan they had eatē them vp, a man coude not perceaue that they had eaten them, τ were as euell fauoured as they were afore. Then I awaked.

And I sawe agayne in my dreame seuen eares of corne, growinge vpo one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde there spronge vp seuen wythred eares, thyne and blasted, and the seuen thyne eares deuoured the seuen good eares. And I haue shewed it vnto my soithsayers, but they can tell me nothinge therof.

Ioseph answered Pharao: Both Pharaos dreames are one. God sheweth Pharao what he wil do. The seuen good kyne are seuen yeares, and the seuen good eares are seuen yeares also. It is one dreame. The seuen leene and enell fauoured kyne, that came vp after them, are seuen yeares. And the seuen thynne and blasted eares, shalbe seuen yeares of derth. This is now the thinge which I tolde Pharaο, that God sheweth Pharaο, what he wyll do.

Beholde, there shal come seuen yeares with greate plenteousnes in y whole lande of Egipte, and after the same there shall come seuen yeares of derth, so that all this plenteousnes shalbe forgotten in y lande of Egipte: and the derth shall consume the lande, so that the plenteousnes shal not be perceaued in the lande, because of the derth that commeth thereafter, for it shall be very greate. Where as Pharaο dreamed the seconde tyme, it signifieth that this thinge is surely prepared of God, and that God wil shortly brynge the same to passe.

Let Pharaο now prouyde for a man of vnderstandinge τ wyszdome, whom he maye set ouer the lande of Egipte, and se that he ordene officers in the londe, and take y fifth (parte) of the lande of Egipte in the seuen plenteous yeares, and gather all y foode y shal come of the plenteous yeares, that they maye laye vp come vnder Pharaοs power for sustenance in the cities, and kepe it, y there maye be foode founde prepared for the lande in the seuen deare yeares, which shall come vpon the lande of Egipte, that the lande be not destroyed of honger. The sayenge pleased Pharaο well and all his seruauētes. And Pharaο sayde vnto his seruauētes: How might we fynde soch a man, in whom is the sprete of God? And sayde vnto Iosep: For so moch as God hath shewed y all this, there is none of soch vnderstandinge τ wyszdome as thou.

Thou shalt be ouer my house, and acordinge vnto thy worde<sup>a</sup> shall all my people obeye: onely in the kynges seate wyll I be more then thou. And he sayde: Beholde, I haue set the ouer the whole lande of Egipte. And he toke of his ringe from his hāde, and gaue it Ioseph in his hāde, and clothed him with whyte sylke, and honge a cheyne of golde aboute his neck, and made him ryde vpō the seconde charet: and caused it be proclaimed before him, that men shulde bowe their knees vnto him, as to him whō Pharaο had set ouer the whole lande of Egipte.

And Pharaο sayde vnto Ioseph: I am Pharaο: without thy wyll shall no man moue his hande or his fote in all the lāde Egipte. And he called him * Zaphnath Paena, τ gaue him a wife, euen Asnath the daughter of Potiphar the prest of On. So Ioseph wente out, for to vyset the lande of Egipte. (And he was thirtie yeare olde, whan he stode before Pharaο.) And he departed from Pharaο, and wente thorow all the lande of Egipte.

And the londe dyd so those seuen plenteous yeares, and they gathered all the foode of the seuen yeares that were in the lande of Egipte, τ layed it in the cities. Loke what foode grewe in the felde rounde aboute euery cite, they put it therin. So Ioseph layed vp the corne in stoare, and that moch aboue measure, as the sonde of the see: in so moch y he left of nonbrynge of it, for it coude not be nombred.

And vnto Ioseph there were borne two sonnes (before y derth came) whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. And the first called he Manasses: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to forget all my labour, and all my fathers house. The seconde called he Ephraim: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to growe in y lande of my trouble.

Now whan y seuen plenteous yeares were ended in Egipte, then beganne the seuen deare yeares to come, wherof Ioseph had sayde. And there was derth in all landes, but in all the lāde of Egipte there was foode. Now whan the lande of Egipte beganne to suffre honger also, the people cryed vnto Pharaο for bred. But Pharaο sayde vnto all y Egiptians: Go vnto Ioseph, what he sayeth vnto you, y doo. So whan there was derth in all y lāde, Ioseph opened all y was by him, τ solde vnto the Egiptians. Thus y derth preuayled in the lande, τ all countrees came to Egipte to bye at Ioseph: for the derth was mightie in all landes.

The xliij. Chapter.

WHAN Iacob sawe that there was moch<sup>a</sup> come in Egipte, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Why gape ye? Beholde, I heare that there is moch corne in Egipte, go downe & bye vs corne,  $\hat{y}$  we maie lyue, & not dye. So Iosephs ten brethrē wente downe to bye corne in Egipte. As for Ben Iamyn Iosephs brother, Iacob wolde not let him go with his brethrē, for he sayde: Some mysfortune might happen vnto him. So  $\hat{y}$  childrē of Israel came to bye corne, amonge other  $\hat{y}$  came with them: for there was deth also in  $\hat{y}$  lande of Canaan. But Ioseph was gouernoure in the lande, and solde corne vnto all the people in the lande.

Now whā his brethrē came to him, they fell downe to the grounde before him vpon their faces. And he sawe them, & knewe thē, and helde him self straunge towarde them, and talked roughly with them, and saide vnto them: Whence come ye? They sayde: Out of the lande of Canaan to bye vytayle. Neuertheles though he knewe them, yet knewe they not him. And Ioseph thought vpon  $\hat{y}$  dreames that he had dreamed of them,<sup>c</sup> and sayde vnto them: Ye are spy es, and are come to se where the lande is open.

B They answered him: No my lorde, thy seruantes are come to bye vytayle: we are all one mans sonnes, we are vnfayned, and thy seruantes were neuer spy es. He sayde vnto thē: No, but ye are come to se where the lande is open. They answered him: We thy seruantes are twolue brethren, the sonnes of one man in the lāde of Canaan, and the yongest is with oure father: as for one, he is awaye.

Ioseph sayde vnto them: This is it that I sayde vnto you: spy es are ye. Here by wyll I proue you: By the life of Pharaο ye shall not get hence, excepte youre yongest brother come hither. Sende awaye one of you to fetch youre brother, but ye shalbe in preson. Thus wyll I trye out youre wordes, whether ye go aboute with trueth or not: for els, by the life of Pharaο ye are spy es. And he put thē together in wardē thre dayes longe.

C Vpon the thirde daye he sayde vnto thē: Yf ye wil lyue, thē do thus, for I feare God: Yf ye be vnfayned, let one of youre brethren lye bounde in youre preson: but go ye youre waye, and cary home the necessary foode. & brynge me youre yongest brother, so wyll I beleue youre wordes, that ye shall not dye. And so they dyd.

And they sayde one to another: This haue we deserued against oure brother, in that we sawe the anguysh of his soule, whan he besought vs, and we wolde not heare him: therfore cōmeth now this trouble vpon vs. Ruben answered them, and saide: Tolve not I you  $\hat{y}$  same, whan I sayde: \* O synne not agaynst  $\hat{y}$  lad, but ye wolde not heare. Now is his bloude requyred. But they knew not that Ioseph vnderstode it, for he spake vnto thē by an interpreter. And he turned him from them, and wepte. Now whan he had turned him to them agayne, and talked with them, he toke Symon from amonge them, & bounde him before their eyes, and commaunded to fyll their sackes with corne, and to put euery mans money in his sack, and to geue euery one his expenses by the waye. And so was it done vnto them.

And they laded their corne vpon their Asses, and departed thence. But whan one opened his sacke to geue his Asse prouender in the Inne, he spyed his money in his sack mouth, and sayde vnto his brethren: My money is restored me agayne: lo, it is in my sack. Then their hertes fayled them, and they were afraied amonge them selues, and sayde: Wherefore hath God done this vnto vs?

Now whan they came home to Iacob their father in the lāde of Canaan, they tolde him all that had happened vnto them, & sayde: The man that is lorde of the londe, spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spy es of the countre. And whan we answered: we are vnfayned, & were neuer spy es, but are twolue brethren the sonnes of oure father: one is awaye, and the yongest is yet this daye with oure father in the lande of Canaan. He sayde: Hereby wyl I marke, that ye are vnfayned: Leane one of youre brethren with me, & take foode necessary for youre houses, & go youre waye, and brynge youre yongest brother vnto me: so shal I knowe that ye are no spy es, but vnfayned: the shal I delyner you youre brother also, and ye maye occupye in the lande.

And whan they opened their sackes, euery man founde his boundell of money in his sacke. And whā they and their father sawe, that it was the bundels of their money, they were afraied.

Then sayde Iacob their father: Ye haue robbed me of my children. Ioseph is awaye, * Ge. 37. d.

Simeon is awaye, and ye will take Ben lamin awaye: It goeth all ouer me. Ruben answered his father & sayde: Yf I brynge him not to the agayne, then slaye my two sonnes: delyuer him but in to my hande, I wyl brynge him agayne vnto the. He sayde: my soune shal not go downe with you: for his brother is deed, and he is left alone. Yf eny mysfortune shulde happen vnto him by the waye y ye go, ye shulde bringe my graye hayre with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

The xliij. Chapter.

BUT the dertth oppressed f lande. And whan all the vytales that they had brought out of Egipte were spent, Iacob their father sayde vnto them: Go agayne, and bye vs a litle foode.

The Iuda answered him, and sayde: The man sware vnto vs, and sayde: ye shal not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you. Yf so be now that thou wilt sende oure brother with vs, we wil go downe, and bye the foode. But yf thou wilt not sende him, we wyl not go downe. For the man sayde vnto vs: Ye shal not se my face, excepte youre brother be with you.

Israel sayde: Wherefore haue ye done this euell vnto me, to tell f man, that ye had yet a brother? They answered: The man enquired so strately of vs and of oure kynrede, & sayde: Is youre father yet a lyue? Haue ye yet a brother? Then tolde we him, as he axed vs. How coulde we knowe, that he wolde saye: brynge youre brother downe with you? Then sayde Iuda vnto Israel his father: Let the lad go with me, that we maye get vs vp and take oure iourney, and lyue, and not dye, both we and thou, and oure childre. * I wyl be suertye for him, of my handes shalt thou requyre him. Yf I brynge him not vnto the agayne, & set him before thine eyes, I wil beare y blame my life longe. For yf we had not made this tarienge, we had now bene come agayne twyse.

Then sayde Israel their father vnto the: Yf it must nedes be so, then do this: take of the best frutes of the lande in youre sakes, and brynge the man a present: a curtesy balme, and hony, and spyes, and myrre, and dates, and almondes. Take other money with you also, and the money that was brought agayne in your sacke mouthes, cary it agayne with you: peraduenture it was an ouersight. And take youre brother, get you vp, & go agayne vnto the man. The Almightie God geue you merye in the sight of f man, that he maye let you haue youre other brother, and Ben lamin. As for me, I must be as one, that is robbed of his children.

Then they toke the present, and other money with them, and Ben lamin, gat the vp, and wente in to Egipte, and stode before Ioseph. Then Ioseph behelde them with Ben lamin, and sayde vnto the ruler of his house: Bring these men in, and sley, & make ready, for they shal dyne with me at noone. And the man dyd as Ioseph had him, & brought the men in to Iosephs house.

Whan they were brought in to Iosephs house, they were afrayed, and sayde: We are brought hither because of the money, that came agayne in oure sakes at the first, to pyke a quarell with vs, and to laye somethinge to oure charge, and to take vs for bonde seruantes with oure Asses.

Therefore came they to f man, that was ruler of Iosephs house, and talked with him at the doore, and sayde: Syr, † we came downe at the first to bye foode, and whan we came in the Inne, and opened oure sakes, beholde, euery mans money was in his sack mouth with full weight: therefore haue we brought it with vs agayne, & haue brought other money with vs also, to bye foode: but we can not tell, who put oure money in oure sakes.

He sayde: Be content, feare you not, youre God euen f God of youre fathers hath geue you y treasure in youre sakes, I had youre money. And he brought forth Simeon vnto them, and led them in to Iosephs house, and gaue them water to wash their fete, & gaue their Asses prouender.

And they made ready f present, ageynst Ioseph came at noone: for they herde, y they shulde dyne there. Now whan Ioseph wente in to the house, they brought him home f present that they had, and fell downe to the grounde before him. But he welcomed them curteously, and sayde: Is youre father (that olde man which ye tolde me of,) in good health? Is he yet aloue? They answered: Thy seruauent oure father is in good health, and is yet alyue. And they bowed them selues, and fell downe before him.

And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe his brother Ben Iamin his mothers sonne, and saide: * Is this youre yongest brother, that ye tolde me of? And he sayde morouer: God be mercifull vnto the my sonne. And Ioseph made haist (for the grounde of his hert was kyndled towarde his brother) and sought how he might wepe, ⁊ wente in to his chamber, and wepte there.

ff And whan he had washed his face, he wente out, and refrayned him self, and sayde: set bred (on the table.) And they brought vnto him by him self, and vnto them by the selues, and to the Egipcians also that ate with them, by them selues. (For the Egipcians darre not eate bred with the Ebrues, that is an abhominacion vnto them.) And they were set ouer agaynst him, the first borne accordinge to his first byrth, and the yongest after his youth. They marueled at it amonge them selues, and there were brought them sundrye meates from his table. But Ben Iamins parte was fyue tymes more then the other. And they dronke, and were mery with him.

The cliiij. Chapter.

A AND Ioseph commaunded the ruler of his house, and sayde: Fyll the mens sakes with foode, as moch as they maye carye, and put euery mans money in his sacker mouth, ⁊ put my syluer cuppe in the sack mouth of the yongest with the money for ⁊ vytayles. He dyd as Ioseph had sayde. And on the morow whan it was daye, they let ⁊ men go with their Asses.

But whan they were out of the cite, and not come farre, Ioseph sayde to the ruler of his house: Vp, and folowe after the me, and whan thou ouertake them, saie vnto them: Wherefore haue ye rewarded euell for good? Is not that it, that my lorde drynketh out of? and that he prophecietieth withall? It is euell done of you, that ye haue done.

B And whan he had ouertaken them, he sayde the same wordes vnto them. They answered him: Wherefore saiest my lorde soch wordes? God forbyd, that thy seruantes shulde do eny soch thinge? Beholde, the money that we foude in oure sakes mouthes, that brought we vnto the agayne, out of the lande of Canaan: how shulde we then haue stollen either syluer or golde out of thy lordes house? Loke by whom it shall be founde amonge thy seruantes, let him dye: yee and we also wyll be my lordes bondmen. He sayde: let it so be, as ye haue spoken. Loke by whom it shall be founde, let him be my seruauant, but ye shalbe harmlesse.

And they made haist, and toke downe euery man his sack to the grounde, and euery man opened his sack: And he searched ⁊ beganne at the greatest vnto the yongest, and the cuppe was founde in Ben Iamins sacker. Then rente they their clothes, and euery man lade the burthen vpon his Asse, ⁊ wente agayne vnto the cite. And Iuda wente with his brethren vnto Iosephs house (for he was there yet) and they fell before him on the grounde. Ioseph sayde vnto them: What manner of dede is this, that ye haue done? Knewe ye not, that soch a man as I am, can prophecy?

Iuda sayde: What shall we saye vnto my lorde? or how shal we speake? and what excuse shal we make? God hath founde out ⁊ wickednesse of thy seruantes. Beholde, we and he, by whom the cuppe is founde, are my lordes seruantes. But he sayde: God forbyd that I shulde do so. The man by whom the cuppe is founde, shall be my seruauant, but go ye vp in peace vnto youre father.

The septe Iuda vnto him, and sayde: My lorde, let thy seruauant speake one worde in thine eares my lorde, be not displeased at thy seruauant also, for thou art euē as Pharaō. My lorde axed his seruantes, and sayde: Haue ye yet a father or brother? Then answered we: We haue a father, which is olde, and a yonge lad begotten in his age, and his brother is deed, ⁊ he is left alone of his mother, and his father loueth him.

Then saydest thou: Brynge him downe vnto me, and I wil se him. But we answered my lorde: The lad can not come from his father, yf he shulde come from him, he were but a deed man. Then saydest thou vnto thy seruantes: * Yf youre yongest brother come not hither with you, ye shall se my face no more. Then wente we vp vnto thy seruauant my father, and tolde him my lordes wordes. Then sayde oure father: Go youre waye agayne, and bye vs a litle foode. But we sayde: We can not go downe, excepte oure yongest brother be with vs, then wyll we go downe: for we darre not loke the man in the face, yf oure yongest brother be not with vs. Then sayde thy seruauant my father vnto vs: Ye knowe that my wife bare me two sonnes, one wente out fro me, and I sayde: he is torne in peces. <sup>a</sup>Yf ye take this fro me also, and eny mysfortune happē him, then shal ye <sup>b</sup>brynge my gray heer with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

¶ Yf I now come home vnto my father, & the lad be not with me (seyunge his soule hangeth by the soule of this) then shall it come to passe, that yf he se not the lad there, he shal dye. So shal we thy seruantes brynge the gray heer of thy seruauant oure father with sorowe downe to the graue. For I thy seruauant became suertye for the lad vnto my father, and sayde: yf I brynge him not agayne, I will beare the blame all my lyfe longe. Therefore let thy seruante byde here in steade of y lad, to be my lordes bonde man, and let the lad go vp with his brethren. For how can I go vp vnto my father, yf the lad be not with me? Then shulde I se the mysery that shulde happen vnto my father.

The xlv. Chapter.

¶ THEN coude not Ioseph refrayne him self before all them that stode aboute him: and he comaunded euery man to go out from him, and there stode no man by him, whan Ioseph vttered him self vnto his brethren. And he wepte loude, so that y Egiptians and Pharaos housholde herde it. <sup>d</sup>And he sayde vnto his brethren: I am Ioseph, is my father yet aloue? And his brethren coude not answere him, they were so abashed before his face. But he sayde: Come nye vnto me. And they came nye. And he sayde: I am Ioseph youre brother, <sup>e</sup>whom ye solde in to Egipte. And now vexenot youre selues, & thinke not y there is eny wrath, because ye solde me hither. <sup>f</sup>For God sent me hither before you, for youre lyues sake. For these are now two yeares, that y derth hath bene in the lande, and there are yet fyue yeares behynde, wherin there shalbe no plowing ner harvest.

¶ But God sent me hither before you, y he might let you remayne vpon earth, and to saue youre lyues by a greate deluyeraunce. And now, it was not ye then that sent me hither, but God which hath made me a father vnto Pharaos, & lorde ouer all his house, and a prynce in the whole lande of Egipte. Haist you therefore, and go vp vnto my father, and saye vnto him: Thy sonne Ioseph sendeth the this worde: God hath made me lorde in all Egipte, come downe vnto me, tarye not, thou shalt dwel in the lande of Gosen, and be with me: thou and thy children, and thy childers childre, thy small and greate catell, and all that thou hast. There wyll I make prouysion for the (for there are yet fyue yeares of derth) that thou perishe not with thine house, and all that is thyne. Beholde, youre eyes and the eyes of my brother Ben Iamin se, that I myne owne self speake vnto you by mouth. Shewe my father all my worshipec in Egipte, and all that ye haue sene: haist you, and come downe hither with my father.

And he fell aboute his brother Ben Iamyns neck, and wepte, and Ben Iamin wepte vpon his neck also. And he kyssed all his brethren, and wepte vpon them. And afterwarde talked his brethren with him. And this tydinges came in to Pharaos house: Iosephs brethren are come, which pleased Pharaos well, and all his seruantes.

And Pharaos spake vnto Ioseph: Saye vnto thy brethren: Do thus, lade youre beastes, go youre waye, and whan ye come in to the lande of Canaan, take youre father and youre housholdes, and come vnto me, I wyl geue you of the goodes in the lade of Egipte, so that ye shall eate the fatt in the lande. And he comaunded them, Do thus, Take you charettes out of y lande of Egipte for youre children and wyues, and brynge youre father, and come, and regarde not youre housholde stuff: for the goodes of all the lade of Egipte shalbe yours.

The children of Israel dyd so, and Ioseph gaue the charettes acordinge to Pharaos commaundement, and expenses by the waye, and gaue them all, vnto euery one a chaunge of rayment: but vnto Ben Iamin he gaue three hundreth syluer pens, and fyue chaunge of rayment. As for his father, he sent him ten Asses laden with goodes out of Egipte, and ten Asses with corne and bred, and vytayles for his father by y waye. So he sent awaye his brethren, and sayde vnto them: Stryue not by the waye.

¶ Thus they departed out of Egipte, and came to the lande of Canaan vnto Iacob their father, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy sonne Ioseph is yet alyue, and is a lorde in all the lande of Egipte. But his hert wauered, for he beleued them not. The tolde they him all the wordes of Ioseph, which he had sayde vnto them. And whan he sawe ȝ charettes that Ioseph had sent to fetch him, his sprete reynued, ȝ he sayde: I haue ynough, that my sonne Ioseph is yet a liue I wil go, and se him, before I dye.

The rlii. Chapter.

¶ ISRAEL toke his iourney with all that he had. And whan he came to Berseba, he offred offerynges vnto ȝ God of his father Isaac. And God spake vnto him in a vision by night: Iacob Iacob. He sayde: here am I. And he saide: I am ȝ mightie God of thy father, be not afraied to go in to Egipte, for there wyl I make a greate people of the. I wyll go downe with the, ȝ wil brynge the vp also. And Ioseph shal laye his hande vpon thine eyes.

Then Iacob gat him vp from Berseba, and ȝ children of Israel caried Iacob their father with their children and wyues vpon the charettes that Pharaο had sent to cary him. And they toke their cattell ȝ substance which they had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and so came in to Egipte: * Iacob ȝ all his sede with him, his children ȝ his childers children with him, his daughters, and the daughters of his children, ȝ all his sede.

¶ These are the ȝ names of the children of Israel, which came in to Egipte, Iacob ȝ his sonnes. † The first borne sonne of Iacob: Ruben. The children of Ruben: Hanoeh, Pallu, Hezron and Charmi. ‡ The children of Simeon: Iemuel, Iamin, Ohad, Iachim, Zohar and Saul the sonne of the Cananitish woman. The childrē of Leui: Gerson, Cahath ȝ Merari. The childrē of Iuda: Er, Onan, Sela, Phares ȝ Serah. But Er and Onan dyed in the lande of Canaan. The childrē of Phares: Hesron and Hamul. The children of Isachar: Thola, Phua, Iob ȝ Semron. The children of Zabulon: Sere, Elon and Iahleel. These are the childrē of Lea, which she bare vnto Iacob in Mesopotamia with his daughter Dina. These all together with sonnes ȝ daughters make thre ȝ thirtie soules.

The childrē of Gad: Zipheon, Haggi, Suni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi and Areli. The children of Asser: Iemna, Iesua, Iesui, Bria ȝ Sera their sister. The children of Bria: Heber and Malchiel. These are the children of Silpa, † whom Laban gaue vnto Lea his daughter, and she bare vnto Iacob these sixtene soules.

The childrē of Rachel Iacobs wife: Ioseph and Ben Iamin. And vnto Ioseph in ȝ lande of Egipte ‡ were borne Manasses and Ephraim, whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. The children of Ben Iamin: Bela, Becher, Asber, Gera, Naamā, Ehi, Ros, Mupin, Hupin and Ard. These are the children of Rachel, which were borne vnto Iacob, fourtene soules altogether.

The children of Dan: Husim. The childrē of Nephtali: Iahzeel, Guni, Iezer, Sillem. These are the children of Bilha, whom Laban gaue vnto his daughter Rachel, ȝ she bare Iacob these seuen soules. All the soules † came with Iacob in to Egipte, ‡ which proceeded out of his loynes (besyde the wyues of his childrē) are altogether sixe ȝ sixtie soules. And Iosephs childrē which were borne vnto him in Egipte, were two soules: so that all the soules of the house of Iacob which came in to Egipte, were seuentye.

And he sent Iuda before him vnto Ioseph, to shew him the waye to Gosen, ȝ they came in to the lande of Gosen. Then Ioseph bended his charett fast, and wente vp to mete Israel his father vnto Gosen. And whan he sawe him, he fell aboute his neck, ȝ wepte sore vpon his neck. Then sayde Israel vnto Ioseph: Now am I content to dye, for so moch as I haue sene thy face, that thou art yet alyue.

Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren, ȝ to his fathers house: I will go vp, ȝ tell Pharaο, ȝ saye vnto him: My brethrē and my fathers house are come vnto me out of the lande of Canaan, and are keepers of cattell (for they are men that deale with cattell:) their small ȝ greate cattell, and all that they haue, haue they brought with them. Now yf Pharaο call you, and saye: what is youre occupaciō? then ye shal saye: Thy seruauentes are men y haue dealt with catell from oure youth vp hytherto, both we ⁊ oure fathers, that ye maye dwell in the lande of Gosen: for the Egipcians abhorre all keepers of catell.

The xlvij. Chapter.

A THEN came Ioseph, and tolde Pharaō ⁊ sayde: My father and my brethren, their small ⁊ greate catell, ⁊ all y they haue, are come out of y lande of Canaan: ⁊ beholde, they are in the lande of Gosen. And he toke fyue of his brethren. ⁊ presented them vnto Pharaō. Then sayde Pharaō vnto his brethren: What is youre occupaciō? They answered: Thy seruauentes are keepers of catell, we and oure fathers also. And they sayde morouer vnto Pharaō: We are come to dwell with you in the lande, for thy seruauentes haue no pasture for their catell, so sore doth the dertth oppresse the lande of Canaan. Now therefore let thy seruauentes dwell in the lande of Gosen.

B Pharaō sayde vnto Ioseph: Thy father and thy brethren are come vnto the: the lande of Egipte is open before the, let them dwell in the best place of the lande, ⁊ se y they dwell euen in the lande of Gosen. And yf thou knowest that there be men of actiuyte amōge thē, make thē rulers of my catell.

Ioseph brought in Iacob his father also, ⁊ set him before Pharaō. And Iacob thanked Pharaō. But Pharaō axed Iacob: How olde art thou? Iacob sayde: The tyme of my *pylgremage is an hūdreth and thirtie yeares: litle and euell is the tyme of my pilgremage, and attayneth not vnto the tyme of my fathers in their pylgremages. And Iacob thanked Pharaō, and wēte out from him.

C So Ioseph prepared dwellinges for his father and his brethren, ⁊ gaue them a possession in the lande of Egipte, euen in the best place of the lande, namely, in the lande of Raemeses, as Pharaō cōmaunded. And he made prouysion for his father and his brethren, and all his fathers house with bred, euen as yonge children.

There was no bred in all the londe, for the dertth was very sore: so y the lande of Egipte ⁊ the lande of Canaan were famished by y reason of the dertth. And Ioseph brought together all the money that was founde in Egipte and Canaan, for y come that they bought. And he layed vp all the money in Pharaos house.

Now whan money fayled in the lande of Egipte and Canaan, all the Egipcians came vnto Ioseph, ⁊ saide: Geue vs bred. Why suffrest thou vs to dye before y, because we are without money? Ioseph saide: Brynge hither youre catell, so wil I geue you for youre catell, seyng ye are without money. Then brought they their catell vnto Ioseph. And he gaue thē bred for their horses, shepe, oxen and Asses. So he fed them with bred y yeare, for all their catell.

Whan y yeare was ended, they came vnto him the next yeare, ⁊ sayde vnto him: We wil not hyde it from oure lorde, y not onely the money, but all the catell also is spent vnto oure lorde: ⁊ there is nothinge left more for oure lorde, but onely oure body ⁊ oure lande. Wherefore suffrest thou both vs to dye, and oure londe? Take vs and oure lāde for bred, that we and oure lande maye be bonde vnto Pharaō: geue vs sede, that we maye lyue and not dye, ⁊ y the lande become not a wilderness.

So Ioseph toke all the lande of Egipte in for Pharaō: for the Egipcians solde euery man his lande, because y dertth was so mightie vpon them: and so the lōde became Pharaos, with the people that wente out and in at his cities, from one syde of Egipte vnto the other, excepte the prestes londe, that toke he not in: For it was ordened of Pharaō for the prestes, that they shulde eate that which was appoynted them, which he gaue them, therefore they neded not to sell their londes.

Then sayde Ioseph vnto the people: Beholde, I haue taken possession of you and youre lande this daye for Pharaō, Beholde, there haue ye sede, sowe the londe, and of the corne ye shall geue the fiftth parte vnto Pharaō: foure partes shalbe yores, to sowe the londe for youre sustenance, and for youre houses and children.

They sayde: Let vs but lyue, ⁊ fynde grace before the oure lorde, we wyl gladly be Pharaos seruauentes: So Ioseph made thē a lawe vnto this daye ouer the Egipcians londe, to geue Pharaō the fiftth parte, excepte the prestes londe, which was not bonde vnto Pharaō.

So Israel dwelt in Egipte in the londe of Gosen, and had it in possession, and grew and multiplied exceedingly. And Iacob lyued seuentene yere in the lande of Egipte, so that his whole age was an hūdreth and seuē and fourty yeres.

Now whan the tyme came that Israel shulde dye, he called Ioseph his sonne, and sayde vnto him: Yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, * then laye thine honde vnder my thye, y thou shalt shewe mercy and faithfulness vpon me, and not burye me in Egipte, but I will lye by my fathers, and thou shalt carye me out of Egipte, ⁊ burye me in their buryall. He sayde: I wil do as thou hast sayde. But he sayde: † Then swære vnto me. And he swære vnto him. The Israel bowed himself towardes the bed heade.

The xlviii. Chapter.

AFTER this it was tolde Ioseph: Beholde, thy father is sicke. And he toke with him his two sonnes Manasses and Ephraim. Then was it tolde Iacob: beholde, thy sonne Ioseph cometh vnto y. And Israel toke a corage vnto him, ⁊ sat vp vpon y bed, ⁊ sayde vnto Ioseph: The Allmightye God appeared vnto me † at Lus in y lade of Canaan, ⁊ blessed me, ⁊ saide vnto me: Beholde, I wil cause y to growe ⁊ increase ⁊ wyll make a multitude of people of y, ⁊ wil geue this lade vnto thy sede after y for an euerlastinge possession. Therefore shal now thy two sonnes † Manasses ⁊ Ephraim (which were borne vnto the in Egipte, before I came hither vnto the) be myne, like as Ruben ⁊ Simeon. As for those that thou begettest after the, they shal be thine owne. But these shalbe named with the names of thy brethren in their inheritance.

B And whā I came out of Mesopotamia, Rachel dyed by me in the † lande of Canaan, by the waye, whan there was yet but a felde brede vnto Eprath: and I buried her in the waye towardes Ephrath, which now is called Bethleem.

And Israel loked vpon Iosephs sonnes, ⁊ sayde: What are these? Ioseph answered: They are my sonnes, which God hath geuen me here. He sayde: Brynge the hither to me, y I maye blesse the. (For Israels eyes were heuy for age, ⁊ he coude not well se.)

And he brought the vnto him. So he kyssed them, ⁊ embraced the, ⁊ saide vnto Ioseph: Beholde, I haue sene thy face, which I thought not: ⁊ lo, God hath caused me to se thy sede also. And Ioseph toke them from his lappe, and they fell downe to the grounde vpon their face.

And Israel saide vnto Ioseph: Beholde, I dye, ⁊ God shall be with you, ⁊ bryngye you agayne in to y lande of youre fathers. † I haue geuen the a pece of londe, without thy brethren, which I gat with my swerde and my bowe out of the hande of the Amorites.

The xlix. Chapter.

And he commaunded them, and sayde vnto them: I shal be gathered vnto my people, †burye me with my fathers in ſ caue which is in the felde of Ephron the Hethite, in the dubble caue that lyeth ouer against Mamre in ſ lande of Canaā, which Abrahā bought with the felde, of Ephron the Hethite for a possession to burye in. ¶ There buryed they Abrahā ⁊ Sara his wife, there buried they Isaac also ⁊ Rebecca his wife: ⁊ there buried I Lea, in the good of the felde ⁊ of the caue therin, which was bought of the Hethites.

And whan Iacob had ended this commaundement vnto his children, he pluckte his fete together vpon the bed, and died, and was gathered vnto his people. Thē fell Ioseph vpon his fathers face, and wepte, and kyssed him.

Now whan the mournynge dayes were ended, Ioseph spake vnto Pharaos housholde, & sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in youre sight, thē speake vnto Pharao and saie: My father hath taken an oath of me, & sayde: Beholde, I dye, "burye me in myne owne graue, which I dygged for myself in the lāde of Canaan. Therefore wyl I now go vp, and burye my father, and come agayne. Pharao saide: Go thy waye vp, and burye thy father, accordinge as thou hast sworne vnto him.

13 So Ioseph wēte vp, to burye his father. And there wēte with him all Pharaos seruantes y were the elders of his courte, and all y elders of the lande of Egipte, & all Iosephs housholde, and his brethren, and his fathers housholde. Onely their children, shepe & oxen left they in y lāde of Gosen, & toke their iourney vp with him, vpō charettes and horses, and the company was exceedinge greate.

Now whan these came to the playne of Atad y lyeth beyonde Iordane, they made there a very greate and bytter lamentacion, & * he mourned for his father seuē dayes. And whā the people in the lande (the Cananites) sawe the mournynge in the playne of Atad, they sayde: The Egiptians make there greate lamētacion. Therefore is the place called: The lamentacion of the Egiptians, which lyeth beyonde Iordane.

And his children dyd as he had cōmaunded them, <sup>a</sup>and caried him to y lande of Canaan, and buried him in y dubble caue, that Abraham bought with the felde for a possession to bury in, of Ephron y Hethite ouer ageynst Mamre. So Ioseph toke his iourney agayne in to Egipte with his brethren, and with all those that wente vp with him to burye his father, whan they had buried him.

But Iosephs brethrē were afrayed, whā their father was deed, and sayde: Ioseph might happily haue indignacion at vs, and recompense vs all the euell that we dyd vnto him, <sup>e</sup>therefore let they saye vnto him: Thy father commaunded before his death, and sayde: Thus shal ye saye vnto Ioseph: O forgeue thy brethren the offence and their synne, that they dyd so euell vnto the. O forgeue now this trespase of vs the seruantes of thy fathers God. But Ioseph wepte, whan they spake so vnto him.

And his brethren wente, and fell downe before him, and sayde: Beholde, here are we thy seruantes. Ioseph sayde vnto thē: Feare ye not, for I am vnder God. Ye thought euell ouer me, but God hath turned it vnto good, to do as it is come to passe this daye, for the sauynge of moch people. Therefore be not ye now afrayed, I wyl care for you and youre children. And he comforted them, and spake louyngly vnto them.

Thus dwelt Ioseph in Egipte with his fathers house, and lyued an hūdreth and ten yere, <sup>d</sup>and sawe Ephrayms children, vnto y thirde generacion: In like maner the children of Machir the sonne of Manasses, begat children also vpon Iosephs lappe.

And Ioseph sayde vnto his brethren: I dye, and God wyl vyset you, and brynge you out of this lande, to the lande that he sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Therefore toke he an oath of the childrē of Israel, and sayde: Whan God shal vyset you, <sup>f</sup>thē cary my bones frō hence. So Ioseph dyed, whā he was an hūdreth and ten yere olde, and they embawmed him, & layed him in a chest in Egipte.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are  $\hat{y}$  names of the "childrē of Israel, that came with Iacob in to Egipte: euery one came in with his house, Ruben, Simeon, Leui, Iuda, Isachar, Zabulō, Ben Iamin, Dan, Nephtali, Gad and Aser. And of all the soules that came out of the loynes of Iacob, there were seuentie.

As for Ioseph, he was in Egipte all ready. Now whā Ioseph was deed, and all his brethren, and all they that lyued at that tyme, the children of Israel grewe,<sup>b</sup> and increased, and multiplied, and became excedinge mightie, so  $\hat{y}$  the lande was full of them.

B The came there a new kynge ouer Egipte, which knewe nothinge of Ioseph, and sayde vnto his people: Beholde, the people of the children of Israel are many,  $\tau$  mightier then we: Vp, let vs deale wysely with them.  $\hat{y}$  there be not so many of them. For yf there shulde ryse vp eny warre agaynst vs, they might ioyne them selues also vnto oure enemies, and ouercome vs,  $\tau$  so get them out of the lande.

And he set worke masters ouer them, to kepe them vnder with burthens. (For they buylded the cities Phiton and Raemeses, for treasures vnto Pharaō.) But the more they vexed them, the more they multiplied and grew.

C Therefore had they indignaciō at the children of Israel, and the Egipcians compelled the children of Israel without mercy to do seruyce, and made their lyues bytter vnto them with greuous laboure in claye and brycke, and with allmaner of bondage in  $\hat{y}$  felde, and with allmaner of laboure, which they layed vpon them without mercy.

And the kynge of Egipte sayde vnto the mydwuyes of the Hebrueswemen. (Of the which one was called Siphra, and the other Pua:) Whan ye helpe the women of the Hebrues, and se vpon the stole, that it is a sonne, then slaye him: but yf it be a daughter, let her lyue. Neuertheles the mydwuyes feared God,  $\tau$  dyd not as the kinge of Egipte commaunded them, but let the children lyue.

D Then the kynge of Egipte called the mydwuyes, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye this, that ye let the children lyue? The mydwuyes answered Pharaō: The women of the Hebrues are not as the women of Egipte, for they are sturdy women: or euer the mydwuyes come at them, they are deluyered.

Therefore God dealt well with the mydwuyes. And the people multiplied, and became excedinge mightie. And for so moch as the mydwuyes feared God, * he made them houses. Then Pharaō commaunded all his people and sayde: All the sonnes that are borne, cast in to the water, but let all the daughters lyue.

The ij. Chapter.

A ND there went forth a man of the house of Leui,<sup>c</sup> and toke a daughter of Leui. † And the wife concealed and bare a sonne. And whan she sawe  $\hat{y}$  it was a proper childe, she hyd him thre monethes. And whan she coude hyde him no longer, she toke an Arke of redes, and dawbed it ouer with slyme and pitch, and layed the childe therin, and set it amonge the redes by the waters brynke. But his sister stode a farre of, to wete what wolde come of him.

And Pharaos daughter came downe, to wash herself in the water: And hir maydens walked by the water syde: and whan she sawe the Arke amonge the redes, she sent one of hir maydens, and caused it to be fett. And whan she opened it, she sawe  $\hat{y}$  childe: and beholde the babe wepte. Then had she pytie vpon it, and sayde: It is one of the Hebrues children.

Then sayde his syster vnto Pharaos daughter: Shal I go, and call the a nurse of the Hebrues women, to nurse  $\hat{y}$  the childe? Pharaos daughter sayde vnto her: Go thy waye. The mayde wente, and called the childes mother. Then sayde Pharaos daughter vnto her: Take this childe, and nurse it for me, I wyll geue  $\hat{y}$  thy rewarde. The woman toke the childe, and nursed it.

And whan the childe was growne, she brought it vnto Pharaos daughter, and it became hir sonne, and she called him Moses. For she sayde: I toke him out of the water.

Vpon a tyme whan Moses was greate, he wente forth vnto his brethren, and loked vpon their burthens, and sawe, that an Egipcian smote one of his brethren  $\hat{y}$  Hebrues. And he loked rounde aboute him: and whan he sawe that there was no man, he slew the Egipcian, and buried him in the sonde.

The next daye he wente forth also, and sawe two men of the Hebrues stryunge together, and sayde to the vngodly: Wherefore smyttest thou thy neighbour? But he sayde: * Who made the a ruler or iudge ouer vs? Wilt thou slaye me also, as thou slewest the Egipcian? Thē was Moses afraied, and sayde: How is this knowne? And Pharaō herde of it, and sought for Moses, to slaye him. But Moses fled from Pharaō, and kepte him in the lande of Madian, and sat him downe by a wells syde.

The prest Madian had seuen daughters, which came to drawe water, and fylled the troughe, to geue their fathers shepe to drinke. Then came the shepherdes, and droue thē awaye. But Moses gat him vp, and helped them, and gaue their shepe to drinke. And whan they came to Reguel their father, he sayde: How came ye so soone to daie? They sayde: A man of Egipte deluyered vs from y shepherdes, and drew vnto vs, and gaue the shepe to drynke. He sayde vnto his daughters: Where is he? Wherefore let ye the man go, that ye called him not to eate with vs?

And Moses was content to dwell with the man. And he gaue Moses his daughter Zipora, which bare him a sonne, and he<sup>t</sup> called him Gerson, for he sayde: I am become a straunger in a straunge lande. And she bare him yet a sonne, whom he called Elieser, and sayde: The God of my father is my helper, and hath deluyered me from Pharaos hāde.

But after this in processe of tyme, the kynge of Egipte dyed. And the childrē of Israel sighed ouer their laboure, and cried. And their crye ouer their laboure, came before God. And God herde their cōplaynte, & remēbred his couenaunt: with Abraham Isaac and Iacob. And God lokēd vpon the childrē of Israel, and God knew it.

The iij. Chapter.

MOSSES kepte the shepe of Iethro his father in lawe prest of Madian, & droue the shepe on the backsyde of the wyldernes, and came to the mountayne of God, Horeb. And the augell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE appeared vnto him in a flāme of fyre out of the bush. And he sawe that y<sup>e</sup> bush brent with fyre, and yet was not consumed, and saide: I wil go hence, and se this greate sight, why y<sup>e</sup> bush is not brent.

Whan the LORDE sawe, that he wente his waye to se, God called vnto him out of the bush, and sayde: Moses, Moses. He answered: Here am I. He sayde: Come not hither, put thy shues of thy fete,<sup>a</sup> for the place where vpon thou stondest, is an wholly grouēde. And he sayde morouer: I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, y<sup>e</sup> God of Isaac, and the God of Iacob. And Moses couered his face, for he was afraied to loke vpon God.

And the LORDE sayde: I haue sene the trouble of my people in Egipte<sup>b</sup> & haue herde their crye ouer those that oppresse them. I knowe their sorowe, and am come downe to deluyere them from the power of the Egipcians, and to carye them out of that lōde, in to a good and wyde londe, euen in to a londe that floweth with mylke and hony: namely, vnto the place of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuytes & Iebusites. For so moch now as the complaynte of the children of Israel is come before me, & I haue sene their oppression wherwith the Egipcians oppresse them: Go now thy waye therfore,<sup>d</sup> I wil sende the vnto Pharaō, that thou mayest brynge my people the children of Israel out of Egipte. Moses sayde vnto God: Who am I, y<sup>e</sup> I shulde go vnto Pharaō, and brynge the children of Israel out of Egipte?

He sayde: I wyll be with the: & this shall be the token, y<sup>e</sup> I haue sent the. Whan thou hast brought my people out of Egipte, ye shal serue God vpon this mountayne. Moses sayde vnto God: Beholde, whan I come to the childrē of Israel, and saye vnto them: The God of youre fathers hath sent me vnto you, & they saye vnto me: What is his name? what shal I saye vnto them? God saide vnto Moses: I wyl be what I wyll be. And he sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto y<sup>e</sup> children of Israel: I wyl be hath sent me vnto you. And God sayde morouer vnto Moses: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the children of Israel: The LORDE God of youre fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, y<sup>e</sup> God of Iacob hath sent me vnto you, this is my name Go thy waye therfore, and gather the elders of Israel together, and saye vnto them: The LORDE God of youre fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, the God of Iacob hath appeared vnto me, and sayde: I haue vysited you, and sene what is done vnto you in Egipte, and haue sayde: I wil brynge you out of the trouble of Egipte, in to ¶ lande of ¶ Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites ¶ Iebusites: in to a lode ¶ floweth with mylke and hony. ## The iiii. Chapter.

A MOSSES answered, ¶ sayde: Beholde, they shall not beleue me, ner heare my voyce, but shal saye: The LORDE hath not appeared vnto the. The LORDE sayde vnto him: What is ¶, that thou hast in thine hande? He saide a staff. He sayde: Cast it from the vpon the grounde. And he cast it frō him: then was it turned to a serpent. And Moses fled frō it. But ¶ LORDE saide vnto him: Stretch forth thine hande, ¶ take it by the tayle. Then stretched he forth his hande, and toke it, and it became a staff agayne in his hande. Therefore shal they beleue that ¶ LORDE God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac ¶ God of Iacob hath appeared vnto the.

B And the LORDE sayde furthermore vnto him: Thrust thine hāde in to thy bosome.

And he thrust it in to his bosome, ¶ toke it out: beholde, thē was it leper like snowe. And he saide: Put it in to thy bosome agayne. And he put it agayne in to his bosome, ¶ toke it out: beholde, thē was it turned againe as his flesh. Yf they wil not beleue the, ner heare ¶ voyce of the first token, yet shal they beleue the voyce of the seconde token. But yf they wil not beleue these two tokens ner heare thy voyce, then take of the water of the ryuer, and poure it vpon the drye londe: so shall the same water ¶ thou hast takē out of ¶ ryuer, be turned vnto bloude vpō ¶ drye londe.

But Moses sayde: My LORDE, sende whom thou wilt sende. Then was the LORDE very angrie at Moses, and saide: Do not I knowe then, ¶ thy brother Aaron the Leuite is well spoken? And beholde, he shal go forth to mete ¶: ¶ when he seyth the, he shal reioyse from his hert. Thou shalt speake vnto him, ¶ put the wordes in his mouth: ¶ I wil be with thy mouth ¶ his, and teach you what ye shall doo: ¶ he shal speake vnto the people for the. He shal be thy mouth, ¶ thou shalt be his God. And take in thine hande this staff, wherwith thou shalt do tokens.

D Moses wēte, and came agayne vnto Iethro his father in lawe, and sayde vnto him: Let me go (I praye the) that I maye turne agayne vnto my brethrē, which are in Egipte, and se whether they be yet aluye. Iethro sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. The LORDE sayde also vnto him in Madian: Go thy waye, turne againe in to Egipte, for ¶ mē are deed, that sought after thy life. So Moses toke his wife, and his sonnes, and caried them vpon an Asse, ¶ wente againe in to the lande of Egipte, ¶ toke the staff of God in his hande. And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: When thou cōmest agayne in to Egipte, se ¶ thou do all the wonders (before Pharaο) which I haue put in thy hāde. "But I wil hardē his hert, ȳ he shall not let the people go. And thou shalt saie vnto Pharaο: Thus sayeth ȳ LORDE: Israel is my firstborne sonne, ⁊ I saie vnto the: Let my sonne go, ȳ he maye serue me: Yf thou wilt not let him go, <sup>a</sup> then wil I slaye thy firstborne sonne.

¶ And as he was by the waye in the Inne, the LORDE met him, and wolde haue slayne him. Then toke Zipora <sup>a</sup> a stone, and circumcised the foreskynne of hir sonne, and touched his fete, and sayde: A bloody brydegrome art thou vnto me. Thē let he him go. But she sayde: A bloody brydegrome, because of the circumcision.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: Go mete Moses in the wilderness. And he wēte, ⁊ met him on the mount of God, and kyssed him. And Moses tolde Aaron all the wordes of the LORDE, which had sent him: ⁊ all the tokens ȳ he had charged him withall. And they wēte, ⁊ gathered all the elders of the childrē of Israel. And Aaron tolde all ȳ wordes, ȳ the LORDE had spokē vnto Moses: ⁊ dyd the tokens before the people, ⁊ the people beleued. And whan they herde ȳ the LORDE vysited the children of Israel, and loked vpon their trouble, they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

The b. Chapter.

¶ AFTERWARDE wente Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ spake vnto Pharaο: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: let my people go, ȳ they maye kepe holy daye vnto me in the wilderness. Pharaο answered: "What felowe is the LORDE, that I must heare his voyce, and let Israel go? I knowe not the LORDE, nether wil I let Israel go.

They sayde: The God of the Hebrues hath called vs. Let vs go now therfore thre dayes iourney in the wilderness, ⁊ do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God, ȳ there happen not vnto vs pestilēce or sward. Thē sayde ȳ kynge of Egipte vnto thē: Why make ye ȳ people (thou Moses ⁊ Aaron) to leaue their worke? Get you hēce to youre labour. Pharaο saide morouer: Beholde, ȳ people are to many in ȳ lande, and yet wil ye byd them ceasse from their labour.

cōmaunde the workmasters of the people, and their officers, and sayde: Ye shal not gather and geue the people eny more strawe, to burne bryck, as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye. Let them go, and gather them strawe them selues. And the nombre of the brycke which they made yesterdaye ⁊ yeryesterdaye, shall ye laye vpon them neuertheles, and mynish nothinge therof: for they are ydle. Therfore crye they and saye: We wil go, and do sacrifice vnto oure God. Let the men be kepte downe with labour, ȳ they maye haue to do, ⁊ not to turne them selues to false wordes.

Then wente the workmasters of the people ⁊ their officers out, ⁊ spake vnto the people: Thus sayeth Pharaο: There shall no strawe be geuen you, go youre waye youre selues, and get you strawe, where ye can fynde it. But of youre labour there shall nothinge be mynished. Then were the people scatred in all ȳ lande of Egipte, to gather stubble, that they might haue strawe.

And the workmasters haisted them forwarde, ⁊ sayde: Fulfill youre daye worke, like as whan ye had strawe. And the officers of ȳ children of Israel, whom Pharaοs workmasters had set ouer them, were beaten, ⁊ it was saide vnto them: Wherefore haue ye not fulfilled youre appoynted daye worke to daye and yesterdaye, like as in tymes past?

Than wente the officers of the children of Israel, ⁊ cōplayned vnto Pharaο: Wherefore wilt thou deale thus with thy seruantes? Thy seruantes haue no strawe geuen thē, ⁊ yet must we make the brycke that are appoynted vs. And beholde, thy seruantes are beaten, ⁊ thy people are euell intreated. Pharaο sayde: Ye are ydle, ydle are ye, therfore saye ye: we will go, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Go now youre waye therfore, ⁊ worke: there shall no strawe be geuen you, but the nombre of brycke shal ye deliuer.

Then sawe the officers of the children of Israel, ȳ it was not amended, for it was sayde: ye shal mynish nothinge of the daye worke of the brycke. And whan Moses ⁊ Aaron wente from Pharaο, they came forth to mete them, ⁊ sayde vnto them: The LORDE loke vpon you, ⁊ iudge it, for ye haue made the sauoure of vs to synke before Pharaο and his seruantes, and haue geuen them a sward in their handes, to slaye vs.

But Moses came agayne vnto the LORDE, and sayde: LORDE, wherefore dealest thou so euell with this people? Wherefore hast thou sent me? For sence the tyme that I wente in vnto Pharaο, to speake vnto him in thy name, he hath dealt euell with this people, and thou hast not deluyered thy people. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Now shalt thou se, what I will do vnto Pharaο, for thorow a mightie hande must he let them go, thorow a mightie hande must he dryue them from him out of his lande.

The vi. Chapter.

AND God spake vnto Moses, and sayde vnto him: I am  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and I appeared vnto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, an Allmightie God: but \* my name, LORDE, haue I not shewed vnto them: My couenaunt also haue I made with them, that I will geue them the lande of Canaan, the lande of their pilgrimage, wherein they haue bene straungers. Morouer I haue herde the complaynte of the children of Israel, whom  $\hat{y}$  Egipcians oppresse with labour, and haue remembered my couenaunt.

Therefore saye vnto the childre of Israel: I am the LORDE, and wil brynge you out from youre burthens in Egipte, and wil rydd you from youre labour, and wil deluyer you thorow a stretched out arme and greate iudgements, and will receaue you for my people, and wil be youre God: so that ye shal knowe, that I the LORDE am youre God, which brynge you out from the burthen of Egipte, and wil brynge you in to the lande, ouer the which I haue lift vp my hande, to geue it vnto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,  $\hat{y}$  same wil I geue vnto you for a possession. I the LORDE.

Moses tolde this vnto the childre of Israel. But they herkened not vnto him, for very anguysh of sprete, and for sore labour. The spake the LORDE vnto Moses, and sayde: Go thy waye, and speake vnto Pharaο the kynge of Egipte,  $\hat{y}$  he let the childre of Israel go out of his lande. But Moses spake before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and saide: Beholde,  $\hat{y}$  childre of Israel herke not vnto me, how shulde Pharaο the heare me? And I am also of vncircumcised lippes.

So the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and gaue the a commaudemēt vnto the childre of Israel, and vnto Pharaο the kynge of Egipte,  $\hat{y}$  they shulde brynge the childre of Israel out of Egipte.

These are  $\hat{y}$  heades of the house of their fathers. The children of Ruben the first sonne of Israel, are these: Hanoch, Pallu, Hezron, Charni: These are the generacions of Ruben.

The children of Simeon are these: Iemuel, Iamin, Ohad, Iachin, Zophar, and Saul the sonne of the Cananitish woman: These are the generacions of Symeon.

These are the names of the childre of Leui in their generaciōs: Gerson, Kahath and Merari: Leui was an hundreth and seuen and thirtie yeare olde. The children of Gerson are these: Libni and Semei in their generacions. The childre of Kahath are these: Amram, Iezear, Hebron, Vsiel. Kahath was an hundreth and thre and thirtie yeare olde. The children of Merari are these: Maheli and Musi. These are  $\hat{y}$  generacions of Leui in their kynreds.

And Amram toke  $\hat{y}$  his vncles daughter Ichebed to wife, which bare him Aaron and Moses. Amram was an C. and vij. and thirtie yeare olde. The childre of Iezear are these: Korah, Nepheg, Sichri. The children of Vsiel are these: Misael, Elzaphan, Sithri.

Aaron toke Elizaba  $\hat{y}$  daughter of Aminadab Nahassons sister to wife, which bare him Nadab, Abihu, Eleasar, Ithamar.

The childre of Korah are these: Assir, Elkana, and Abiassaph. These are  $\hat{y}$  generaciōs of  $\hat{y}$  Korahites. Eleasar Aarons sonne toke one of the daughters of Putiel to wife, which bare him Phineas. These are the heades amonge the fathers of the generacions of the Leuites.

This is  $\hat{y}$  Aaron and Moses, vnto whom  $\hat{y}$  LORDE sayde: Brynge  $\hat{y}$  childre of Israel out of the lande of Egipte with their armies. It is they (namely Moses and Aaron)  $\hat{y}$  spake vnto Pharaο the kynge of Egipte,  $\hat{y}$  they might brynge the children of Israel out of Egipte. The same daie spake  $\hat{y}$  LORDE vnto Moses in  $\hat{y}$  lande of Egipte, and sayde: I am  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, speake thou vnto Pharaο  $\hat{y}$  kynge of Egipte, all  $\hat{y}$  I saye vnto  $\hat{y}$ . he answered before ſ LORDE: Beholde, I am of vncircumcised lippes,<sup>a</sup> how shall Pharao thē heare me?

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I haue made the a God ouer Pharao, ⁊ Aarō thy brother shal be thy prophet. Thou shalt speake all ſ I cōmaūde ſ: but Aaron thy brother shal speake vnto Pharao, ſ he maye let the childrē of Israel go out of his lande. <sup>b</sup>Neuertheles I wil harden Pharaos hert, ſ I maye multiplie my tokens ⁊ wonders in the lande of Egipte. And Pharao shal not heare you, ſ I maye shewe my hande in Egipte, ⁊ brynge myne armyes, euen my people the childrē of Israel out of ſ lande of Egipte, by greate iudgmētēs. And ſ Egipcians shal knowe, ſ I am the LORDE, whan I shal stretch out my hande vpon Egipte, and brynge the children of Israel out from amonge them.

Moses and Aaron dyd as the LORDE cōmaūded them. And Moses was foure score yeaere olde, ⁊ Aaron thre ⁊ foure score yeaere olde, whan they spake vnto Pharao. And ſ LORDE sayde vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron: Whan Pharao sayeth vnto you: Shew youre wonders, then shalt thou saye vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, and cast it before Pharao, ⁊ it shal turne to a serpent.

Then wēt Moses ⁊ Aaron in vnto Pharao, ⁊ dyd as the LORDE cōmaūded them. And Aaron cast his staff before Pharao ⁊ before his seruantes, ⁊ it turned to a serpēt. Then Pharao called for ſ wyse men ⁊ Sorcerers. And the Sorcerers of Egipte also dyd like wyse with their Sorceries, and euery one cast his staff before him, ⁊ they turned vnto serpentes. But Aarons staff deuoured their staues. So Pharaos hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto them, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The hert of Pharao is hardened, he refuseth to let ſ people go. Get ſ vnto Pharao in the mornynge, beholde, he shal come vnto ſ water, mete thou him vpō the waters brynke, ⁊ take ſ staff which turned to a serpēt, in thine hande, ⁊ saye vnto him: The LORDE God of the Hebrues hath sent me vnto the, ⁊ sendeth ſ worde: <sup>c</sup>Let my people go, that they maye serue me in the wyldernes: but hither to thou woldest not heare.

Therefore thus sayeth the LORDE: Hereby shalt thou knowe, ſ I am ſ LORDE. Beholde, with the staff ſ I haue in my hande, wil I smyte the water which is in ſ ryuer, ⁊ it shal be turned in to bloude: so that the fishes in the ryuer shall dye, ⁊ the ryuer shall stynte: ⁊ it shall greue the Egipcians to drynke of ſ water of the ryuer.

And ſ LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saye vnto Aaron: Take thy staff, ⁊ stretch out thine hāde ouer ſ waters of Egipte, ouer their ryuers ⁊ brokes ⁊ pondes, ⁊ ouer all water poles, ſ they maye be turned to bloude, ⁊ that there maye be bloude in all ſ lande of Egipte, both in vessels of wodd and stone.

The viij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go thy waye to Pharao, ⁊ speake vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Let my people go, ſ they maye serue me: Yf thou wilt not let thē go, beholde, I wil smyte all ſ borders of thy lōde with frogges, so ſ the ryuer shal sereaue with frogges: these shal clymme vp, ⁊ come in to thine house, in to thy chamber, where thou slepest, vpon thy bed, and in to the houses of thy seruantes, amonge thy people, in to thine ouens, and vpon thy dowe: and the frogges shall come vp vpon the, and vpon thy people, and vpon all thy seruantes. <sup>e</sup>And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saie vnto Aaron: Stretch forth thine hande with thy staff ouer the streames, ⁊ ryuers, ⁊ poudes, and let frogges come vpon the londe of Egipte. And Aaron stretched his hāde ouer the waters in Egipte, ⁊ there came vp frogges, so ſ̄ the londe of Egipte was couered.

The Sorcerers also dyd likewyse, with their Sorcerirs, ⁊ caused frogges to come vp ſ̄ lōde of Egipte. Thē called Pharaō for Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: * Praye the LORDE for me, ſ̄ he maye take awaye the frogges fro me ⁊ fro my people, ⁊ I will let ſ̄ people go. ſ̄ they maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

C Moses sayde: Hauē thou the honoure before me, ⁊ appoynte me, whā I shal praye for ſ̄, for thy seruantes and for thy people: ſ̄ the frogges maye be dryuen awaye frō the ⁊ frō thy house, ⁊ remayne onely in the ryuer. He sayde: Tomorrow. He sayde: Euen as thou hast sayde, ſ̄ thou mayest knowe, ſ̄ there is none like vnto the LORDE oure God: And the frogges shal be takē from the, ⁊ from thy house, from thy seruantes, ⁊ from thy people, ⁊ remayne onely in the ryuer.

So Moses ⁊ Aaron wōte from Pharaō. ⁊ Moses cried vnto the LORDE for the appoyntment ouer the frogges, which he had promysed vnto Pharaō. And ſ̄ LORDE dyd as Moses sayde. And the frogges dyed in ſ̄ houses, in ſ̄ courtes, ⁊ vpon ſ̄ felde: ⁊ they gathered thē together, here an heape, ⁊ there an heape, ⁊ the lande stanke of them. But whan Pharaō sawe ſ̄ he had gotten breth, his hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto thē, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

D And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saie vnto Aaron: Stretch out thy staff, ⁊ smyte the dust vpon the earth, ſ̄ there maye be lyse in the whole lōde of Egipte. They dyd so. And Aaron stretched out his hande with his staff, ⁊ smote the dust vpon the earth, ⁊ there were lyse vpon men and vpon catell: All the dust of the lande was turned vnto lyse in all the lande of Egipte.

The Sorcerers also assayde likewyse with their Sorcerirs ſ̄ they might brynge forth lyse, but they coude not. And ſ̄ lyse were vpon men ⁊ catell. Then sayde ſ̄ Sorcerers vnto Pharaō: It is the fygner of God. But Pharaos hert was hardened, ⁊ he herkened not vnto thē, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

E And ſ̄ LORDE saide vnto Moses: Get ſ̄ vp to morrow by tymes, ⁊ stonde before Pharaō:

beholde, he wil go vnto the water, ⁊ speake thou vnto him: Thus saith ſ̄ LORDE: let my people go, ſ̄ they maye serue me: yf not, beholde, I wil cause cruell wormes (or flyes) to come vpon the, thy seruantes, thy people, ⁊ thy house, so ſ̄ all the Egiptians houses, ⁊ the felde, and what theron is shall be full of cruell wormes: ⁊ the same daye wil I separate the londe of † Gosen, wheriu my people are, so ſ̄ no cruell worne shalbe there, that thou mayest knowe, that I am ſ̄ LORDE in the myddest of the earth. And I wil set a deluyeraunce betwene my people and thynne. Tomorrow shal this token come to passe.

And the LORDE dyd so. And there came perous cruell wormes in to Pharaos house, in to his seruantes houses, ⁊ vpon all the londe of Egipte: and the londe was marred with noysome wormes.

Thē called Pharaō for Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: Go youre waye, ⁊ do sacrifice vnto youre God in ſ̄ londe. Moses sayde: It is not mete, ſ̄ we shulde so do, so shulde we offer ſ̄ abhominacion of ſ̄ Egiptians vnto the LORDE oure God. Beholde, yf we shulde offer the abhominacion of ſ̄ Egiptians before their eyes, shulde they not stone vs? Thre dayes iourney will we go in the wyldernes, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God † like as he hath sayde vnto vs.

Pharaō sayde: I wil let you go, ſ̄ ye maie do sacrifice vnto the LORDE youre God in the wyldernes (onely ſ̄ ye go no farther) ⁊ praye for me. Moses sayde: Beholde, whan I am come forth from ſ̄, I wil praye vnto ſ̄ LORDE, ſ̄ the cruell wormes maye be taken from Pharaō, ⁊ from his seruantes, ⁊ frō his people, euen tomorrow: onely disceame me nomore, that thou woldest not let the people go to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

And Moses wōte out from Pharaō, and prayed vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE dyd as Moses sayde, ⁊ toke awaye the cruell wormes from Pharaō, from his seruantes, and from his people, so ſ̄ there remayned not one. But Pharaō hardened his hert euē then also, and let not ſ̄ people go.

The ix. Chapter.

A THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go in to Pharaō, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of ſ̄ Hebrues:

* 3 Re. 13. b. Exod. 9. f. and 10. c. Acto. 8. c.

† Ge. 47. g. † Exod. 3. c.

let my people go, y they maye serue me. Yf thou wilt not, but holde them longer, beholde, the hande of the LORDE shal be vpon thy catell in the felde, vpon horses, vpon Asses, vpon Camels, vpon oxen, vpon shepe with a very sore pestilence. And y LORDE shall make a diuysion betwene the catell of the Israelites and the Egipcians, so y there shal nothinge dye of all that the children of Israel haue. And y LORDE appoynted a tyme, and sayde: Tomorrow shal the LORDE do this vpon earth.

And the LORDE dyd the same on the morow. And there dyed of all maner of catell of the Egipcians: but of y catell of y childre of Israel there dyed not one. And Pharaos sent thither, and beholde, there was not one of the catell of Israel deed. But Pharaos hert was hardened, so y he let not y people go. Then sayde y LORDE vnto Moses and Aaron: Take youre handes full of aszshes out of the fornace, and let Moses sprenkle it towarde heauen before Pharao, that it maye be dust in all the lande of Egipte, and that there maye be sores and blaynes vpon men and vpon catell in all the lande of Egipte.

And they toke aszshes out of y fornace, and stode before Pharao, and Moses sprenkled it towarde heauē. Then were there sores and blaynes vpon men and vpon catell, so that the Sorcerers might not stode before Moses by reason of the sores. For there were sores vpon the Sorcerers as well as vpon all the Egipcians. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, so that he herkened not vnto them, euē as the LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Get the vp tomorrow by tynes, and stonde before Pharao, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of the Hebrues: let my people go, y they maye serue me, els wyl I at this tyme sende all my plagis in to thine hert, and vpon thy seruantes and vpon thy people: that thou mayest knowe, y there is none like me in all londes. For I will now stretch out my hande, and smyte the and thy people with pestilence, so y thou shalt be roted out from the earth. Yet haue I *stered y vp for this cause, euen to shew my power vpon y, and that my name might be declared in all londes.

Thou holdest my people yet, and wilt not let them go, beholde, tomorrow aboute this tyme

wyl I cause a mightie greate hayle to rayne, such as hath not bene in the londe of Egipte, sence the tyme that it was grouded, hither to. And now sende thou, and saue thy catell, and all y thou hast in the felde: for all men and catell that shalbe founde in the felde, and not brought in to the houses, yf the hayle fall vpon them, they shall dye. Now who so feared the worde of the LORDE amonge Pharaos seruantes, caused his seruantes and catell to flye in to the houses: but loke whose hertes regarded not the worde of y LORDE, left their seruantes and catell in the felde.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Stretch out thy hande towarde heauē, that it maye hayle vpon all the lande of Egipte, vpon men, vpon catell, and vpon all herbes of the felde in the lande of Egipte. So Moses stretched out his staff towarde heauen, and the LORDE caused it to thonder and hayle, so y the fyre ranne alonge vpon the earth. Thus the LORDE hayled and rayned vpon the londe of Egipte, so that the hayle and fyre wente so horribly together, as neuer was in all the lade of Egipte, sence the tyme that there were people therein. And the hayle smote the whole land of Egipte, all that was vpon y felde, both men and catell, and smote all the herbes vpon the felde, and brake all the trees vpon y felde, saue onely in the lande of Gosen, where the childre of Israel were, there it hayled not. Then sent Pharao and called for Moses and Aaron, and sayde vnto them: Now haue I synned, y LORDE is righteous, but I and my people are vngodly. Yet praye ye vnto the LORDE, that the thonder and hayle of God maye cease, then wyl I let you go, that ye shal tary here no longer. Moses sayde vnto him: Whan I am come out of the cite, I wyl stretch out myne handes vnto the LORDE, so shal the thonder cease, and there shal be nomore hayle: that thou mayest knowe, that the earth is the LORDES. But I knowe, y both thou and thy seruantes feare not yet the LORDE God. Thus the flax and the barlye were smytten: for the barlye was shot vp, and y flax was boulded: but the wheate and y rye were not smytten, for they were late sowed.

So Moses wente from Pharao out of y cite, and stretched out his hādes vnto y LORDE. And y thōder and the hayle ceased, and the rayne dropped not vpon the earth. But whā Pharao sawe ȳ the rayne ⁊ thonder ⁊ hayle ceased, he synned agayne, and herdened his hert, he ⁊ his seruantes. So Pharaos hert was hardened, ȳ he let not the childrē of Israel go, euē as the LORDE had sayde by Moses.

The r. Chapter.

AND the LORDE saide vnto Moses: Go in vnto Pharaos, for I haue hardened his hert ⁊ the hertes of his seruantes, ȳ I might do these my tokēs amonge thē, ⁊ that thou mightest shewe it in the eares of thy children ⁊ of thy childers children, what I haue done in Egipte, and how I haue shewed my tokens amonge thē, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE.

So Moses ⁊ Aaron wente in vnto Pharaos, ⁊ spake vnto him: Thus sayeth ȳ LORDE God of the Hebrues: How longe refuset thou to submyt thy self vnto me, to let my people go, ȳ they maye serue me? Yf thou wilt not let my people go, beholde, to morrow wil I cause greshoppers to come vpon all places, ȳ they maye couer the lande, so ȳ the lande can not be sene, ⁊ they shal eate vp ȳ is left you ⁊ was delyuered frō the hayle: ⁊ shal eate vp all youre grene trees vpon the felde, ⁊ shal fyll thy house, all thy seruantes houses, ⁊ all the Egiptians houses: such as thy fathers ⁊ thy fathers fathers haue not sene, sens the tyme ȳ they were vpon earth vnto this daye. And he turned him, ⁊ wente out from Pharaos. Then saide Pharaos seruantes vnto him: How longe shall we be snared after this maner? Let the men go, that they may serue ȳ LORDE their God. Knowest thou not yet, ȳ Egipte is destroyed? Moses ⁊ Aaron were brought agayne to Pharaos, which saide vnto them: Go youre waye, ⁊ serue ȳ LORDE youre God. But who are they ȳ shall go? Moses sayde: We wil go with yonge ⁊ olde, with sonnes and daughters, with shepe and oxē: for we haue a feast of the LORDE. He sayde vnto thē: Let it be so, the LORDE be with you: Shulde I let you go ⁊ youre childrē also? loke that ye haue not some myschefe in hāde. Not so, but go ye that are men, and serue the LORDE, for that was youre desyre. And they thrust them out from Pharaos.

THē saide ȳ LORDE vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande ouer ȳ londe of Egipte, for the *greshoppers, ȳ they maye come vpō ȳ londe of Egipte, ⁊ eate vp all the herbes in the londe, with all ȳ escaped the hayle. Moses stretched out his staff ouer ȳ lande of Egipte, ⁊ the LORDE brought an east wynde in to the londe all ȳ daye ⁊ all ȳ night, ⁊ in the mornynge, the east wynde brought the greshoppers. And they came ouer the whole lande of Egipte, and lighted in all places of Egipte, so excedinge many, that before tyme there were neuer soch, nether shalbe here after: for they couered the londe, and made it darcke. And they ate vp all the herbes in ȳ londe, ⁊ all the frutes vpon the trees which remayned from ȳ hayle, ⁊ left no grene thinge behinde in the trees ⁊ herbes vpon the felde in all the lande of Egipte.

Then Pharaos called for Moses ⁊ Aaron in all ȳ haist, ⁊ saide: I haue synned against the LORDE youre God, ⁊ agaynst you: for geue me my synne this once also, ⁊ pray the LORDE youre God, ȳ he maye take awaye fro me this death onely. And he wōte out from Pharaos, ⁊ prayed vnto the LORDE. Thē the LORDE turned a maruelous strōge west wynde, and toke vp the greshoppers, ⁊ cast them in to the reed see, so that there was not one left in all the quarters of Egipte. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, that he let not the childrē of Israel go. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hāde towarde heauen, that it be so darck in the londe of Egipte, ȳ it maye be felt. And Moses stretched out his hāde towarde heauen, thē was there a thicke darcknesse in all the londe of Egipte thre dayes, so ȳ in thre dayes no mā sawe another, nor rose vp from ȳ place where he was. But with the childrē of Israel there was light in their dwellinges. Then Pharaos called for Moses, ⁊ sayde: Go youre waye ⁊ serue the LORDE: onely leaue youre shepe ⁊ youre oxen here: let youre childrē go with you also. Moses sayde: Thou must geue vs offringes and brent offeringes, that we maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE oure God. Oure catell shal go with vs, and there shal not one hooffe be left behynde: for we must take therof for the seruyce of the LORDE oure God. Morouer we knowe not wherwithall we shal serue ȳ LORDE, tyll we come thither. But the LORDE hardened Pharaos hert, ȳ he wolde not let them go. And Pharaoy sayde vnto him: Get the hence fro me, ⁊ beware, that thou come nomore in my sight: For loke what daie so euer thou comest in my sight, thou shalt dye. Moses answered: Eue as thou hast sayde, I wil come no more in thy sight.

The xi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I wil yet brynge a plage vpon Pharaoy and Egipte: after y<sup>e</sup> shal he let you go from hence, ⁊ shal not onely let all go, but also dryue you hence. Therefore saye now vnto the people, y<sup>e</sup> every man borowe of his neighbour, ⁊ euery woman of hir neighbouresse, Iewels of syluer ⁊ golde: "for the LORDE shal geue the people fauoure in the sight of y<sup>e</sup> Egipcians." And Moses was a very greate man in the lande of Egipte, in y<sup>e</sup> sight of Pharaos seruantes, ⁊ in the sight of the people.

I And Moses sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: At mydnight wil I go out in the lande of Egipte, ⁊ all y<sup>e</sup> first borne in the lande of Egipte shall dye: from Pharaos first sonne (y<sup>e</sup> syteth vpon his seate) vnto the first sonne of the mayde seruaunte which is behynde y<sup>e</sup> myll: ⁊ all the first borne amonge the catell: ⁊ there shalbe a greate crie in all the lande of Egipte, soch as neuer was, ner shalbe. But amonge all the childre of Israel there shall not a dogg quatch with his tonge, fro men vnto catell, y<sup>e</sup> ye maye knowe, how y<sup>e</sup> the LORDE hath put a differēce betwixte Egipte ⁊ Israel. Thū shal all these thy seruantes come downe vnto me, ⁊ fal at my fote, ⁊ saye: Get the out, thou ⁊ all the people that are vnder the. After that wyl I departe. And he wēte frō Pharaoy with a wroth full displeasure. The LORDE saide vnto Moses: Pharaoy herkeneth not vnto you, y<sup>e</sup> many wōders maye be done in y<sup>e</sup> lāde of Egipte. And Moses ⁊ Aaron dyd all these wōders before Pharaoy: but y<sup>e</sup> LORDE hardened his hert, y<sup>e</sup> he wolde not let y<sup>e</sup> childre of Israel go out of his lande.

The xij. Chapter.

THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron in the londe of Egipte: This moneth shal be with you y<sup>e</sup> first moneth ⁊ at it ye shall begynne the monethes of the yere. Speake ye vnto all the congregacion of Israel, ⁊ saye: Vpon y<sup>e</sup> tenth daie of this moneth let euery one take a * lābe (or a kydd) where a housholder is, to euery house a lābe. But yf the housholde be to few for a lambe, thē let him ⁊ his neighbour y<sup>e</sup> is next vnto his house, take it acordinge to the nombre of y<sup>e</sup> soules, and counte to the lambe, what euery man maye eate. But it shal be a lambe without blemish, a male, ⁊ of a yere olde. From amonge the lambes ⁊ goates shal ye take it.

And ye shal kepe it vnto y<sup>e</sup> fourtene daie of the moneth. And euery man of the congregacion of Israel shal slaye it aboute the eueninge. And they shal take of his bloude, and stryke it on both the syde postes of the dore, and on the vpperdore post of the house, that they eate it in. And so shal they eate flesh y<sup>e</sup> same night, roasted at the fyre, ⁊ vneleuended bred, and eate it with sowre sawse. Ye shal not eate it rawe, ner sodden with water, but onely roasted at the fyre, his heade with his fete and pertenaunce. And ye shal leaue nothyng of it ouer vntyll the mornynge: but yf eny thinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, ye shal burne it with fyre.

Of this maner shal ye eate it: Ye shal be gyrded aboute youre loynes, and haue youre shues vpon youre fete, and stauies in youre handes, and ye shal eate it with haist: for it is y<sup>e</sup> LORDES Passeouer. For in the same night wil I go thorow the londe of Egipte, ⁊ smyte all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte, from men vnto catell, ⁊ vpon all the goddes of Egipte wyl I do execucion. Euen I the LORDE. And the bloude shal be youre token, vpon the houses wherin ye are: y<sup>e</sup> when I se the bloude, I maye passe ouer, and that the plage happen not vnto you, to destroye you, when I smyte the londe of Egipte.

And this daie shall ye haue for a remembrance, and ye shall kepe it holy for a feast vnto the LORDE, ye ⁊ all youre posterities, for a perpetuall custome. Seuen dayes shall ye eate vneleuended bred: namely, vpon the first daie shal ye leaue of with leuended bred in youre houses. Who so euer eateth leuended bred from the first daie vnto y<sup>e</sup> seuenth that soule shall be roted out from Israel. The first daie shall be called holy amonge you, and the seuenth also. No maner of worke shall ye do therin, saue what belongeth to the meate for all maner of soules, that onely maye ye do for you. And kepe you to leuended bred.

For euen vpon that same daye wil I brynge youre armies out of the londe of Egipte, therfore shall ye and all youre posterities kepe this daye for a perpetuall custome. Vpon the fourtene daye of the first moneth, at euen, shall ye eate vleuended bred, vnto the one and twentye daye of the moneth, at euen: so that there be no leuended bred founde in youre houses seuen dayes. For who so euer eateth leuended bred, that soule shall be roted out from the congregacion of Israel, whether it be a straunger or borne in the londe. Therfore eate no leuended bred, but onely vleuended bred in all youre dwellynges.

¶ And Moses called all the Elders of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Chose out, and take to euery housholde a shepe, and kyll Passeouer vnto the LORDE; and take a bunch of ysopo, and dyppe it in the bloude in the basen, and stryke it vpon the vpperposte and vpon the two syde postes, and none of you go out at the dore of his house vntyll ȝ mornynge, for the LORDE wyll go aboute and plage the Egiptians. And whan he seyth the bloude vpon the vpperposte, and vpon the two syde postes, he wyl passe ouer by the dore, and not suffre the destroyer to come in to youre houses to plage. Therfore kepe this custome for the and thy children for euer.

And whan ye be come in to ȝ londe that the LORDE shal geue you, (as he hath sayde) then kepe this seruyce.* And whan youre children saye vnto you: What seruyce is this, that ye haue? Ye shal saye: It is the sacrifice of the LORDES Passeouer, which passed ouer by the children of Israel in Egipte, whan he plagued the Egiptians, and saued oure houses. Then the people bowed them selues, and worshipped. And the children of Israel wente and dyd, as the LORDE had commaunded Moses and Aaron.

¶ And at mydnight the LORDE smote all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte: from Pharaos first sonne (which sat vpon his seate) vntyll the first sonne of the presoner that was in the preson, and all the firstborne of the catell. Then Pharaos arose ȝ same night, and all his seruantes, and all the Egiptians, 7

there was a greate crye in Egipte: for there was no house wherin there was not one deed.

And he called for Moses and Aaron in ȝ night, and sayde: Get you vp, and departe out fro my people, ye and the children of Israel: go youre waye, and serue the LORDE, as ye haue sayde: and take youre shepe and youre oxen with you, 7 as ye haue sayde, and departe, and blesse me also. And the Egiptians were feare vpon the people, to dryue them haistely out of the londe, for they saide: we are all but deed.

And the people toke the rawe dowe, before it was leuended (for their foode) bounde in their clothes vpon their shulders. And the children of Israel had done 7 as Moses sayde, and borrowed lewels of syluer and golde, and clothes of the Egiptians: the LORDE also had geuen the people fauoure in the sight of the Egiptians, that they lent them, and so they spoyled the Egiptians.

¶ Thus ȝ children of Israel toke their iourney from Raemes<sup>d</sup> to Suchoth, 7 sixe hundreth thousande men of fote, besyde childre. There wente with them also moch comō people, and shepe, and oxen, and exceedinge many catell.

And of the rawe dowe that they brought out of Egipte, they baked vleuended cakes: for it was not leuended, in so much as they were thrust out of Egipte, and coude not tary: neither had they prepared them eny other meate.

The tyme ȝ the children of Israel dwelt in Egipte, is foure hondreth and thirtie yeares. Whan the same were ended, the whole hoost of the LORDE wente out of the londe of Egipte in one daye. Therfore shall this night be kepte vnto the LORDE, because he brought them out of the londe of Egipte: And the children of Israel shall kepe it vnto the LORDE, they and their posterities.

¶ And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses and Aaron: This is the maner of the keypyng of Passeouer: There shal no straüger eate of it. But who so is a bought seruant let him be circumcysed, 7 then eate therof. A straunger and an hyred seruaüt shal not eate of it. In one house shal it be eatē. Ye shal cary none of his flesh out of the house, and 7 ye shal not breake a bone of him. The whole congregacion of Israel shal do it.

But yf there dwel a straunger with the, ⁊ wil holde Passeouer vnto the LORDE, let him circuncyse euery one that is male, and then let him first come, and do it, and be as one that is borne in the londe: for there shal no vncircumcysed eate therof. One maner of lawe be vnto him ⁊ is borne in the londe, ⁊ vnto the strainger ⁊ dwelleth amōge you. And all the childre of Israel dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses ⁊ Aaron. So vpō one daye the LORDE brought the childre of Israel out of the lōde of Egipte with their armyes.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ saide: "Sanctifie vnto me euery firstborne, ⁊ breaketh all maner of Matrices amonge the childre of Israel, both of men ⁊ catell: for they are myne. Then saide Moses vnto ⁊ people: Thinke vpō this daye, in the which ye are gone out of Egipte from the house of bōdage, how ⁊ ⁊ LORDE brought you out frō thence with a mightie hāde. Therefore shall ye eate no sowre dowe. This daye are ye gone out, euē in ⁊ moneth of Abib.

Now whā ⁊ LORDE hath brought ⁊ in to ⁊ lande of ⁊ Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Heuites ⁊ Iebusites, which * he sware vnto thy fathers to geue ⁊ (euen a londe that floweth with mylke ⁊ hony) then shalt thou kepe this seruyce in this moneth. Seuē dayes shalt thou eate vneleuended bred, ⁊ vpon the seuenth daye is the LORDES feast: therfore shalt thou eate vneleuended bred seuē dayes, that there be no sowre dowe, ner sowed bred sene in all thy quarters.

And thou shalt tell thy sonne at the same tyme, ⁊ saye: Because of that, which ⁊ LORDE dyd for me, whan I departed out of Egipte. Therefore shalt it be a signe vnto ⁊ in thine hande, and a token of remembraunce before thine eyes, that the lawe of ⁊ LORDE maye be in thy mouth, how that ⁊ LORDE brought the out of Egipte with a mightie hande: Therefore kepe this maner yearly in his tyme.

Whan the LORDE now hath brought ⁊ in to ⁊ lande of the Cananites (as he hath sworne vnto the and thy fathers) ⁊ hath geuen it the, then shalt thou sunder out vnto the LORDE all that breaketh the Matrice, and firstborne amonge thy catell, such as is male.

The firstborne of the Asse shalt thou bye out with a shepe: but yf thou redeme it not, then breake his neck. All the firstborne of men amonge thy children shalt thou redeme.

And whan thy childre axeth the to daie or tomorrow: What is this? Thou shalt saye vnto him: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte from the house of bondage with a mightie hande: for whan Pharaο was loth to let vs go, the LORDE slew all the firstborne in the lande of Egipte, from the firstborne of men vnto ⁊ firstborne of the catell: therfore offer I vnto the LORDE all that breaketh ⁊ Matrice, beyngē a male, and ⁊ firstborne of my children I redeme. And this shal be a signe vnto the in thine hande, and a token to thinke vpon before thine eyes, how that the LORDE brought vs out of Egipte with a mightie hande.

Now whan Pharaο had let ⁊ people go, God led them not the waye thorow the lōde of the Philistynes, which was ⁊ nexte: for he thoughte: The people might repēt, whā they se warre, and so turne in agayne in to Egipte. Therefore led he the people aboute, euen the waye thorow the wyldernes by ⁊ reed see. And the childre of Israel wente harnesssed out of the londe of Egipte. And Moses toke Iosephs bones with him, † for he toke an oath of the children of Israel, and sayde: God will surely vyset you, therfore cary awaye my bones with you from hence.

So they toke their iourney frō Suchoth, ⁊ pitched their tētes in Ethā in ⁊ edge of the wyldernes. And ⁊ LORDE wēte before thē by daye in a piler of a cloude, to lede thē ⁊ right waye: and by night in a piler of fyre, that he might shewe thē light to walke both by daie and night. The piler of the cloude departed neuer from the people by daye, and the pyler of fyre departed not from thē by night.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and byd them that they turne aboute, ⁊ pitch their tentes before the valley of Hyroth, betwixte Migdol ⁊ the see towarde Baal Zephō, and there pitch ⁊ tentes right ouer by the see. For Pharaο shall saye of the children of Israel: They can not tell how to get out of the londe, the wyldernes hath shut them in. And I wyll harden his hert, ¶ he shal folowe after them, ¶ I wil get me honoure vpon Pharao, and vpon all his power. And ¶ Egipcians shal knowe, ¶ I am the LORDE. And they dyd so.

And sayde vnto Moses: Were there no graues in Egyp̃te, ¶ thou hast brought vs away to dye in the wyldernes? Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs, that thou hast caried vs out of Egyp̃te? Is not this it, that we sayde vnto the in Egyp̃te? Leauē of, ¶ let vs serue the Egipcians: for it were better for vs to serue the Egipcians, then to dye in the wyldernes? Moses sayde vnto the people: Feare you not, stonde styll, and beholde, what a saluacion the LORDE shall shewe vpon you this daye: ¶ for these Egipcians whom ye se this daye, shall ye neuer se more for euer: the LORDE shal fight for you, onely quyetē youre selues.

it vpon the drye grounde. Beholde, I wyll harden ¶ hert of the Egipcians, ¶ they shall folowe after you. Thus wyl I get me honoure vpon Pharao, ¶ vpon all his power, vpon his charettes and horsmen: and the Egipcians shal knowe, that I am ¶ LORDE, whan I haue gotten me honoure vpon Pharao, vpon his charettes, and vpon his horsmen.

Then the angell of God ¶ wente before the armies of Israel, remoued, and gat him behyde them: and the cloudy piler remoued also from before them, and stode behinde thē and came betwixte the armies of the Egipcians and the armies of Israel. It was a dareke cloude, and gaue light that night, so that all the night longe these and they coude not come together.

F But ¶ LORDE saide vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande ouer the see, that ¶ water maye come agayne vpon the Egipcians, vpon their charettes, and horsmen. Then Moses stretched out his hande ouer the see, and the see came agayne before daye in his course and strength, and the Egipcians fled agaynst it. Thus the LORDE ouerthrew them in the myddest of the see, ¶ so that the water came agayne, and couered ¶ charettes and horsmen, and all Pharaos power which folowed after them in to the see, so that there remayned not one of them. Thus the LORDE delyuered Israel in y daye from the hande of the Egipcians. And they sawe the Egipcians deed vpon y see syde, and the greates hande y the LORDE had shewed vpon the Egipcians. And y people feared y LORDE, and beleued him, and his seruaut Moses.

The xv. Chapter.

THEN sange Moses and the childre of Israel this songe vnto the LORDE, and sayde:

I will syng vnto y LORDE, for he hath done gloriously, horse & charet hath he ouer throwne in the see.

The LORDE is my strength, and my songe, and is become my saluacion.

This is my God, I wil magnifie him: He is my fathers God, I wil exalte him.

The LORDE is the right man of warre, LORDE is his name. The charettes of Pharaos & his power, hath he cast in to the see.

His chosen captaynes are drowned in the reed see, y depe hath couered them: they fell to the grounde as a stone.

Thy right hande (O LORDE) is glorious in power: thy right hade (O LORDE) hath smytten the enemies.

And with thy greates glory thou hast destroyed thine aduersaries: thou sentest out thy wrath, & it cosumed them, euen as stobble.

In the breth of thy wrath the waters fell together, the floudes wente vpon a heape: The depes plomped together in y myddest of the see.

B The enemye thought: I will folowe vpon them, and ouertake them, and deuyde y spoyle, and coole my mynde vpon them.

I wil drawe out my swerde, and my hande shal destroye them.

Thou blewest with thy wynde, the see couered them, and they sancke downe as leed in the mightie waters.

LORDE, who is like vnto the amonge y goddes? Who is so glorious in holynes, fear full, laudable, and doinge wonders?

When thou stretchedest out thy right hande, the earth swallowed them vp.

Thou of thy very mercy hast led this people, whom thou hast delyuered, and with thy strength thou hast brought them vnto the dwellynge of thy Sanctuary.

When y nacions herde this, they raged, sorowe came vpon the Philistynes.

Then were y prynces of Edom afrayed, tremblunge came vp y mightie of Moab, all the indwellers of Canaan waxed faynte harted.

Let feare and drede fall vpon them thorow thy greates arme, that they maye be as styll as a stone, tyll thy people (O LORDE) be gone thorow, tyll thy people whom thou hast gotten, be gone thorow.

Brynge them in, and plante them vpon the mountayne of thy enheritaunce, vnto y place that thou hast made for thyne owne dwellynge: euen to thy tēple (O LORDE) which thy handes haue prepared.

The LORDE shal be kyng for euer & euer. For Pharaos wente in to the see with horses, and charettes, and horsmen, and the LORDE made the see fall agayne vpon them.

But the children of Israel wete drye thorow the myddest of the see.

And Miriam the prophetisse, Aarons sister, toke a tymbrell in hir hande, and all the women folowed out after her with timbrells in a daunce. And Miriam sange before thē: O let vs syng vnto the LORDE, for he hath done gloriously, man and horse hath he ouer throwne in the see.

Moses caused the children of Israel to departe out from the reed see, vnto the wyldernes of Sur, & they wente thre dayes in y wildernes, y they founde no water. Then came they to Marath, but they coude not drinke y water for bytternes, for it was very bytter. Therefore was it called Marah, (y is bytternes.) Then y people murmured against Moses, & sayde: What shal we drynke? And Moses cried vnto y LORDE, which shewed him a tre: this he put in y water, thē was it swete.

There he made thē a statute, and a lawe, and tempted them, and sayde: Yf thou wilt herken vnto the voyce of y LORDE thy God, & do that which is right in his sighte, and geue eare vnto his commaundementes, & kepe all his statutes, then wyl I laye vpon y none of the sicknesses, that I layed vpon Egipte, for I am the LORDE thy surgione.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND they came vnto Elin, where there were twolve welles of water, and seuentie palme trees, and there they pitched by  $\text{f}$  water syde. From Elin they toke their journey, and the whole congregacion of the children of Israel came in to the wyldernes of Sin (which lyeth betwene Elin and Sinai) vpon the fyftene daye of the seconde moneth, after that they were departed out of the londe of Egipte. And  $\text{f}$  whole multitude of the children of Israel \* murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron in  $\text{f}$  wildernes, and saide vnto them: Wolde God we had dyed in the londe of Egipte by the hande of the LORDE, whan we sat by  $\text{f}$  flesh pottes, and had bred ynough to eate: for ye haue brought vs out in to this wyldernes, to cause this whole multitude dye of honger.

The sayde  $\text{f}$  LORDE vnto Moses: beholde I wyl rayne you bred from heauen, and let the people go out, and gather daylie, what they nede, that I maye proue whether they walke in my lawe or not. But vpon the sixte daye they shal prepare thē selues, that they maye brynge in twyse as moch as they gather daylie.

B Moses and Aaron saide vnto all the children of Israel: At euen ye shall knowe, that the LORDE hath brought you out of the lōde of Egipte, and in the mornynge shall ye se the glory of the LORDE: for he hath herde youre grudginges agaynst the LORDE. For what are we, that ye grudge agaynst vs?

\*Moses sayde morouer: At euen shall the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, and in the mornynge bred ynough: because  $\text{f}$  LORDE hath herde youre grudginges, that ye haue grudged agaynst him. For what are we? Your murmuringe is not agaynst vs, but against the LORDE. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Speake vnto the whole multitude of  $\text{f}$  children of Israel: Come forth before the LORDE, for he hath herde youre murmuringes.

C And whyle Aaron spake thus vnto the whole congregacion of the childrē of Israel, they turned them towarde the wyldernes: and beholde, the glory of the LORDE appeared in a cloude, and the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I haue herde the murmuringe of  $\text{f}$  children of Israel. Tell them: At euen shall ye haue flesh to eate, and in the mornynge shal ye be fylled with bred,  $\pi$  ye shall knowe, that I am the LORDE youre God.

And at euen the quayles came vp, and couered the tentes: and in the mornynge the dewe laye rounde aboute the tentes. And whan the dew was fallē, beholde, there laye a thinge in the wildernes, thynne and small, as the horefrost vpon the grounde.

And whan the children of Israel sawe it, they saide one to another:† This is Mā. For they wyl not what it was. But Moses sayde vnto them: It is the bred that  $\text{f}$  LORDE hath geuē you to eate. This is it that  $\text{f}$  LORDE hath commaunded: Euery one gather for himself as moch as he eateth, and take a Gomor for euery heade, accordinge to the nombre of the soules in his tente.

And the children of Israel dyd so, and gathered some more, some lesse. But whan it was measured out with  $\text{f}$  Gomor,  $\text{b}$  be that gathered moch, had not the more: and be  $\text{f}$  gathered litle, wanted nothinge, but euery one gathered for himself, as moch as he ate. And Moses sayde vnto them: Let no mā leaue ought therof vntyll the mornynge. But they harkened not vnto Moses. And some left of it vntill the mornynge. Then waxed it full of wormes and stanke. And Moses was angrie at them.

And euery mornynge they gathered for them selues, as moch as euery one ate: but as soone as it was whote of the Sonne, it melted awaye. And vpon the sixte daye they gathered twyse as moch of bred, two Gomors for one. And all the rulers of the congregaciō came in, and tolde Moses. And he sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath sayde: Tomorow is the Sabbath of the holy rest of the LORDE: loke what ye wil bake, that bake: and what ye wyl seeth, that seeth and that remayneth ouer, let it remayne,  $\text{f}$  it maye be kepte vntyll the mornynge. And they let it remayne tyll the morow, as Moses commaunded. Then stanke it not, nether was there eny worme therin. The sayde Moses: Eate that to daye, for to daye is  $\text{f}$  Sabbath of the LORDE, to daye shal ye fynde none in the felde. Sixe dayes shall ye gather it, but the seuenth daye is the Sabbath, wherin there shal be none.

But vpon the seuenth daye there wente out some of the people to gather, and founde nothinge. Then sayde  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE vnto Moses:  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  How longe refuse ye to kepe my commaundementes and lawes? Beholde,  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE hath geuen you the Sabbath, therefore vpon the sixte daye he geueth you bred for two dayes: therfore let euery man now byde at home, and noman go forth of his place vpon the seuenth daye.

$\text{\textcircled{f}}$  So the people rested vp  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  seuenth daye. And the house of Israel called it Man, and it was like Coriander seede, and whyte,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$   $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  had a taist like symnels with hony.

And Moses sayde: This is it that  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE hath commaunded: Fill a Gomor therof to be kepte for youre posterities,  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  they maye se the bred, wherewith I fed you, whan I brought you out of  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  lande of Egipte. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Take a cruse, and put a Gomor full of Man therein,  $\text{\textcircled{c}}$  and laye it vp before the LORDE, to be kepte for youre posterities, as the LORDE commaunded Moses. So Aaron layed it vp there for a testimony to be kepte.

$\text{\textcircled{d}}$  And the children of Israel ate man fourtye yeares, tyll they came vnto a lande, where people dwelt: euen vntyll they came to  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  borders of the lande of Canaan ate they Man. A Gomor is the tenth parte of an Ephā.

And they chode with Moses,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  sayde: Geue vs water,  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  we maye drynke. Moses sayde vnto thē: Why chydye ye with me? Wherefore tōtpe ye  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE? But whan the people thyrsted there for water, they murmured agaynst Moses,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  sayde:  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  Wherefore hast thou caused vs to come out of Egipte? to let vs, oure children, and oure catell dye of hunger?

$\text{\textcircled{b}}$  Moses sayde vnto the LORDE, and sayde: What shal I do with this people? They are all most ready to stone me. The LORDE saide vnto him: Go before the people,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  take some of the elders of Israel with  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$ , and take in thine hande thy staff, wherewith thou smotest the water, and go thy waye: Beholde,  $\text{\textcircled{c}}$  I wyl stonde there before the vpon a rock in Horeb, there shalt thou smyte the rocke, so shall there water runne out, that the people maye drynke. Moses dyd so before the elders of Israel.  $\text{\textcircled{d}}$  Then was that place called Massa Meriba, because of the chydyinge of the children of Israel, and because they tempted  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE, and sayde: Is the LORDE amonge vs, or not?

Then came Amaleek,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  fought agaynst Israel in Raphidim. And Moses sayde vnto Iosua: Chose vs out men, go out,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  fight against Amaleek, tomorrow wil I stōde vpō the toppe of the hyll,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  haue  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  staff of God in my hande. And Iosua dyd as Moses bade him,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  fought agaynst Amalek. Moses  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  Aaron  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  Hur wente vp to  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  toppe of the hyll. And whā Moses helde vp his hāde, Israel had the victory: but whan he let downe his hande, Amalek had the victory.

But Moses hādes were heuy, therfore toke they a stone,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  layed it vnder him, that he might syt vpon it. And Aaron  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  Hur stayed vp his hādes, the one vpon the one syde, and the other vpon  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  other syde. So his handes were stedfast vnto  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  Sonne wente downe. And Iosua discomfited Amalek,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  his people thorow the edge of the swerde.

And  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Wryte this for a remēbraunce in a boke,  $\text{\textcircled{a}}$  cōmytte it vnto  $\text{\textcircled{y}}$  eares of Iosua:  $\text{\textcircled{c}}$  for I wyl rote out Amalek from vnder heauen, so that he shall nomore be remembred. And Moses byulde an altare vnto the LORDE, and called it:  $\text{\textcircled{d}}$  The LORDE Nissi, for he sayde: The battayll of the LORDE shalbe agaynst Amalek thorow an hande vnder the defence of God from childe to chilles childe.

And the other was called Eliaser, for he sayde: The God of my fathers hath bene my helpe, and hath deluyered me from Pharaos swerde.

Now whā Iethro Moses father in lawe, and his sonnes and his wife came vnto him in the wyldernes by the mount of God, where he had pitched his tent, he sent worde vnto Moses: I Iethro thy father in lawe am come vnto the, and thy wife and both hir children with her. Then wente Moses forth to mete him, and dyd obeysaūce vnto him, and kyssed him. And whan they had saluted ech other, they wente in to the teute.

B Then Moses tolde his father in lawe all that the LORDE had done vnto Pharao and the Egipcians for Israels sake, and all the traouyle that had happened them by ſ waye, and how the LORDE had deluyered them. Iethro reioysed ouer all ſ good that the LORDE had done for Israel, ſ he had deluyered them from the hāde of the Egipcians. And Iethro sayde: Praise be the LORDE, which hath deluyered you from the hande of the Egipcians and of Pharao, (and) that knoweth how to deluyer his people from the Egipcians hande. Now I knowe, that the LORDE is greater thē all goddes, because they dealt proudly with them. And Iethro toke brentofferinges, and offered vnto God. Then came Aaron and all ſ elders of Israel to eate bred with Moses father in lawe before God.

C On the next morow sat Moses to iudge the people, and the people stode rōude aboute Moses from the mornyng vntyll ſ euen. But whan his father in lawe sawe all that he dyd with the people, he sayde: What is this, that thou doest with the people? Wherefore syttest thou alone, and all ſ people stonde rounde aboute from the morning vntyll the euen? Moses answered him: The people come to me, ⁊ axe counsell at God: for whan they haue eny thinge to do, they come vnto me, that I maye iudge betwixe euery one ⁊ his neyghboure, and shewe them the statutes of God, and his lawes.

But loke out amonge all the people, for honest men, that feare God. such as are true, ⁊ hate couetousnes: make these rulers ouer them, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they maye allwaye iudge the people. But where there is eny greate matter, <sup>d</sup> that they brynge the same vnto the, and iudge the small causes them selues: so shall it be lighter for the, yf they beare the burthen with the. Yf thou shalt do this, then mayest thou endure the thinge that God chargeth the withall, and all this people maie go peaceably vnto their place.

<sup>e</sup> Moses herkened vnto the voyce of his father in lawe, and dyd all that he sayde. And he chose honest men out of all Israel, and made them heades ouer the people, some ouer thousandes, ouer hundredes, ouer fiftie, and ouer ten, that they might allwaye iudge the people. As for soch causes as were herde, they brought them vnto Moses, and iudged the small matters them selues. So Moses let his father in lawe departe in to his owne londe.

And Moses wente vp vnto God.

<sup>a</sup> And the LORDE called vnto him out of the mount, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the house of Iacob, and tell the children of Israel: Ye haue sene what I haue done vnto the Egipcians, and how I haue borne you vpon Aegles wynges, ⁊ brought you vnto my self. <sup>c</sup> Yf ye wyll harken now vnto my voyce, and kepe my couenaunt, ye shal be myne owne before all people: for the whole earth is myne: and ye shall be vnto me <sup>a</sup> a presterly kingdome, and an holy people. 33 Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and layed before them all these wordes, that the LORDE had commaunded. And all the people answered together, and sayde: *All that the LORDE hath sayde, wyl we do.

And Moses tolde the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE agayne. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I wyl come vnto the in a thicke cloude, that the people maye heare my wordes, which I speake vnto the, and beleue the for euer. And Moses shewed the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go vnto the people, and sanctifie the to daye and tomorrow, y they maye wash their clothes, and be ready agaynst the thirde daye: for vpon the thirde daye shall the LORDE come downe vpon mount Sinai before all the people. And set markes rounde aboute the people, and saye vnto them: Bewarre, that ye go not vp in to y mount, ner touch y border of it. † For who so euer toucheth y mouit, shal dye y death. There shal no haue touch it, but he shall either be stoned, or shot thorow: whether it be best or man, it shal not lyue. When the horne bloweth, then shal they come vp vnto the mounte.

34 Moses wente downe from the mount vnto the people, and sanctified them. And they washsed their clothes. And he sayde vnto them: Be ready agaynst the thirde daye, and no man come at his wife.

Yf his master haue geue him a wife, ⁊ she haue borne him sonnes or daughters, the shal the wife and ‡ children be the masters, but he shall go out alone. Neuertheles: yf the seruauit saye: I loue my master, and my wife and children, I wil not go out fre: then let his master brynge him before the Goddes, and holde him to the dore or post, and bore him thorow the eare with a botkin, and let him be his seruauit for euer.

Yf a man sell his daughter to be an hand mayde, then shal she not go out as the men seruantes. But yf she please not hir master, and he haue not married her, then shal he let her go fre: but to sell her vnto a straunge people he hath no auctorite, for so moch as he hath dyspyed her. Yf he promyse her vnto his sonne, then shal he do vnto her after the lawe of daughters. But yf he geue him another wife, then shall he mynyshe nothinge of hir fooode, rayment, and dewtye of mariage. Yf he do not these thre, then shal she go out fre, and paye nothinge.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND he sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto the LORDE thou ¶ Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seuetie elders of Israel, ¶ worshipe afare of. But let Moses onely come nye vnto the LORDE, and let not them come nye, and let not the people also come vp with him.

Moses came and tolde the people all the wordes of the LORDE, ¶ all the lawes. Then answered all the people with one voyce, and sayde: ¶ All ¶ wordes that the LORDE hath sayde, wyl we do.

Then wrote Moses all the wordes of ¶ LORDE, ¶ gat him vp by tymes in the mornyng, ¶ buylded an altare vnder ¶ mount with twolue pilers, according to the twolue trybes of Israel: ¶ sent twolue yonge mē of the children of Israel, to offere burntofferynges, and peace offerynges theron of bullockes vnto the LORDE.

And Moses toke the half parte of the bloude, and put it in a basen, the other half sprenkled he vpon the altare: ¶ toke the boke of ¶ couenaunt, ¶ cried in the eares of the people. And whan they had sayde: All ¶ the LORDE hath sayde, wil we do, ¶ herken vnto him: ¶ Moses toke the bloude, ¶ sprenkled it vpon the people, ¶ sayde: Beholde, this is ¶ bloude of the couenaunt that the LORDE maketh with you vpon all these wordes.

Then wente Moses ¶ Aaron, Nadab ¶ Abihu, ¶ the seuentie elders of Israel vp, ¶ sawe ¶ God of Israel. Vnder his fete it was like a stone worke of Saphyre, ¶ as the fashion of heauē, whā it is cleare, ¶ he put not his hāde vpo the pryncipall of Israel. And whan they had sene God, they ate ¶ dronke.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: ¶ Come vp vnto me vpon the mount, ¶ remaine there,
 ¶ I maye geue the tables of stone, ¶ ¶ lawe ¶

The xrv. Chapter.

AND ſ LORDE talked with Moses ⁊ ſayde: <sup>a</sup>Speake vnto ſ childrē of Iſrael, ſ they geue me an Heue offerynge, ⁊ take the ſome of euery man, that hath a fre wyllynge hert therto. And this is the Heue-offerynge that ye ſhal take of them: Golde, ſyluer, brasse, yalowe ſylke, ſcarlet, purple, whyte twyned ſylke, goates hayre, reed ſkynnes of rammes, doo ſkynnes, Fyrre tre, oyle for lampes, ſpyces for the anoyntyng oyle, and for ſwete incense. Onix ſtones and ſet ſtones for the ouerbody cote and for the breſtſlape.

And they ſhall make me a Sanctuary, that I maie dwell amonge them. Like as I ſhal ſhewe ſ a patrone of the Habitacion, and of all the ornautes therof, ſo ſhall ye make it.

Make an Arke of Fyrre tre two cubytes ⁊ a half longe, a cubyte ⁊ a half brode, and a cubyte ⁊ an half hye: ſhalt thou ouerleye with pure golde within and without, ⁊ make an hye vpo it a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and caſt foure rynges of golde, ⁊ put them in the foure corners of it, ſo that two rynges be vpon the one ſyde, and two vpon the other ſyde. And make ſtaues of Fyrre tre, and ouer laye them with golde, and put them in the rynges alonge by the ſydes of the Arke, to beare it withall: and they ſhal abyde ſtyll in the rynges, ⁊ not be takē out. And in ſ Arke thou ſhalt laye the wyneſſe, that I wyl geue the. Thou ſhalt make a Mercyſeate alſo of pure golde, two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte ⁊ a half brode.

And thou ſhalt make two Cherubyns of beaten golde vpo both ſ endes of the Mercyſeate, ſ the one Cherub maye be vpon the one ende, ⁊ the other vpon the other ende, ⁊ ſo to be two Cherubyns vpon the endes of the Mercyſeate. And the Cherubyns ſhall ſprede out their wynges ouer an hye, ſ they maye couer ſ Mercyſeate with their wynges: ⁊ ſ either of their faces maye be right ouer one agaynſt another, and their faces ſhal lōke vnto the Mercyſeate.

And thou ſhalt ſet ſ Mercyſeate aboute vpon the Arke. And in the Arke thou ſhalt laye the wyneſſe, ſ I ſhal geue the. <sup>c</sup>From ſ place wyl I teſtifie vnto ſ, and talke with the, namely, from ſ <sup>d</sup>Mercyſeate (betwixte the two Cherubyns) which is vpon the Arke of wyneſſe, of all that I wyl cōmaunde ſ vnto the children of Iſrael.

<sup>e</sup>Thou ſhalt make a table alſo of Fyrre tre, two cubites longe, and one cubyte brode, and a cubyte and a half hye, and ouerlaye it with pure golde, and make a crowne of golde rounde aboute it, and an whope of an hāde brede hye, and a crowne of golde vnto ſ whope rounde aboute.

And vnto it thou ſhalt make foure rynges of golde, on the foure corners in the foure fete of it: harde vnder the whope ſhall ſ rynges be, to put in ſtaues and to beare the table with all: and thou ſhalt make the ſtaues of Fyrre tre, ⁊ ouerlaye them with golde, ſ the table maye be borne therewith.

Thou ſhalt make alſo his diſzſhes, ſpones, pottes, and flat peeces of pure golde, to poure out and in. <sup>f</sup>And vpon the table thou ſhalt all waye ſet ſhewbred before me.

Morouer thou ſhalt make a candelſticke of fyne beaten golde, <sup>g</sup>where vpon ſhall be the ſhaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, and floures. Sixe braunches ſhall proceade out of the ſydes of the candelſticke, out of euery ſyde thre braunches. Euery braunch ſhal haue thre cuppes, (like allmondes) thre knoppes, and thre floures. And thou shalt make seuen lampes aboute there on, that they maye geue light one ouer agaynst another, and snofflers and out quencheres of pure golde. Out of an hundreth pounce weight of pure golde shalt thou make it, with all this apparell. * And se that thou make it after the patrone that thou hast sene in the mount.

The xxvi. Chapter.

THE habitation shalt thou make of ten curteynes, of whyte twyned sylke, of yalowe sylke, of scarlet and purple. Cherubyns shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke. The length of one curteyne shalbe eight and twenty cubytes & bredth foure cubytes: and all the ten shalbe like, and shalbe coupled fyue and fyue together, one vnto the other. And thou shalt make loupes of yalowe sylke by the edge of euery curtayne, where they shalbe coupled together, that there maye be euer two and two fastened together vpon their edges: fiftie loupes vpon euery curteyne, that one maye fasten the other together. And thou shalt make fiftie buttons of golde, wherwith the curteynes maye be coupled together, one to the other, that it maye be one couerynge.

Thou shalt make a couerynge also of goates heyer for a tente ouer the habitation, <sup>a</sup> of eleuen curteynes. The length of one curteyne shalbe thirtie cubytes, the bredth foure cubytes. And all the eleuen shalbe alike greate: fyue shalt thou couple together by the selues, & sixe also by them selues, & thou mayest double the sixte curteyne in the fore front of the Tabernacle. And vpon euery curteyne thou shalt make fiftie loupes vpon the edges of them, that they maie be coupled together by the edges. And fiftie buttons of brasse shalt thou make, and put the buttons in to the loupes, that the tent maye be coupled together, and be one couerynge.

As for the remnaunt of the curteynes of the tente, thou shalt let the halfe parte hange ouer behynde & tēte, vpon both the sydes a cubyte longe, & the resydue maye be vpon the sydes of the Tabernacle, & couer it vpon both the sydes.

Besydys this couerynge thou shalt make a couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes. And aboue this a couerynge of doo skynnes.

Thou shalt make bordes also for the habitation, of Fyrre tre, which shall stonde: one borde shalbe ten cubytes longe, & a cubyte & a half brode. Two fete shal one borde haue, that one maye be set by the other.

Thus shalt thou make all the bordes for & Tabernacle: Twentye of them shal stōde towarde the south, which shal haue fourtye sokettes of syluer vnder them, two sokettes vnder euery borde for his two fete.

Likewyse vpon the other syde towarde the north there shall stonde twentye bordes also, and fourtye sokettes of syluer, two sokettes vnder euery borde.

But behynde the habitation towarde & west thou shalt make sixe bordes, and two bordes mo for the two corners of the habitation, that euery one of them both maye be coupled from vnder vp with his corner borde, and aboue vpon the heade to come eauen together with a clāpe: so that there be eight bordes with their syluer sokettes, wherof there shalbe sixtene, two vnder euery borde.

And thou shalt make barres of fyrrre tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes vpon the other syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes behynde & Tabernacle towarde the west. And the barres shalt thou shute thorow & myddest of the bordes, and fastē alltogether from & one corner to & other. And thou shalt ouerlaye the bordes with golde, and make their rynges of golde, that the barres maye be put therin. And the barres shalt thou ouerlaye with golde, and so shalt thou set vp the Tabernacle, according to & fashion as thou hast sene vpon & mount.

And thou shalt make a vayle of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke. And Cherubyns shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke, and shalt hange it vpon foure pilers of Fyrre tre which are ouerlayed with golde, hauynge knoppes of golde, and foure sokettes of syluer. And the vayle shalt thou fasten with buttons, and set the Arke of wytnesse within the vayle, that it maye be vnto you a difference betwixte the holy and the Most holy.

¶ And thou shalt set the Mercy seate vpon the Arke of wytnesse in the Most holy. But set the table without the vayle, and the candlestick ouer agaynst y<sup>e</sup> table vpon y<sup>e</sup> south syde of the Tabernacle, that the table maie stonde on the north syde.

And in the dore of the Tabernacle thou shalt make an hanginge, of yalow sylke, purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sylke. And for the same hanginge thou shalt make fyue pilers of Fyrre tre, overlayed with golde, with knoppes of golde. And shalt cast fyue sokettes of brasse for them.

The xxviii. Chapter.

But vpon the west syde the bredth of y<sup>e</sup> courte shal haue an hanginge of fiftie cubites longe, & ten pilers vpon ten sokettes. Vpō the east syde also shal the bredth of the courte haue fiftie cubytes, so that the hangynge haue vpon one syde fyftene cubites, and thre pilers vpō thre sokettes: And vpon y<sup>e</sup> other syde fyftene cubytes also, and thre pilers vpō thre sokettes.

And in the courte gate there shalbe an hangynge twenty cubytes brode, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, wrought with needle worke, and foure pilers vpon their foure sokettes. All the pilers rounde aboute the courte shal haue syluer whopes, & syluer knoppes, & sokettes of brasse. And the length of y<sup>e</sup> courte shal be an hūdreth cubytes, the bredth fiftie cubytes, the heygth fyue cubytes, of whyte twyned sylke and y<sup>e</sup> sokettes therof shalbe of brasse. All y<sup>e</sup> vessels also of the habitacion to all maner seruyce, and all the nales of it, and all the nales of the courte shalbe of brasse.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ AND thou shalt take vnto the Aaron thy brother and his sonnes frō amonge the childrē of Israel, that he maye be my prest: namely Aaron & his sonnes Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar: & thou shalt make holy clothes for Aarō thy brother, honorable and glorious, & shalt speake vnto all them that are wise of hert, whom I haue fylled with the sprete of wysdome, that they make garmentes to Aaron for his consecracion, that he maye be my prest.

These are y<sup>e</sup> garmentes which they shal make: a brestlappe, an ouerbody cote, a tunycke, an albe, a myter and a girdell. Thus shal they make holy garmentes for thy brother Aarō and his sonnes, that he maye be my prest. They shal take therto golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke.

yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke. And thou shalt take two Onix stones, and graue in them the names of the children of Israel. Syxe names vpon the one stone, and the sixe other names vpon the other stone acordinge to the order of their age. This shalt thou do by the stonegrauers that graue signettes, so that ſ stones with the names of the children of Israel to be set rounde aboute with golde: and thou shalt put them vpon the two shulders of the ouer body cote, that they maye be stones of remembrance for the children of Israel, that Aaron maye beare their names vpon both his shulders before the LORDE for a remembrance.

C Thou shalt make hokes of golde also, and two wrethē cheynes of pure golde, and shalt fasten them vnto the hokes.

The brestlappe of iudgment shalt thou make of broderd worke, euen after the worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke. Foure square shall it be and dubble, an hande bredth longe, and an handebredth brode. And thou shalt fill it with foure rowes full of stones. Let the first rowe be a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The seconde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyamonde. The thirde: a Ligurius, an Achatt, and an Amethyst. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix, and a Iaspis. In golde shall they be sett in all the rowes, and shal stonde acordinge to ſ twolue names of the children of Israel, grauen of the stonegrauers, euery one with his name acordinge to the twolue trybes.

D And vpon the brestlappe thou shalt make wrethen cheynes by ſ corners of pure golde, and two golde rynges, so, that thou fastē the same two rynges vnto two edges of the brestlappe, and put the two wrethē cheynes of golde in the same two rynges, that are in two edges of the brestlappe. But the two endes of ſ two wrethen cheynes shalt thou fasten in the two hokes vpon the ouerbody cote one ouer agaynst another.

And thou shalt make two other rynges of golde, and fasten them vnto ſ other two edges of ſ brestlappe, namely to ſ borders therof, wherwith it maye hange on the ynsyde vpon the ouerbody cote. And yet shalt thou make two rynges of golde, and fasten them vpon the two edges beneth to the ouerbody cote, vpon the outsyde one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together. And the brestlappe shall be fastened by his rynges vnto the rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalow lace, that it maye lye close vpon the ouerbody cote, and that the brestlappe be not lowsed from the ouerbody cote.

Thus shall Aaron beare the names of the children of Israel in ſ brestlappe of iudgment vpon his hert. whan he goeth in to the Sanctuary, for a remembrance before the LORDE allwaye. And in the brestlappe of iudgment thou shalt put * light and perfectnesse, that they be vpon Aarōs hert, whan he goeth in before the LORDE, and that he maye beare the iudgment of the children of Israel vpon his hert before the LORDE allwaye.

F Thou shalt make the tunyke also to the ouerbody cote all of yalow sylke, and aboue in the myddest there shal be an hole, and a bonde folden together rounde aboute the hole, that it rente not. And beneth vpon the hemme thou shalt make pomgranates of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple rounde aboute, and belles of golde betwixte the same rounde aboute: that there be euer a golden bell and a pomgranate, a golden bell and a pomgranate rounde aboute the hemme of the same tunyke. And Aaron shall haue it vpon him whā he mynistreth, that the sōde therof maye be herde, whan he goeth out and in at the Sanctuary before the LORDE, that he dye not.

Thou shalt make a foreheade plate also of pure golde, and graue therin (after the workmanshope of the stone grauer): the holynes of the LORDE, & with a yalow lace shalt thou fasten it vnto the fore front of the myter vpon Aarons fore heade, ſ Aaron maie so beare ſ synne of the holy thinges, which the childrē of Israel halowe in all their giftes and Sanctuary. And it shall be allwaye vpon his fore heade, that he maye reconeyle them before the LORDE.

G Thou shalt make an albe also of whyte sylke, and a myter of whyte sylke, and a gyrdle of needle worke.

And for Aarons sonnes thou shalt make cotes, gyrdles and bonetes, honorable and glorious, and shalt put them vpon thy brother Aaron and his sonnes, and shalt anoynte them, and fyll their handes, and consecrate them, that they maye be my prestes. Aud thou shalt make them linnen breches, to couer the flesh of their preuities, from the loynes vnto the thyes. And Aaron and his sonnes shall haue them on, when they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or go vnto the altare to mynister in the Holy, that they beare not their synne, and dye. This shalbe a perpetual custome for him, and his sede after him.

The xxij. Chapter.

A THIS is it also, that thou shalt do vnto them, that they maye be consecrated prestes vnto me. <sup>a</sup>Take a yonge bullocke, and two rammes without blemish, vneleuened bred, ⁊ vneleuened cakes myxte with oyle, and wafers of swete bred tempered with oyle: Of wheate floure shalt thou make them all, and put them in a maunde, ⁊ brynge them in the maunde, with the bullocke ⁊ two rammes.

And thou shalt brynge Aaron ⁊ his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, ⁊ wash them with water, ⁊ take the garmentes, and put vpon Aaron the albe and the tuncyle, ⁊ the oner body cote, ⁊ the brestlappe to ⁊ ouer body cote, ⁊ shalt gyrdle him on the out syde vpon the ouer body cote, and set the myter vpon his heade, and the holy crowne vpon the myter: and shalt take the anoyntinge oyle, and poure it vpon his heade, and anoynte him.

B Thou shalt brynge forth his sonnes also, ⁊ put the albes vpon them, and gyrdle both Aaron ⁊ them with gyrdles, ⁊ set the bonettes vpon their heades, that they maye haue the presthode for a perpetuall custome.

And thou shalt fyll the hādes of Aaron and his sonnes, and brynge forth the bullocke before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. *And Aaron and his sonnes shall laye their hādes vpon the heade of the bullocke, and thou shalt sleie the bullocke before the LORDE, at the dore of the tabernacle of wytnesse, and shalt take of his bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare with thy fynger, and poure all the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare.

<sup>b</sup>And thou shalt take all the fat that couereth the bowels and the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is aboute them, and burne them vpon the altare. But the bullockes flesh, skynne and donge, shalt thou burne with fyre vnto the hoost: for it is a synneofferynge.

The one ramme shalt thou take also, and Aaron with his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon his heade. Then shalt thou sleie him, and take of his bloude, and sprenkle it vpon the altare rounde aboute. But the ramme shalt thou deuyde in peces, and wash his bowels and his legges, and laye them vpon the peces and the heade, and burne the whole ramme vpon the altare: for it is a burnt-offerynge, and a swete sauoure of the sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

As for the other ramme, thou shalt take him, and Aaron with his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon his heade, and thou shalt slaye him, and take of his bloude, and put it vpon the tyype of the right eare of Aaron and his sonnes, and vpon ⁊ thombe of their right handes, and vpon the greate too of their right fete, and thou shalt sprenkle the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, and shalt take of the bloude vpon the altare and the anoyntinge oyle, and sprenckle it vpon Aaron and his vestymentes, vpon his sonnes and their vestymentes. So shall he and his clothes, his sonnes and their clothes be consecrated.

<sup>d</sup>Then shalt thou take the fat of the ramme, the rompe, and the fatt that couereth ⁊ bowels, the net vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fatt that is aboute them, and the right shulder (for it is a ramme of cōsecracion) and a symnel of bred, and an oyled cake, and a wafer out of the maunde of the vneleuened bred ⁊ that stondesth before ⁊ LORDE, and put all in to the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waue it vnto the LORDE. The take it out of their handes, and burne it vpon the altare for a burnt offeringe, to be a swete sauoure vnto ⁊ LORDE. For it is the LORDES sacrifice.

And the holy garmentes of Aaron shall his sonnes haue after him, that they maie be anoynted therin, ⁊ ⁊ their handes maye be fylled. <sup>a</sup>Loke which of his sonnes shalbe prest in his steade, the same shal put them on seuē dayes, that he maye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to mynister in the Sanctuary.

But yf eny of the flesh of the consecracion, and of the bred remaine vntyll the mornynge, thou shalt burne it with fyre, and not let it be eaten, for it is holy. And thus shalt thou do with Aaron and his sonnes all that I haue commaunded ⁊. Seuen dayes shalt thou fylle their handes, and offer a bullocke daylie for a synne offeringe, because of them ⁊ shalbe reconciled. And thou shalt halowe the altare, whan thou reconcylest it: ⁊ shalt anynte it, that it maye be consecrated. Seuen dayes shalt thou reconcyte the altare, ⁊ consecrate it, that it maye be an altare of the Most holy. Who so wyl touch the altare, must be consecrated.

wyl dwell amonge the children of Israel, ⁊ wyl be their God: so ⁊ they shal knowe, how that I am the LORDE their God, which brought them out of the londe of Egipte, that I might dwell amonge them, euen I the LORDE their God.

The xxx. Chapter.

THOU shalt make also an incense altare <sup>f</sup>to burne incense, of Fyre tre, a cubyte longe ⁊ brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hye with his hornes, ⁊ shalt ouerlaye it with pure golde, the rofe ⁊ the walles of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therof, ⁊ a crowne of golde shalt thou make rounde aboute it, and two golde rynges on ether syde vnder the crowne, that there maie be staues put therin, to beare it with all.

The staues shalt thou make of Fyre tre also, and ouerlaye thē with golde: and shalt set it before the vayle, that hangeth before the Arke of wytnesse, and before the Mercy seate ⁊ is vpon the wytnesse, from whence I wyl proteste vnto the. And Aaron shal burne swete incense theron euery mornynge, whā he dresseth the lampes. In like maner whan he lighteth the lampes at euen, he shall burne soch incense also. This shal be the daylie incense before the LORDE amonge youre posterities.

<sup>j</sup>And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Whan thou nombrest the heades of the children of Israel, then shal euery one geue vnto the LORDE the reconcylinge of his soule, ⁊ there happē not a plage vnto them, whan they are nombred. C And this money of recōcilinge shalt thou take of the children of Israel, ⁊ put it to the Gods seruyce of the Tabernacle of wytnes, that it maye be a remembraunce vnto the children of Israel before the LORDE, that he maye let himself be reconcyled ouer their soules.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: <sup>a</sup> Thou shalt make a brasen lauer also with a fote of brasse to wash, and shalt set it betwixe the Tabernacle of wytnesse and ⁊ altare, and put water therin, that Aarō and his sonnes maye wash their handes and fete therout, when they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or to the altare, to mynistr vnto the LORDE with offerynge incense, ⁊ they dye not. Thou shalt anoynte Aaron also, and his sonnes, and consecrate them to be my prestes.

And thou shalt speake vnto the childrē of Israel, and saye: This oyle shalbe an holy oyntment vnto me amonge youre posterities: It shal not be poured vpon mans body, nether shalt thou make any such like it, for it is holy: therfore shal it be holy vnto you. And thou shalt beate it to poulder, and shalt put of the same before the wytnesse in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, from whence I wyll proteste vnto the, but it shalbe holy vnto the for the LORDE. Who so maketh such to cense therwith, shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

The xxi. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ A said: <sup>a</sup> I haue called by name Bezaleel the sonne of Uri ⁊ sonne of Hur, of ⁊ trybe of Iuda, <sup>a</sup> and haue fylled him with ⁊ sprete of God, with wysdome and vnderstōdyng and knowlege, and to worke with all maner of connyng worke, in golde, syluer, brasse, to graue stones connyngly, and to set them, to carue well in tymbre, and to make all maner worke. And beholde, I haue geuen him Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamah of the trybe of Dan, to be his companyon, and haue geuen wysdome in to the heretes of all that are wyse, that they shall make all that I haue commaunded the: the Tabernacle of wytnesse, <sup>c</sup> the Arke of wytnesse, the Mercyseate theron, and all the ornaumes of ⁊ Tabernacle: the table and his apparell, the candilsticke and all his apparell, the altare of incense, the altare of burntofferynges with all his apparell, the lauer with his fote, the mynistryng vestimentes of Aaron ⁊ prest, and the garments of his sonnes to serue like prestes, the anoyntinge oyle, and the incēse of spyes for ⁊ Sāctuary. All that I haue commaunded the, shal they make.

And the LORDE talked vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: <sup>d</sup> Kepe my Sabbath, for it is a token betwene me and you, and youre posterities, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE which haloweth you: therfore kepe my Sabbath, for it shalbe holy vnto you. <sup>e</sup> Who so vnhaloweth it, shall dye the death: For who so doth any worke therin, shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

seuenth daye is the Sabbath *the holy rest of the LORDE. Who so doth eny worke vpon the Sabbath daye, shall dye the death.

Therefore shal the children of Israel kepe the Sabbath, that they maye kepe it also amonge their posterities for an euerlastynge couenaunt. An euerlastynge token is it betwixte me and the children of Israel. For in sixe dayes made the LORDE heauē & earth, but vpon ʒ seuenth daye he rested, and was refreshed.

¶ And whan the LORDE had made an ende of talkinge with Moses vpon the mount Sinai, he gaue him two tables of wisesse, which were of stone, and wrytten with the fynger of God.

The lxxxij. Chapter.

BUT whan the people sawe that Moses made lōge taryenge to come downe frō the mount, they gathered thē together agaynst Aaron, & sayde vnto him: ¶ Vp, and make vs goddes, to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, that brought vs out of Egipte. Aaron sayde vnto them: ¶ Plucke of the golden earynges from the eares of youre wyues, of youre sonnes, & of youre doughters, & brynge them vnto me. Then all the people pluckte of their golden earynges from their eares, & brought them vnto Aaron. And he toke them of their handes, & fashioned it with a grauer. ¶ And they made a molten calfe, and sayde: These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the londe of Egipte.

Whan Aaron sawe that, he buylded an altare before him, and caused it be proclaimed, and sayde: Tomorrow is the LORDES feast. And they arose vp early in the mornynge, and offred burntofferynges, and brought dead-offerynges also: ¶ Then the people sat them downe to eate and drynke, & rose vp to playe.

¶ But the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go get the downe, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of the londe of Egipte, haue marred all: they are soone gone out of the waie, which I commaunded them. They haue made them a molten calfe, and haue worshipped it, & offred vnto it, & sayde: ¶ These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the lande of Egipte.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I se, ¶ that it is a styffnecked people, and now suffre me, that my wrath maye waxe whote ouer them, & that I maye consume them, so wil I make a greate people of the.

But Moses be sought the LORDE his God, & sayde: Oh LORDE, wherfore wil thy wrath waxe whote ouer thy people, whom thou hast brought out of the lōde of Egipte with greate power & a mightie hāde? ¶ Wherfore shulde the Egipcians speake, & saye: He hath brought thē for their myschefe, to slaye them in the mountaynes, and to destroye thē vterly from the earth? O turne the from the fearcenesse of thy wrath, & be gracious ouer the wickednesse of thy people. Remembre thy seruātes Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, vnto whō ⁊ thou swarest by thine owne self, and saydest: I wil multiplie youre sede as the starres of heauen, and all the londe that I haue promysed you, wil I geue vnto youre sede, & they shall inheret it for euer. Thus the LORDE repented of the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto his people.

Moses turned him, & wente downe from the mount, and in his hande he had the two tables of wytnesse, which were wryttē vpon both the sydes, and were Gods worke, & the wrytinge was the wrytinge of God therein. Now whan Iosua herde the noyse of ʒ people, as they shouted, he sayde vnto Moses: This is a noyse of warre in the hoost. He answered: It is not a noyse of them that haue the victory, and of them that haue the worse, but I heare a noyse of synginge at a daunse.

¶ Whan he came nye vnto the hoost, and sawe the calfe, and the daunsynge, ¶ he was moued with wrath, and cast the tables out of his hande, and brake them beneth the mount. ¶ And he toke the calfe that they had made, and brent it with fyre, and stamped it vnto poulder, and strowed it in the water, & gaue it vnto the children of Israel to drynke, & sayde vnto Aaron: What dyd this people vnto the, that thou hast brought so greate a synne vpon them?

Aaron sayde: Let not the wrath of my lorde waxe fearce: thou knowest, that this is

I sayde vnto them: Who so hath golde, let him plucke it of, and geue it me: and I cast it in the fyre, therof came this calfe.

f Now whan Moses sawe, that the people were naked (for Aaron, whan he set them vp. made them naked to their shame) he wete in to the gate of the hoost, and sayde: who so belongeth vnto the LORDE, let him come hither vnto me. Then all the children of Leui gathered them selues vnto him, and he sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: Euery man put his swerde by his syde, and go thorow in and out from one gate to another in the hoost, and slaye euery man his brother, frende, & neighbour.

The children of Leui dyd, as Moses sayde vnto them. And there fell of the people the same daye thre thousande men. The sayde Moses: Cōsecrate youre handes this daie vnto the LORDE, euery man vpon his sonne and brother, that the prayse maye be geuen ouer you this daye.

e On the morow Moses sayde vnto the people: Ye haue done a greatesynne. Now I wil go vp vnto the LORDE, yf peradventure I maye make an attonement for youre synnes.

Now whā Moses came agayne vnto † LORDE, he saide: Oh this people haue done a greatesynne, & haue made them goddes of golde. * Now for geue them their synne: yf not, the wye me out of thy boke, that thou hast wrytten. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: What? Him that synneth against me, wil I wye out of my boke. Go thou thy waye therfore, and brynge † people thither as I haue sayde vnto the, † Beholde, myne angell shall go before the. But in the daye of my visitacion I wyll vyset their synnes vpon them. So the LORDE plagued the people, because they made † calfe which Aaron made.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

a THE LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go, departe hence, thou and the people, whom thou hast brought out of the lande of Egipte, vnto † londe that I sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and sayde: † vnto thy sede wil I geue it, † and I wyl sende an angell before the (and cast out the Cananites, Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites) in to the londe that floweth with mylke and hony, for I wyll not go vp with the: † for thou art an hardnecked people, I might consume the by the waye. Whan the people herde this euell tydings, they sorowed, and no man put on his best rayment.

And † LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake vnto the children of Israel: Ye are a styf-necked people, I must once come sodenly vpon the, and make an ende of the. And now put of thy goodly araye from the, † I maie knowe what to do vnto the. So the children of Israel laied their goodly araye from the, euen before the mount Horeb.

Moses toke the Tabernacle, & pitched it without affare of from † hoost, and called it the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And who so euer wolde axe eny question at the LORDE, wente out vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the hoost. And whan Moses wente out vnto the Tabernacle, all the people rose vp, and stode euery one in his tent dore, and loked after Moses, tyll he was gone in to the Tabernacle. ¶ And whan Moses entred in to the Tabernacle, the cloudy pyler came downe, and stode in the dore of the Tabernacle, and he talked with Moses. And all the people sawe the cloudy piler stonde in the dore of the Tabernacle, and rose vp, and worshipped, euery one in his tent dore.

The lxxxiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Hew the two tables of stone,<sup>b</sup> like as  $\text{y}$  first were, that I maye wryte in them the wordes,  $\text{y}$  were in the first tables, which thou brakest: and be ready in the mornynge, that thou mayest come vp early vnto mount Sinai, and stonde me vpon the toppe of the mount. And let no man come vp with the, that there be no man sene thorow out all  $\text{y}$  mount: and let nether shepe ner oxen fede before the mount.

And Moses hewed two tables of stone, like as the first were,  $\text{t}$  arose early in the mornynge,  $\text{t}$  wente vp vnto mount Sinai, as  $\text{y}$  LORDE cōmaunded him,  $\text{t}$  toke  $\text{y}$  two tables of stone in his hāde. The came the LORDE downe in a cloude. And there he stepte vnto him,  $\text{t}$  called vpō  $\text{y}$  name of  $\text{y}$  LORDE. And when  $\text{y}$  LORDE passed by before his face, he cryed: LORDE LORDE, God, mercifull  $\text{t}$  gracious,<sup>c</sup>  $\text{t}$  longe sufferinge, and of greater mercy and trueth, thou that kepest mercy in stoare for thousandes, and forgeuest wickednes, trespace and synne (before whom there is no man innocent)† thou that visitest the wickednesse of the fathers vpon  $\text{y}$  children and childers children, vnto the thirde and fourth generacion.

And Moses bowed him self downe vnto the earth, and worshiped him, and saide: LORDE, yf I haue founde grace in thy sight, the let the LORDE go with vs (for it is an hard necked people) that thou mayest haue mercy vpon oure wickednesses and synnes, and let vs be thyne inheritaunce.

And he sayde: Beholde, I make a couenaunt before all thy people,  $\text{t}$  wil do wonders, such as haue not bene done in all londes, and amonge all people. And all  $\text{y}$  people amōge whom thou art, shal se  $\text{y}$  worke of  $\text{y}$  LORDE, for a terrible thinge shal it be,  $\text{y}$  I wyl do with the. And whā Aaron  $\tau$  all the childrē of Israel sawe  $\hat{y}$  the skynne of his face shyned, they were afraied to come nye him. Thē Moses called them. And they returned vnto him, both Aaron  $\tau$  all the chefest of the cōgregacion. And he talked with them. Afterwarde came all the children of Israel vnto him. And he cōmaunded thē, all  $\hat{y}$  the LORDE had sayde vnto him vpon the mount Sinai. Now whan he had made an ende of talkynge with thē,<sup>b</sup> he put a couerynge vpō his face. And whan he wēte in befōre  $\hat{y}$  LORDE to talke with him, he toke  $\hat{y}$  couerynge of, till he wēte out agayne. And whan he came forth  $\tau$  spake with the childrē of Israel what was cōmaunded him, thē the childrē of Israel sawe his face, how  $\hat{y}$  the skynne of his face shyned: so he put the couerynge vpō his face agayne, tyll he wente in agayne to talke with him.

The rrrb. Chapter.

A ND Moses gathered all the cōgregacion<sup>a</sup> of  $\hat{y}$  childrē of Israel together, and sayde vnto them: This is it,  $\hat{y}$  the LORDE hath commaunded you to do: "Sixe dayes shall ye worke, but the seuenth daye shall ye kepe holy: a Sabbath of the LORDES rest. Who so euer doeth eny worke therin, shall dye. Ye shal kyndle no fyre vpon the Sabbath daye in all youre dwellynge.

And Moses sayde vnto  $\hat{y}$  whole congregacion of the children of Israel: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded: "Geue from amonge you Heue offerynges vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, so that euery one brynge the LORDES Heue offerynge with a fre hert: golde, syluer, brasse, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, and goates hayre, reed skynnes of rammes, doo skynnes, and Fyrre tre, oyle for the lampes, and spyes for the anoyntinge oyle and for swete incense. Onix stones, and stones to be set in  $\hat{y}$  ouerbody cote, and for the brestlappe.

And who so is wyse of hert amonge you, let<sup>b</sup> him come,  $\tau$  make what the LORDE hath commaunded: namely, the Habitacion with the tent  $\tau$  couerynge therof, the rynges, bordes, barres, pilers  $\tau$  sokettes: The Arke with the staues therof, the Mercyseate  $\tau$  the vayle: the table with his staues  $\tau$  all his apparell:  $\tau$  the shewbred: The cādilstick of light and his apparell, and his lampes,  $\tau$  the oyle for the lightes: The altare of incense with his staues: The anoyntyng oyle and spyes for incense: The hangynge before  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle dore: The alter of burnt offerynges with his brasen gredyron, staues and all his apparell: The lauer with his fote: The hangynge of the courte, with the pilers and sokettes therof,  $\tau$  the hangynge of the courte dore: The nales of the habitacion and of  $\hat{y}$  courte with their coardes: The mynistringe garmentes for the seruyce in the Holy,  $\hat{y}$  holy vestimentes of Aaron the prest with the vestimentes of his sonnes for  $\hat{y}$  prestes office.

Then wente all the congregacion of the childrē of Israel out fro Moses,  $\tau$  euery one brought the gift of his hert:  $\tau$  all that they wolde of fre will, the same brought they for an Heue offeringe vnto the LORDE for fy worke of the Tabernacle of witness, ⁊ for all the seruyce therof, ⁊ for the holy vestimētes. Both men ⁊ women that were of a wyllinge hert, brought braceletes, earynges, rynges ⁊ gyrdels, and all maner leuels of golde: Euery man also brought golde for Waue offeringes vnto the LORDE.

And who so euer foude by him yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, goates hayre, reed skynnes of raimes, and Doo skynnes, brought it. And who so euer houe up syluer ⁊ brasse, brought it for fy Heue offeringe vnto the LORDE. And who so euer foude Fyrrer tre by him, brought it for all maner of worke of the Gods seruyce. And soch women as were wyse herted, spanne with their hādes, and brought their sponne worke of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke. And soch women as had hye vnderstandinge in wysdome, spanne goates hayre.

As for fy prynees, they brought Onix stones, and set stones, for fy ouerbody coate, and for the brestlappe, and spyes, and oyle for fy lightes, and for the anoyntinge oyle, and for swete incense. Thus the children of Israel brought fre wyllinge offeringes, both man and wemē, for all maner of worke, that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, to be made.

And Moses saide vnto the childre of Israel: Beholde, fy LORDE hath called by name Bezaleel fy sonne of Uri, fy sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda, ⁊ hath fylled him with the sprete of God, that he maye haue wysdome, vnderstandinge, ⁊ knowlege for all maner of worke, to worke connyngly in golde, syluer ⁊ brasse, to graue precious stones ⁊ to set them, to carue in wodd, to make all maner of connyng workes, and hath geuē instructiō in his hert, both him and Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of fy trybe of Dan. These hath he fylled with wysdome of hert, to make all maner of worke, to carue, to broder, to worke with needle worke, with yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, and with weeynge to make all maner of worke, and to deuise connyng workes.

THE lxxvi. Chapter.

THEN wrought Bezaleel ⁊ Ahaliab ⁊ all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wysdome ⁊ vnderstandinge to knowe, how they shulde make all maner worke for the seruyce of the Sanctuary. accordinge vnto all fy the LORDE commaunded. And Moses called for Bezaleel ⁊ Ahaliab, ⁊ all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wysdome in their hertes, namely, all soch as wyllingly offred them selues there, ⁊ came to labour in the worke. And they receaued of Moses all the Heue offeringes, that the children of Israel had brought for the worke of the seruyce of the Sanctuary, that it might be made: ⁊ euery morninge brought they their willinge offeringes vnto him.

Then came all the wyse men fy wrought in the worke of the Sanctuary, euery one fro his worke that he made, ⁊ sayde vnto Moses: The people bryngeth to moch, more thē nede is for the worke of this seruice, which the LORDE hath comaunded to make. Thē commaunded Moses, that it shulde be proclaimed thorow out the hoost: No man brynge more to the Heue offeringe of the Sanctuary. Then were the people forbydden to brynge: for there was stuffe enough for all maner of worke, that was to be made, and to moch.

So all fy wyse herted men amonge thē fy wrought in fy worke of the Habitacon, made ten curtaynes of whyte twyned sylke, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, with Cherubyns of broderd worke. The lēgh of one curtayne was eight and twentye cubites, and the bredth foure cubites, ⁊ were all of one measure: ⁊ he coupled the curtaynes fyue ⁊ fyue together one to the other.

And made yalow loupes a longe by fy edge of euery curtayne, where they shulde be coupled together: fiftie loupes vpo euery curtayne, wherby one might be coupled to another. And made fiftie buttons of golde, and with the buttons he coupled the curtaynes together one to the other, that it might be one couerynge.

And he made xj. eurtaynes of goates hayre (for the tent ouer the habitacon) of thirtie cubytes longe, ⁊ foure cubytes brode, all of one measure, ⁊ coupled fyue together by them selues, and sixe by them selues, ⁊ made fiftie loupes a longe by fy edge of euery curtayne, wherby they might be coupled together, ⁊ made fiftie buttons of brasse, to couple fy tent together withall. And made ouer fy tent a couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes, and ouer that a couerynge of Doo skynnes

D And made standinge bordes for the Habitation, of Fyrre tre, euery one ten cubytes longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, ⁊ two fete vnto euery one, wherby one might be ioyned to another: that on the south syde there stode twentye of the same bordes: and made fourty syluer sokettes there vnder, vnder euery borde two sokettes for his two fete. In like maner for the other syde of the Habitation towarde the north, he made twentye bordes also with fourty syluer sokettes, vnder euery borde two sokettes: But behynde the Habitation vpon the west syde, he made sixe bordes, and two other for the corners of the Habitation behynde, that either of them both might be ioyned with his corner borde from vnder vp, and aboue vpon the heade to come together with a clampe: so that there were eight bordes, and sixtene sokettes of syluer, vnder euery one two sokettes.

E And he made barres of Fyrre tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Habitation, and fyue vpon the other syde, and fyue behynde towarde the west: and made the barres to shute thorow the bordes, from the one ende to the other, and ouerlayde the bordes with golde. But their rynges made he of golde for the barres, and ouerlayde ⁊ barres with golde.

And made Cherubyns vpon the hangynge with broderd worke, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke. And made for the same, foure pilers of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed them with golde, and their knoppes of golde, and cast foure sokettes of syluer for them.

And made an hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, of nedle worke, and fyue pilers therto with their knoppes (⁊ ouerlayed their knoppes and whopes with golde) and fyue sokettes of brasse there to.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

A ND Bezaleel made the Arke of Fyrre tre, two cubites and a half lōge, a cubyte and a half brode, and a cubyte ⁊ a half hye, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde within and without, and made a crowne of golde vnto it rounde aboute, and cast for it foure rynges of golde to the foure corners of it, vpon euery syde two. And made staues of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed thē with golde, and put them in the rynges a longe by ⁊ sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall.

And he made ⁊ Mercyseate of pure golde two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubite and a half brode, ⁊ made two Cherubyns of fyne beaten golde vpon the two endes of the Mercyseate: One Cherub vpon the one ende, and the other Cherub vpon the other ende: and the Cherubyns spredde out their wynges aboue an hye, and couered ⁊ Mercyseate ther with: and their faces stode one ouer agaynst the other, and loked vnto the Mercyseate.

And he made ⁊ table, of Fyrre tre, two cubytes longe, a cubyte brode, and a cubyte ⁊ a half hye, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde, and made therto a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and made vnto it an whoope of an hande bredth hye, and made a crowne of golde rounde aboute the whoope. And for it he cast foure golde rynges, ⁊ put them in the foure corners by the fete harde by the whoope, that the staues might be therin, to beare the table withall: ⁊ made the staues of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed thē with golde, to beare the staues withall. And the vessels vpon the table made he also of fyue golde: the disshes, spones, flat peces and pottes, to poure in and out withall.

And he made the candilstick of fyne beaten golde, where vpon was the shaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, ⁊ floures. Sixe braunches proceeded out of ⁊ sydes therof, vpon either syde thre braunches: vpon euery braunch were thre cuppes like allmōdes, with knoppes and floures. Vpon the candilstick self were foure cuppes with knoppes and floures, vnder euery two braunches a knoppe. The knoppes ⁊ braunches therof proceeded out of it, and were all one peece of fyne beaten golde. And he made the seuen lampes with their snoffers ⁊ outquenchers of pure golde. Of an hūdreth weight of golde made he it, and all the apparell thereof.

He made also the altare of incense, of Fyrre tre, a cubyte longe and brode, eauen foure squared, and two cubytes hye with the hornes of it, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde, the toppe and the sydes of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therof, and made a crowne vnto it rounde aboute of pure golde, ⁊ two golde rynges vnder the crowne on both the sydes, to put the staues therin, and to beare it withall: but the staues made he of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed them with golde.

And he made the holy anoyntinge oyle, & the incense of pure spyes, after  $\frac{1}{2}$  craft of the Apotecary.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

AND the altare of burntoffrynges made he of Fyrre tre, <sup>a</sup> fyue cubytes lōge & brode, eauen foure squared, & thre cubites hye. And made foure hornes, which proceeded out of the foure corners therof, and ouerlaid it with brasse. And he made all maner of vessels for the altare, cauldrons, shouels, basens, fleshokes, and colepannes all of brasse. And vnto the altare he made a brasen gredyron of net worke rounde aboute, from vnder vp vnto the myddest of the altare, & cast foure rynges in the foure corners of the brasen gredyron, for the staues: which he made of Fyrre tre, and ouerlayed them with brasse, and put them in the rynges by the sydes of the altare, to beare it withall, and made it holowe with bordes.

And he made the Lauer of brasse, & his fote also of brasse vpon the place of  $\frac{1}{2}$  hoost, that laye before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

B And he made the courte on  $\frac{1}{2}$  south syde: hangynges an hundreth cubytes longe, of whyte twyned sylke, with the twetye pilers therof, and twentye sokettes of brasse: but the knoppes and whoopes of syluer. In like maner vpon the north syde an hundreth cubytes with twentye pilers, and twentye sokettes of brasse, but their knoppes & whoopes of syluer. Vpon the west syde fiftie cubytes with ten pilers and tē sokettes, but their knoppes and whoopes of syluer. Vpon the East syde fiftie cubytes. Fiftene cubytes vpon either syde of the courte dore, with thre pilers and thre sokettes: So that all the hangynges of the courte were of whyte twyned sylke, and the sokettes of the pilers were of brasse, & their knoppes and whoopes of syluer: their heades were ouerlayed with syluer, & all the pilers of the courte were whooped aboute with syluer.

C And the hangyng in  $\frac{1}{2}$  courte gate made he with nedle worke, of yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, twentye cubytes longe, & fyue cubytes hye, after the measure of the hangynges of the courte: foure pilers also therto, & foure sokettes of brasse, and their knoppes of syluer, and their heades ouerlayed, and their whoopes of syluer. And all the nales of the Habitation and of the courte rounde aboute, were of brasse.

This is now the summe of the Habitation of wytnesse (which was counted at the cōmaundemēt of Moses to  $\frac{1}{2}$  Gods seruice of the Leuites vnder the hādē of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest) which Bezaleel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur of the trybe of Iuda made, all as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses. And with him Ahaliab  $\frac{1}{2}$  sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, a connyng grauer, to worke nedle worke, with yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte sylke.

All the golde  $\frac{1}{2}$  was wrought in all this worke of the Sanctuary (which was geuen to the Waue offeringe) is nyne & twentye hundreth weight, seuen hundreth & thirtie Sycles, after  $\frac{1}{2}$  Sycle of  $\frac{1}{2}$  Sanctuary. <sup>a</sup> The syluer  $\frac{1}{2}$  came of the congregacion, was fyue score hundreth weight, a thousande, seuen hundreth, fyue and seuentye Sycles, after  $\frac{1}{2}$  Sycle of the Sanctuary: so many heades so many half Sycles, after the Sycle of the Sanctuary, of all that were nombred from twentye yeare olde and aboue, euen sixe hundreth thousande, thre thousande, fyue hundreth and fiftye.

Of the fyue score hundreth weight of syluer, were cast the sokettes of the Sanctuary, and the sokettes of the vayle, an hundreth sokettes of the fyue score hundreth weight, an hundreth weight to euery sokett. Of the thousande, seuen hundreth and fyue and seuentye Sycles were made the knoppes of the pilers (and their heades ouerlayed) and their whoopes.

As for the Waue offeringe of brasse, it was seuentye hundreth weight, two thousande and foure hundreth Sycles: Whereof were made the sokettes in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the brasen altare, and the brasen gredyron therto, and all the vessels of the altare, and the sokettes of  $\frac{1}{2}$  courte rounde aboute, and the sokettes of  $\frac{1}{2}$  courte gate, all  $\frac{1}{2}$  nales of the Habitation, & all  $\frac{1}{2}$  nales of  $\frac{1}{2}$  courte rounde aboute.

The xxxix. Chapter.

OF the yalow sylke, scarlet, & purple, they <sup>a</sup> made Aarons mynistringe vestimentes, to do seruice in the Sanctuary, as  $\frac{1}{2}$  LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

And he made the ouer body cote, of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, and bett the golde in to thinne plates, and cut it in to wyres, that it might be wrought amonge the yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, ⁊ made it so, that ⁊ ouerbody cote came together by the edges on both the sydes. And his gyrdel was after the same craft ⁊ worke: euē of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte twyned sylke, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And they wrought two Onix stones, set rounde aboute with golde, grauen by the stone grauer with the names of the childrē of Israel: and fastened them vpon the shulders of the ouerbody cote, that they might be stones of remembrance vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

B And they made the brestlappe after the craft ⁊ worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke, so that it was foure square ⁊ dubble, an hande bredth longe and brode, and fylled it with foure rowes of stones. The first rowe was: a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The secōde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dymonde. The thirde: a Ligurius, an Achat, and an Amatist. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix ⁊ a Iaspis: closed rounde aboute with golde in all the rowes. And the stones stode after the twolue names of the children of Israel, grauen by the stone grauer, euery one with his name, accordinge to the twolue trybes.

And vpon the brestlappe they made wrythen cheynes of pure golde, and two hokes of golde, ⁊ two golde rynges, and fastened the two rynges vpon the two edges of the brestlappe: and ⁊ two wrythen cheynes put they in the two rynges vpon the corners of the brestlappe. But the two endes of ⁊ wrythen cheynes put they to the two hokes, ⁊ fastened them vpon the corners of the ouer body cote, one ouer agaynst another.

C And they made two other rynges of golde, ⁊ fastened them to the other two corners of the brestlappe by the edge of it, that it might hange vpon the out syde of the ouerbody cote. And they made yet two other golde rynges, which they put beneth vpon the two corners of the ouerbody cote, one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together, that the brestlappe might be festened by his rynges vnto ⁊ rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalowe lace, that it might lye close vpon ⁊ ouerbody cote, and not be lowed from ⁊ ouerbody cote, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And he made the tuncle vnto the ouerbody cote, wrought all of yalow sylke, ⁊ the hole therof aboute in the myddest, ⁊ a bonde foldē together rounde aboute the hole, that it shulde not rente. And beneth vpon ⁊ hemme of it, they made pomgranates of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke: ⁊ they made belles of pure golde, which they put betwixte ⁊ pomgranates rounde aboute vpon the hemme of the tuncle, a bell ⁊ a pomgranate, a bell ⁊ a pomgranate rounde aboute, to do seruyce in, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And they made albes also wrought of whyte sylke for Aaron ⁊ his sonnes, ⁊ ⁊ myter of whyte sylke, and the goodly bonettes of whyte sylke, and breches of twyned whyte linnen, and the girdle of nedle worke euē of whyte twyned sylke, yalow sylke, scarlet, and purple, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

They made the fore heade plate also to ⁊ holy crowne, of pure golde, and wrote therein with grauen worke: the holynes of the LORDE, and fastened a yalowe lace thereon, to tye it vnto the myter aboue, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

Thus the whole worke of ⁊ Habitation of ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, was fynished. And the childrē of Israel dyd all that the LORDE commaunded Moses, ⁊ brought the Habitation vnto Moses: the Tabernacle ⁊ all the apparell therof, the buttons, bordes, barres, pilers, sokettes, ⁊ couerynge of reed skynnes of rammes, the couerynge of doo skynnes, ⁊ the vayle, ⁊ Arke of wytnesse with the stauēs therof, the Mercyseate, the table ⁊ all his apparell, ⁊ the shewbred, the candilstick, with the lampes prepared, and all his apparell, ⁊ oyle for the lightes, the golden altare, the anoyntinge oyle ⁊ incense, the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore, the brasen altare, ⁊ his brasen gredyrion with his stauēs, ⁊ all his apparell, ⁊ lauer with his foote, the hangynges of ⁊ courte with the pilers ⁊ sokettes therof, ⁊ hanginge in the courte gate with his pilers ⁊ nales, ⁊ all the ordynauce for the seruyce of the Habitation of ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, ⁊ mynistringe vestiūētes of Aarō ⁊ prest, to do seruyce in ⁊ Sanctuary, ⁊ the garnētes of his sonnes, ⁊ they might execute ⁊ prestes office. Accordinge to all that ⁊ LORDE commaunded Moses, euē so dyd the childrē of Israel in all this seruyce. And Moses sawe all ⁊ worke, ⁊ they dyd it euē as ⁊ LORDE had commaunded, and he blessed them.

The xl. Chapter.

AND  $\hat{y}$  LORDE spake vnto Moses,  $\tau$  sayde: In the fyrst daye of the first moneth shalt thou set vp  $\hat{y}$  Habitaciō of  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal put the Arke of wytnes therin, and hange the vayle before  $\hat{y}$  Arke. And thou shalt bringe in the table, and garnish it, and brynge in the cādilstickes, and put the lampes theron. And  $\hat{y}$  goldē altare of incense shalt thou set before  $\hat{y}$  Arke of wytnesse,  $\tau$  hange vp the hanginge in the dore of the Habitaciō. But the altare of burntofferings shalt thou set before the dore of the Habitacion of the Tabernacle of wytnesse:  $\tau$  the lauer betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and the altare, and put water therin,  $\tau$  set the courte rounde aboute, and hange vp the hanginge in the courte gate.

B And thou shalt take the anyoyntyng oyle, and anyoynte the Habitacion and all that is there in,  $\tau$  and shalt consecrate it, and all  $\hat{y}$  apparell therof, that it maye be holy. And thou shalt anyoynte the altare of burntofferings and all his vessels, and consecrate it, that it maye be most holy. The lauer also  $\tau$  his fote shalt thou anyoynte  $\tau$  consecrate.

$\tau$  And thou shalt brynge Aaron  $\tau$  his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and wash them with water,  $\tau$  put the holy vestimentes vpon Aaron, and anyoynte him, and consecrate him, that he maye be my prest. And thou shalt brynge his sonnes also, and put the albes vpon them, and anyoynte them, as thou hast anyoynted their father,  $\hat{y}$  they maye be my prestes. And this anyoyntyng shall they haue for an euerlastinge presthode amonge their posterities.  $\tau$  And Moses dyd all as the LORDE cōmaunded him.

C  $\tau$  Thus was the Tabernacle set vp in the seconde yeare vpon the first daye of the first moneth. And whan Moses reared it vp, he fastened  $\hat{y}$  sokettes and the bordes, and barres, and set vp the pilers, and spred out the tent ouer the Habitacion, and put the couerynge of the tent aboue an hye, as the LORDE commaunded him. And he toke the wytnesse, and layed it in the Arke, and put  $\hat{y}$  staues in the Arke, and set the Mercyseate aboue vpon the Arke, and brought the Arke in to the Habitacion, and hanged the vayle before the Arke of wytnesse, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set the table in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the north syde without the vayle, and prepared bred theron before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE  $\tau$  as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set in the candilstickes also, euen ouer agaynst the table, in the corner of the Habitacion vpon the south syde, and put the lampes theron before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded him. And the golden altare set he in also before the vayle, and brent swete incense theron, as the LORDE commaunded him. And hanged vp the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore. As for the altare of burntofferings, he set it before the dore of the Habitacion of  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle of wytnesse, and offred burntofferings and meate offeringes theron, as the LORDE commaunded him.

$\tau$  And the Lauer set he betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and  $\hat{y}$  altare, and put water therin to wash withall. And Moses, Aaron and his sonnes washed their hādes and fete ther at: for they ought to wash thē, whan they wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or whan they wente vnto the altare, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set vp the courte rounde aboute the Habitacion and the altare, and hanged vp  $\hat{y}$  hanginge in  $\hat{y}$  courte gate. Thus Moses fynished the whole worke.

Then a cloude couered  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the glory of the LORDE fylled the Habitacion. And Moses coulde not go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whyle the cloude abode theron, and the glory of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE fylled the Habitacion.

And whan the cloude remoued from the Habitacion, then wente the children of Israel forth, as oft as they toke their iourney. But yf the cloude remoued not, then toke not they their iourney, tyll the daie that it remoued: for in the daye tyme was the cloude of the LORDE vpon the Habitacion,  $\tau$  in the night season was fyre therin, in  $\hat{y}$  sight of all  $\hat{y}$  house of Israel, in all their iourneis.

The first Chapter.

AND the LORDE called Moses,* and spake vnto him out of y<sup>e</sup> Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde: Speake vnto y<sup>e</sup> childrē of Israel, ⁊ saie vnto them: Who so euer amōge you wyl brynge an offerynge vnto the LORDE, let him brynge it of y<sup>e</sup> catell, euen of the oxen, ⁊ of the shepe.

Yf he wyl brynge a burntofferynge of y<sup>e</sup> oxen (or greate catell) thē let him offre a male without blemysch, before y<sup>e</sup> dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to reconeyle him self before the LORDE;† let him laye his hande vpon the heade of the burntofferynge, then shal he be reconcyled, so y<sup>e</sup> God shalbe mercifull vnto him.

B And he shall kylle the yonge ox before y<sup>e</sup> LORDE: and y<sup>e</sup> prestes Aarons sonnes shal brynge the bloude, and sprenkle it rounde aboute vpon the altare, that is before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the skynne shalbe flayne from of the burntofferynge, and it shalbe hewen in peces. And the sonnes of Aaron the prest shal make a fyre vpon the altare, and laye wod aboute theron: and y<sup>e</sup> peces, the heade, and the fatt shal they laye vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon y<sup>e</sup> fyre on the altare. But y<sup>e</sup> bowels ⁊ legges shal be waszhen with water, and the prest shal burne altogether vpon the altare for a burnt sacrifice:

this is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Yf he wyl offe a burnt sacrifice of the small catell, that is, of the lambes or goates, then let him offe a male without a blemysch. And he shall kylle it before the LORDE, euen at the corner of the altare on the north syde before y<sup>e</sup> LORDE. And (the prestes) Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde aboute vpon y<sup>e</sup> altare, and it shal be hewen in peces. And the prest shall laye them with the heade and the fatt, vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre on the altare. But the bowels and y<sup>e</sup> legges shal be waszhen with water. And y<sup>e</sup> prest shal offe it altogether, and burne it vpon y<sup>e</sup> altare for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But yf he wil offe a burnt sacrifice of y<sup>e</sup> foules vnto the LORDE, then let him offe it of the turtill doves or of y<sup>e</sup> yonge pigeons. And the prest shal brynge it vnto the altare, and wrynge the neck of it a sunder, that it maye be burnt vpon the altare, and let the bloude of it runne out vpon the sydes of the altare, and the croppe of it with the fethers shalbe cast vpon the heape of aszhes besyde the altare towarde the east, and he shall deuyde the wynges of it, but not breake thē cleane of. And thus shall the prest burne it vpon the altare, euen vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre, for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

The ij. Chapter.

WHAN a soule wyll offre a meatofferynge vnto the LORDE,<sup>a</sup> then shal it be of fyne flour, and he shal poure oyle vpon it, and put frankencense thereon, ⁊ so brynge it vnto Aarons sonnes the prestes. Then shal one of them take his handfull of the same flour, and oyle with all the frankcense, and burne it for a remembrance vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. *As for þe remnaunt of the meatofferynge, it shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. This shalbe þe most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

But yf he wyll brynge a meatofferynge of that which is baken in the oven, then let him take swete cakes of wheate, mixte with oyle, and vneleued wafers aynoynted with oyle. Neuertheles yf thy meatofferynge be eny thinge of that which is fryed in the panne, then shal it be of fyne swete flour myxte with oyle: And thou shalt cut it in peces, ⁊ poure oyle thereon: so is it a meatofferynge. But yf thy meatofferynge be ought broyled on the gredyron, then shalt thou make it of fyne flour with oyle. And the meatofferynge that thou wilt make of such thinges for the LORDE, shalt thou brynge vnto þe prest, which shal brynge it vnto the altare, ⁊ shal Heue vp the same meatofferynge for a remembrance, and burne it vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. As for the remnaunt, it shal be Aarons and his sonnes. This shal be the most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

All the meatofferynges that ye wil offre vnto the LORDE, shal ye make without leuē. For there shal no leuē nor hony be burnt for an offeringe vnto the LORDE. But for the offeringe of the firstlings shal ye offer the vnto the LORDE. Neuertheles they shal come vpon no altare for a swete sauoure.

All thy meatofferynges shalt thou ⁊ salt. And thy meatofferynge shal neuer be without þe salt of the couenaunt of thy God: for in all thy offeringes shalt thou offre salt.

But yf thou wilt offre a meatofferynge of the first frutes vnto þe LORDE, then shalt thou drye that which is grene, by the fyre, ⁊ beate it small, and so offre the meatofferynge of thy first frutes. And thou shalt put oyle vpon it, and laye frankcense thereon, so is it a meatofferynge. And then shall the prest beate it, and burne of the oyle with all the frankcense for a remembrance. This is an offeringe vnto the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

BUT yf his offeringe be a deedofferinge of greate cattell (whether it be ox or cowe) then shal he offre such as is without blemish before the LORDE, ⁊ shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prestes Aarons sonnes, shall sprenkle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and shal offre of þe deedofferynge vnto the LORDE: namely, all the fat that is within, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And Aarons sonnes shal burne it vpon the altare for a burntofferynge, euen vpon the wod that lyeth on the fyre. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Yf his deedofferynge be of small cattell, whether it be male or female, it shal be without blemish: Yf it be a lambe, then shall he brynge it before the LORDE, ⁊ shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and sleue it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and so offre of the deedofferynge vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat of it, all the rompe with the backe, and the fat that conereth the bowels, with all þe fat that is within, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, ⁊ the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare, for þe meate of the offeringe vnto þe LORDE.

But yf his offeringe be a goate, and bringeth it before the LORDE, he shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprēkle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, ⁊ shal offer therof a sacrifice vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat þe couereth the bowels, and all the fat þe is within, the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, ⁊ the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneyes. And the prest shal burne it vpon

The iij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, <sup>τ</sup> sayde; Speake vnto the childrē of Israel, and saye: Whan a soule synneth thorow ignorance in any commaundemēt of the LORDE, which he ought not to do: As namely, yf a prest which is anoynted, synne, that he make the people do anysse, he shall brynge for <sup>ȝ</sup> synne that he hath done, a yonge bullocke without blemysh vnto the LORDE for a synofferynge. <sup>b</sup>And the bullocke shal he brynge to the dore of the Tabernacle of wyssnesse before the LORDE, <sup>τ</sup> laie his hāde vpō his heade, <sup>τ</sup> kyll him before <sup>ȝ</sup> LORDE. <sup>c</sup>And <sup>ȝ</sup> prest <sup>ȝ</sup> is anoynted, shal take of his bloude, <sup>τ</sup> brynge it in to the Tabernacle of wyssnesse. And he shall dyppe his fynger in to the bloude, <sup>τ</sup> sprenkle therwith seue tymes before the LORDE, towarde the vayle of <sup>ȝ</sup> Holy. And he shal put of the same bloude vpon the hornes of the altare of incense, <sup>ȝ</sup> stondesth before <sup>ȝ</sup> LORDE in the Tabernacle of wyssnesse: <sup>τ</sup> all the bloude of the bullocke shal he poure vpon the botome of the altare of burntofferings, <sup>ȝ</sup> stondesth at the entringe in of <sup>ȝ</sup> Tabernacle of wyssnesse. And all the fat of the synofferynge shal he Heue vp: namely, the fat <sup>ȝ</sup> couereth the bowels, <sup>τ</sup> all the fat <sup>ȝ</sup> is within, <sup>ȝ</sup> two kydneyes with the fatt that is theron vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also (like as he Heueth it from the oxe in the dead-offerynge) and shall burne it vpon the altare of burntofferings. But the skyune of the bullocke, <sup>d</sup>and all the flesh, with the heade <sup>τ</sup> legges, <sup>τ</sup> the bowels and the donge, shal he cary alltogether out of the hoost, in to a cleane place, where <sup>ȝ</sup> aszshes are poured out, <sup>τ</sup> shal burne it vpon wodd with fyre.

done, they shal bringe a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and set him before <sup>ȝ</sup> dore of <sup>ȝ</sup> Tabernacle of wyssnesse. And the Elders of the congregaciō shal laye their handes vpon his heade before the LORDE, <sup>τ</sup> kyll <sup>ȝ</sup> bullocke before the LORDE. And <sup>ȝ</sup> prest <sup>ȝ</sup> is anoynted shal brynge of <sup>ȝ</sup> bullockes bloude in to the Tabernacle of wyssnesse, <sup>τ</sup> dyppe ther in with his fynger, and sprenkle therwith seuen tymes before the LORDE, euē before the vayle of the Holy. And shall put of the bloude vpon the hornes of the altare, <sup>ȝ</sup> stondesth before the LORDE in the Tabernacle of wyssnesse: <sup>τ</sup> all <sup>ȝ</sup> other bloude shal he poure vpō the botome of <sup>ȝ</sup> altare of burntofferings, <sup>ȝ</sup> stondesth before the dore of <sup>ȝ</sup> Tabernacle of wyssnesse. But all his fatt shal he Heue vp, <sup>τ</sup> burne it vpō the altare: <sup>τ</sup> shal do with this bullocke, as he dyd with <sup>ȝ</sup> bullocke of the synofferynge: Thus the prest shal make an attonement for them, <sup>τ</sup> it shal be forgeuen them. And the bullocke shall he brynge without the hoost, and burne him, as he brent <sup>ȝ</sup> first bullocke. This shalbe <sup>ȝ</sup> synofferynge of the congregaciō.

the bloude with his fynger, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of ſ̃ altare of burntofferings, ⁊ poure all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all the fat of it ſhal he take awaye, like as he taketh awaye the fat of the dead-offerynge, and ſhal burne it vpon the altare for a swete ſauoure vnto the LORDE. And ſo ſhal the preſt make an attonemēt for him, and it ſhal be forgeuen him.

⁂ But yf he brynge a lambe for a ſynofferynge, then let him brynge a female without blemiſh, and laye his hande vpon the heade of the ſynofferynge, ⁊ kyll it for a ſynofferynge, in the place where the burntofferings are ſlayne. And the preſt ſhal take of ſ̃ bloude with his fynger, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of the altare of burntofferings, ⁊ poure all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all ſ̃ fatt therof ſhall he take frō it, like as he dyd the fat of the lambe of the healthofferynge, ⁊ ſhal burne it vpon ſ̃ altare for the LORDES ſacrifice. And ſo ſ̃ preſt ſhal make an attonement for the ſynne that he hath done, and it ſhalbe forgeuen him.

The b. Chapter.

⁂ WHAN a ſoule ſynneth, ⁊ ſ̃ he heare a curſynge, and is wyneſſe therof, or hath ſene it, or knowne it, ⁊ telleth it not,ⁱ he is giltye of a treſpace. Or whan a ſoule ⁊ toucheth eny vncleane thiſge, whether it be ſ̃ carion of an vncleane beaſt, or catell, or worme, ⁊ was not aware of it, he is vncleane, and hath offended. Or whan he toucheth an vncleane man (what vñ clenſeſſe ſo euer a man is defyled withall) ⁊ was not aware of it, ⁊ afterwarde cometh to ſ̃ knowlege therof, ſ̃ ſame hath offended. Or whan a ſoule ſweareth, ſo ſ̃ he pronounceth with his mouth to do euell or good (what ſo euer it be that a man pronounceth with an oath) ⁊ was not aware of it, ⁊ afterwarde cometh to the knowlege therof, he hath offended in one of theſe.

for his offence that he hath done, two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons: one for a ſynofferynge, the other for a burntofferynge, and brynge them to the preſt: Which ſhall make the firſt a ſynofferynge, and fyrſt wringe the neck of it, ſo that he plucke it not cleane of, and ſprenkle with the bloude vpon the ſydes of the altare, and let the reſydue of the bloude blede out vpon the botome of the altare: This is the ſynofferynge. As for the other, ⁂ he ſhal make it a burntofferynge, after the maner therof. And thus ſhall the preſt make an attonement for him concernynge the ſynne that he hath done, ⁊ it ſhalbe forgeuen him. But yf he be not able to brynge two turtill doues or two yonge pigeons, then let him brynge his offerynge for his ſynne, a tenth deale of an Ephā of fyne floure for a ſynofferynge. But he ſhall put no oyle theron, ner laye frankceenſe vpon it, for it is a ſynofferynge. And he ſhal brynge it vnto the preſt, ⁊ ſ̃ preſt ſhal take his hād full of it for a remembraunce, and burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a ſynofferynge. And ſo ſhal the preſt make an attonement for him, concernynge his ſynne that he hath done, ⁊ it ſhalbe forgeuen him. And the remnaunt ſhall be the preſtes, like a meatofferynge.

And the LORDE ſpake vnto Moſes, ⁊ ſayde: Yf a ſoule treſpace, ſo ſ̃ thorow ignoraunce he offendeth in any thinge ſ̃ is halowed vnto the LORDE, he ſhal brynge his treſpaceofferynge vnto the LORDE, euen a ramme from ſ̃ flocke without blemiſh, worth two Sycles of ſyluer,⁺ after the Sycele of the Sanctuary, for a treſpace offerynge: and loke what he hath offended in the halowed thinge, he ſhall make reſtitucion, ⁊ geue the fifth parte more thereto. And he ſhal deluyer it vnto ſ̃ preſt, which ſhall make an attonement for him with the ramme of the treſpace-offerynge, ⁊ it ſhalbe forgeuen him.

Whan a ſoule ſynneth, and doth ought agaynſt eny cōmaundement of the LORDE, ſ̃ he ſhulde not do, ⁊ is informed therof, he hath treſpased, ⁊ is giltye of the ſynne. And he ſhall brynge from the flocke a ramme with out blemiſh (that is worth a treſpaceofferynge) vnto the preſt, which ſhal make an attonement for him concernynge his ignoraunce which he dyd, and was not aware, and it shalbe forgeuen him. This is the trespac-offerynge, because he trespased agaynst the LORDE.

¶ And ¶ LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Whan a soule synneth, ⁊ trespaceth agaynst the LORDE, so that he denyeth vnto his neyghboure that which he gaue him to kepe, or that was put vnder his hande, or that he hath violently taken away, or gotten vnrighteously, or founde that was lost, and denyeth it with a false ooth, what so euer it be, wherin a man synneth agaynst his neyghboure. Now whan it cometh so to passe, that he synneth after this maner, ⁊ trespaceth, he shal restore agayne that he toke violently away, or gat wrongeously, or that was geuen him to kepe, or that he hath founde, or what so euer it be aboute ¶ which he hath sworne falsely, he shal restore it againe whole altogether, and geue the fiftieth parte more therto, euen to him that it belonged vnto, the same daye that he geueth his trespac-offerynge. But for his trespac he shal brynge for the LORDE (euen vnto the prest) a ramme from the flocke without blemyshe, that is worth a trespac-offerynge. Then shall the prest make an attonement for him before the LORDE, and all that he hath synned in, shalbe forgeuen him.

The vi. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the burnt-offerynge. The burnt-offerynge shall burne vpon the altare all night vntyll the mornyng. But the fyre of the altare onely shal burne thereon. ¶ And ¶ prest shal put on his linnen albe, and his linnen breeches vpon his flesh, and shal take vp the aszshes, that the fyre of the burnt-offerynge vpon the altare hath made, and shall poure them besyde the altare. Then shall he put of his rayment, and put on other rayment, and cary out the aszshes without the hoost, in to a cleane place.

The fyre vpon the altare shal burne, and neuer go out. The prest shal kyndle wode thereon euery mornyng, and dresse the burnt-offerynge vpon it, and burne the fat of the deed-offerynges thereon. The fyre shall euer burne vpon the altare, and neuer go out.

¶ And this is the lawe of the meat-offerynge, which Aarons sonnes shall offre before the LORDE vpon the altare. One of them shall Heue his handfull of fyne floure of ¶ meat-offerynge, and of the oyle, and all the frankincense that lyeth vpon the meat-offerynge, and shall burne it vpon the altare for a swete sauoure a remembraunce vnto the LORDE. As for the remnaunt, Aaron and his sonnes shal eate it, and vnteuend shal they eate it in the holy place, namely, in the court of the Tabernacle of witness. With leuē shal they not bake their porcion, which I haue geuen them of my offerynges. It shalbe vnto them most holy, as the synofferynge and trespac-offerynge. All the males amonge the children of Aaron shal eate of it. Let this be a perpetuall lawe for youre posterities in the sacrifices of the LORDE. No man shall touch it, excepte he be consecrated.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This shalbe the offerynge of Aaron and of his sonnes, which they shall offre vnto the LORDE in the daie of their anyointinge. The tenth parte of an Ephā of fyne floure for a meat-offerynge daylie, the one half parte in the mornyng, the other half parte at euen. In the panne with oyle shal thou make it, and brynge it fryed, and in peeces shalt thou offer it for the swete sauoure of the LORDE. And the prest which amonge his sonnes shalbe anyointed in his steade, shall do this. This is a perpetuall dewtye vnto the LORDE. It shal be burnt altogether: for all the meat-offerynges of the prest shalbe consumed with the fyre, and not be eaten.

¶ And ¶ LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the synofferynge: In the place where thou slayest ¶ burnt-offerynge, shalt thou slaye the synofferynge also before the LORDE. This is most holy. ¶ The prest that offereth the synofferynge, shal eate it in the holy place, in the court of ¶ Tabernacle of witness. No man shal touch ¶ flesh thereof, excepte he be halowed. And yf eny garment be sprenkled with the bloude of it, it shalbe washē in the holy place. And ¶ the earthē pot that it is sodden in, shalbe broken. But yf it be a brasen pot, it shalbe scoured, and rēsed with water. All ¶ males amonge the prestes shall eate thereof, for it is most holy. Notwithstandinge all ¶ synofferynge whose bloude is brought in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse to make an attouement, shall not be eaten, but burnt with fyre.

The viij. Chapter.

AND this is the lawe of the trespass-offerynge, and it shal be most holy. In the place where the burnt-offerynge is slayne, shall the trespass-offerynge be slayne also, & there shall of his bloude be sprenkled rounde aboute vpon the altare. And all his fat shalbe offered: the rompe and the fat & couereth the bowels, the two kydneyes with the fat & is theron vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a trespass-offerynge.

All the males amonge the prestes shal eate it in the holy place, for it is most holy: euen as the synofferynge, so shall the trespass-offerynge be also, they shall both haue one lawe: and it shal be the prestes, that recon-cyleth ther with. Loke which prest offereth eny mans burnt-offerynge, the skynne of the same burnt-offerynge that he hath offered, shalbe his. And euery meat-offerynge that is baked in the ouen, rosted vpon the gredyron, or fryed in the panne, shal be the prestes & offereth it. And euery meat-offerynge & is myngled with oyle, or drye, shal belonge vnto all Aaron sonnes, vnto one as well as another.

33 And this is & lawe of the health-offerynge, that is offered vnto the LORDE, * Yf they wyll offre a sacrifice of thankesgeuyng, then shal they offre vnleued cakes mingled with oyle, and swete wafers straked ouer with oyle, and fryed cakes of fyne floure mingled with oyle. This offerynge also shall they bryng vpon a cake of leuened bred, to the thank-offerynge of his health-offerynge: and of them all he shall offre one for an Heue-offerynge vnto the LORDE. And it shalbe the prestes, that sprenkleth the bloude of the health-offerynge. And the flesh of the thank-offerynge in his health-offerynges, shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offred, and there shall nothinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge.

And whether it be a vowe or a fre wyl-offerynge, it shalbe eaten the same daye that it is offred: yf ought be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, yet maye it be eaten. But loke what remaineth vnto & thirde daye of the flesh that is offred, it shalbe brent with the fyre. And yf eny man vpon the thirde daie eate of & offred flesh of his health-offerynge, he shall not be accepted that offred it. Nether shall it be rekened vnto him, but it shalbe refused. And loke which soule eateth therof, the same is giltye of a mysdede.

And the flesh that toucheth eny vncleane thinge, shal not be eaten, but burnt with the fyre. But who so euer is cleane of body, shal eate of the flesh: and the soule that eateth of & flesh of & health-offerynge which belongeth vnto the LORDE, his vnclennes be vpon him, and he shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And whan a soule toucheth eny vncleane thinge, whether it be an vncleane man, catell, or eny other abhominacion that is, and eateth of the flesh of the burnt-offerynge, that belongeth vnto the LORDE, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people.

And the LORDE talketh with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, & saye: * Ye shall eate no fat of oxen, lambes, and goates: neuerthelesse the fat of it that dyeth alone, and of such as is torne of wyld beasts, that maye ye occupye to all maner of vses, but ye shall not eate it.

For who so euer eateth the fat of & beast that is geuen vnto the LORDE for an offerynge, the same soule shalbe roted out from his people. Morouer, † ye shall eate no bloude, nether of catell, ner of foules, where so euer ye dwell. What soule eateth eny bloude, the same shall be roted out from his people.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Who so wyll offre his health-offerynge vnto the LORDE, the same shall also bryng with all, that belongeth vnto & health-offerynge for the LORDE. But he shall bryng it with his hande for the offerynge of the LORDE: namely the fat vpon the brest shall he bryng, with the brest, to be a Waue-offerynge before the LORDE. And the prest shal burne the fat vpon the altare, and the brest shalbe Aarons and his sonnes.

And the right shulder shal they geue vnto the prest for a gift of their health-offerynges. And loke which of Aarons sonnes offeth the bloude of the health-offerynges, and the fat, the same shall haue the right shulder for his parte. * For the Wauebrest and the Heue-shulder haue I taken of the children of Israel, and of their healthofferynges, and haue geuen them vnto Aaron the prest and vnto his sonnes for a perpetuall dewtye.

This is the anoyntinge of Aaron and of his sonnes, of the offerynges of the LORDE, in the daye whā Moses presented them to be prestes vnto the LORDE, what tyme as the LORDE commaunded (in the daye when he anoynted them) to be geuen them of the children of Israel for a perpetuall dewtye, and vnto all their posterities. And this is the lawe of the burnt-offerynge, of the meat-offerynge, of the synofferynge, of the trespass-offerynge, of the offerynge of consecracion, and of the healthofferynges, which the LORDE commaunded Moses vpon mount Sinai, in the daye when he gaue him in commaundement vnto the children of Israel, to offere their offerynges vnto ŷ LORDE in the wyldernesse of Sinai.

The viij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Take Aaron and his sonnes with him, ⁊ their vestimentes, ⁊ the anoyntinge oyle, ⁊ a bullocke for a synofferynge, two rammes, and a maunde with vneleuened bred, and call the whole congregacion together, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Moses dyd as the LORDE commaunded him, and gathered the congregacion together vnto the dore of ŷ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded to do.

B And he toke Aaron and his sonnes, and waszshed them with water, and put the albe vpō him, and girded him with the girdell, and put vpon him the yalowe tynyele, and put the ouerboddy cote vpon him, and girded him vpon the ouerboddy cote, ⁊ put the brestlappe theron, and in ŷ brestlappe light and perfectnesse: And set the myter vpon his heade. And vpon the myter euen aboue his foreheade, put he a plate of golde on the holy crowne: as ŷ LORDE commaunded Moses.

And Moses toke the anoyntinge oyle, ⁊ anoynted the Habitacion, and all that was therein, and consecrated it, and sprinkled therewith seue tynges vpon the altare, and anoynted the altare with all his vessels, the lauer with his fote, that it might be consecrated: ⁊ and poured the anoyntinge oyle vpon Aarons heade, and anoynted him, ŷ he might be consecrated.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and girded them with the girdle, and put bonettes vpon their heades, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he caused bringe a bullocke for a syn offrynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was he slayne. And Moses toke of the bloude, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of the altare rounde aboute with his fynger, and purified the altare, and poured the bloude vpon the botome of the altare, and consecrated it, that he might reconceyle it. And toke all the fat vpō the bowels, the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat theron, and burned it vpon the altare. But the bullocke with his skynne, flesh, ⁊ donge, burned he with fyre without the hoost, ⁊ as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he brought a ramme for a burnt-offerynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, ⁊ then was he slayne. And Moses sprenkled of ŷ bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, hewed the ramme in peces, and burnt the heade, the peces, and the fatt. And waszshed the bowels and the legges with water, and so burnt ŷ whole ramme vpō the altare. This was a burnt offerynge for a swete sauoure, euen a sacrifice vnto the LORDE, ⁊ as the LORDE commaunded him.

He brought also the other ramme of the offerynge of the consecracion. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their hādes vpon his heade, and then was it slayne. And Moses toke of his bloude, and put it vpon the typpe of Aarons right eare, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote.

And he brought Aarons sonnes, and put of the bloude vpon the typpe of the right eare of them, and vpon ŷ thombes of their righte handes, and vpon the greate toes of their righte fete, and poured the resydue of the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute. And he toke the fat and the rompe, ⁊ all the fat vpon the bowels, and the nett vpon the leuer, the two kydneyes with the fat thereon, and the righte shulder. And out of the maunde of vnuenended bred before the LORDE, he toke an vnuenēded cake, and a cake of oyled bred, and a wafer, and layed them vpon the fat, and vpon the right shulder, and put altogether vpon the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waued it for a Waueofferynge before the LORDE.

¶ And afterwarde toke he all agayne from their hondes, and burned them on the altare, euen vpon the burntofferynge: for it is an offerynge of consecracion for a swete sauoure, euen a sacrifice vnto ꝑ LORDE. And Moses toke the brest, and waued it a Waueofferynge before the LORDE, of the ramme of the offerynge of consecracion: the same was Moses parte, as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And Moses toke of ꝑ anoyntinge oyle, and of the bloude vpon the altare, and sprenkled it vpon Aaron and his vestimentes, vpon his sonnes and vpon their vestimentes, and so cōsecrated Aaron and his vestimentes, his sonnes and their vestimentes with him.

¶ And he sayde vnto Aaron and his sonnes: Seeth ꝑ flesh before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and there eate it, and the bred in ꝑ maunde of the cōsecracion offeringes, as it is cōmaunded me, and sayde: Aaron and his sonnes shall eate it. As for ꝑ which remaineth of the flesh it bred, ye shall burne it with fyre. And in seuē dayes shall ye not departe from ꝑ dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, vntyll the daye, ꝑ the dayes of youre consecracion offerynges be at an ende: for seuē dayes must youre handes be consecrated, as it is come to passe this daye: The LORDE hath cōmaunded to do it, that ye might be reconcyled. And ye shall tary before the Tabernacle of wytnesse daye and night seven dayes longe, and shall kepe ꝑ watch of ꝑ LORDE, that ye dye not, for thus am I cōmaunded. And Aaron with his sonnes dyd all, that ꝑ LORDE commaunded by Moses.

The ix. Chapter.

¶ AND vpon the eight daye Moses called Aaron and his sonnes, and the Elders in Israel, and sayde vnto Aaron: Take vnto the a yonge calfe for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge, both without blemysh, and bryng them before the LORDE, and speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Take an he goate for a synofferynge: and a calf, and a shepe, both of a yeaere olde, and without blemysh for a burntofferynge: and an ox and a ramme for a healthofferynge, that we maye offre before the LORDE: and a meatofferynge myngled with oyle. For to daye shall the LORDE appeare vnto you.

And they toke what Moses commaunded before ꝑ dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the whole cōgregacion came nye, and stode before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses: This is it, which the LORDE commaunded that ye shulde do, and then shall the glory of ꝑ LORDE appeare vnto you. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Go vnto ꝑ altare, and offre thy synofferynge and thy burntofferynge, and make an attonemēt for the and for the people. Then offre the peoples offerynge, and reconyle them also, as the LORDE hath commaunded.

¶ And Aaron wente vnto the altare, and slewe ꝑ calfe for his synofferynge, and his sonnes brought the bloude vnto him. And he dypte his fynger in the bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare, and poured ꝑ bloude vpon ꝑ botome of the altare. As for the fat and the kydneyes and the net vpon the leuer of the synofferynge, he burnt the vpon the altare, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses. The flesh also and the hyde burnt he with fyre without the hoost.

Afterwarde he slewe the burntofferynge, and Aarons sonnes brought the bloude vnto him, and he sprenkled it rounde aboute vpon the altare. And they brought him the burntofferynge in peces, and the heade: and he burnt it vpon the altare. And he washed the bowels and the legges, and burnt them aboue vpon the burntofferynge on the altare.

¶ Then brought he the offerynge of the people, and toke the goate, that synofferynge of the people, and slewe it, and made a synofferynge therof, as of the fyrst. And brought the burntofferynge, and dyd as the lawe is: and brought the meatofferynge, and toke his handfull, and burnt it vpon the altare, besyde the burntofferynge of the mornynge.

Afterwarde slewe he the ox and the ramme for the healthofferynge of the people. And his sonnes brought him the bloude, which he sprengled vpon the altare rounde aboute. But the fat of the oxe & of the ramme, the rompe, and the fat that couereth the bowels, & the kydneyes, & the net vpon the leuer, all soch fat laied they vpon the brest, and burnt the fat vpon the altare. But the brest and the right shulder waued Aaron for a Waue-offerynge before the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

And Aaron lift vp his hâde ouer the people, and blessed them, and came downe from the worke of the synofferynge, burntofferynge, and healthofferynge. And Moses and Aaron wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And whan they came out agayne, they blessed the people. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE vnto all the people. For there came a fyre from the LORDE, and vpon the altare it consumed the burntofferynge and the fat. Whan all the people sawe that, they reioysed, and fell vpon their faces.

The r. Chapter.

AND  $\hat{y}$  sonnes of Aaron, Nadab and Abihu,  $\hat{t}$ oke ether of the his censoure, & put fyre therin, & layed incense vpon it, and brought straunge fyre before the LORDE,  $\dagger$  which he commaunded them not. Then wente there out a fyre from  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and consumed them, so that they dyed before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron: This is it, that the LORDE sayde: I wil be sanctified vpō them that come nye me, and before all the people wil I be glorified. And Aaron helde his peace.

Moses called Misael and Elzaphan the sonnes of Vsiel Aarons vnclē, and sayde vnto them: Go to, and cary youre brethren out of the Sanctuary, without the hoost. And they wente, and caried them forth in their albes without the hoost, as Moses sayde.

Then sayde Moses vnto Aaron & to his sonnes Eleasar and Ithamar:  $\dagger$ Ye shall not vncouer youre heades, ner rente youre clothes, that ye dye not, and the wrath come vpon the whole congregacion: Let youre brethre of the whole house of Israel bewepeth this burnynge, which the LORDE hath done. As for you, ye shall not go out from the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, lest ye dye: for the anyontinge oyle of the LORDE is vpon you. And they dyd as Moses sayde.

The LORDE spake vnto Aaron, & sayde: Thou & thy sonnes with the shal drynke no wyne ner stronge drynke, whan ye go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse: that ye dye not. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto all youre posterities:  $\hat{y}$  ye maye haue knowlege to discerne, what is holy and vnholly, what is cleane & vncleane: & that ye maye teach the children of Israel all the lawes, which the LORDE hath spoken vnto you by Moses.

And Moses sayde vnto Aaron, and vnto Eleasar and Ithamar his sonnes that were left: Take the remnaunt of the meatofferynge in the sacrifices of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and eate it without leuen besyde the altare, for it is most holy, euen in the holy place shal ye eate it. For it is thy dutye and thy sonnes dutye in the sacrifices of the LORDE: for thus am I commaunded. But the Wauebrest and the Heueshulder shalt thou eate, and thy sonnes and thy daughters with the in a cleane place. For this dutye is geuen vnto the and thy children in the deedofferynges of the children of Israel. For the Heueshulder and the Wauebrest to the offerynges of the fat, shalbe brought in, that they maye be waued for a Waueofferynge before the LORDE. Therefore is it thine and thy childrens for a perpetuall dutye, as the LORDE commaunded.

And Moses sought for the goate of the synofferynge, and founde it burnt. And he was angrie at Eleasar and Ithamar  $\hat{y}$  sonnes of Aaron, which were left alyue, and sayde: Wherefore haue ye not eaten the synofferynge in the holy place? for it is most holy, & he hath geuen it you, that ye might beare  $\hat{y}$  synne of the cōgregacion, to make agrement for them before the LORDE. Beholde, the bloude of it came not in to the Sanctuary: Ye shulde haue eaten it in the Sanctuary, as I was commaunded.

Aaron sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, this daye haue they offred their synofferynge & their burntofferynge before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE. And it is chauned me after this maner. And shulde I eate of the synofferynge to daye, & be mery before the LORDE? Whan Moses herde that, he was content.

The xi. Chapter.

AND  $\gamma$  LORDE talked with Moses  $\tau$  Aaron  $\tau$  sayde: Speake vnto  $\gamma$  childrē of Israel, and saye: "These are the beestes which ye shal eate amonge all  $\gamma$  beestes vpō earth: What so euer hath hofte,  $\tau$  deuydeth it in to two clawes,  $\tau$  cheweth cud amonge the beestes, that shal ye eate. But loke what cheweth cud  $\tau$  hath hofte,  $\tau$  deuydeth it not, as the Camell, the same is vnclane vnto you,  $\tau$  ye shal not eate it. The Conyes clewe cud, but they deuyde not the hofte in to two clawes, therefore are they vnclane vnto you. The Hare cheweth cud also, but deuydeth not  $\gamma$  hofte in to two clawes, therefore is he vnclane vnto you. And the Swyne deuydeth  $\gamma$  hofte in to two clawes, but cheweth not the cud, therefore is it vnclane vnto you. Of the flesh of these shall ye not eate, ner touch their carcasses, for they are vnclane vnto you.

These shall ye eate of all that are in the waters: What so euer hath fynnes and scales in the waters, sees  $\tau$  ryuers, that shal ye eate. But what so euer hath not fynnes and scales in the sees and ryuers, amonge all  $\gamma$  moue in the waters,  $\tau$  of all that lyue in the waters, it shalbe an abhominacion vnto you, so that ye eate not of their flesh, and that ye abhorre their carcasses. For all that haue not fynnes  $\tau$  scales in the waters, shall ye abhorre.

C And these shal ye abhorre amonge  $\gamma$  foules, so that ye eate them not: The Aegle, the Goshauke, the Cormoraunte, the Vultur,  $\gamma$  Kyte, and all his kynde, and all Rauens with their kynde: the Estrich,  $\gamma$  Nightcrow, the Cocow, the Sparow hauke with his kynde, the litle Oule, the Storke, the greate Oule,  $\gamma$  Backe, the Pellycane, the Swanne, the Pye, the Heron,  $\gamma$  laye with his kynde, the Lapwyng, and  $\gamma$  Swalowe. And what so euer creepeth amonge the foules, and goeth vpon foure fete, shalbe an abhominacio vnto you. Yet these shal ye eate of the foules that crepe and go vpon foure fete: euen those that haue no knybes aboue vpon  $\gamma$  legges, to hoppe withall vpon earth. Of these maye ye eate, as there is the Arbe with his kynde, and the Selaam with his kynde,  $\tau$  the Hargol with his kynde,  $\tau$  the Hagab with his kynde. But what so euer els hath foure fete amonge the foules, it shalbe an abhominacion vnto you, and ye shal take it for vnclane. <sup>a</sup> Who so euer toucheth the carcase of soch, shall be vnclane vntill  $\gamma$  euen: and who so euer beareth the carcase of eny of these, shall wash his clothes, and shalbe vnclane vntyll the euen.

Therefore euery beest that hath hofte, and deuydeth it not in to two clawes,  $\tau$  cheweth not cud, shalbe vnclane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth soch, shalbe vnclane. And what so euer goeth vpon handes amonge  $\gamma$  beestes that go vpon foure fete, shalbe vnclane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth the carcasses of thē, shalbe vnclane vntyll euen. And he  $\gamma$  beareth their carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vnclane vntyll the eue: For soch are vnclane vnto you.

These shalbe vnclane vnto you also, <sup>3E</sup> amonge the beestes that crepe vpon earth:  $\gamma$  Wesell, the Mouse, the Tode, euery one with his kynde, the Heddehogge, the Stello, the Lacerte, the Suale, and the Moule, these are vnclane vnto you amonge all that crepe. Who so euer toucheth the deed carcase of thē, shalbe vnclane vntyll the euen. And what so euer eny soch deed carcase falleth vpon, it shalbe vnclane, what so euer vessell of wodd it be, or rayment, or skynne, or bagge. And euery vessell that eny thynge is occupied withall, shalbe put in the water, and is vnclane vntyll the euen, and then shal it be cleane. <sup>c</sup> All maner of earthen vessell that eny soch carcase falleth in to, shal all be vnclane that therin is,  $\tau$  ye shal breake it. All meate which is eatē, that eny soch water cometh in to, is vnclane:  $\tau$  all maner of drynke that is dronkē in all maner of soch vessell, is vnclane. And what so euer eny soch carcase falleth vpō, it shalbe vnclane, whether it be ouen or kettell, so shal it be brokē, for it is vnclane, and shalbe vnclane vnto you. Neuertheles the fountaynes, welles,  $\tau$  poundes of water are cleane. But who so euer toucheth their carcasses, is vnclane.

F And though the deed carcase of eny soch fell vpon the sede that is sowne, yet is it cleane. But whan there is water poured vpon the sede, and afterwarde eny soch deed carcase falleth theron, then shall it be vnclane vnto you.

Whan a beest dyeth that ye maye eate, he that toucheth the deed carcase therof, is vnleane vntyll euen. Who so eateth of eny soch carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vnleane vntyll the euen. Likewyse he that beareth eny soch carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vnleane vntyll the euen.

What so euer crepeth vpon earth, shall be an abhominacion vnto you, and shall not be eaten. And what so euer crepeth vpon  $\hat{y}$  bely, or all that goeth vpon foure or mo fete, amoge all that crepeth vpon earth, shall ye not eate, for it shalbe an abhominacion vnto you. Make not youre soules abhominable, and defyle you not in them, to stayne youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God. " Therefore shal ye sanctifie youre selues, that ye maye be holy, for I am holy. And ye shal not defyle youre selues on eny maner of crepyng beest, that crepeth vpon earth: for I am the LORDE, which brought you out of the londe of Egipte, that I might be youre God: therefore shal ye be holy, for I am holy.

This is the lawe ouer  $\hat{y}$  beestes and foules,  $\tau$  all maner of soules of crepyng beestes in the waters, and all maner of soules  $\hat{y}$  crepe vpon earth: that ye maie knowe to discerne what is vnleane  $\tau$  cleane, and what maner of beestes are to be eaten, and which are not to be eaten.

The iiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Whan a woman hath conceived, and beareth a manchilde, she shalbe vnleane seuen dayes, so longe as she suffreth hir disease, \* and in  $\hat{y}$  eight dayes shal  $\hat{y}$  flesh of his foreskynne be cut awaie. And she shal byde at home thre and thirtie dayes in  $\hat{y}$  bloude of hir purifienge: she shal touch no holy thinge, ner come in to  $\hat{y}$  Sactuary, tyll the daies of hir purifienge be out. But yf she beare a maydechilde, the shal she be vnleane two wekes, so longe as she suffreth hir disease, and sixe and thre score daies shall she byde at home in the bloude of hir purifienge.

<sup>33</sup>  $\dagger$  And whan the dayes of hir purifienge are out, for the sonne or for the daughter, she shal bryng a lambe of one yere olde for a burntofferynge, and a yonge pigeon or a turtill doue for a synofferynge to the dore of  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle of wytnesse vnto  $\hat{y}$  prest, which shal offre it before the LORDE, and make an attonemēt for her, and so shal she be censed from her bloudysseue. This is the lawe for her that beareth a manchilde or mayde childe.

<sup>34</sup> But yf she be not able to bringe a shepe, then let hir take two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons, the one for a burntofferynge, the other for a synofferynge, then shall the prest make an attonement for her, so that she shal be cleane.

The iiij. Chapter.

AND  $\hat{y}$  LORDE spake vnto Moses  $\tau$  Aaron,  $\tau$  sayde: Whan there ryseth vp eny thinge in the skynne of a mans flesh, whether it be a scabbe or a glistrynge whyte (as though there wolde be a leprosy in  $\hat{y}$  szkynne of his flesh) he shal be brought vnto Aaron the prest, or to one of his sonnes amonge  $\hat{y}$  prestes. And whan the prest seyth the plage vpon the szkynne of the flesh, that the hayres are turned to whyte, and it seme deper in that place then the other szkynne of his flesh, then is it surely a leprosy, therefore shal the prest loke vpon him, and iudge him vnleane.

But whan there is eny whyte plecte in the szkynne of his flesh, and yet seme no deper then the other szkynne of the flesh, and the hayres be not turned to whyte, the shal the prest shut him vp seuen dayes, and on  $\hat{y}$  seuenth daye loke vpon him: yf the plage seme vnto him as afore,  $\tau$  hath frett no deper in the szkynne, then shall the prest shut him vp yet seuen dayes mo. And whan he loketh on him agayne vpon the seuenth daye, and fyndeth, that the plage be darkish, and hath frett no deper in the szkynne, the shal he iudge him cleane, for it is but a szkryfe, and he shal wash his clothes,  $\tau$  then is he cleane.

But whan the scabbe fretteth farther in the szkynne (after that he is sene of the prest, and iudged cleane) and he be now sene of the prest agayne: whan the prest seyth the,  $\hat{y}$  the scabbe hath frett farther in the szkynne, he shal iudge him vnleane, for it is surely a leprosy.

Whan a plage of leprosy is vpō a man, he shalbe brought vnto the prest. Whan he seyth and fyndeth, that there is whyte rysen vp in the szkynne, and the hayre turned vnto whyte, and there be rawe flesh in the sore, thē is it surely an olde leprosy in ȝ skynne of his flesh, therefore shal the prest iudge him vncleane, and not shut him vp, for he is vncleane ailready.

But whan the leprosy breaketh out in the skynne, and couereth the whole skynne, from the heade vnto the fote, all that the prest can se, So whan the prest loketh vpon it, and fyndeth, that ȝ leprosy hath couered all the flesh, he shal iudge him cleane, for so moch as it is turned all in to whyte vpon him, for he is cleane.

Notwithstōdinge yf there be rawe flesh there, in the daye whan he is loked vpon, thē is he vncleane. And whan the prest seyth ȝ rawe flesh, he shall iudge him vncleane, for he is vncleane, ȝ it is surely a leprosy. But yf the rawe flesh chaunge agayne, and be turned in to whyte, then shall he come vnto the prest. And whan the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth, that the plage is turned to whyte, he shall iudge him cleane, for he is cleane.

Whan there is a byle in the skynne of eny mans flesh, and healeth agayne, and afterwarde in the same place there aryse vp eny whyte thinge, or a glisterynge whyte somwhat reedish, he shal be sene of the prest. So whan the prest, seyeth, that it appeareth to be lower then the other skynne, and the hayre turned to whyte, then shall he iudge him vncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy broken out of the byle. But yf the prest se and fynde, that the hayres are not whyte, and it not lower then the other skynne, and is darkysh, he shal shut him vp seuen dayes.

Yf it hath frett farther in the skynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy. But yf the glisterynge whyte abyde styll, and freate no farther, thē is it but a prynte of the byle, and the prest shal iudge him cleane.

Whan the skynne of eny mans flesh is hurt with fyre, and the prynte of the burninge be reedysh or whyte, and the prest loketh vpon him, and fyndeth the hayre turned to whyte vpon the mark of the burnyng, ȝ it apeare deper then the other skynne, thē is there surely a leprosy brokē out of ȝ prynte of ȝ burnyng: therefore shal ȝ prest iudge hī vncleane, for it is a plage of leprosy. But yf the prest se and fynde, that ȝ hayre vpon the prynte of the burninge is not turned vnto whyte, ȝ is no lower then the other skynne, and is darkish also, he shall shut him vp seuen dayes.

And vpon the seuenth daye he shall loke vpon him: yf it hath frett farther in ȝ skynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane, for it is a leprosy. But yf it stōde styll vpō the mark of the burnyng, and frett no farther in the skynne, and is darkysh, then is it a sore in ȝ mark of the burnyng, ȝ the prest shal iudge him cleane, for it is but the prynte of the burnyng.

Whan a man or woman is skyrue vpon the heade or beard, and the prest seyth the mark, and fyndeth that it appeareth deper then the other skynne, and the hayre be there goldē and thynne, then shal he iudge him vncleane: for it is a skyrfe of leprosy of the heade or of the beerde. But yf the prest se that ȝ skyrfe apeare no deper thē the skynne, and that the hayre is not of a pale colour, he shall shut him vp seue dayes. And vpō the seuenth daye whan he loketh, and fyndeth, that the skyrfe hath frett no farther, and there be no golden hayre there, and that the skyrfe appeare no deper then the other skynne, then let him be shauen: but so that he shauē not of the scabbe, and the prest shall shut him vp yet seuen dayes moo. And vpon the seuēth daye whā he loketh, and fyndeth that the skyrfe hath frett no farther in the skynne, and that it apeareth no deper then the other skynne, then shall the prest iudge him cleane. And he shall wash his clothes, for he is cleane. But yf the scabbe freate farther in the skynne (after ȝ he is iudged cleane) and the prest loketh, and fyndeth, that ȝ scabbe hath frett farther in the skynne, then shal he seke nomore for golden hayres, for he is vncleane. Neuerthelesse yf he se that the scabbe stondeth styll, ȝ that pale hayres are there rysen vp, then is ȝ scabbe hole, and he is cleane, therefore shall ȝ prest iudge him to be cleane.

Whā there is eny glisterynge whyte vpō ȝ skynne of the flesh of a man or woman, and the prest seyth there that the glisterynge whyte vauysheth: then is it but a whyte scabbe rysen vp in ȝ skynne, ȝ he is cleane.

Whan the hayres fall out of the heade of a man or a woman, so that he is balde, the same is cleane. Yf they fall out of his fore heade, then is he fore heade balde ȝ cleane. But yf there be a whyte reedish sore in the balde heade, or balde fore heade, then is there a leprosy rysen vp in the balde heade or balde foreheade: therfore shal þy prest loke vpon him. And when he fyndeth the whyte reedysh sore rysen vp in his balde heade or balde fore heade, then shal þy skynne of the flesh be as leporous, therfore is he a leporous man and vnclane. And the prest shall iudge him vnclane, because of þy same sore vpō his heade.

¶ When the plague of leprosy is in a cloth, whether it be wollen or linnen, in the warpe or weft, whether it be linnen or wollen, or in a skynne, or in eny maner thyng that is made of skynne. And when þy plage is pale or reedish in the cloth or skynne, either in the warpe or weft, or in eny maner thinge that is made of skynne, the same is surely the plague of leprosy, therfore shall the prest loke vpon it. And when he seyth the plage, he shal shut it vp seuen dayes. And vpon the seueñth daye when he seyth that þy plage hath frett farther in the cloth, in the warpe or weft, in a skynne or in eny maner thinge that is made of skynne, then is it a fretinge plague of leprosy, and is vnclane. And the cloth shal be burnt, either warpe or weft, whether it be wollen or lynnē, or eny thyng made of skynne, wherin is eny soch plage. For it is a plague of leprosy, and shal be burnt with fyre.

¶ But yf the prest se that the plage hath frete no farther in þy cloth, either in the warpe or weft, or eny thinge made of skynne, then shal he commaunde to wash the thinge that the plage is in, and shall shut it vp other seuen dayes. And when the prest seyth (after that the plage is waszshen) þy the plage is not chaūged before his eyes, and hath frett no farther also, yet is it vnclane, ⁊ shal be burnt with fyre: for it is depe fretē inwarde, and hath made skyrfes. Neuertheles when the prest seyth that the prynte is vanyshed after the washinge of it, then shall he rente it out of the clothe, and of the skynne, out of the warpe or weft. But yf it appeare eny more in the clothe (either in the warpe, or in the weft) or eny maner thinge made of skynne, then is it a waxinge plage: and with fyre shal it be burnt that eny soch plage is in. As for the cloth, either warpe or weft, or eny maner thyng made of skynne that is waszshē, and the plage be departed from it, it shalbe waszshen once agayne, ⁊ then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer the plage of leprosy in clothes, whether they be wollen or lynnē (ether in the warpe or in the weft) and in eny maner of thinge made of skynne, to iudge them cleane or vnclane.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ and sayde: This is the lawe ouer þy leper, when he shalbe censed. * He shall come vnto þy prest, and the prest shal go out of the hoost, and loke how the plage of leprosy is healed vpon the leper. And he shal commaunde him that is to be censed, to take two luyunge byrdes, which are cleane, and Ceder wodd, and purple woll, and ysope: and shall commaunde the one byrde to be kylled in an earthen vessell ouer springyng water. And he shall take the luyunge byrde with the Ceder wodd, the purple woll, and ysope, and dyppe them in the bloude of the slaine byrde vpon the springyng water, and sprengle it seuen tymes vpon him that must be censed from þy leprosy. And so cense him, and let the luyunge byrde flye at libertye in to the felde.

But he that is censed, shal wash his clothes, and shaue of all his hayre, and bathe him self with water, so is he cleane. Afterwarde let him go in to the hoost, yet shall he tarye without his tent seuen dayes. And vpon the seuenth daye shal he shaue of all þy hayre vpon his heade, vpō his beerde, vpon his browes, so that all the hayre be shauen of, and he shal wash his clothes and bathe his flesh in water, then is he cleane.

And vpō the eight daye shal he take two lambes without blemyshe, and a shepe of a yere olde without blemyshe, and thre tenth deales of fync floure for a meatofferynge, myngled with oyle, ⁊ a Logg of oyle. Thē shall the prest presente him that is censed and these thinges before the LORDE, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal take þy one lambe, and offre it for trespass offerynge, with the Logg of oyle, ⁊ shal waue them, before þy LORDE, and afterwarde slaye the lambe, where the synofferynge and burntofferynge are slayne, namely, in the holy place. For as the synofferynge, so is the trespase offerynge the prestes also, for it is most holy.

¶ But yf he be poore, and getteth not so moch with his hande, then let him take one lambe for a trespaseofferynge to waue it, to make an attonement for him, and a tenth deale of fyne floure myngled with oyle for a meatofferynge, and a Logg of oyle, and two turtill dones, or two yonge pigeons which he is able to get with his hande, let the one be a synofferynge, the other a burntofferynge: and let him brynge them vpon the eight daye of his clensynge vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE.

Then shall the prest take the lambe for the synofferynge, and the Logg of oyle, and shall waue them all before the LORDE, and sleve the lambe of the trespase offerynge: and take of y bloude of the same trespaseofferynge, and put it vpon the tpype of the righte eare of him that is elcled, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his righte fote, and poure of the oyle in to his

As for the remnaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shal put it vpon the tpype of the right eare of him that is elcled, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fote, enen aboue vpon y bloude of y trespaseofferynge. The other oyle in his hāde shal he poure vpon y heade of him y is elcled, to make an attonement for him before the LORDE. And afterwarde of the one of the turtill dones or yonge pigeons (acordinge as his handes are able to get) he shal make a synofferynge, of y other a burnt-offerynge, with the meatofferynge: and so shal the prest make an attonemēt for him that is elcled before the LORDE.

Let this be the lawe for the leper, which is not able with his hande to get, that belongeth vnto his clensynge.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Whan ye come in to the lande of Canaan, which I geue you to possesse: and yf there happen a plage of leprosy in any house of youre possession, then shal he that owneth the house, come and tell the prest, and saye: Me thynke there is as it were a plage of leprosy in my house. Then shal the prest commaunde to rydde all thyng out of the house or euer the prest go in to se y plage, lest all that is in the house be made vnclane. Afterwarde shall y prest go in, to se the plage.

Now whan he loketh, and fyndeth, y there be holowe strakes yalowe or reedish in the walles of the house, and they seme to be lower then the wall besyde, then shall he go out at the dore of the house, and shut vp the house for seuen dayes. And vpon the seuenth daye whan he commeth, and seyth that the plage hath fretten farther in the walles of the house, thē shall he commaunde to breake out the stones wherin the plage is, and to cast thē in a foule place without the cite, and the house to be scraped within rounde aboute, and the dust y is scraped of, to be poured without y cite in an vnclane place, and to take other stones, and put them in the place of the other, and to take other playster, and playster the house.

house playsterd of the new, thē shal the prest go in : and whan he seyth that the plague hath fretten farther in the house, then is there surely a fretinge leprosy in the house, and it is vnclane : therfore shal the house be broken downe, both the stones, and fy tymbre and all the dust of the house, and shal be caried out of the cite in to an vnclane place. And who so goeth in to the house, whyle it is shut vp, is vnclane vntyll fy euen. And he fy lyeth therin, or eateth therin, shal wash his clothes.

But yf the prest se (whā he goeth in) that this plague hath frett no farther in the house, after that the house is new playsterd, thē shal he iudge it to be cleane, for the plague is healed. And to a synofferinge for the house, he shal take two byrdes, Cedar wodd, and purple woll, and ysope, and slaye the one byrde in an erthen vessell vpon sprynginge water, and shall take the Cedar wodd, the purple woll, the ysope, and the lyuinge byrde, and dyppe them in the bloude of the slayne byrde vpon the sprynginge water, and sprenkle the house with all seue tynes : and so shal he purifie the house with the bloude of the byrde, with the springinge water, with the lyuinge byrde, with the Cedar wodd, with the ysope, and with the purple woll. And the lyuinge byrde shall he let flye at libertye out of the towne in to the felde, and make an attonement for the house, and then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer all maner plague of leprosy and skyrfe, ouer fy leprosy of clothes and of houses, ouer sores, scabbes, and glisteringe whyte, that it maye be knowne, whan eny thinge is vnclane or cleane. This is fy lawe of leprosy.

The xv. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses and Aaron, and sayde : Speake to the children of Israel, and saie vnto him : Whan a man hath a runnyng yssue from out of his flesh, fy same is vnclane : but thē is he vnclane by the reason of this yssue, whan his flesh is fretten of fy yssue or wounde. Euery bed where on he lyeth, and what so euer he sytteth vpon, shalbe vnclane.

And he that toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

And he fy sytteth where he sat, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euē. Who so toucheth his flesh, shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. Whan he spyteth vpon him, that is cleane, fy same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

And the saddell and what so euer he rydeth vpon, shalbe vnclane. And who so euer toucheth eny thinge that hath bene vnder him, shalbe vnclane vntyll the euen. And who so beareth eny soch, shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And whom so euer he toucheth, and washeth not his handes first, the same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. *Whan he toucheth an erthen vessell, it shal be broken : but the treen vessell shal be rensed with water. And whā he is cleane of his yssue, he shal nombre vij. dayes, after fy he is made cleane, and wash his clothes, and bathe him self with sprynginge water, thē is he cleane. And vpon the eight daye shal he take two turtill doves or two yonge pigeōs, and bryng them before the LORDE before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and geue them vnto the prest. And the prest shal make of the one a synofferinge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him before the LORDE, as concerninge his yssue.

Whan a mans sede departeth from him in slepe, the same shal bathe all his flesh with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And all clothes, and euery skynne that is stained with soch sede, shall he wash with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. A woman, by whom soch one lyeth, shall bathe hir self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen.

Whan a woman hath the bloude yssue of hir flesh, she shalbe put a parte vij. daies in to a sundrie place. Who so euer toucheth her, shal be vnclane vntyll the euē. And all that she lyeth vpon (as longe as she is put aparte) shalbe vnclane. And that she sytteth vpon, shalbe vnclane. And who so euer toucheth hir bed, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. And who so euer toucheth eny maner thinge that she hath sytten vpon, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vnclane vntyll the euē.

"And yf a man lye with her (whyle she is put a parte) he shalbe vncleane seuen dayes, and the bed that he laye vpon, shalbe vncleane.

¶ But whan a woman hath hir bloude yssue a longe season, not onely at the tyme of hir naturall course, but also out of the tyme of hir naturall course, then shall she be vncleane so longe as she hath the yssue: euē as she is at the tyme whan she is put aparte, so shall she be vncleane here also. What so euer she lyeth vpon all the tyme of hir yssue, shalbe as hir bed, whan she is put aparte. And all that she sytteth vpon, shalbe vncleane, as is hir vncleennesse, whan she is put aparte. Who so euer toucheth eny of them, shal be vncleane, and shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, & be vncleane vntyll the enen.

But yf she be cleane of hir yssue, thē shal she nombre seuen dayes, afterwarde shall she be cleane: and vpon the eight daye shall she take two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons, and brynge them vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shall make of the one a synofferynge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for her before the LORDE, as concuryngne the yssue of hir vncleennesse.

Thus shal ye se that the childrē of Israel kepe them selues from their vncleennesse, that they dye not in their vncleennesse, whan they defyle my habitacion, which is amōge you.

This is the lawe ouer him that hath a runnyng sore, & him whose sede departeth from him in slepe, so that he is vncleane therof. And ouer her that hath hir bloude yssue, and who so euer hath a runnyng sore, whether it be man or woman, and whan a man lyeth with her that is vncleane.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses (after that Aarons two sonnes were deed,* whan they offered before the LORDE) & sayde: Speake vnto Aaron thy brother, y he go not at all tymes in to the ynnnermer Sanctuary, within the vail before the Mercyseate, which is vpon the Arke, y he dye not: for I wyll appeare in a cloude vpon y Mercyseate. But herewithall shal he go in, euen with a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and with a ramme for a burntofferynge, and shal put on the holy linnen albe, and haue lynnen breches vpon his flesh, and gyrdle him with a lynnē girdell, and haue the linnen myter vpon his heade.

For these are y holy garmentes: & he shal bathe his flesh with water, & put them on: & of the cōgregacion of the childrē of Israel he shal take two he goates for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge.

And Aaron shal brynge the bullocke his owne synofferynge,† and make an attonemēt for himself and his house: and afterwarde shall he take the two goates, and present them before the LORDE, euen before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall cast lottes ouer the two goates: the lot of the one goate for the LORDE, and the other for the fre goate. And the goate that y LORDES lot fell vpon, shal he offre for a synofferynge. But the goate, that the fre goates lot fell vpon, shal he present alyue before y LORDE, to make an attonement for him, and to let the fre goate go in to y wyldernes. And so shal he brynge the bullocke of his synofferynge, and make an attonement for him and his housholde, and shal kyll him.

And he shall take a censor full of coales from the altare that stondeth before the LORDE, and his handfull of beaten incense, and brynge them in within y vayle, and put the incense vpon the fyre before y LORDE, that the cloude of the incense maye couer the Mercyseate, which is vpon the wytnesse, that he dye not. And he shall take of the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkle it with his fynger towarde the Mercyseate on the foresyde. Seuen tymes shall he sprenkle of the bloude thus with his fynger before the Mercyseate. Thē shal he kyll the goate which is the peoples synofferynge, & brynge in of his bloude within the vayle, & shall do with his bloude, as he dyd with the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkle therwith also on the foresyde towarde the Mercyseate, and so shal he reconyle the Sactuary from the vncleennesse of the childrē of Israel, and frō their trespases in all their synnes. Thus shal he do vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse, which is the habitacion with them amōge their vncleenneses.

And whā he goeth forth vnto the altare that stondeth before the LORDE, he shal reconeyle it, and shal take of ȝ bullockes bloude, and of the goates bloude, ⁊ put it vpon the hornes of the altare rounde aboute. And with his fynger shal he sprēkle of the bloude theron seuen tymes, and halowe it, and consecrate it from the vncleennesse of the children of Israel.

32 And whan he hath made an ende of reconeyling the Sanctuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altare, he shal bringe the lyuynge goate.

Thē shal Aaron laie both his hādes vpō ȝ heade of him, ⁊ confesse ouer him all the mysdedes of ȝ childrē of Israel, ⁊ all their trespases in their synnes, ⁊ shal laye thē vpō ȝ heade of the goate, ⁊ by some man ȝ is at hande, shal he let him runne in to the wilderness: ȝ the goate maye so beare all their mysdedes vpon him in to ȝ wyldernes, and he shal leaue him in the wyldernes.

And Aaron shal go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and put of the linnen clothes, which he put on whā he wente in to ȝ Sactuary, and shal leaue them there, and bathe his flesh with water in the holy place, and put on his awne rayment.

33 And he shal go forth, and make his burnt-offeringe, and the burnt-offeringe of the people, and make an attonement both for himself and for the people, and burne the fat of the syn-offerynge vpon the altare. But he ȝ caried out the fre goate, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, ⁊ then come in to the hoost.

The bullocke of the synofferynge, and ȝ goate of the synofferynge (whose bloude was brought in to the Sanctuary to make an attonemēt) shalbe caried out of ȝ hoost, ⁊ brent with fyre, both their skynnes, flesh, and donge. And he that burneth them, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and then come in to the hoost.

But the prest that is anoynted, and whose hande was fylled to be prest in his fathers steade, shal make this attonement, and shal put on the linnen clothes, namely the holy vestimētes, so shal he recōcyle the holy Sactuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altare, and ȝ prestes, and all the people of the congregation. * This shal be a perpetuall lawe vnto you, that ye reconeyle ȝ children of Israel from all their synnes once a yeaer. dye therin, whan they vnhalowe them selues in it. For I am y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, y<sup>e</sup> halowe them.

A straunger shal not eate of the holy thinges, ner an housholde gest of the prestes, ner an hyred seruaūt. But yf y<sup>e</sup> prest bye a soule for his money, y<sup>e</sup> same maye eate therof. And loke who is borne in his house, maye eate of his bred also. Neuertheles yf the prestes doughter be a straungers wife, she shal not eate of the Heueofferings of holynes. But yf she be a wedowe, or deuored, or haue no sede, & commeth agayne to hir fathers house as afore (whan she was yet a mayden in hir fathers house) then shall she eate of hir fathers bred. But no straunger shal eate therof.

Who so els eateth of the halowed thynges, vnwyttigly, shal put y<sup>e</sup> fifth parte there vnto, and geue it vnto the prest with the halowed thinge, that they vnhalowe not y<sup>e</sup> halowed thinges of the children of Israel, which they Heue vp vnto the LORDE, lest they lade them selues with myszdoinge and trespass, whā they eate their halowed thynges, for I am y<sup>e</sup> LORDE which halowe thē.

And y<sup>e</sup> LORDE talked with Moses, & saide: Speake vnto Aaron & his sonnes, & to all y<sup>e</sup> childrē of Israel: What so euer Israelite or straunger in Israel wyll do his offeringe, whether it be their vowe, or of fre wyl, that they wyll offre a burnt offeringe vnto the LORDE, to reconyle them selues, it shal be a male, and without blemish, of the oxen, or lambes or goates. What so euer hath eny blemish, shal they not offre, for they shal fynde no fauoure therwith.

And who so wyl offre an health offeringe vnto the LORDE to separate out a vowe, or of fre wyl, oxen or shepe, it shalbe without blemish, y<sup>e</sup> it maye be accepted. It shal haue no deformite. Yf it be blynde, or brokē, or wounded, or haue a wen, or skyrre, or scabbed, they shal offre none soch vnto the LORDE, ner put an offeringe of eny soch vpō the altare of the LORDE.

An oxen or shepe y<sup>e</sup> hath myszshappē membres, or no rumpe, mayest thou offre of a fre wyl: but to a vowe it maye not be accepted. Thou shalt offre also vnto the LORDE nothinge y<sup>e</sup> is brused, or broken, or rent, or cutt out, & ye shal do no soch in youre londe. Moroner ye shall offre no bred vnto youre God of a straungers hande: for it is marred of him, and he hath a deformite, therfore shal it not be accepted for you.

D And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Whā an oxe, or lābe, or goate is brought forth, it shal be seuen dayes with the dame, and vpon the eight daye ⁊ thereafter it maie be offered vnto the LORDE, thē is it accepted. Whether it be oxe or lambe, it shall not be slayne with his yonge in one daye.

But whā ye wil offere a thākoffringe vnto the LORDE ⁊ it maye be accepted, ye shal eate it the same daye, ⁊ kepe nothings ouer vntyll the mornynge: for I am the LORDE. Therefore kepe now my commaundementes, and do them: for I am the LORDE, ⁊ ye vnhalowe not my holy name, ⁊ that I maye be halowed amonge the children of Israel. For I am he that halowe you, euē ⁊ LORDE, which brought you out of ⁊ lōde of Egypte, ⁊ I might be youre God: Euen I ⁊ LORDE.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake vnto ⁊ children of Israel, and saye vnto them: These are ⁊ feastes of the LORDE, which ye shal call holy dayes. Sixe dayes shalt thou worke, but the seuenth daie is the rest of the Sabbath, and shalbe called holy. Ye shal do no worke therin, for it is the Sabbath of the LORDE, where so euer ye dwell.

These are the feastes of the LORDE, ⁊ are called holy, which ye shal call youre feastes: * Vpon ⁊ fourtene daye of ⁊ first moneth at euen, is the LORDES Easter. And vpon ⁊ fiftene daye of the same moneth is the feast of vneleued bred of the LORDE. Then shall ye eate vneleued bred seuen dayes.

B The first daie shalbe called holy amonge you, ⁊ ye shal do no worke of bōdage therin, ⁊ seūē daies shal ye offere vnto ⁊ LORDE. The seūēth daie shalbe called holy likewise, wherin ye shal do no worke of bondage also.

And ⁊ LORDE talked with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake to the childrē of Israel, ⁊ saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande ⁊ I shall geue you, and reape downe youre haruest, ye shal brynge a shefe of the first frutes of youre haruest vnto the prest, thē shal the shefe be waied before the LORDE, that ye maye be accepted: but this shal the prest do the nexte daye after the Sabbath. And ⁊ same daie that youre shefe is waied, shalye offere a burnt-offeringe vnto the LORDE, of a lambe which is without blemish and of one yere olde, with the meat-offerynge, two tenth deales of fyne floure mengled with oyle, for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE: ⁊ the drynkofferynge also, euē the fourth parte of an Hin of wyne.

And ye shall eate nether bred, nor cakes, ner furmentye (of new corne) tyll the same daye that ye brynge an offerynge vnto youre God. This shalbe a lawe vnto youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell.

Then shal ye nombre (from the nexte daye after the Sabbath, whan ye brought ⁊ Waueshefe) seuen whole wekes, vntyll the nexte daie after ⁊ seūēth weke, namely, fiftie daies, shal ye nombre, and offere new meat-offerynges vnto the LORDE. And out of all youre dwellings shal ye offere, namely, two Waue loaves of two tenth deales of fyne floure leuēded, and baken for the first frutes vnto ⁊ LORDE. And with youre bred ye shal brynge seuen lambes of one yere olde without blemish, and a yonge bullocke, and two rammes: this shalbe the LORDES burnt-offerynge, meat-offerynge, and drynkofferynge. This is a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

Morouer ye shal offere an he goate for a synofferynge, and two lambes of a yere olde for an healthofferynge. And ⁊ prest shal waue it vpon the bred of the first frutes before the LORDE with the two lambes. And they shalbe holy vnto the LORDE, and shal be the prestes. And this daye shal ye proclame, for it shalbe called holy amonge you: no seruyll worke shal ye do therin. A perpetuall lawe shall it be amonge youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell.

Whan ye reape downe ⁊ haruest of youre lande, ye shal not cut it cleane downe vpon the felde, ner gather vp all, but shal leaue it for the poore and straungers. I am the LORDE youre God.

And ⁊ LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, ⁊ saye:† Vpon the first daye of the seuenth moneth shal ye haue the holy rest of the remembraunce of blowinge, wherin ye shal do no seruyle worke, and ye shal offre sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: * Vpon the tenth daye in this seuenth moneth is the daye of reconeylinge, which shalbe an holy conuocacion with you. Ye shal humble youre soules therin, and offre vnto the LORDE, and shal do no seruyle worke in this daye: for it is the daye of attonement, that ye maye be reconeyled before the LORDE youre God. For what soule so euer humbleth not him self vpon this daye, the same shalbe roted out from amonge his people. And what soule so euer doth eny worke this daye, the same wil I destroye from amonge his people: therfore shall ye do no worke. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto youre posterities, where so euer ye dwell. It is the rest of youre Sabbath, that ye maye humble youre soules. Vpon the nyenth daye of y moneth at euen, shal ye kepe this holy daie from the euen forth vntyll the eue agayne.

¶ And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: * Vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, is the feast of Tabernacles seuen dayes vnto the LORDE. The first daye shal be an holy conuocacion: no seruyle worke shal ye do therin. Seuen dayes shal ye offre vnto the LORDE. The eight daye shalbe an holy conuocacion vnto you also, and ye shal offre vnto the LORDE: for it is the daye of gatheringe together: No seruyle worke shal ye do therin.

These are the holy daies of the LORDE, which ye shall proclame and holde for holy conuocacions, that ye maye offre vnto the LORDE burntofferienges, meatofferienges, drynkeofferienges and other offerienges, euery one acordinge to his daye, besyde y Sabbathes of y LORDE, and youre giftes, and voves, and frewylofferienges, that ye offre vnto the LORDE.

¶ So vpon the fiftene daye of the seuenth moneth, whan ye haue brought in the increase of the loude, ye shall kepe the LORDES feast seuen dayes longe. The first daye shalbe kepte holy daie, and the eight daye shalbe kepte holy daie also. And vpon the first daie ye shal take of y goodly frutefull trees, branches of palme trees, ⁊ bowes of thicke trees, and Wyllies of the broke, and seue dayes shal ye be mery before y LORDE youre God: and thus shal ye kepe the feast vnto the LORDE seuen dayes in the yeaere. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posterities, that they kepe holy daie thus in y seuenth moneth. Seuen dayes shal ye dwell in bothes. Who so euer is an Israelite borne, shal dwell in bothes, that they which come after you, maye knowe, how that I made y children of Israel to dwell in bothes, whan I brought them out of the lode of Egipte. I am the LORDE youre God. And Moses tolde the children of Israel these holy daies of the LORDE.

The xliiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: * Comaunde the children of Israel, that they brynge pure oyle olyue beaten for lightes, that it maye be allwaye put in the lampes, without before the vayne of wytnesse in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Aaron shall dresse it allwaye at euen ⁊ in y mornynge before the LORDE. Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto your posterities. The lāpes shal he dresse vpon the pure candilsticke before the LORDE perpetuallly.

And thou shalt take fyne floure, and bake twolue cakes therof: two tēth deales shal euery cake haue, ⁊ thou shalt laye them sixe on a rowe vpō the pure table before the LORDE. And vpon the same shalt thou laye pure frankencense, that it maye be bred of remembraunce for an offerynge vnto y LORDE. Euery Sabbath shal he prepare thē before the LORDE allwaye, and receaue them of the children of Israel for an euerlastinge couenaunt. * And they shalbe Aarons ⁊ his sonnes, which shal eat them in the holy place. For this is his most holy of the offerynges of the LORDE for a perpetuall dewtye.

And there wente out an Israelitish womans sonne, which was the childe of a man of Egipte (amonge the children of Israel) and stroue in y hoost with a man of Israel, ⁊ named the name of God blasphemously, ⁊ cursed. Then brought they him vnto Moses. His mothers name was Selomith, the daughter of Dibri, of the trybe of Dan. * And they put him in preson, tyll they were infourmed by the mouth of the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Brynge him that cursed, out of the hoost, and let all thē that herde it, laye their handes vpon his heade, and let the whole congregacion stone him. And saye vnto the childre of Israel: † Who so euer blasphemeth his God, shall beare his synne: and he that blasphemeth the name of the LORDE, shall dye the death. The whole congregaciō shal stone him. As the straunger, so shal he of the housholde be also. ‡ Yf he blaspheme the name, he shal dye.

¶ He that slayeth a man, shall dye † death, but ¶ he that slayeth a beest, shall paye for it. Soule for soule. And he maymeth his neyghboure, it shall be done vnto him, euen as he hath done: broke for broke, † eye for eye, tothe for tothe: euen as he hath maymed a man, so shal it be done vnto him agayne, so that, who so slayeth a beest, shall paye for it: But he that slayeth a man, shal dye. There shal be one maner of lawe amonge you, to † straunger as to one of youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God.

Moses tolde the children of Israel. And they brought him that had cursed, out of † hoost, and stoned him. Thus dyd the childre of Israel as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

The xrb. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE talked with Moses vpon mount Sinai, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: ¶ Whan ye come in to the londe, † I shal gene you, the londe shal rest vnto the LORDE, so that thou sowe thy felde sixe yeares, and sixe yeares cut thy vyues, and gather in the frutes. But in the seuenth yeare the lōde shal haue his Sabbath of rest for a Sabbath vnto the LORDE, wherin thou shalt not sowe thy felde ner cut thy vyues.

Loke what growth of it self after thy haruest, thou shalt not reape it. And the grapes that growe without thy labour, shalt thou not gather, for so much as it is the yeare of the londes rest: ¶ But the rest of the londe shalt thou kepe for this intent, that thou mayest eate therof, thy seruante, thy mayde, thy hyrelinge, thy gest, thy straūger with the, thy eatell, and the beestes in thy londe. All the increase shal be meate.

And thou shalt nombre seuen of these yeare Sabbathes, that seuen yeares maye be tolde seuen tymes, and so the tyme of the seuen yeare Sabbathes make nyne and fourtye yeares. Then shalt thou let the blast of the horne go thorow all your londe, vpon the tenth daye of the seuenth moneth, euen in † daye of attonement. And ye shal halowe the fiftieth yeare, and shall call it a fre yeare in † londe, for all them that dwell therein: for it is the yeare of Iubilye. § Then shall euery one amonge you come agayne to his possession and to his kynred: for the fiftieth yeare is † yeare of Iubilye. Ye shal not sowe ner reape it that growth of it self, ner gather the grapes, that growe without labour. For the yeare of Iubilye shall be holy amonge you. But loke what the felde beareth, that shall ye eate. This is the yeare of Iubilye, wherin ye shal come againe euery man to his owne.

Now whan thou sellest ought vnto thy neyghboure, or byest eny thinge of him, there shal none of you oppresse his brother: but accordinge to the nombre of the yeare of Iubilye shalt thou bye it of him: and accordinge to the nombre of the yeares of increase shall he sell it vnto the. Accordinge to the multitude of the yeares shalt thou rayse the pryce, and accordinge to the fewnesse of the yeares shalt thou mynish the pryce: for he shall sell it vnto the accordinge to the nombre of the increase. Therefore let no man defraude his neyghboure, but feare thy God. For I am the LORDE youre God. Wherefore do after my statutes, and kepe my lawes, so † ye do them that ye maye dwell safe in the londe. For the londe shal geue you hir frute, so that ye shal haue ynough to eate, and dwell safe therein.

And yf ye wolde saye: What shall we eate in the seuenth yeare, in as moch as we shal not sowe, ner gather in oure increase? I wyl sende my blessinge vpon you in the sixte yeare, that it shal brynge forth frute for three yeare: so that ye shal sowe in † eight yeare, and eate of the olde frute vntyll the nyenth yeare, that ye maye eate of the olde tyll new frutes come agayne. Therefore shall ye not sell the londe for euer, *for the lode is myne. And ye are straungers and indwellers before me. And in all youre lande shall ye geue the londe to lowse.

<sup>3E</sup> He that selleth a dwellinge house within the wallis of the cite, hath an whole yeare respyte to lowse it out agayne: that shall be the tyme, wherein he maye redeme it. But yf he redeme it not afore the whole yeare be out, then shal he that bought it, and his successours kepe it for euer, and it shall not go out lowse in the yeare of Iubilye. Neuertheles yf it be an house in a vyllage that hath no wall aboute it, it shall be counted like vnto the felde of the cōtre, and maye be redemed and shal go out fre in the yeare of Iubilye.

The cities of the Lewites, and the houses in the cities that their possession is in, maye allwaye be redemed. Who so purchaceth ought of the Lewites, shal leaue it in the yeare of Iubilye, whether it be house or cite that he hath had in possession. For the houses in the cities of the Lewites are their possession amonge the children of Israel. But the felde before their cities shal not be solde, for it is their awne for euer.

which haue brought you out of the lode of Egipte, to geue you the lande of Canaan, and to be youre God.

<sup>b</sup>Whan thy brother waxeth poore besyde the, and selleth himself vnto the, thou shalt not holde him as a bōde mā: but as an hyred seruaunte and as a sojourner shal he be with the, and serue the vntyll  $\text{f}$  yeare of Iubilye. Then shal he departe lowse from the,  $\text{t}$  his childrē with him,  $\text{t}$  shal returne to his awne kinred, and to his fathers possession: for they are my seruautes, whom I brought out of the londe of Egipte. Therefore shal they not be solde like bondmen. And thou shalt not raigne ouer them with crueltie, but shalt feare thy God. But yf thou wylt haue bōde seruautes and maydens, thou shalt bye them of the Heithen, that are rounde aboute you: of the children of the sojourners and straungers amonge you, and of their generacions with you, and that are borne in youre londe, the same shal ye haue for bonde seruautes,  $\text{t}$  shal possesse them,  $\text{t}$  youre children after you for an euerlasting possession, these shalbe youre bondmen. <sup>3</sup>But ouer youre brethren the children of Israel, there shall none of you raigne ouer another with crueltie.

Whan a straunger or sojourner waxeth ryche <sup>3G</sup>by the, and thy brother waxeth poore besyde him,  $\text{t}$  selleth him self vnto  $\text{f}$  straunger or sojourner by the, or to eny of his kynne, then shall he haue right (after that he is solde) to be redemed agayne. And eny of his brethren maye lowse him out: or his vnclē or his vnclēs sonne, or eny other kynszman of his kynred: Or yf his awne hande getteth so moch, he shal lowse him self out, and shal reken with him that bought him, from  $\text{f}$  yeare that he solde him self, vntyll the yeare of Iubilye. And  $\text{f}$  money shal be counted accordinge to the nombre of the yeares that he was solde, and his wages of the whole tyme shalbe rekened withall.

Yf there be yet many yeares vnto  $\text{f}$  yeare of Iubilye, then shal he (accordinge to the same) geue the more for his delyueraunce, therafter as he is solde. Yf there remayne but few yeares vnto the yeare of Iubilye, then shall he geue agayne therafter for his redemption. And his wages from yeare to yeare shall he reken withall, and thou shalt not let

The xxiij. Chapter.

A Yf ye wyll walke now in my statutes, and kepe my commaundementes and do them, the wyl I geue you rayne in due season, and y<sup>e</sup> londe shal geue hir increase, and the trees of y<sup>e</sup> felde shal brynge forth their frute. And the threszhinge tyme shall reache vnto the wyne haruest, and the wyne haruest shal reache vnto the sowynge tyme. And ye shall eate youre bred in plenteousnes, and shal dwell safe in youre londe. I wyl geue peace in youre londe, so that ye shall slepe, and no man shall make you afraied. I wyl ryd euell beestes out of youre londe, and there shall no swerde go thorow youre londe.

Ye shal chace youre enemies, & they shal fall in to y<sup>e</sup> swerde before you. †Fyue of you shal chace an hundreth: and an hundreth of you shal chace ten thousande. For youre enemies shall fall in to the swerde before you.

B And I wyl turne me vnto you, and wyl cause you to growe and increase, and wyl set vp my couenaunt with you. And ye shal eate of the olde stoare, and shall let go the olde for plenteousnesse of the new. ‡I will haue my dwellynge amonge you, and my soule shall not refuse you. And I wyll walke amonge you, and wyl be youre God, and ye shalbe my people. For I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the londe of Egipte, that ye shulde not be their bondnmen. And I haue brokē the cepter of youre yocke, and caused you to go vp right.

§ But yf ye wil not harken vnto me, ner do all these commaundementes, and wyl despyse my statutes, and yf youre soules refuse my lawes, y<sup>e</sup> wyll not do all my commaunde-

mentes, & shal let my couenaunt stonde, then wyll I do this agayne vnto you. I wyl vyset you shortly with swellynge and feuers, which shal destroye y<sup>e</sup> eyes, & consume awaie y<sup>e</sup> hert. Ye shal sowe youre sede in vayne, and youre enemies shal eate it vp.

¶ And I wyl set my face agaynst you, and ye shal be slayne before youre enemies. And they that hate you, shal haue dominion ouer you. § And ye shall flye, whā no man chaseth you.

But yf ye wyll not herken vnto me for all this, then wyl I make it yet seven tymes more, to punysh you for youre synnes, that I maye breake y<sup>e</sup> pryde of youre strength, and wyl make youre heauen lyke yron, and youre earth as brasse: and youre trauaile and labour shall be but lost, so that youre londe shall not geue hir increase, and the trees in the londe shal not brynge forth their frute.

Yf ye walke yet agaynst me, and wyll not harken vnto me, then wyl I make it yet seven tymes more, to punysh you because of youre synnes: & wyl sende wyld beestes amōge you, which shal robbe you, and destroye youre catell, and make you fewer, and youre hye waye shal become waist.

But yf ye wyl not yet be reformed here withall, and wyll walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I walke contrary vnto you also, & wyl punysh you yet seven tymes for youre synnes. ¶ And I wyl brynge vpon you a swerde of vengeance, which shall auenge my Testament. And though ye gather you together in to youre cities, yet wyll I sende the pestilence amonge you, and wyll delyuer you in to the handes of youre enemies. For I wil destroye youre prouysion of bred, so y<sup>e</sup> ten women shall bake youre bred in one ouen, and youre bred shal be delyuered out by weight. ¶ And whan ye eate, ye shall not haue ynough.

Yf ye wyl not yet for all this harken vnto me, & wyl walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I also walke cōtrary vnto you in wrathfull displeasure, and wyl punysh you sevenfolde because of youre synnes, so that ye shal eate the flesh of youre sonnes and daughters. Thus wyl I make the londe desolate, so that youre enemies shall dwell therin, and make it waist: but you will I scatter amonge the Heythen, and drawe out the swerde after you, so that youre londe shal be waist, & youre cities desolate.

F Then shall the londe reioyse in hir Sabbathes, as longe as it lyeth wayst, and ye be in the enemies londe. Yee then shal the londe kepe holy daye, and reioyse in hir rest, as longe as it lieth wayst, because it coude not rest in youre Sabbathes, whan ye dwelt therin.

And ye shall not be so bolde, as to withstonde youre enemies, and shal perishe amonge the Heithen, and the londe of youre enemies shal eate you vp.

And they that are left of you, shall pyne awaye in their myszdede, euen in the enemies londe, and in the myszdedes of their fathers shall they consume awaye. Then shall they knowlege their myszdedes, and the myszdedes of their fathers in the trespass, wherwith they haue trespased agaynst me, and walked contrary vnto me. Therefore wyl I also walke contrary vnto thē, and wyl brynge them in to the enemies londe.

G Then shal they vncircumcysed herte be tamed. And then shal they ende their myszdedes. And I shal thinke vpō my couenaunt with Iacob, and vpon my couenaunt with Isaac, and vpon my couenaunt with Abraham, and wyl thynke vpon the lode. As for the londe, whan it shalbe left of them, it shal reioyse in hir Sabbathes, euen then, whan it lyeth waist, and they tyle it not. And they shal make attonement for their myszdedes, because they despyed my lawes, & their soules refused my statutes. Morouer I haue not so refused them, that they shulde be in the enemies londe: nether haue I so vtterly abhorred them, that I wolde brynge them to naught, and breake my couenaunt with them:

for I am ȝ LORDE their God. And for their sake I wyl remēbre *my first couenaunt, whā I brought them out of ȝ londe of Egipte in the sight of the Heythen, ȝ I might be their God. Euen I the LORDE.

These are the ordinaunces, statutes and lawes, which ȝ LORDE made betwixe him and the children of Israel vpon mount Sinai, by the hande of Moses.

The xxvij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, & ȝ sayde: Speake to ȝ children of Israel, & saye vnto them: Yf eny man make a speciall vowe vnto ȝ LORDE, so ȝ he pryse a soule, then shal this be the valuation: A mā of twentye yeare olde vnto the thre score yeare, shalt thou set at fiftie syluer Sycles, after the Syele of the Sanctuary: but a woman at thirtie Sycles. Yf it be fyue yeare olde vnto twentye yeare, thou shalt set it at twentye Sycles, whan it is a man childe: <sup>a</sup>but a woman at ten Sycles. Yf it be a moneth olde vnto fyue yeare, thou shalt set it at fyue Sycles of syluer, whan it is a māchilde: but a woman at thre Syluer Sycles. Yf he be thre score yeare olde and aboue, thē shalt thou set him at fiftene Sicles whā it is a mā: a womā at tē Sicles. Yf he be to poore so to be set, thē let him present himself to ȝ prest, & ȝ prest shal value him. Neuertheles he shal value him, acordinge as ȝ hāde of him that vowed, is able to get. But yf it be a beest ȝ maye be offred vnto ȝ LORDE, all ȝ is offred vnto ȝ LORDE of soch, is holy: it shal not be altered ner changed, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good. Yf eny man chaunge it, one beest for another, then shal they both be holy vnto ȝ LORDE. But yf ȝ beest be vncleane which maye not be offred vnto ȝ LORDE, thē shal it be set, before ȝ prest, and ȝ prest shal value it, whether it be good or bad, & it shal stonde at the prestes valyunge. But yf eny man wil bye it out, he shal geue the fifth parte more, to that it was set at.

Whan eny mā sanctifieth his house vnto the LORDE for ȝ Sanctuary, the prest shall value it, whether it be good or bad. And as the prest valueth it, so shal it stonde. But yf he ȝ sanctified it, wyl redeeme it, he shal geue ȝ fifth parte of syluer therto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his.

¶ Yf eny man halowe a pece of lode of his heretage vnto the LORDE, it shalbe set acordinge to ſ̄ it beareth. Yf it beare an Homer of barlye, it shalbe valued at fiftye Cycles of syluer. But yf he halowe his londe immediatly from the yeare of Iubilye forth, then shal it be set acordinge to ſ̄ value therof. Yf he haue halowed it after the yeare of Iubilye, then shal the prest rekē it, acordinge to ſ̄ yeares ſ̄ remayne vnto ſ̄ yeare of Iubilye, ⁊ thereafter shal he set it the lower.

But yf he ſ̄ sanctified the londe, wil redeme it agayne, then shal he geue the fifth parte of syluer therto, aboue that it was set at: So shal it be his. Yf he wil not lowse it out, but selleth it vnto another, then shal he redeme it nomore: but the same londe whan it goeth out fre in ſ̄ yeare of Iubilye, shal be holy vnto the LORDE, as a dedicated felde, and shalbe the prestes inheritaunce.

*The first borne amonge ſ̄ catell (which belongeth vnto the LORDE) shall no man Sanctifie vnto the LORDE, whether it be oxen or shepe, for it is the LORDES all ready. But yf there be eny vncleane thing vpon the beest, thē shal it be lowsed out thereafter as it is worth, and the fifth parte shalbe geuen more therto. Yf he wil not redeme it, thē let it be solde, as it is worth.

There shall no dedicated thinge be solde ner bought out, ſ̄ eny man dedicateth vnto ſ̄ LORDE, of all ſ̄ is his good, whether it be mē, catell or lode. For euery dedicated thinge, is most holy vnto ſ̄ LORDE. There shal no dedicated thinge of mā be bought out, but shal dye the death. All the tythes in the londe, both of the sede of the londe, ⁊ of ſ̄ frutes of the trees, are the LORDES, ⁊ shal be holy vnto the LORDE. But yf eny man wil redeme his tithes, he shall geue the fifth parte more therto. And all the tithes of oxen ⁊ shepe, ⁊ that goeth vnder the rod, the same is an holy tythe vnto the LORDE. It shall not be axed whether it be good or bad, nether shall it be chaunged. But yf eny man chaunge it, then both it ⁊ that it was chaunged withall, shal be holy, ⁊ not redemed.

These are the cōmaundementes, which ſ̄ LORDE gaue Moses in charge vnto childre of Israel vpon mount Sinai.

The first Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in ſ wyldernesse of Sinai, in the Tabernacle of witnesse, the first daye of the secōde moneth in the seconde yeaere, whā they were gone out of the lāde of Egipte, and sayde :

* Exo. 30. b. Nu. 26. a.

* Take ſ summe of the whole congregacion of the children of Israel, after their kynredes & their fathers houses, with the nombre of the names, all that are males, heade by heade, frō twentye yeaere and aboue, as many as are able to go forth in to ſ warre in Israel. And ye shal nombre them accordinge to their armyes thou and Aaron, and of enery trybe ye shal take vnto you one captayne ouer his fathers house.

These are the names of the captaynes that shal stonde with you. Of Ruben, Elizur the sonne of Seduc. Of Simeon, Selumiel the sonne of Zuri Sadai. Of Iuda, Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. Of Isachar, Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar. Of Zabulon, Eliab the sonne of Helon. Amonge the children of Ioseph: Of Ephraim, Elisama & sonne of Amihud. Of Manasse, Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur. Of Ben Iamin, Abidam & sonne of Gedeon. Of Dan, Ahieser the sonne of Ammi Sadai. Of Asser, Pagiel the sonne of Oclram. Of Gad, Eliasaph & sonne of Deguel. Of Nephthali, Ahira the sonne of Enan.

These are the awncient men of the congregacion, the captaynes amonge the trybes of their fathers, which were heades and prynces in Israel.

And Moses & Aaron toke them (like as they are there named by name) and gathered the whole cōgregacion together also, & first daye of the secōde moneth, and rekened thē after their byrth, accordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses by their names, frō twētye yeare and aboue, heade by heade, as the LORDE commaunded Moses, and nombred them in the wyldernes of Sinai.

The children of Ruben Israels first sonne, their kynreds & generacions after their fathers houses, in & nombre of their names heade by heade, all & were males, from twentye yeare & aboue, and were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Ruben, sixe and fourtye thousande, and fyue hundred.

The children of Simeon their kynreds & generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names heade by heade, all that were males from twentye yeare and aboue, and were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Symeon, nyne and fiftye thousande and thre hundred.

The children of Gad their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in & nombre of the names, from twentye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Gad, fyue and fourtye thousande, sixe hundred and fiftie.

The children of Iuda their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in & nombre of the names, from twentye yeare and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Iuda, foure and seuentye thousande, & sixe hundred.

The children of Isachar their kynreds & generacions, after their fathers houses in & nombre of the names from twentye yeare & aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to & trybe of Isachar, foure and fiftye thousande and foure hundred.

The children of Zabulon their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names from twentye yeare & aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Zabulon, seuen and fiftye thousande and foure hundred.

Iosephs children of Ephraim, their kynreds & generacions after their fathers houses in & nombre of the names, from twētye yeare & aboue, all & were able to go forth to & warre, were nobred to the trybe of Ephraim, fourtye thousande & fyue hundred.

The children of Manasse their kynreds & generacions, after their fathers houses in & nombre of the names from twentye yeare & aboue, all & were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Manasse, two & thirtie thousande & two hundred.

The childre of Ben Iamin their kynreds and generacions, after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names from twentye yeare & aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Ben Iamin, fyue and thirtie thousande and foure hundred.

The children of Dan their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses, in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeares and aboue, all that were able to go forth to the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Dan, two and thre score thousande, and seuen hundred.

The children of Asser their kynreds & generacions, after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeare & aboue, all & were able to go forth to & warre, were nombred to the trybe of Asser, one & fourtye thousande and fyue hundred.

The childre of Nephthali, their kynreds and generacions after their fathers houses in the nombre of the names, from twentye yeare & aboue, all that were able to go forth vnto the warre, were nombred to the trybe of Nephthali, thre and fiftie thousande and foure hundredth.

These are they whom Moses and Aaron nombred with ʒ twolue prynces of Israel, wherof euery one was ouer ʒ house of their fathers. *And the summe of the children of Israel after their fathers houses, from twentye yeare and aboue (what so euer was able to go forth to the warre in Israel) was sixe C. thousande, thre thousande, fyue C. ʒ fiftie. But the Leuites after the trybe of their fathers, were not nombred amonge them.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and saide: The trybe of Leui shalt thou not nombre, ner take the summe of them amonge ʒ children of Israel: but shalt appoynte them to the Habitacion of wytnesse, and to all ʒ apparell therof, and to all that belongeth therto. †And they shall beare the Tabernacle ʒ all the ordinaunce therof, and shal wayte vpon it, and shal pitch their tentes rounde aboute it. And whan men shal go on their journey, the Leuites shal take downe ʒ Tabernacle. And whan the hoost pitch their tētes, they shal set vp the Tabernacle. And yf a straunger preasse nye vnto it, he shall dye. The children of Israel shal pitch their tentes, euery one in his awne armye, and by the baner of his awne companie. But the Leuites shal pitch rounde aboute the Tabernacle of wytnesse, that there come no wrath vpon ʒ congregacion of the children of Israel: therefore shal the Leuites wayte vpon the Habitacion of wytnesse. And the children of Israel dyd all, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The ij. Chapter.

¶ AND ʒ LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, ʒ sayde: The childre of Israel shal pitch rounde aboute ʒ Tabernacle of wytnesse, euery one vnder his banner ʒ tokens, after their fathers houses.

On the East syde shall Iuda pitch with his banner ʒ hoost, their captayne Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. And his armie in the summe, foure ʒ seuentie thousande and sixe hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Isachar pitch, their captayne Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar: and his armie in the summe, foure and fiftie thousande and foure hundredth. The trybe of Zabulon also, their captayne Eliab the sonne of Helon: his armye in the summe, seuen and fiftie thousande and foure hundredth.

So ʒ all they which belōge to ʒ hoost of Iuda, be in the summe an C. sixe and foure score thousande, ʒ foure hundredth be longinge to their armye, ʒ they shal go before.

On the South side shall lye the paulyons ʒ baner of Ruben with their hoost, their captayne Elizur ʒ sonne of Sedeur: ʒ his armie in the summe, sixe ʒ fourtie thousande, ʒ fyue C. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Simeon pitch, their captayne Selumiel ʒ sonne of Zuri Sadai: ʒ his armie in ʒ summe, nyne and fiftie thousande, and thre hundredth. The trybe of Gad also, their captayne Eliasaph ʒ sonne of Deguel: ʒ his armye in the summe, fyue ʒ fourtye thousande, sixe hundredth ʒ fiftie. So that all they which belonge to the hoost of Ruben, be in the summe, an hundredth, one ʒ fiftie thousande, foure hundredth and fiftie, belonginge to their armye. And they shal be the seconde in the iourney.

After that shall the Tabernacle of wytnesse go with the hoost of the Leuites euē in ʒ myddes amōge the hoostes: ʒ as they lye in their tentes, so shal they go forth also, euery one in his place vnder his baner.

On the West syde shall lye ʒ paulyons ʒ baner of Ephraim with their hoost: their captayne shalbe Elisama sonne of Amihud. and his armye in the summe, fourtye thousande and fyue hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal ʒ trybe of Manasse pitch, their captayne Gammaliel the sonne of Pedazur: his armye in the summe, two and thirtie thousande ʒ two hundredth. The trybe of Ben Iamin also, their captayne Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni: his armye in the summe, fyue and thirtie thousande ʒ foure hundredth. So ʒ all they which belonge to the hoost of Ephraim, be in the summe, an hundredth thousande, eight thousande, ʒ an hundredth, belonginge to his armie. And they shal be the thirde in the iourney.

On the North syde shal lye ʒ paulyons ʒ baner of Dan with their hoost: their captayne Ahieser ʒ sonne of Ammi Sadai, his armye in the summe, two and sixtye thousande and seuē hundredth. Nexte vnto him shal the trybe of Asser pitche: their captayne Pagiel ʒ sonne of Ochran, his army in the summe, one and fourtie thousande, and fyue hundredth.

† 1 Par. 14. d.

The trybe of Nephthali also, their captayne Ahira the sonne of Enan: his armye in the summe, thre  $\tau$  fifty thousande  $\tau$  foure hundred. So  $\forall$  all they which belonge to the hoost of Dan, be in the summe, an hundred thousande, seuen  $\tau$  fiftie thousande,  $\tau$  sixe hundred. And they shalbe the last in the iourney with their baners.

This is the summe of the children of Israel, after their fathers houses and armyes with their hoostes: euen sixe hundred thousande,  $\tau$  thre thousande, fyue hundred  $\tau$  fiftie. But  $\forall$  Leuites were not nombred in  $\forall$  summe amonge the childrē of Israel, \* as  $\forall$  LORDE commaunded Moses. And  $\forall$  childrē of Israel dyd all as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And so they pitched vnder their baners,  $\tau$  toke their iourney, euery one in his kynred, acordinge to the house of their fathers.

The iij. Chapter.

THESE are the generacions of Aaron  $\tau$  Moses, whan  $\forall$  LORDE spake vnto Moses at  $\forall$  same tyme vpon mount Sinai. And these are  $\forall$  names of the sonnes of Aron. <sup>a</sup>The firstborne, Nadab: then Abihu, Eleasar  $\tau$  Ithamar. These are  $\forall$  names of the sonnes of Aaron, † which were anoynted to be prestes,  $\tau$  their handes fylled for  $\forall$  presthode. <sup>b</sup>But Nadab  $\tau$  Abihu dyed before  $\forall$  LORDE, in  $\forall$  offred straunge fyre before  $\forall$  LORDE, in  $\forall$  wilderness of Sinai,  $\tau$  had no sonnes. But Eleasar and Ithamar executed  $\forall$  prestes office with their father Aaron.

<sup>c</sup>And the LORDE spake vnto Moses,  $\tau$  sayde: Bringe hither the trybe of Leui, and set them before Aaron the prest,  $\forall$  they maye serue with him,  $\tau$  wayte vpon him  $\tau$  vpo the whole congregacion before  $\forall$  Tabernacle of wytnesse, and execute the seruece of the habitaicion, and kepe all the apparell of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and wayte vpon the children of Israel, to mynistrre in the seruece of the habitaicion.

$\S$  And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and saide: Beholde, I haue takē the Leuites frō amonge the childrē of Israel, for all the first borne that open the Matrix amonge the children of Israel, so that the Leuites shalbe myne. ¶For the firstborne are myne, sence  $\forall$  tyme that I smote all the first borne in  $\forall$  lande of Egipte, whā I sanctified vnto me all the first borne in Israel, from mē vnto catell, that they shulde be myne. ¶I the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wyldernes of Sinai, and sayde: Nombre the children of Leui after their fathers houses and kynreds, all that are males of a moneth olde and aboue.

So Moses nombred them acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as he had commaunded. And these were the children of Leui with their names: <sup>d</sup>Gerson, Kahath, Merari. The names of the children of Gerson in their kynreds, were: Libni and Semei.

The childrē of Kahath in their kynreds were, Amram, Iezehar, Hebron and Vsiel.

The children of Merari in their kynreds, were Maheli and Musi. These are the kynreds of Leui after their fathers houses.

These are  $\forall$  kynreds of Gerson: The Libnites and Semeites, the summe was founde in nombre, seuen thousande and fyue hundred, of all that were males of a moneth olde and aboue. And the same kynreds of the Gersonites shal pitche behinde the Habitaicion on the west syde: Let Eliasaph the sonne of Lael be their ruler. And they shal waite vpon the Tabernacle of wytnesse, of the habitaicion, and of the tent, and couerynges therof, and the hangynge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, the hangynge aboute the courte,  $\tau$  the hangynge in  $\forall$  courtedore, which (courte) goeth aboute the habitaicion and the altare, and the cordes of it,  $\tau$  all that belongeth to the seruece therof.

These are the kynreds of Kahath: The Amranites, the Iezeharites, the Hebronites, and Vsielites, all that were males of a moneth olde  $\tau$  aboue, in nombre eight thousande and sixe hundred, waytinge vpon the Tabernacle of the Sanctuary,  $\tau$  shal pitch on the south syde of  $\forall$  Habitaicion: Let Elisaphan the sonne of Vsiel be their ruler. And they shal kepe the Arke, the table, the candilstick, the altare and all the vessels of the Sanctuary,

¶ But before the Habitation and before ƿ Tabernacle on the East syde shal Moses ƿ Aaron ƿ his sonnes pytche, that they maye wayte vpon the Sanctuary, ƿ the children of Israel. *Yf eny other preasse therto, he shal dye.

“All the Leuites in the summe, whom Moses and Aaron nombred after their kynreds, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, all that were males, of a moneth olde and aboue, were two and twentye thousande.

And ƿ LORDE saide vnto Moses: Nombre all the first borne, that are males amonge the children of Israel, of a moneth olde and aboue, and take the nombre of their names. “And ƿ Leuites shalt thou take out vnto me the LORDE, for all ƿ first borne of ƿ childrē of Israel, ƿ the cattell of the Leuites for all the first borne amonge the cattell of ƿ children of Israel. And Moses nombred all the first borne amonge the childrē of Israel, as the LORDE commaunded him. And in the nombre of the names of all the first borne, that were males of a moneth olde ƿ aboue, in their summe, there were foude two and twentye thousande, two hundred, and three and seuentye.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ƿ sayde: Take the Leuites for all ƿ first borne amonge the childrē of Israel, ƿ the cattell of ƿ Leuites for their cattell, ƿ the Leuites maye be myne the LORDES. “But the redemption money of the two hundred three ƿ seuentye ƿ remayne of the first borne of the children of Israel, aboute the nombre of the Leuites, shalt thou take, euen fyue Syceles of euery heade, after the Syce of the Sanctuary † (one Syce is worth twentye Geras) ƿ the money ƿ remayneth ouer their nōbre, shalt thou geue vnto Aaron and his somes.

Then toke Moses ƿ redemption money (that remayned ouer aboute the nombre of the Leuites) from ƿ first borne of the childrē of Israel, euen a thousande, thre hundred, and fyue and thre score Syceles, after ƿ Syce of the Sanctuary, ƿ gaue it vnto Aaron and his sonnes, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The iiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses ƿ Aaron, ƿ sayde: Take ƿ summe of the childrē of Kahath from amonge the childrē of Leui, after their kynreds ƿ fathers houses ‡ from thirtie yeare and aboue vntill fifty yeare, all that are mete for the warre, that they maye do the worke in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. This shal be the office of the children of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, which is most holly.

When the hoost breaketh vp, Aaron and his sonnes shall go in, and take downe the vayle, and couer the Arke of wytnesse therewith, and laye the couerynge of doo skynnes vpon it, and sprede a whole yalowe clothe aboute theron, and put his staues therin. And vpon the shewe table they shal sprede a yalowe clothe also, and set theron the dissbes, spones, flatpeces and pottes to poure out in, and the daylie bred shal lye vpon it, and they shall sprede a purple clothe therouer, and couer it with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put the staues of it therin.

And they shal take a yalowe clothe, and couer the cādilstick of light therewith, and his lampes, with his snoffers and outquenchers, and all the oyle vessels that belonge to the seruice, and aboute all this shal they put a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put it vpon staues.

So shal they sprede a yalowe clothe ouer the golden altare also, and couer the same with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put it vpon staues. All the vessels that they occupye in the Sanctuary, shal they take, and put a yalowe clothe ther ouer, ⁊ couer them with a couerynge of doo skynnes, and put them vpon staues. They shal swepe the ashes also from the altare, and sprede a clothe of scarlet ouer it, and set all his vessels theron, that they occupye vpon it: colepannes, fleshokes, shouels, basens, with all the apparell of the altare, and they shal sprede a couerynge of doo skynnes theron, and put his staues therto.

Now whan Aaron and his sonnes haue done this, and haue couered the Sanctuary ⁊ all the ornamētes therof, whan the hoost breaketh vp, *then shal the children of Kahath go in, that they maye beare it, and the Sanctuary shal they not touche, * lest they dye. This is the charge of the childrē of Kahath in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

And Eleasar the sonne of Aaron ⁊ prest, shal haue the office, to prepare the oyle for the light, and the spyces for the incense, and the daylie meat offerynge, and the anoyntinge oyle, to order the whole habitacion, ⁊ all that therin is, in the Sanctuary and the ornamentes therof.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, ⁊ sayde: Ye shal not destroye the trybe of the kynred of the Kahathites amōge the Leuites, but this shal ye do with them, ⁊ they maye lyue ⁊ not dye, yf they touche the most holy. Aaron and his sonnes shal go in, and appoynte euery one vnto his office ⁊ charge. But they shal not go in, presumptuously to lōke vpo ⁊ Sanctuary, lest they die. And ⁊ LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron ⁊ sayde: Take the summe of the children of Gerson also, *after their fathers house ⁊ kynred, from thirtie yeare ⁊ aboue, vntyll fyfte yeare, ⁊ appoynte them all ⁊ are mete for the warre, to haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

This shalbe the office of the kynred of the Gersonites, euē to serue ⁊ to beare. They shal beare the curtaynes of the habitacion and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and his couerynge and the coueringe of doo skynnes, that is aboue theron, and the hanginge in the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the hanginge aboute the courte, which goeth aboute the habitacion and the altare, and their cordes, and all the instrumentes ⁊ serue for thē, and all that belongeth to their occupiēge. Acordinge vnto the worde of Aaron and of his sonnes, shal all the office of the children of Gerson be done, what so euer they shal beare and occupye. And ye shal se, that they wayte vpon all their charge. This shal be ⁊ office of ⁊ kinred of ⁊ childrē of ⁊ Gersonites in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnes. And their waytinge shal be vnder ⁊ hāde of Ithamar, the sonne of Aarō the prest.

The children of Merari after their kynred and fathers house, shalt thou appoynte also, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vnto fyfte yeare, all that are mete for the warre, ⁊ they maye haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. But vpon this charge shall they wayte acordinge to all their office in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, that they beare the bordes of the Habitacion, and the barres, and pilers, and sokettes: the pilers of the courte also rōunde aboute, and the sokettes and nales and cordes, with all their apparell, acordinge to all their seruyce. And vnto euery one shall ye appoynte his porcion of charge to waite vpon the apparell. Let this be the office of the kynred of the children of Merari, all that they shall do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse vnder the hande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

And Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of the congregacion, nombred the children of ⁊ Kahathites, acordinge to their kynreds and houses of their fathers, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vntyll fyfte, all that were mete for the warre, to haue offyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the summe was, two thousande, seuen hundreth and fyftie. This is the summe of the kynred of the Kahathites (which all had seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse) whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The children of Gerson were nombred also in their kynreds and fathers houses from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fyfte, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in ⁊ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the summe was two thousande, syxe hundreth and thirtie. This is ⁊ summe of the kinred of the childrē of Gerson, which all had to do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to ⁊ worde of ⁊ LORDE.

The children of Merari were nombred also acordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yere and aboue vntyll fyfthe, all that were mete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of witness, & the summe was thre thousande, and two hundred. This is the summe of the kynred of the childre of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, aordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The summe of all the Leuites, whom Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of Israel tolde, after their kinreds and fathers houses, from thyrty yere and aboue vntyll fyfthe, all that wente in to do euery one his office, and to beare the burthen in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, was eight thousande fyue hundred and foure score, which were nombred aordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses, euery one to his office & charge, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The b. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde the children of Israel, they put out of the hoost * all the lepers, and all that haue yssues, and that are defyled vpon the deed, both men and womē shall they putt out of the hoost, that they defyle not their tentes, wherin I dwell amonge them. And the children of Israel dyd so, and put them out of the hoost, as the LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel & saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman doth a synne to eny body, and offendeth therwith agaynst the LORDE, then hath that soule a trespase vpon it. † And they shall knowlege their synne, that they haue done, and shall make amendes for their trespase, euen with the whole summe, and put the fifth parte more therto, and geue it vnto him, agaynst whom they haue trespassed. But yf there be woman to make the amendes vnto for the offence she hath trespassed agaynst him, then shall the reconcylynge be made vnto the LORDE for the prest, besydes the ramme of the attonemēt, wherwith he shalbe reconcyled.

Likewyse all the Heueofferynges of all that the children of Israel halowe vnto the LORDE, and offre vnto the prest, shall be his. And who so haloweth eny thinge, it shalbe his. And who so geneth the prest eny thinge, it shal be his also.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan eny mans wife goth asyde, and trespaceth agaynst him, & eny mā lye with her fleshye, and the thinge be yet hyd from his eyes, and is not come to light that she is defiled, and he can brynge no wytnesse agaynst her (for she was not takē therin) and the sprete of gelousye kyndleth him, so that he is gelous ouer his wife: whether she be vncleane or not vncleane, then shal he brynge her vnto the prest, and brynge an offerynge for her, euen the tenth parte of an Ephā of barlye meele, and shal poure no oyle thereon, ner put frankensence vpon it: for it is an offerynge of gelousy, and an offeringe of remembraunce, that remembreth synne.

Then shall the prest brynge her, and sett her before the LORDE, and take of the holy water in an earthen vessell, and put of the dust that is on the floore of the habitacion, in to the water. And he shal set the wife before the LORDE, and vncouer hir heade, and the offeringe of remembraunce which is an offeringe of gelousy, shall he laye vpon hir handes. And the prest shal haue in his hande bytter cursinge water, and shal coniure the wife, & saye vnto her: Yf no man haue lyē with the, and thou hast not gone asyde from thy huszbande, to defyle thy self, then shall not these bytter cursinge waters hurte the. But yf thou hast gone asyde from thy huszbande, so that thou art defyled, and some other man hath lyen with the besyde thy huszbande, then shall the prest coniure the wife with this curse, and shal saye vnto her: The LORDE sett the to a curse and a coniuration amonge thy people, so that the LORDE make thy thye rotte, and thy wombe to berst. So go this cursing water in to thy body, that thy wombe berst, and thy thye rotte. And the wife shal saye: Amen Amen.

So the prest shall wryte this curse in a byll, and wash it out with the water, and shall geue the wife of the bytter cursinge waters to drynke. And whā the cursing water is gone in her, so yf it is bytter vnto her then shal the prest take the gelousy offerynge out of the wyues hande, and waue it for a meatofferynge before the LORDE, and offre it vpon the altare: namely, he shall take an handfull of the meatofferynge for hir remembrance, ⁊ burne it vpon the altare, ⁊ then geue the wife the water to drinke. And whā she hath dronken the water, yf she be defyled and haue trespassed agaynst hir huszbande, then shal the cursinge water go in to her, and be so bytter, that hir wombe shal berst, and hir thyngs shall rotte, and the wife shal be a curse amonge hir people. But yf the same wife be not defyled, but is cleane, then shall it do her no harme, so that she maye be with childe.

This is the lawe of gelousy, whan a wyfe goeth asyde from hir huszbande, and is defyled: Or whan ⁊ sprete of gelously kyndleth a man, so that he is gelous ouer his wyfe, ⁊ he brynge her before the LORDE, and that ⁊ prest do all with her accordinge vnto this lawe. And ⁊ man shalbe giltlesse of the synne, but the wife shall beare hir mysdede.

The vi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman separateth them selues, to vowe a vowe of abstinence vnto the LORDE, he shal absteyne from wyne and strōge drynke. * Vyneger of wyne ⁊ of stronge drynke shal he not drynke, ner that is pressed out of grapes: he shall nether eate fresh ner drye grapes, so long as his abstinence endureth. Morouer he shall eate nothinge that is made of the vyne tre, from the vyne cornels vnto the bulle.

As longe as the vowe of his abstinence endureth, there shall no rasoure come vpon his heade, tyll the tyme be out which he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, for he is holy.

And he shall let the heer of his heade growe, and stonde bare openly. All the tyme ouer ⁊ he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, shal he go to no deed. Nether shal he defyle him self at ⁊ death of his father, of his mother, of his brother, or of his sister. For the abstinence of his God is vpon his heade, and ⁊ whole tyme of his abstinence shall he be holy vnto the LORDE.

B And yf it chaunce eny man to dye sodenly before him, then shal ⁊ heade of his abstinence be defyled. Therefore shal he shaue his heade in the daye of his clensynge, that is vpon the seuenth daye: and vpon ⁊ eight daye shall he brynge two turtill doues, or two yonge pigeons, vnto the prest before ⁊ dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shall make the one a synnofferynge, and the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him, because he defyled him self vpon ⁊ deed, and so shal he halowe his heade the same daye, that he maye holde out the tyme of his abstinence vnto the LORDE, and he shall brynge a lambe of a yere olde for a trespaseofferynge. But ⁊ daies afore shal be but lost, because his abstinence was defyled.

This is the lawe of the absteyner. Whan the tyme of his abstinence is out, he shal be brought before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And he shal brynge his offeringe vnto the LORDE, euen an he lambe of a yere olde without blemish of a burntofferynge, ⁊ a she lambe of a yere olde without blemish for a synnofferynge, and a ramme with out blemish for an healthofferynge, ⁊ a maunde with vneleued cakes of fyne flour mingled with oyle, and swete wafers anoynted with oyle, ⁊ their meatofferings ⁊ drynkofferynges.

And the prest shall brynge it before the LORDE, and shal make his synnofferynge and his burntofferynge, and ⁊ ramme shal he make an healthofferynge vnto the LORDE, with ⁊ maunde of the vneleued bred. His meatofferynge and drinkofferynge shal he make also. And he shall shaue the heade of the absteyners abstinence before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall take the heade heer of his abstinence, and cast it vpon the fyre that is vnder ⁊ healthofferynge.

D And the sodden shulder of the ramme shall he take, and an vneleued cake out of the maunde, and a swete wafer, and laye them vpon the handes of the absteyner: (after that he hath shauen of his abstinence.) And he shal Waue them before the LORDE. This is holy for the prest with the Waue brest, and Heue shulder. After that, maye the absteyner drynke wyne. This is the lawe of the absteyner, which voweth his offeringe vnto the LORDE for his abstinence, besydes that, which his hande can get. As he hath vowed, so shall he do accordinge to the lawe of his abstinence.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes,

and saye: Thus shal ye saye vnto the childre of Israel, whan ye blesse them.

* The LORDE blesse the, and kepe the.

The LORDE make his face to shyne vpō the, and be mercifull vnto the.

The LORDE lift vp his countenance vpon the, and geue the peace.

For they shal put my name vpō the children of Israel, that I maye blesse them.

The vij. Chapter.

AND whan Moses had set vp the Habitation and anoynted it,* and sanctified it with all the apparell therof: and had anoynted and halowed the altare also with all his vessels, Then offred the captaynes of Israel, which were the rulers in their fathers houses.

For they were the captaynes amonge ſ kynreds, and stode ouer the that were nombred. And they brought their offerynges before the LORDE, sixe couered charettes, and twolue oxen, for euery two captaynes a charett, and an ox for euery one, and brought them before the habitation.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Take it of them, that it maye serue for the mynistracion of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and geue it vnto the Leuites, vnto euery one accordinge to his office. Then toke Moses the charettes and oxen, and gaue them vnto the Leuites.

Two charettes and foure oxen gaue he vnto ſ children of Gerson accordinge to their office: and foure charettes and eight oxen gaue he vnto the children of Merari accordinge to their office, vnder the bande of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

But vnto the children of Kahath he gaue nothyng, because † they had an holy office vpon them, and must beare vpō their shulders. And the captaynes offred to the dedicacion of the altare, in the daye whan it was anoynted, and offred their giftes before the altare.

This is the gifte of Ahira the sonne of Enan.

¶ This is y<sup>e</sup> dedicacion of the altare, what tyme as it was aynoynted, vnto the which y<sup>e</sup> captaynes of Israel offered these twolue syluer chargers, twolue syluer boules, twolue spones of golde: euery charger conteynynge an hundreth and thirtie Sycles of syluer, and euery boule seuentye Sycles. So that y<sup>e</sup> summe of all the syluer in the vessels, was two thousande and foure hundreth Sycles (after the Sytle of the Sanctuary). And the twolue spones of golde full of incense, conteyned euery one ten Sycles, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary: So that the summe of the golde in the spones, was an hundreth and twentye Sycles.

The summe of the catell for the burntofferings, was twolue bullockes, twolue rammes, twolue lābes of a yere olde with their meatofferings: And twolue he goates for synnofferings. And the summe of the catell for the healthofferings, was foure and twēty oxen, thre score rammes, and thre score he goates, thre score lābes of a yere olde. This is the dedicacion of the altare, after that it was aynoynted.

¶ And whan Moses wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnes, y<sup>e</sup> he might be commoned withall, he herde the voyce speakynge vnto him frō of the Mercy seate, which was vpō the Arke of wytnes betwixte the two Cherubins, from thence was he cōmoned withall.

The viij. Chapter.

dyd so, & set y<sup>e</sup> lampes vpō y<sup>e</sup> candilstick, as y<sup>e</sup> LORDE cōmaunded Moses. The worke of y<sup>e</sup> cādilstick was of beatē golde, both y<sup>e</sup> shaft & floures therof: Acordynge to y<sup>e</sup> visiō that the LORDE had shewed Moses, euen so made he the candelstick.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the Leuites frō amonge the children of Israel, & clense them. But thus shalt thou do with them, that thou mayest clense them. Thou shalt sprenkle purifienge water vpon them, and lett a rasure go ouer their whole body, and washe their clothes, and then are they cleane. Then shall they take a yonge bullocke, and his meatofferynge of fyne floure myngled with oyle. And another yonge bullocke shalt thou take for a synnofferinge.

And thou shalt brynge the Leuites before the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and gather together the whole congregacion of y<sup>e</sup> children of Israel, and brynge the Leuites before the LORDE. And the children of Israel shall laye their handes vpon the Leuites. And Aaron shal waue y<sup>e</sup> Leuites before the LORDE for the children of Israel, that they maye mynistr in the seruyce of the LORDE.

And the Leuites shall laye their handes vpon the heedes of the bullockes, and the one shalbe made a synnofferynge, the other a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, to make an attonement for the Leuites. And thou shalt set the Leuites before Aaron and his sonnes, and waue them before the LORDE, and so shalt thou separate them from y<sup>e</sup> children of Israel, that they maye be myne. Thē shall they go in, that they maye do seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Thus shalt thou clense thē, & waue them: for they are my gifte of the children of Israel, & I haue taken them vnto me for all that openeth the Matrix, namely for the first borne of all the children of Israel.

¶ For euery first borne amonge the children of Israel is myne, both of men and of catell,<sup>b</sup> sens the tyme that I smote all the first borne in the lande of Egipte, and sanctified them vnto myself, and toke the Leuites for all the first borne amonge the childrē of Israel, and gaue them for a gifte vnto Aarō and his sonnes from amonge the children of Israel, y<sup>e</sup> they shulde do the seruyce of the children of Israel in the Tabernacle of witness, to make attonemēt for the children of Israel, that there be not a plague amonge the children of Israel, yf they will come nye & Sanctuary.

And Moses with Aaron and the whole congregaciō of the childrē of Israel, dyd with the Leuites all as the LORDE had commaunded Moses. And they purified the Leuites, and waszshed their clothes. And Aaron waued them before the LORDE, and made attonement for them, that they might be cleane.

¶ After that wente they in, to do their office in the Tabernacle of witness before Aaron and his sonnes: as the LORDE commaunded Moses concernynge the Leuites, euen so dyd they with them.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses & sayde: This is it that belongeth vnto the Leuites: *From fyne and twenty yere and aboue, shal they go in to the office of the Tabernacle of witness. But frō fyftie yere forth, they shal cease from the waitinge of the seruyce therof, and shall mynister nomore, but shal appoynte their brethren to waite and to serue in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: but the office shal not they execute. Thus shalt thou do with the Leuites in their seruyces, that euery one maye wayte vpon his awne charge.

The ii. Chapter.

¶ AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in & first moneth of the seconde yere that they were departed out of the lande of Egipte, & sayde: "Let the children of Israel kepe Easter in his season, euen vpon the fourtene daye of this moneth at euen, in his season shall they kepe it, acordinge to all the statutes & lawes therof. And Moses spake to & childrē of Israel, & they shulde kepe Easter. And they kep Easter vpō the fourtene daye of the first moneth at euen in the wilderness of Sinai. Acordinge to all that the LORDE comaunded Moses, euen so dyd the children of Israel.

Then were there certayne men defyled of a deed man, so that they could not kepe Easter vpon that daye: these came before Moses and Aaron the same daye, and sayde vnto him: We are defyled of a deed mā: wherfore shulde we be despyed, that we must not bringe oure giftes in his season amonge the children of Israel? Moses sayde vnto them: Stoude styll, I wil heare what the LORDE commaundeth you.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, & saie: Whā eny man is defyled of a deed coarse, or is gone farre from you ouer the felde, <sup>1</sup>or is amonge youre kynszfolkes, yet shall he kepe Easter, but in the seconde moneth vpō & fourtene daye at euen, and they shal eate it with vneleuened bred and sowre sawse, and shall leaue none of it vntyll the mornynge, <sup>2</sup>ner breake eny bone therof, and shal kepe it acordinge to all & maner of & Easter.

But he that is cleane, and not gone in a iourney, and is negligent to kepe the Easter, the same soule shal be roted out from amōge his people: because he brought not his gifte to the LORDE in his season, he shal beare his synne. And whan there dwelleth a straunger amonge you, he shal kepe Easter also vnto the LORDE, & shal holde it acordinge to & ordinance and lawe of & Easter. This statute shal be vnto you alike, to the straunger as to him that is borne in the londe.

And & same daye & the Habitation was set vp, a cloude couered it vpō the Tabernacle of witness, & at euen there was a symilitude of fyre vpon the Habitation vntill the mornynge. So came it to passe allwaye, & the cloude couered it by daye, & the symilitude of fyre by night. And whan the cloude was takē vp from the Habitation, then the children of Israel wente on their iourney. And loke in what place the cloude abode, there the childrē of Israel pitched their tentes. Acordinge to the worde of the LORDE toke the children of Israel their iourney, and acordinge to his worde pitched they their tentes. So longe as the cloude abode vpon the Habitation, they laye styll. And whan the cloude taried many dayes vpon the Habitation, the childrē of Israel wayted vpon the LORDE, & wentē not on their iourney.

And whan it chaunced that the cloude abode vpō & Habitation eny space of dayes, then pitched they acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, & after the worde of the LORDE wente they on their iourney. Whan the cloude was there from the euenynge vntyll the mornynge, and so was taken vp, then wētē they on their journey: and whether it was takē vp by daye or by night, they iourneyed. But whan it taried vpon the habitacion two dayes, or a moneth, or a longe season, then laye the children of Israel, and iourneyed not: and so whan it was taken vp, they wente on their iourney. For acordinge to the mouth of the LORDE they laye, and after the mouth of the LORDE they iourneyed, so ŷ they kepte the LORDES watch, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The x. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Make the two trompettes of beaten syluer, that thou mayest vse them, to call the cōgregacion together, and whan the hoost shal breake vp. Whan they blowe with both, then shall the whole cōgregacion gather them selues together vnto the before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse. Whan they blowe but with one, then the captaynes, the rulers ouer the thousands in Israel shal gather them selues together vnto the. Whan ye trompe, then shal the hoostes that lye on the East syde, breake vp. And whan ye trompe the seconde tyme, the hoostes that lye on the South syde, shal breake vp. For ye shall trompe, whan they shal take their iourneys. * But whan ŷ cōgregacion is to be gathered together, ye shal blowe, and not trompe. This blowinge with the trompettes shal the sonnes of Aaron the prest do. And it shall be youre lawe for euer amonge youre posterities.

Whan ye go to a battayll in youre londe agaynst youre enemies ŷ vexe you, ye shall trompe with the trompettes, that ye maye be remembred before the LORDE youre God, and deluyered from youre enemies.

B Like wyse whan ye are mery, and in youre feast dayes, ⁊ in youre new Monethes, ye shal blowe with the trompettes ouer youre burnt-sacrifices ⁊ healthofferings, ŷ it maie be a remembraunce vnto you before youre God. I am the LORDE youre God.

Vpon the twentye daye in the seconde moneth of the seconde yeare, arose the cloude from the habitacion of witnessse. And the childrē of Israel wente on their iourney out of the wyldernes of Sinai, ⁊ the cloude abode in the wyldernes of Paran, First brake vp (acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.) Namely, the baner of the hoost of Iuda wente forth first with their armies, ⁊ ouer their hoost was Nahasson the sonne of Aminadab. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Isachar was Nathaneel the sonne of Zuar. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Zabulon was Eliab the sonne of Elon. ⁊ the habitacion was taken downe, and the children of Gerson and Merari bare the habitacion.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of Ruben with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elizur the sonne of Seder. And ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Simeon was Selumiel the sonne of Zuri Sadai. And Eliasaph the sonne of Deguel ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Gad. Then wente the Kahathites forward also, and bare the Sanctuary, and caused ŷ habitacion be set vp agaynst they came.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Ephraim with their armies, and ouer their hoost was Elisama the sonne of Amihud. And Gamaliel the sonne of Pedazur ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Manasse. And Abidan the sonne of Gedeoni ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin.

After that wente the baner of the hoost of the children of Dan with their Armyes, (and so were all the hoostes vp) and Ahieser the sonne of Ammi Sadai was ouer their hoost. And Pagiel ŷ sonne of Ochran, ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Asser. And Ahira the sonne of Enan ouer the hoost of the trybe of the children of Nephthali. Thus the childrē of Israel wēte forth with their armies.

And Moses spake vnto his brother in lawe, Hobab the sonne of Raguel of Madian: We go vnto the place, of the which ŷ LORDE sayde: I wil geue it you: Come now with vs therfore, and we wil do ŷ best with the, for the LORDE hath promysed good vnto Israel. But he answered: I wil not go with you, but wil go in to myne awne londe vnto my kynred. He sayde: Oh nay, leaue vs not: for thou knowest where is best for vs to pytche in the wyldernes, and thou shalt be oure eye. And yf thou goest with vs, loke what good the LORDE doth vnto vs, the same wil we do vnto the. So they departed from the mount of the LORDE thre dayes iourney, ⁊ the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt wente before them those thre dayes iourney, to shewe thē where they shulde rest. And ȳ cloude of the LORDE was ouer them in the daye tyme, when they wēte out of ȳ tētes.

And whan the Arke wente forth, Moses sayde: *Aryse LORDE, let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate the, flye before the. And whan it rested, he sayde: Come agayne O LORDE vnto the multitude of the thousandes of Israel.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan ȳ people waxed vnpaciēt, "it displeased sore ȳ eares of ȳ LORDE. And whan the LORDE herde it, his wrath waxed whote, ⁊ the fyre of ȳ LORDE burnt amōge them, so ȳ it cōsumed the vttemost of ȳ hoost. Thē cryed the people vnto Moses. And Moses prayed vnto the LORDE. So ȳ fyre quenched. And the place was called Tabera, because the fyre of the LORDE burnt amōge them.

Then the comon sorte of people ȳ was amōge them, fell a lusting, and sat ⁊ wepte with the children of Israel, and sayde: Who wyll geue vs flesh to eate? We remembre the fish, the we ate in Egipte for naught, ⁊ Cucumbers, Melouns, lekes, onyons, ⁊ garleke: But now is oure soule dried awaye, oure eyes se nothinge then the Manna.

B The Manna was like Coriāder sede, and to loke vpon, like Bedellion. <sup>b</sup> And the people ranne here and there, ⁊ gathered it, ⁊ grōunde it in Milles, and beate it in morters, and baked it in pānes, and made cakes of it, and it had a taist like an oyle cake. And whan ȳ dew fell vpon the tētes in the night, ȳ Manna fell therewith.

Now whan Moses herde the people wepe amōge their kynreds, euery one in his tēt dore, then the wrath of the LORDE waxed excedinge whote. And it greued Moses also. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Why vexest thou thy seruante? And why fynde not I fauoure in thy sight, ȳ thou layest ȳ burthen of all this people vpon me? Haue I thō cōceaued all this people, or begotten them, that thou shuldest saye vnto me: Cary them in thine armes (as a nurse beareth a childe) vnto the londe, that thou hast sworne vnto their fathers? Where shal I get flesh, to geue all this people? They wepe before me, and saye: Geue vs flesh, that we maye eate. I am not able to beare all this people alone, for it is to heuy for me. And yf thou wyll deale thus with me: O kyll me then, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, that I se not my wretchednesse.

And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: D Gather vnto me <sup>t</sup>seuentye men amonge the Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest ȳ they are the Elders in ȳ people and officers ouer them, and brynge them before the Tabernacle of witnesse, and set them there with the: then wil I come downe, and talke with the euen there, ⁊ take of thy sprete that is vpon the, and putt it vpon them, that they maye beare the burthen of the people with the, ȳ thou beare not all alone.

And vnto ȳ people thou shalt saye: Sāetifye youre selues agaynst tomorow, <sup>c</sup> ȳ ye maye eate flesh: for youre wepyng is come in to the eares of the LORDE, ye that saye: Who shal geue vs flesh to eate? for we were well at ease in Egipte. <sup>d</sup> Therefore shal the LORDE geue you flesh to eate, not one daye, not two, not fyue, not ten, not twentye dayes longe, but a moneth longe, tyll it go out at youre noses, and tyll ye lothe it: euen because ye haue refused the LORDE, which is amōge you, and haue wepte before him, ⁊ sayde: Wherefore wente we out of Egipte?

And Moses sayde: E Sixe hundredth thousande <sup>f</sup> fote men are there of the people amōge whom I am, and thou sayest: I wil geue you flesh to eate a moneth lōge. Shal the shepe and oxen be slayne to be ynough for them? Or shal all the fishes of the see be gathered together, to be sufficient for them? The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: <sup>g</sup> Is the LORDES hande shortened then? But now shalt thou se, whether my wordes shall be fulfilled in dede, or no?

And Moses wēte out, and tolde the people ȳ worde of the LORDE, and gathered the seuentye men amonge the Eldest of the people, ⁊ set them rounde aboute the Tabernacle. Then came the LORDE downe in a cloude, ⁊ spake vnto him, ⁊ toke of the sprete ȳ was vpon him, ⁊ put it vpon the seuentie Elders.

And whan the sprete rested vpon them, they prophecied, and ceased not.

J But in the hoost there remayned yet two men, of whom the one was called Eldad, & other Medad, & the sprete rested vpon them. For they were wrytten vp also, & yet were they not gone out vnto the Tabernacle, and they prophecied in the hoost. Then ran there a lad, & tolde Moses, & sayde: Eldad and Medad prophecie in the hoost. Then answered Iosua & sonne of Nun Moses seruauante (whom he had chosen) and sayde: My lorde Moses for bydde them. But Moses sayde vnto him: Art thou gelous for my sake? * wolde God, & all the people of & LORDE coulde prophecie, and that & LORDE wolde geue them his sprete. So Moses and the Elders of Israel gat them to the hoost.

C Then wente out the wynde from & LORDE, & caused quayles to come from the see, & scatred the ouer the hoost, here a dayes iourney, there a dayes iourney rounde aboute & hoost, two cubytes hye aboute & earth. Then the people stode vp all that daye and all & night, and all the nexte daye, and gathered quayles: and he that gathered the leest, gathered ten Homers, & they kylled them rounde aboute the hoost.

<sup>b</sup> But whyle & flesh was yet betwene their tethe, & or euer it was vp, the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote amonge the people, & slewe them with an exceedinge greate slaughter. Therefore is the same place called the graues of lust, because the voluptuous people were buried there. From the lust-graues toke the people their iourney vnto Hazeroth, and abode at Hazeroth.

The xij. Chapter.

A ND Miriam & Aaron spake agaynst <sup>a</sup> Moses because of his wife the Morian: which he had taken, because he had takē a Morian to wife, and they sayde: Doth the LORDE speake onely thorow Moses? Speaketh he not also by vs? And the LORDE herde it. <sup>c</sup> But Moses was a very meke man, aboute all men vpon earth. And haistely spake the LORDE vnto Moses, and to Aaron, and to Miriam: Go out ye thre vnto & Tabernacle of wytnesse. And they wente out all thre.

<sup>e</sup> Then came the LORDE downe in the cloudy piler, & stode in the dore of the Tabernacle, & called Aaron & Miriam, & they both wēte out. And he sayde: Heare my wordes: Yf eny man be a prophet of the LORDE, vnto him wil I shewe my self in a vision, or wil speake vnto him in a dreame. But not so with my seruauant Moses, <sup>f</sup> which is faithfull in all my house. <sup>g</sup> Mouth to mouth speake I vnto him, & he seyth the LORDE in his fashion, not thorow darke wordes or licknesses: Wherefore were ye not afrayed then to speake agaynst my seruauant Moses?

<sup>h</sup> And & wrath of the LORDE waxed whote ouer them, & he turned him awaye, and & cloude also departed from the Tabernacle. <sup>i</sup> And beholde, then was Miriam become leporous, as it were snowe. And Aaron turned him vnto Miriam, and sawe that she was leporous, and sayde vnto Moses: Oh my lorde, put not the synne vpon vs, which we haue foolishly committed and synned, that she be not as one that commeth deed out of his mothers wombe: It hath eaten vp half hir flesh already.

But Moses cried vnto the LORDE, & sayde: Oh God, heale her. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Yf hir father had spytte in hir face, shulde she not be ashamed seuen dayes? <sup>j</sup> Let her be shut out of & hoost seuē dayes, after & let her be receaued agayne. So Miriam was shut out of the hoost seuē dayes, & the people wente no farther, tyll Miriam was receaued agayne. Afterwarde departed the people from Hazeroth, <sup>k</sup> and pitched in & wilderness of Paran.

The xij. Chapter.

A ND the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & <sup>l</sup> sayde: <sup>m</sup> Sende forth men to spye out & lande of Canaan (which I wil geue vnto & children of Israel) of euery trybe of their fathers a man, and let them all be such as are captaines amonge them. Moses sent the out of the wilderness of Paran, accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, such as were all heades amonge the children of Israel, and these are their names:

Samma the sonne of Zacur, of the trybe of Ruben. Saphat the sonne of Hori, of the trybe of Simeon. Caleb y sonne of Iephune, of the trybe of Iuda. Igeal the sonne of Ioseph, of the trybe of Isachar. Hosea the sonne of Nun, of y trybe of Ephraim. Palti the sonne of Raphu, of the trybe of Ben Iamin. Gadiel the sonne of Sodi, of y trybe of Zabulon. Gaddi the sonne of Susi, of the trybe of Ioseph of Manasse. Anmiel the sonne of Gemalli, of the trybe of Dan. Sethur y sonne of Michael, of the trybe of Asser. Nahebi the sonne of Vaphsi, of the trybe of Nephtali. Guel the sonne of Machi, of the trybe of Gad. These are the names of the men, whom Moses sent forth to spye out the lande. As for Hosea the sonne of Nun, Moses called him Iosua.

B Now whan Moses sent thē forth to spye out the lande of Canaan, he sayde vnto thē: Go vp southwarde, and get you vp to the mountaynes, and loke vpon the londe how it is: and the people that dwell therein, whether they be stronge or weake, fewe or many: and what maner of lande it is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad: ⁊ what maner of cities they be that they dwell in, whether they be fenced with walles, or not: and what maner of lande it is, whether it be fatt or leane, and whether there be trees therein, or not. Be of a good corage, and bringe of the frutes of the londe. It was euen aboute the tyme, that grapes are first ripe.

They wente vp, ⁊ spyed the lande, from y wilderness of Zin, vntyll Rehob, as mē go vnto Hemath. They wente vp also towarde the south, and came vnto Hebron, where Ahiman was, and Sesai and Thalmnai, the children of Enack (Hebron was buylded seven years before Zoan in Egipte.)

C And they came to the ryuer of Escol, and there they cut downe a cluster of grapes, and caused two to beare it vpon a staffe, pomegranates also and fygges. The place is called the ryuer of Escol, because of the cluster of grapes, which the children of Israel cut downe there.

And whan they had spied out the lande, they turned bake againe after fortye daies, and wente, and came to Moses and Aaron, ⁊ to the whole congregacion of y children of Israel in to y wyldernes of Paran, euē vnto

Cades, and brought them worde agayne, and to the whole congregacion, how it stode, and let them se the frute of the lande, and tolde them, and sayde: We came in to y lande, whither ye sent vs, where it floweth with mylke and hony, and this is the frute therof: sauynge that stronge people dwell therein, and the cities are exceedinge stronge and greate. And we sawe the children of Enack there also. The Amalechites dwell in the south countre, the Hethites, and Iebusites and Amorites dwell vpon the mountaynes, but the Cananites dwell by the see, and aboute Iordane.

Howbeit Caleb stilled y people that was agaynst Moses, and sayde vnto them: Let vs go vp, and conqueure the lande, for we are able to ouercome it. But the men that wente vp with him, sayde: <sup>a</sup>We are not able to go vp agaynst that people, for they are to stronge for vs. And of the lande that they had searched, they brought vp an euell report amonge the childrē of Israel, and saide: The lāde that we haue gone thorow to spye out, eateth vp the indwellers therof: and all the people that we sawe therein, are men of greate stature. We sawe giauntes there also, yee giauntes as the children of Enack: and we semed in oure sighte as y greshoppers, and so dyd we in their sighte.

The iiii. Chapter.

THEN the whole cōgregacion toke on, A and cryed, and the people wepte y night. And all the childrē of Israel murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron, and the whole congregacion sayde vnto them: Oh that we had dyed in the lande of Egipte, or that we might dye yet in this wyldernes. Wherefore bryngeth the LORDE vs in to this lande, that our wyues shulde fall thorow the swerde, and oure children be a praye? Is it not better, that we go agayne in to Egipte? And they sayde one to another: Let vs make a captayne, and go in to Egipte agayne.

But Moses ⁊ Aaron fell vpō their faces before y whole cōgregacion of the multitude of the childrē of Israel. <sup>a</sup>And Iosua y sonne of Nun, ⁊ Caleb y sonne of Iephune (which also had spied out the lande) reute their clothes, ⁊ spake to the whole cōgregacion of the children of Israel: The londe y we haue walked thorow to spye it out, is a very good

But in anye wyse rebell not ye agaynst the LORDE, & * feare not ŷ people of this lande, for we wil eate thē vp as bred. Their defence is departed frō them, † but the LORDE is with vs, be not ye afrayed of them.

33 And all the people, bad stone them with stones. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witness vnto all the children of Israel, & the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: How longe shal this people blaspheme me? And how longe wil it be, or they beleue me, for all the tokēs that I haue shewed amonge them? I wil smyte them with pestilence & destroye thē, ‡ & wil make of the a greater & mightier people then this is.

§ But Moses sayde vnto ŷ LORDE: Then shal ŷ Egipcians heare it (for with thy power hast thou brought this people from amōge thē) so shal it be tolde the inhabitants of this lande also, which haue herde, ŷ thou O LORDE art amonge this people, ŷ thou art sene from face to face, & that thy cloude stondeth ouer them, & that thou goest before them in the cloudy piler on the daye tyme, and in the fyrie piler on the night season. Yf thou shuldest now slaye this people as one man, then the Heythen that haue herde so good reporte of thē, shulde saye: “The LORDE was not able to brynge the people in to the londe, that he sware vnto them, therefore hath he slayue them in the wyldernes.

C So let the power of the LORDE now be greate, accordinge as thou hast spoken and sayde: The LORDE is of longe sufferaunce and of greate mercy, and forgeueth synne and trespass, and leaueth no man innocent, & vysiteth the mysdede of the fathers vpon the children in to the thirde and fourth generation. O be gracious now vnto the synne of this people accordinge to thy greate mercy, like as thou hast forborne this people also, euer from Egipte vnto this place. And the LORDE sayde: I haue forgeuē it, as thou hast saide. But as truly as I lyue, all ŷ worlde shal be full of my glory. ¶ For of all ŷ men that haue sene my glory & my tokens, which I dyd in Egipte and in the wilderness, and tempted me now ten tymes, & haue not herkened vnto my voyce, there shall not one se the londe that I sware vnto their fathers: nether shal any of them that haue blasphemed me, se it. † But my seruāūt Caleb, because there is another maner sprete with him, & because he hath folowed me, him wil I brynge in to the lande, which he hath gone thorow, & his sede shal conquere it, and ŷ Amalechites also and the Cananites, that dwell in the lowe countrees. Tomorrow turne you, and get you to the wyldernes, in the waye toward the reed see.

And ŷ LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron, D & sayde: How löge shal this euell multitude murmur agaynst me? For I haue herde the murmuringe of the childrē of Israel, ŷ they haue murmured agaynst me. Tell them therefore: § As trulye as I lyue (sayeth ŷ LORDE) I wil do vnto you, euen as ye haue spoken in myne eares: Your carcasses shal lye in this wilderness. And all ye that I were nombred from twentye yeare and aboue, which haue murmured agaynst me, shall not come in to the lande (cōcernynge the which I lift vp my hāde, ŷ I wolde let you dwell therin) saue Caleb ŷ sonne of Iephuae, and Iosua the sonne of Nun.

Your children, of whom ye sayde: ¶ They shalbe a spoyle, them wyll I brynge in, so ŷ they shal knowe the lande, which ye haue refused. But ye with youre carcasses shall lye in this wilderness, and youre children shal wander in this wilderness fortye yeares, & beare youre whordome, tyll youre carcasses be waisted in the wilderness, accordinge to the nombre of ŷ fortye dayes, wherin ye spyed out the londe. ¶ A daye for a yeare, so ŷ E fortye yeares ye shall beare youre mysdede, that ye maye knowe what it is, when I withdrawe my hande. Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it, & wil do it in dede vnto all this euell congregacion, that haue lift vp them selues agaynst me: In this wilderness shal they be consumed, and there shal they dye.

¶ So there dyed and were played before the LORDE all the mē, whom Moses sent to spye out the lāde, & came agayne, and made the whole cōgregacion to murmur agaynst it, because they brought vp a myszreporthe of the lande, that it was euell. But Iosua the sonne of Nun, and Caleb f̄ sonne of Iephune were left alyne, of the men that wente to spye out the lande. And Moses spake these wordes vnto all the children of Israel. Thē toke the people greate sorowe.

f And they arose early in f̄ mornynge, and wente vp to the toppe of f̄ mountayne, and sayde: "Lo, here are we, and will go vp to the place, wherof the LORDE hath sayde: for we haue synned. But Moses sayde: wherfore go ye on this maner beyonde f̄ worde of the LORDE? It shall not prospere with you: go not vp (for f̄ LORDE is not amōge you) f̄ ye be not slayne before youre enemies. For the Amalechites and Cananites are there before you, ʔ ye shal fall thorow f̄ swerde, because ye haue turned youre selues from the LORDE, and the LORDE shal not be with you.

But they were blynded to go vp to the toppe of the mountaine: neuertheles the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt ʔ Moses came not out of the hooste. Then came downe f̄ Amalechites ʔ Cananites which dwelt vpon that mountayne, and smote them and hewed them, euen vnto Horma.

The xv. Chapter

AND the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the childrē of Israel, ʔ saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande of youre dwellinge, which I shal geue you, and wil do sacrifice vnto the LORDE, whether it be a burnt-offerynge, or an offerynge for a speciall vowe, or a frewyll offerynge, or youre feast offerynges, that ye maye make a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, of oxen or of shepe.

<sup>b</sup> He f̄ wil offere now his gifte vnto f̄ LORDE, shal brynge for the meat-offerynge a tēth deale of fyne flour mingled with oyle of the fourth parte of an Hin, and wyne for f̄ drynk-offerynge the fourth part of an Hin also: to the burnt-offerynge, or any other offerynge, whan a lambe is offred. But whā there is a ramme offred, thou shalt make the meat-offerynge two tēth deales of fyne flour mingled with oyle, of the thirde parte of an Hin, and f̄ thirde parte of an Hin of wyne also for a drynk-offerynge: this shalt thou offere for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

But yf thou wilt offere an ox for a burnt-offerynge, or for a speciall vowe offerynge, or for an heath-offerynge vnto the LORDE, thou shalt brynge to the ox, the meat-offerynge, euen thre tenth deales of fyne flour mingled with half an Hin of oyle, ʔ half an Hin of wyne for a drynk-offerynge. This is an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. Thus shalt thou do with an ox, with a ramme, with a lambe, and with a goate. Acordinge as the nombre of the offerynges is, therafter shall the nombre of the meat-offerynges and drynk-offerynges be also.

He that is one of youre selues, shall do this, that he maye offere a sacrifice of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And yf there dwell a straunger with you, or is amōge youre kynszfolkes, and wil do an offerynge vnto the LORDE for a swete sauoure, the same shal do as ye do. Let there be one statute for the whole cōgregacion, both vnto you and to the straungers. A perpetuall statute shal it be vnto youre posterities, that the straunger be euē as ye before f̄ LORDE. One lawe, and one ordinaunce shalbe vnto you and to the straunger that dwelleth with you.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, ʔ sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande, in to f̄ which I shal brynge you, so that ye eate the bred of the lande, ye shal heue vp an Heue-offerynge vnto the LORDE, namely, a cake of the firstlinges of youre dowe shall ye geue for an Heue-offerynge: as the Heue-offerynge of the barne, euen so shal ye geue the firstlinges of youre dowe also vnto the LORDE, for an Heue-offerynge amonge youre posterities.

And whan ye thorow ignorance ouer se eny of these commaundementes, which the LORDE hath spoken by Moses, and all f̄ the LORDE hath commaunded you by Moses (from the daye that the LORDE beganne to commaunde for youre posterities) and the cōgregacion do ought ignorauntly, thē shal the whole cōgregacion offere a yonge bullocke from amonge the greate catell to a burnt-offerynge, for a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE, with his meat-offerynge and drynk-offerynge as the maner is, and an hegoate for a syn-offerynge. And so shal the prest make an attemper for the whole cōgregacion of the children of Israel, and it shalbe forgiven them: for it is an ignorance. And they shal brynge these their giftes for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. and their syn-offerynge before the LORDE for their ignorance, and it shalbe forgiven the whole congregation of the childrē of Israel, & the straunger also ⁊ dwelleth amonge you, for so much as all the people is in such ignorance.

Yf one soule synne thorow ignorance,<sup>a</sup> the same shal brynge a she goate of a yere olde for a synofferynge. And the prest shall make an attonement for such an ignoraunt soule with the synofferynge for the ignorance before the LORDE, that he maye reconyle him, and it shal be forgiven him. And it shal be one lawe, (that ye shal do for ⁊ ignorance) both vnto him that is borne amonge the children of Israel, and to the straunger that dwelleth amonge you.

<sup>c</sup> Now whyle the children of Israel were in the wyldernes, they founde a man gatherynge stickes vpon the Sabbath daye. And they that founde him gatherynge stickes, brought him vnto Moses and Aaron, and before the whole congregacion. <sup>d</sup> And they put him in preson, for it was not declared what shulde be done vnto him. The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: The man shall dye the death, the whole congregacion shal stone him without the hoost. Then the whole cōgregacion brought him out of ⁊ hoost, and stoned him that he dyed. as ⁊ LORDE commaunded Moses.

And ⁊ LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Speake to the childrē of Israel, & saye vnto thē, <sup>e</sup> ⁊ they make them gardes vpon ⁊ quarters of their garmentes amonge all youre posterities, and put yalowe rybandes vpon the gardes in ⁊ quarters. And ⁊ gardes shal serue you, ⁊ ye maye loke vpon thē, and remembre all the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, & do them: that ye order not youre selues after ⁊ meanyng of youre awne hert, ner go a whorynge after youre awne eyes. Therefore shal ye remembre and do all my commaundementes, and be holy vnto youre God. I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the lande of Egipte, to be youre God. Euen I the LORDE youre God.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND Corah the sonne of Iezehar the sonne of Kahath, <sup>a</sup> the sonne of Leui, with Dathan and Abiram the sonne of Eliab, and On the sonne of Peleth, <sup>b</sup> ⁊ sonnes of Rubē, stode vp agaynst Moses, with certayne men amonge the childrē of Israel, two hundreth & fyftie captaines of the congregacion, councelers, & famous men. And they gathered them selues agaynst Moses & Aarō & sayde vnto them: Ye make to moch a doo, <sup>c</sup> for all the congregacion is holy euery one, and the LORDE is amonge them: Why lifte ye youre selues vp then aboue the congregacion of the LORDE?

Whan Moses herde <sup>d</sup> ⁊, he fell vpō his face, & saide vnto Corah, & to all his company: Tomorrow shal <sup>e</sup> LORDE shewe who is his, & who is holy to come vnto him. Whō so euer he choseth, <sup>f</sup> same shal come vnto him. This do: Take <sup>g</sup> censors, thou Corah & all thy cōpanye, & do fyre therin, & put incense thereon tomorrow before the LORDE: then whom so euer the LORDE choseth, the same shal be holy. Ye make to moch a doo, ye children of Leui.

And Moses sayde vnto Corah: Heare ye childrē of Leui, Is it not ynough vnto you, <sup>h</sup> ⁊ ⁊ God of Israel hath separated you fro <sup>i</sup> multitude of Israel, <sup>j</sup> ye shulde come nye him, to do the seruyce of the dwellynge place of the LORDE, and stonde before the people to mynister vnto them? He hath caused the and all thy brethren the childrē of Leui with the, to come nye vnto him: and now ye seke the presthode also. Thou and all thy cōpanye conspyre agaynst the LORDE. What is Aaron, that ye shulde murmur against him?

And Moses sent to call Dathā & Abirā <sup>k</sup> sonnes of Eliab. But they saide: We wil not come vp. Is it to litle <sup>l</sup> thou hast brought vs out of <sup>m</sup> lande of Egipte (<sup>n</sup> floweth with mylke & hony) to kyll vs in <sup>o</sup> wildernes: but thou must raighe ouer vs also? that floweth with milke and hony, ⁊ geuē vs felde and vniardes in possession? Wilt thou put out these mens eyes? We will not come vp.

C Then was Moses very wroth, ⁊ saide vnto ſ̄ LORDE: Turne ſ̄ not vnto their meatoffringes. I haue not takē so moch as an Asse frō thē, nether haue I hurte any of thē. And Moses sayde vnto Corah: Tomorrow be thou ⁊ all thy companye before ſ̄ LORDE, thou, and they, ⁊ Aaron. And take euery one his censer, and put incense therin, and come before the LORDE, euery one with his censer (that is two hundreth and fiftie censers) and both thou and Aaron take either his censer.

And euery one toke his censer, and put fyre therin, and layed incense theron, and came before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnes, and Moses and Aaron also. And Corah gathered ſ̄ whole congregaciō agaynst thē before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnes.

But ſ̄ glory of the LORDE appeared before ſ̄ whole congregacion. And ſ̄ LORDE spake vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ sayde: Separate youre selues frō this congregaciō, ſ̄ I maye shortly consume them. And they fell vpon their faces, ⁊ sayde: O God, thou God of the spretes of all flesh, yf one man haue synned, wilt thou therefore be wroth ouer the whole congregacion? And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ saide: Speake to the congregaciō, and saye: Come vp from ſ̄ dwellynge of Corah, and Dathan, and Abiram.

D And Moses stode vp, ⁊ wente vnto Dathan ⁊ Abiram, ⁊ the Elders of Israel folowed him, ⁊ he spake to ſ̄ cōgregaciō, ⁊ saide: Departe frō ſ̄ tentes of these vngodly mē ⁊ touche nothinge ſ̄ is theirs, ſ̄ ye perishe not in eny of their synnes. And they gat them vp from the dwellynge of Corah, Dathan, ⁊ Abiram. But Dathan and Abiram came out, and stode in the dore of their tentes, with their wyues, and sonnes and children.

And Moses sayde: Hereby shal ye knowe that the LORDE hath sent me, to do all these workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne hert. Yf these men dye the comon death of all men, or be vysited as all men are vysited, then hath not the LORDE sent me. But yf the LORDE make a new thinge, and the earth open hir mouth, and swallowe them with ali that they haue, so ſ̄ they go downe quyeke in to hell, thē shal ye knowe, that these men haue blasphemed the LORDE.

And whā he had spokē out all these wordes, E ſ̄ groūde cloue asunder vnder thē, ⁊ the earth opened hir mouth, ⁊ swallowed thē, with their houses, ⁊ all the mē ſ̄ were with Corah, ⁊ all their substaūce, and they wente downe quyeke in to the hell, with all that they had.

And the earth closed vpō them, ⁊ so they perished from amonge ſ̄ congregaciō. And all Israel ſ̄ were aboute thē, fled at ſ̄ crye of thē, for they sayde: That ſ̄ earth swallowe not vs also. Morouer the fyre came out frō the LORDE, and consumed the two hundreth and fiftie men, that offred the incense.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake to Eleasar ſ̄ sonne of Aaron ſ̄ prest, ſ̄ he take vp ſ̄ censers out of ſ̄ burninge, ⁊ scatter ſ̄ fyre here ⁊ there (For the censers of these synners are halowed thorow their soules) ſ̄ they maye be beatē in to thinne plates, ⁊ fastened vpon ſ̄ altare. For they are offred before ſ̄ LORDE, ⁊ halowed: and they shalbe a token vnto ſ̄ childrē of Israel.

F And Eleasar the prest toke ſ̄ brasen censers which they ſ̄ were burnt, had offred, ⁊ bet thē to plates, to fasten thē vpon ſ̄ altare for a remembrance vnto ſ̄ children of Israel ſ̄ no straunger (and he that is not of ſ̄ sedē of Aaron) come nye to offre incense before the LORDE, ſ̄ it happē not vnto him as vnto Corah and his companye, acordinge as the LORDE sayde vnto him by Moses.

On the nexte morow murmured ſ̄ whole congregacion of ſ̄ childrē of Israel against Moses ⁊ Aarō, ⁊ saide: Ye haue slayne ſ̄ people of ſ̄ LORDE. And whan the cōgregaciō was gathered agaynst Moses ⁊ Aarō, they turned thē towardē ſ̄ Tabernacle of witnes. And beholde, thē ſ̄ cloude couered ſ̄ Tabernacle, ⁊ ſ̄ glory of ſ̄ LORDE appeared. And Moses ⁊ Aarō wētē in before ſ̄ Tabernacle of witnes. And ſ̄ LORDE spake vnto Moses ⁊ sayde: Get you out of this cōgregacion, I wil shortly consume thē. And they fell vpon their faces. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Take the cēser ⁊ put fyre therin frō of the altare, ⁊ laye incēse theron, ⁊ go soone to the cōgregacion, ⁊ make an attonement for them. For the wrath is gone out from the LORDE, and the plage is begōne amonge the people.

And Aaron dyd as Moses sayde, ⁊ ranne in the myddest amonge ȝ congregaciō. And beholde, ȝ plage was begōne. And he burnt incēse ⁊ made an attonemēt for the people, ⁊ stode betwene the deed ⁊ the luyunge, and the plage ceased. But there were fourtene thousande, and senē hundreth deed in the plage, besydes them that dyed aboute the busynesse of Corah. And Aaron came agayne vnto Moses before the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse. And the plage ceased.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND ȝ LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, ⁊ take of thē twolve stauēs, of euery captayne of his fathers house one, and wryte euery mans name vpon his staffe. But Aarons name shalt thou wryte vpon the staffe of Leui. For euery heade of their fathers house shal haue a staffe. And laye thē in the Tabernacle of witnessse, before the witnessse where I testifie vnto you. And loke whom I shall chose, his staffe shal florish, ȝ I maye styll the grudgings of the children of Israel, which they grudge agaynst you.

And Moses spake vnto the childrē of Israel, ⁊ all their captaynes gaue him twolve stauēs, euery captayne a staffe, after ȝ house of their fathers. And Aarons staffe was amonge their stauēs also. And Moses layed the stauēs before the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witnessse.

IS On the morow whā Moses wēte in to ȝ Tabernacle of witnessse, he foude ȝ ⁊ Aarōs rodde of the house of Leui florished, and brought forth blossoms, ⁊ bare almondes. And Moses brought forth all ȝ stauēs frō ȝ LORDE before all ȝ childrē of Israel, that they might se it. And they toke euery mā his staffe.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Bringe Aarōs staffe agayne before the wytnesse, ȝ it maye be kepte for a tokē to the children of rebellion, that their murmuringes maye cease for me, lest they dye.

Moses dyd as ȝ LORDE cōmaunded him. And ȝ childrē of Israel sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, we cōsume awaie, we are destroyed, ⁊ perishe. Who so cōmeth nye ȝ dwellynge place of ȝ LORDE, he dyeth. Shal we thē vtterly cōsume awaie?

The xviij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: A Thou ⁊ thy sonnes, ⁊ thy fathers house with the shal beare the myszdede of ȝ Sāctuary: ⁊ thou ⁊ thy sonnes with the, shal beare the myszdede of youre presthode. But thy brethren of the trybe of Leui thy father, shal come nye the, ⁊ be ioyned vnto the, that they maye mynistrē vnto ȝ. But thou ⁊ thy sonnes with the, shal mynistrē before ȝ Tabernacle of witnessse. And they shal wayte vpō thy seruyce ⁊ vpon ȝ seruyce of the whole Tabernacle. But nye vnto the vessels of ȝ Sāctuary ⁊ to the altare, shall they not come, ȝ both they ⁊ ye dye not: howbeit they shal be ioyned vnto the, to wayte vpō the mynistraciō in the Tabernacle of witnessse, in all the seruice of the Tabernacle. And there shal no straunger come nye vnto you.

Therefore wayte now vpon the seruice of the Sanctuary, and vpon the seruyce of the altare, that there come no more wrath vpon the children of Israel. For lo, I haue takē youre brethrē the Leuites frō amonge the children of Israel, to be youre gifte, for a presente vnto ȝ LORDE, to do ȝ seruyce in ȝ Tabernacle of witnes. As for ȝ, and thy sonnes with the, ye shal waite vpon youre prestes office, that ye maye mynistrē in all maner busynes of the altare, and within the vayne: for youre prestes office geue I vnto you for a gifte to do seruyce. Yf a straunger come nye, he shall dye.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aaron: beholde, I haue geuen the my Heueofferynges: And all that the children of Israel halowe, haue I geuen vnto the, and to thy sonnes for a perpetuall dewtye. This shalt thou haue of the most holy thinges that they offer. All their giftes with all their meatofferings, and with all their synofferynges, and with all their trespass offerynges, that they geue me, the same shal be most holy vnto the and thy sonnes. In the most holy place shalt thou eate it. All that are males shall eate therof: For it shal be holy vnto the.

The Heue offerynge of their giftes in all the Waueofferynges of the children of Israel, haue I geuen vnto the also, and to thy sonnes, and to thy doughters for a perpetuall dewtye. Who so is cleane in thy house, shal eate therof. All the fat of the oyle, and all  $\text{f}$  fat of the wyne and corne of their firstlings, that they geue vnto the LORDE, haue I geuen vnto  $\text{f}$ . The first frutes of all that is in their londe, which they bringe vnto the LORDE, shal be thine. Who so euer is cleane in thine house, shal eate therof.

All dedicate thinges in Israel shal be thine. All that breaketh the Matrix amonge all flesh, which they brynge vnto the LORDE, whether it be man or beest, shalbe thine. But so, that thou cause the firstborne of mā to be redemed, and that thou cause the first borne of vncleane beestes to be redemed also (They shal redeme it whan it is a mouth olde, and shall geue it lowse for money, euen for fyue Sycles, after the Sycke of the Sanctuary, * which Sycke is worth twentye Geras.)

But the first frutes of an oxe, or lambe, or goate shalt thou not cause to be redemed for they are holy. Their bloude shalt thou sprengle vpon the altare, and their fat shalt thou burne for an offerynge of a swete sauoure vnto  $\text{f}$  LORDE. Their flesh shalbe thine, like as  $\text{f}$  Wauebrest and  $\text{f}$  right shulder is thine also. All the Heueofferings that  $\text{f}$  childre of Israel halowe vnto  $\text{f}$  LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the,  $\text{a}$  to thy sonnes,  $\text{a}$  to thy daughters with the for a perpetuall dewtie. This shalbe a salted couenaunt for euer before  $\text{f}$  LORDE, vnto the and thy sede with the.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Aarō: Thou shalt inheret nothinge in their londe,<sup>a</sup> ner haue eny porciō amonge them: for I am thy portion, and thine euheritaunce amōge the children of Israel. Vnto the children of Leui haue I geuen all the tithes in Israel to inheritaunce, for  $\text{f}$  seruyce which they do vnto me in the Tabernacle of witness, that from hēce forth the children of Israel come not nye the Tabernacle of witness, to lade them selues with synne, and to dye: But the Leuites shal do the seruyce in the Tabernacle of witness,  $\text{a}$  shal beare their synne, for a perpetuall lawe amonge youre posterities. † And they shall inheret none inheritaunce amonge the children of Israel. For  $\text{f}$  tithes of the childre of Israel, which they Heue vnto  $\text{f}$  LORDE, haue I geuen vnto the Leuites for an heretage. Therefore haue I sayde vnto them, that they shall inheret no inheritaunce amonge the children of Israel.

And  $\text{f}$  LORDE talked with Moses,  $\text{a}$  saide: Speake to the Leuites,  $\text{a}$  saye vnto them: Whā ye take of  $\text{f}$  childre of Israel  $\text{f}$  tithes,  $\text{f}$  I haue geuen you of the for youre inheritaunce, ye shal take an Heueofferynge of the same vnto the LORDE, euen the tenth of the tithe. And the same youre Heueofferynge shall ye reken, as though ye gaue corne out of the barne, and fullnesse out of the wynepresse.

Thus shal ye geue an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE of all youre tithes, which ye take of the children of Israel,  $\text{f}$  ye maie geue the same Heueofferynge of  $\text{f}$  LORDE, vnto Aarō  $\text{f}$  prest. And all  $\text{f}$  ye geue of  $\text{f}$  tythes,  $\text{a}$  halowe vnto  $\text{f}$  LORDE for a gifte,  $\text{f}$  same shal be his of the best. And saye thou vnto them: Whan ye thus Heue vp  $\text{f}$  fat therof, it shal be rekened vnto the Leuites as the increace of the barne, and as the increace of the wine presse. And ye maye eate it in all places, ye  $\text{a}$  youre children: for it is youre rewarde for youre seruyce in the Tabernacle of witness: and ye shal not lade synne vpon you in the same, whan ye Heue the fat therof, and vnhalowe not the halowed thinges of the children of Israel, and ye shal not dye.

The xix. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses  $\text{a}$  Aarō  $\text{a}$  sayde: This custome shall be a lawe, which the LORDE hath cōmaunded,  $\text{a}$  sayde: Speake vnto  $\text{f}$  children of Israel,  $\text{f}$  they brynge vnto  $\text{f}$  a reed cow without spot, wherein is no blemish,  $\text{a}$  vpon whō there came neuer yock: and ye shal geue her vnto Eleazar the prest, † which shall brynge her without the hooste, and cause her to be slayne there before him.

And Eleazar  $\text{f}$  prest shal take of hir bloude with his fynger, and sprengle it seuen tymes straight towarde the dore of the Tabernacle of witness, and <sup>b</sup> cause the cow to be burnt before him, both hir skynne and hir flesh, and hir bloude also with hir donge. And the prest shal take Cedar wodd and ysopo, and purple woll, and cast it vpo the cow as she burneth,  $\text{a}$  he shal washe his clothes, and bathe his body with water, and the go in to the hoost, and be vncleane vntyll  $\text{f}$  euē.

And he that burnt her, shal wash his clothes

also with water, and bathe his body in water, ⁊ be vnclane vntyll ȝ euen. And one ȝ is cleane, shal gather vp the * aszshes of ȝ cow, and poure them without the hoost in a cleane place, that they may be kepte there, for sprenklinge water to the congregacion of the childrē of Israel, for it is a synofferinge. And he that gathered vp the aszshes of the cow, shall wash his clothes, and be vnclane vntyll the euen. This shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto ȝ children of Israel, and to the straungers that dwell amonge you.

¶ Who so now toucheth a deed mā, shal be vnclane seuen dayes: the same shall purifie himself here with, on the thirde daye and on the seuenth daie, and then shall he be cleane. And yf he purifye not himself on the thirde daye, ⁊ on the seuenth daye, thē shall he not be cleane. But whā eny mā toucheth a deed personne, and wil not purifie himself, he defyleth the dwellynge of the LORDE, and the same soule shal be roted out of Israel, because the sprenklinge water is not sprenkled vpon him: and he is vnclane, as longe as he letteth not himself be poured therof.

¶ This is the lawe. Whan a mā dyeth in ȝ tente, who so euer goeth in to the tente, and all ȝ is in the tente, shal be vnclane seū daies. And euery open vessel that hath no lydd nor couerynge, is vnclane. And who so euer toucheth one ȝ is slayne with the swerde vpon ȝ felde, or eny other deed, or a deed mans bone, or a graue, ȝ same is vnclane seū dayes.

So now for the vnclane personne, they shal take of ȝ aszshes of this burnt synofferinge, ⁊ put springinge water theron in to a vessell, and a cleane man shall take ⁊ ysope, ⁊ dyppe it in the water, and sprenkle it vpon the tente, and vpon all the vessels, and all the soules that are therein. Likewise also vpon him, ȝ hath touched a deed mans bone, or a slayne personne, or a deed body, or a graue.

And he that is cleane, shal sprenkle vpon the vnclane, ȝ thirde daye, ⁊ the seūth daie, ⁊ purifye him on ȝ seūth daie. And he shal washe his clothes, ⁊ bathe him self with water, and so at euen he shalbe cleane.

¶ But he ȝ is vnclane, and wil not purifye him self, ȝ same soule shal be roted out of ȝ cōgregacion. For he hath defyled the Sanctuary of the LORDE, ⁊ is not sprēkled with sprēklinge water, therfore is he vn cleane. And this shalbe a perpetuall lawe vnto thē. And he ȝ sprenkled with the sprēklinge water, shall wash his clothes also. And who so euer toucheth the sprēklinge water, shal be vn cleane vntill the euen. ¶ And what so euer he toucheth, shalbe vn cleane: ⁊ loke what soule he toucheth, shalbe vn cleane vntill the euen.

The rr. Chapter.

¶ AND the childrē of Israel came with the whole cōgregacion in to the wilderness of Zin in the first moneth,† ⁊ the people abode at Cades. And there dyed Miriam, ⁊ was buried there. And the congregacion had no water, ⁊ they gathered them selues together agaynst Moses ⁊ Aaron, ⁊ the people chode with Moses, ⁊ sayde: Wolde God ȝ we had perished, ¶ whan oure brethrē perished before the LORDE. Wherefore haue ye brought the congregacion of the LORDE in to this wilderness, ȝ we shulde dye here with oure catell? And wherfore haue ye brought vs out of Egipte in to this place, where men can not sowe, where are nether fygges, ner vines, ner pomgranates, ⁊ where there is no water to drynke?

And Moses ⁊ Aaron wēte frō the congregacion vnto ȝ dore of ȝ Tabernacle of witness, ⁊ fell vpon their faces. And the glory of the LORDE appeared vnto them. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: 'Take the staffe, ⁊ gather the cōgregacion together, thou ⁊ thy brother Aaron, ⁊ speake vnto the rocke before their eyes, ⁊ it shall geue his water. And thus shalt thou prouyde thē water out of the rocke, ⁊ geue the congregacion drynke, and their catell also.

Thē toke Moses the staffe before ȝ LORDE, as he commaunded him, ⁊ Moses ⁊ Aaron gathered the congregacion together before the rocke, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Heare ye rebellions: Shal we prouyde you water out of this rocke? And Moses lift vp his hande, ⁊ smote ȝ rocke with the staffe two tymes. ¶ Then came ȝ water out abundantly, so ȝ the cōgregacion dranke, and their catell also.

But the LORDE sayde vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron: 'Because ye beleued me not, to sanctifye me before y childre of Israel, ye shal not bringe this congregacion in to the londe that I shal geue the. This is y water of strife, where the children of Israel stroue with the LORDE and he was sanctified vpon them.

And Moses sent messaungers fro Cades vnto y kynge of y Edomites: This worde sendeth the thy *brother Israel: Thou knowest all y trauaile that happened vnto vs, how that oure fathers wente downe in to Egipte, ⁊ how we haue dwelt in Egipte a longe tyme, ⁊ how the Egipcians deale euell with vs ⁊ oure fathers. And we cryed vnto y LORDE, which herde oure voyce, and sent his angell, ⁊ hath brought vs out of Egipte: And beholde, we are at Cades in y cite without the borders of thy londe. † O let vs go thorow thy londe, we wyl not go thorow y felde ner vynyards, ner drynke the water out of the fountaynes. We wyl go the hie strete, and turne nether to y right hande ner to y lefte, tyll we be come past y borders of thy countree.

But the Edomite answered him: Thou shal not go by me, † or I wyl come agaynst y with y swerde. The children of Israel saide vnto him: We wil go y comō hie waye, ⁊ yf we or oure catell drynke of thy water, we wil paye for it: we wil do nothinge, but passe thorow on fote only. But he sayde: Thou shalt not go thorow, And the Edomites came out against them with a mightie people ⁊ a strōge hande. Thus y Edomites denied to graunte Israel passage thorow the borders of the lande. And Israel turned away from them.

And the children of Israel brake vp fro Cades, and came with the whole congregacion vnto mount Hor. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses ⁊ Aaron at mount Hor harde vpon the coastes of y lande of y Edomites, ⁊ sayde: Let Aarō be gathered vnto his people: for he shal not come in to y lande y I haue geuen vnto y children of Israel, because ye were disobedient vnto my mouth at the water of strife. Take Aaron and Eleazar his sonne, and brynge them vp vnto mount Hor, and strype Aaron out of his vestimentes, and put the vpon Eleazar his sonne and there shall Aaron be gathered (vnto his people) and dye.

Then dyd Moses as the LORDE cōmaunded him, and they wente vp vnto mount Hor in y sight of the whole congregacion. And Moses toke Aarons clothes, ⁊ put the vpon Eleazar his sonne. And Aaron dyed there, euen aboue vpon the mount. And Moses ⁊ Eleazar came dowue from the mount. And whan the whole congregacion sawe that Aaron was awaye, they mourned for him thirtie daies thorow out the whole house of Israel.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND whan Arad the kynge of the Cananites (which dwelt towarde the south) herde, that Israel came in by y waie y the spyes had founde out, he fought agaynst Israel, and toke some of them presoners. Then vowed Israel a vowe vnto y LORDE, and sayde: Yf thou wylt geue this people vnder my hande, I wyl vtterly destroye their cities. And the LORDE herde y voyce of Israel, and delyuered them the Cananites, and they vtterly destroyed them with their cities also. † And he called the place Horma.

Then departed they fro mount Hor on y waye towarde the reed see, that they might go aboute the lande of the Edomites. And the soules of the people fayted by the waie ⁊ they spake agaynst God and agaynst Moses: Wherefore hast thou brought vs out of the lande of Egipte, to slaye vs in the wilderness? For here is nether bred ner water, and oure soule lotheth this lighte meate.

Than sent the LORDE fyrie serpentes amonge the people, which bote the peple, so that there dyed moch people in Israel. The came they vnto Moses, and sayde: We haue synned, because we haue spoken agaynst the LORDE and agaynst the. † Praye thou vnto the LORDE, that he take awaye the serpentes from vs. And Moses prayed for the people.

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Moses: Make the a brasen serpente, and set it vp for a token. Who so euer is bytten, and loketh vpon it, shal lyue. † Then made Moses a serpent of brasse, and set it vp for a token: and whan a serpent had bytten eny man, he behelde the brasen serpente, and recouered.

" And the children of Israel departed, and pitched in Oboth. And from Oboth they wente on, and pitched in Iguin by Abarim in the wyldernesse ouer agaynst Moab, on the Eastsyde. From thence departed they, & pitched by the ryuer of Sared. From thence departed they, and pitched on this syde Arnon, which is in the wyldernesse, and cometh out of the coastes of the Amorites. For Arnon is the border betwixte Moab and f Amorites. Wherefore it is spoken in the boke of the warres of the LORDE: And go with violence both on the ryuer of Arnon, & on the founteyne of the riuier, which boweth downwarde to dwell at Ar, & leaneth theron, to be the border of Moab.

And from thence they came to the well. This is the well, wherof the LORDE spake vnto Moses: gather the people together, I wil geue them water. Then sange Israel this songe, and they sange one after another ouer the well: This is the well, that the prynces dygged: the nobles amonge the people haue digged it thorow f teacher and their staues.

And from this wildernes they wente vnto Mathana, & from Mathana vnto Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel to Bamoth, and fro Bamoth vnto the valley that lieth in f felde of Moab at the toppe of Pisga, and turneth toward the wyldernes.

And Israel sent messaugers vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorrites, & caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy lande, we wyl not turne in to f felde ner in to the vynyardes: nether will we drynke the water of the welles, f hye strete wil we go, till we be past the borders of thy countre.

D Howbeit Sihon wolde not geue the children of Israel licence to go thorow the coastes of his lande, but gathered all his people together, and wente out agaynst Israel in the wyldernes. And when he came to Iahenza, he fought agaynst Israel. Neuerthelesse Israel smote him with the edge of the swerde, and conquered his lande from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto the children of Ammon. For the borders of the children of Ammon were ströge. So Israel toke all these cities, and dwelt in all the cities of f Amorites, namely at Heszbou, and in the townes belonginge therto. For Heszbou the cite was Sihons the kynge of the Amorites, and he had foughten before with the kynge of the Moabites, and conquered all his lande from him vntyll Arnon.

Wherefore it is sayde in the prouerbe: Come vnto Heszbou, let vs buylde and prepare f cite of Sihon. For there is a fyre gone out of Heszbou, and a flamme from the cite of Sihon, which hath consumed Ar of f Moabites, and the citisens of f toppe of Arnon. Wo vnto the Moab, thou people of Camos art vndone. His sonnes are put to flighte, & his daughters brought captiue vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites. Their glory is come to naught from Heszbou vnto Dibou: waisted are they vnto Nopha, which reacheth vnto Mediba. Thus dwelt Israel in the lande of the Amorites.

And Moses sent out spyes vnto Iahesar, & they toke the townes belongynge therto, & cōquered the Amorites f were therein. And they turned, <sup>a</sup> & wente vp the waye toward Basan. Then Og the kynge of Basan wete out agaynst them with all his people, to fight in Edrei. And f LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Feare him not, for I haue geuen him with his lande & people in to thy hande, & thou shalt do with him, as thou dyddst with Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heszbou. And they smote him, & his sonnes, & all his people (so f there remayned none) & cōquered the lande. Afterwarde wete f children of Israel, & pitched in f felde of Moab beyonde Iordane by Iericho.

The xxij. Chapter.

A ND when Balac f sonne of Ziphor sawe all that Israel had done vnto the Amorites, and that the Moabites were sore afrayed of the people (f was so greate) and that the Moabites stode in feare of the children of Israel, he sayde vnto f Elders of the Madianites: Now shal this heape lick vnto all that is aboute vs, euē as an oxe licketh vp the grasse in the felde. (And Balac f sonne of Ziphor was kynge of the Moabites at that tyne.)

And he sent out messaugers vnto <sup>a</sup> Balaam the sonne of Beor, which was an interpreter. (The same dwelt by the water of the lande of f children of his people) that they shulde call him, and he caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, there is come out of Egipte, a people, which couereth f face of f earth, and lyeth ouer agaynst me. Come now therfore, and curse me this people, for they are to mightie for me, yf peraduenture I might be able to smyte them, and to dryue them out of the lande. For I wote, that whom thou blessest, he is blessed: and whom thou cursest, he is cursed.

33 And the Elders of the Moabites wente on with y<sup>e</sup> Elders of the Madianites, and had the rewarde of y<sup>e</sup> soyth sayenge in their handes, and they came vnto Balaam, & tolde him the wordes of Balaac. And he saide vnto thē: Tary here all night, & I will bringe you worde agayne, euen as the LORDE shal saye vnto me. So y<sup>e</sup> prynces of y<sup>e</sup> Moabites abode with Balaam.

And God came vnto Balaam, & sayde: What men are these, which are with y<sup>e</sup>? Balaam sayde vnto God: Balaac y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Ziphor the kynge of the Moabites hath sent vnto me: Beholde, there is a people come out of Egipte, and couereth the face of the earth, come now therfore, & curse me thē, yf peraduenture I maye be able to fighte with them, & to dryue thē out. But God sayde vnto Balaam: Go not with them, & curse not that people, for they are blessed.

Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, & sayde vnto the prynces of Balac: Get you vnto youre loude, for the LORDE wyll not suffer me to go with you.

And the prynces of y<sup>e</sup> Moabites gat thē vp, came to Balac, & saide: Balaam refuseth to come with vs. Then sent Balac yet a greater cōpany of prynces, & more honorable thē they. When they came to Balaam, they tolde him: Balac y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Ziphor sendeth y<sup>e</sup> this worde: Oh refuse not to come vnto me, for I wyll promote the vnto hye honoure, & wil do what so euer thou sayest vnto me. Come I praye the, curse me this people.

Balaam answered, & sayde vnto y<sup>e</sup> seruantes of Balac: * Yf Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer & golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde y<sup>e</sup> worde of the LORDE my God, to do litle or greate. Neuertheles tary ye here this night, y<sup>e</sup> I maye wete, what the LORDE wil saye more vnto me. Then came God to Balaam by night, & saide vnto him: Yf the men are come to call the, get the vp then, and go with thē: but what I shal saye vnto the, that shalt thou do.

Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, &

saddled his Asse, & wente with the prynces of y<sup>e</sup> Moabites. But the wrath of God waxed whote, because he wēte. And the angell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE stode in the waye, to withstōde him. But he rode vpō his Asse, & two seruantes with him. And y<sup>e</sup> Asse sawe y<sup>e</sup> angell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE stōdinge in y<sup>e</sup> waye, & his swerde drawen in his hāde. And y<sup>e</sup> Asse turned a syde out of y<sup>e</sup> waye, & wēte in to the felde. But Balaam smote her, y<sup>e</sup> she shulde go in the waye.

Then stode the angell of the LORDE in y<sup>e</sup> pathe by the vynyardes, where there were walles on both the sydes. And whan y<sup>e</sup> Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she wrenched vnto the wall, & thrust Balaams fote vnto the wall. And he smote her agayne. Thē wēte the angell of the LORDE farther, & stode in a narrow place, where there was no waye to turne, nether to the righte hāde ner to y<sup>e</sup> leftē. And whan the Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she fell downe vnder Balaam. Then was Balaams wrath furious, & smote the Asse with a staffe.

Then opened the LORDE the mouth of y<sup>e</sup> Asse, and she sayde vnto Balaam: What haue I done vnto the, that thou hast smytten me now thre tymes? Balaam sayde vnto y<sup>e</sup> Asse: Because thou hast mocked me. Oh y<sup>e</sup> I had a swerde now in my hande, I wolde kyll the. The Asse sayde vnto Balaam: Am not I thine Asse, which thou hast rydden vpon in thy tyme vnto this daye? Was I euer wonte to do so vnto the? He sayde: No.

Then opened the LORDE the eyes of Balaam, y<sup>e</sup> he sawe y<sup>e</sup> angell of the LORDE stōdinge in y<sup>e</sup> waye, & a drawē swerde in his hāde. And he enclyned him selfe, & bowed downe with his face. And the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou smyttē thine Asse now thre tymes? Beholde, I am come out to resiste y<sup>e</sup>, for thy waye is frowarde, & cōtrary vnto me. And y<sup>e</sup> Asse sawe me, & auoyded for me thre tymes: or els yf she had not turned asyde for me, I had slayne the, & saued the Asse alyue.

Then sayde Balaam vnto y<sup>e</sup> angell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE: I haue synned, for I wist not, that thou stodest in the waye agaynst me. And now yf it displease y<sup>e</sup>, I wil turne agayne. The angell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE saide vnto him: Go with the mē: but thou shalt speake nothinge els, then y<sup>e</sup> I shal saye vnto y<sup>e</sup>. So Balaam wente forth with the prynces of Balac. Whan Balac herde þæt Balaam came, he wente out to mete him (in the cite of the Moabites þæt lieth on the coaste of Arnon, which is on þæt vttemost border) ⁊ sayde vnto him: Dyd not I sende for þæt to call the? Wherefore comest thou not then vnto me? Thinkest thou þæt I am not able to promote þæt vnto honoure? Balaam answered him: Lo, I am come vnto þæt. *But how can I saye eny thinge els, thē þæt God putteth in my mouth? þæt I must speake.

So Balaam wente with Balac, and they came vnto the cite on the vttemost border of his lande. And Balac slewe oxen and shepe, and sent for Balaam, and for the prynces that were with him.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND in the mornynge, Balac toke Balaam, and they wēte vp to the hye place of Baal, that from thēce he might se vnto the vttemost parte of þæt people. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Buylde me here seven altares, and prouyde me here seven bullockes, and seue rammes. Balac dyd as Balaam sayde. And both Balac and Balaam offred, on euery altare a bullocke ⁊ a ramme. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Stonde thou by thy burntofferynge, I wil go, yf happily the LORDE wil mete me, ⁊ call me, þæt I maye tell the, what so euer he sheweth me. And he wente his waye, as he sayde.

And þæt LORDE mett Balaam. And Balaam saide vnto him: Seven altares haue I prepared, and offred on euery altare a bullocke and a ramme. The LORDE put þæt worde in Balaams mouth, and sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, and saye on this wise. And when he came agayne vnto him, beholde, he stode by his burntofferynge, with all þæt prynces of the Moabites.

33 Then toke he vp his parable, ⁊ sayde: Balac the kynge of the Moabites hath caused to fet me out of Syria from the moūtaynes towarde the East, (⁊ sayde:) Come, curse me Iacob: come, defye me Israel. How shall I curse, whom God curseth not? How shal I defye, whom þæt LORDE defyeth not? For frō þæt toppē of þæt stonye rockes I se him, ⁊ from the hilles I beholde him. Beholde, þæt people shal dwell by thē selues, ⁊ shal not be rekened amōge the Heithē. Who can tell the dust of Iacob, ⁊ the nombre of the fourth parte of Israel? My soule die þæt death of þæt righteous, and my ende be as the ende of these.

C Thē saide Balac vnto Balaam: What dost thou vnto me? I caused to fet þæt for to curse myne enemies, ⁊ beholde, thou blestest thē. He answered ⁊ saide: †Must I not kepe ⁊ speake þæt, which the LORDE putteth in to me mouth? Balac saide vnto him: Come with me yet vnto another place, frō whence thou mayest se þæt vttemost parte of them, ⁊ not se them all, and curse me them there.

And he toke him vp to a fre place, euē vnto the toppē of Pisga, ⁊ buylded seven altares, and offred on euery altare a bullocke ⁊ a ramme. And he sayde vnto Balac: Stonde so by thy burntofferynge, whyle I go yonder. And the LORDE mett Balaam, ⁊ put the worde in his mouth, ⁊ sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, ⁊ saye on this wyse. And when he came to him agayne, beholde, he stode by his burntofferynge with the prynces of the Moabites. And Balac sayde vnto him: What hath the LORDE sayde?

And he toke vp his parable, ⁊ sayde: Ryse vp Balac ⁊ heare, marke my testimony with thine eares thou some of Ziphor. †God is not a man þæt he shulde lye, ner a mans childe þæt eny thinge shulde repente him. Shulde he saye and not do? Shulde he speake ⁊ not make it good? Beholde, I am brought hither to blesse, I blesse, ⁊ can not go backe there fro. There is no weerynesse sene in Iacob, nether eny laboure in Israel. The LORDE his God is with him, ⁊ the kynges trompet is amōge thē. †God hath brought thē out of Egipte, his strēth is as of an Vnicorne. For there is no Sorcerye in Iacob, ⁊ no Soyth sayer in Israel. When the tyme cometh, it shal be saide vnto Iacob, ⁊ to Israel, what God doth. Beholde, the people shall ryse vp as a Lyonesse, ⁊ heue vp him self as a Lyon. He shal not lye downe, tyll he eate of the pray, and drynke the bloude of the slayne.

D Then sayde Balac vnto Balaam: Thou shalt nether curse him ner blesse him. Balaam answered, ⁊ sayde vnto Balac: Haue I not tolde the: All þæt the LORDE speaketh, þæt must I do? Balac saide vnto him: Oh come, I wil brynge þæt to another place, yf it maye happily please God, þæt thou mayest curse thē there. And he brought him vp to the toppē of mount Peor, þæt boweth towarde the Thē was Balac furious  $\bar{\imath}$  wrath against Balaam,  $\tau$  smote his hādes together,  $\tau$  sayde vnto him: I haue called the,  $\hat{y}$  thou shuldest curse myne enemies, and beholde, thou hast blessed thē now three tymes:  $\tau$  now get the hūce to thy place. I thoughte  $\hat{y}$  I wolde promote the vnto honoure, but the LORDE hath kepte the backe from that worshipec.

Balaam answered him: Tolde not I thy messaungers (whom thou sendest vnto me)  $\tau$  sayde:  $\hat{y}$  If Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer and golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde the worde of the LORDE, to do either euell or good after myne awne hert: but what  $\hat{y}$  LORDE speaketh, that must I speake also. And now beholde, for so much as I go to my people, come therefore, I will shewe the what this people shall do vnto thy people after this tyme.

And he toke vp his parable, and sayde: "Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth  $\hat{y}$  man, whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God,  $\tau$   $\hat{y}$  hath the knowledge of  $\hat{y}$  hyst, euc he  $\hat{y}$  sawe  $\hat{y}$  visio of  $\hat{y}$  Allmightie,  $\tau$  fell downe,  $\tau$  his eyes were opened: I shal se him, but not now: I shal beholde him, but not nie at hāde. <sup>d</sup> There shal a starre come out of Iacob,  $\tau$  a cepter shal come vp out of Israel,  $\tau$  shal smyte  $\hat{y}$  rulers of the Moabites, and ouercome all the children of Seth.

Edom shalbe his possession, and Seir shalbe his enemies possessio, but Israel shal do manfully. Out of Iacob shal come he  $\hat{y}$  hath dominion, and shall destroye the remnant of the cities.

And whā he sawe  $\hat{y}$  Amalechites, he toke vp his parable,  $\tau$  sayde: "Amalec the first amōge the Heithē, <sup>e</sup> but at  $\hat{y}$  last thou shalt perishe vtterly. And whan he sawe the Kenites, he toke vp his parable,  $\tau$  sayde: Strōge is thy dwellinge, and on a rocke hast thou put thy nest, neuertheles thou shalt be a burninge vnto Kain, tyll Assur take  $\hat{y}$  prisoner.

And he toke vp his parable agayne,  $\tau$  sayde: Alas, who shal lyue, whā God doth this? And shippes out of Citiim shall subdue Assur and Eber. He him self also shal perishe vtterly. And Balaam gat him vp, and departed, and came againe vnto his place, and Balac wente his waye also.

The xrb. Chapter.

AND Israel dwelt in Sittim,  $\tau$  and the people beganne to comynytte whordome with the daughters of the Moabites, which called the people vnto the sacrifice of their goddes. And the people ate and worshipped their goddes, <sup>f</sup>  $\tau$  Israel subnytted him self vnto Baal Peor. Then the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, and he sayde vnto Moses: Take all the rulers of the people, and hange them vp vnto the LORDE agaynst  $\hat{y}$  Soune, that the terryble wrath of the LORDE maye be turned awaye from Israel. These thinges shal ye do vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE in youre feastes, besyde that ye vowe and geue of a frewyll for burntoffer ynges, meat- offer ynges, drynkoffer ynges and healthoffer- ynges. And Moses tolde the children of Israel all that the LORDE commaunded him.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND Moses spake vnto the rulers of the trybes of the children of Israel, and saide: This is it that the LORDE hath commaunded: "Yf eny man make a vowe vnto the LORDE, or sweare an oath, so that he binde his soule, he shal not breake his worde, but do all that is proceeded out of his mouth.

Yf a damsell make a vowe vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and bynde herself, whyle she is in hir fathers house, and vnmariēd, and hir vowe or bonde that she maketh ouer hir soule, commeth to hir fathers eares,  $\tau$  he holde his peace therto, thē all hir vowe  $\tau$  bondes  $\hat{y}$  she hath boude hir self withall ouer hir soule, shal stōde in effecte. ### The xxi. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses,  $\tau$  sayde: "Auenge the childre of Israel of the Madianites,  $\hat{y}$  thou mayest afterwarde be gathered vnto thy people. Thē spake Moses vnto the people,  $\tau$  sayde: Harness some men amonge you to the warre agaynst the Ma- dianites ( $\hat{y}$  they maye auenge  $\hat{y}$  LORDE vpon the Madianites) out of euery trybe a thousande,  $\hat{y}$  out of euery trybe of Israel ye maye sende some to the battayll. And from amonge the thousandes of Israel they toke one thousande out of euery tribe, euen twolue thousande prepared vnto the battayll. And Moses sent them with Phineas the sonne of Eleazar the prest in to the battayll, and the holy vessels and  $\hat{y}$  trompettes to blowe in his hande.

And they fought agaynst  $\hat{y}$  Madianites as  $\hat{y}$  LORDE cōmaunded Moses,  $\tau$  slew all  $\hat{y}$  males,  $\tau$  the kyng of the Madianites slew they also amonge the other that were slaine namely, Eui, Rekem, Zur, Hur and Reba, the fyue kynges of the Madianites. And they slew \* Balaam the sonne of Beor with the swerde. And  $\forall$  children of Israel toke the women of the Madianites presoners,  $\tau$  their childrē: all their catell, all their substance, and all their goodes spoiled they, and all their cities of their dwelllynges  $\tau$  castels burnt they with fyre. And they toke all  $\forall$  spoyles,  $\tau$  all  $\forall$  they coude catche men  $\tau$  catell, and brought thē vnto Moses  $\tau$  to Eleasar the prest, and to  $\forall$  congregacion of the children of Israel (namely  $\forall$  presoners, and the catell  $\forall$  were takē, and the good that was spoyled) in to the hoost in the felde of the Moabites, which lyeth besyde Iordane ouer against Iericho.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest and all the captaynes of  $\forall$  congregacion, \* wēte out of the hoost to mete thē. And Moses was angrie at the officers of the hoost, which were captaynes ouer thousandes and hūndreds,  $\forall$  came from the battayll, and sayde vnto thē: Haue ye saued all  $\forall$  women alyue? Beholde, † haue not they (thorow Balaams busynes) turned away  $\forall$  childrē of Israel to synne agaynst the LORDE vpō Peor,  $\tau$  there came a plage ouer the whole cōgregacion of  $\forall$  LORDE? † Now therfore slaie all the males amōge  $\forall$  childrē,  $\tau$  kyll all  $\forall$  women  $\forall$  haue knowne men  $\tau$  lye with them. But all the women children  $\forall$  haue knowne no mē ner lien with them, kepe those alyue for youre selues. And lodge ye without the hoost, † all  $\forall$  haue slayne any man, or touched the slayne, that on the thirde and seuenth daie ye maie purifie youre selues and those whom ye haue taken presoners. And all the clothes, and all stuffe that is made of szkynnes, and all maner furies, and all vessels of wod shal ye purifie.

And Eleasar the prest sayde vnto  $\forall$  captaynes of the hoost,  $\forall$  wente out to the battayll: This is the statute of the lawe, which the LORDE cōmaunded Moses: Golde, siluer, brasse, yron, tynne and leed, and all that suffreth the fyre, shall ye cause to go thorow the fyre, and clense it, that it maye be purified with  $\forall$  sprencklyngo water. As for all such as suffreth not the fyre, ye shal cause it to go thorow  $\forall$  water, and shal washe youre clothes vpon the seuenth daie, and thē shall ye be cleane. After that shall ye come in to the hooste.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: † Take the summe of the spoyle of those that are taken, both of wemen and of catell, thou and Eleasar the prest, and the chefe fathers of the congregacion, and geue  $\forall$  halfe vnto those that toke the warre vpon them, and wente out to the battayll, and  $\forall$  other halfe to the congregacion. And of the men of warre that wente out to  $\forall$  battayll, thou shalt heue vnto the LORDE one soule of fyue hundreth, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe: Of their halfe parte shalt thou take it, and geue it vnto Eleasar the prest for an Heueofferynge vnto the LORDE. But of the children of Israels halfe parte, thou shalt take one heade of fyftie, both of the wemen, oxen, Asses and shepe, and of all the catell, and shalt geue them vnto the Leuites, that wayte vpon the habitaciō of the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar the prest dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And the spoyle and praye which  $\forall$  men of warre had spoyled, was sixe hundreth thousande and fyue and seuentye thousande shepe, two and seuentye thousande oxen, one  $\tau$  thre score thousande Asses: and the wemen  $\forall$  had knowne no men ner lye with them, were two and thirtie thousande soules.

And the halfe parte which belonged vnto them that wente to the warre, was in nōbre thre hundreth thousande, and seuen and thirtie thousande, and fyue hundreth shepe: of the which the LORDE had sixe hundreth,  $\tau$  fyue and seuentye shepe. Item sixe and thirtie thousande oxen: wherof the LORDE had two  $\tau$  seuentye. Item thirtie thousande  $\tau$  fyue hundreth Asses: wherof the LORDE had one  $\tau$  thre score. Item sixtene thousande soules of wemen: wherof the LORDE had two  $\tau$  thirtie. And Moses gaue this heueofferynge of the LORDE vnto Eleasar the prest, as the LORDE commaunded him.

As for the other halfe which Moses deuyded vnto the children of Israel frō  $\forall$  men of warre (namely  $\forall$  halfe that fell to the congregacion) it was also thre hundreth thousande, and seuen and thirtie thousande,  $\tau$  fyue hundreth shepe, sixe and thirtie thousande oxen, thyrtye thousande  $\tau$  fyue hundreth Asses, and sixtene thousande wemen soules. And the captaynes ouer ¶ thousandes of the hoost, namely they that were ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, came forth vnto Moses, and sayde vnto him: Thy seruantes haue taken ¶ summe of ¶ men of warre, that were vuder oure hande, and there lacked not one: therfore brynge we a present vnto the LORDE, what euery one hath fōūde of Iewels of golde, cheynes, bracelettes, rynges, earinges, and taches, that oure soules maye be reconcyled before the LORDE.

And Moses and Eleasar ¶ prest toke of them ¶ golde of all maner ornautes. And all the golde of the Heueofferynge that they Heued vnto the LORDE, was sixtene thousande and seuen hundreth and fyfye Sycles, of the captaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes. For loke what euery one had spoyled, that was his awne. And Moses with Eleasar the prest toke the golde of the captaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and broughte it in to the Tabernacle of witnessse for a remembraunce of the children of Israel before the LORDE.

The xxxij. Chapter.

THE children of Ruben and the children of Gad had an exceeding greate multitude of catell, and sawe the londe of Iaaser and Gilead ¶ it was a mete place for catell, and came ¶ spake vnto Moses and to Eleasar the prest, and to the captaynes of the congregacion: The londe of Atroth, Dibon, Iaesar, Nimra, Heszbō, Eleale, Seban, Nebo, ¶ Beon, which the LORDE smote before ¶ congregacion of Israel, is a mete londe for catell, and thy seruantes haue many catell. And they sayde morouer: Yf we haue founde fauoure before the, thē geue thy seruantes this londe in possession, and we wyl not go ouer Iordane.

Moses sayde vnto them: Your brethren shall go to the warre, and wyll ye tary here? Wherefore turne ye ¶ hertes of the children of Israel, that they shulde not go ouer in to the londe that the LORDE shall geue them?

* Thus dyd youre fathers also, whan I sent them out from Cades Bernea, to spye out ¶ londe. And whan they were come vp to ¶ ryuer of Escol, and sawe ¶ londe, they turned the hertes of the children of Israel, so ¶ they wolde not in to the londe which ¶ LORDE wolde haue geuen them.

And the LORDE was wroth at the same tyme, ¶ sware, ¶ sayde: "These men ¶ are come out of Egipte, from twētye yeare olde ¶ aboue, shall not se the lande which I sware vnto Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, because they haue not wholly folowed me: saue Calch ¶ sonne of Iephune ¶ Kenisite, ¶ Iosua ¶ sonne of Nun: for they haue wholly folowed ¶ LORDE. So the LORDE was wroth with Israel, ¶ let thē wander in the wildernesse fourtye yeares, tyll all ¶ generacion ¶ had done euell before the LORDE, was consumed.

And beholde, ye are rysen vp in youre fathers steade, to increase the nombre of synfull men, ¶ to augmente yet the wrath ¶ indignacion of the LORDE agaynst Israel. For yf ye turne you backe from folowing him, he shal yet leaue them more in the wildernes, ¶ so shal ye destroye all this people.

Then stepte they to him, ¶ sayde: we wyll but buylde shepfoldes here for oure shepe ¶ catell, ¶ cities for oure children: As for oure selues, we will go ready armed before the children of Israel, tyll we haue broughte them vnto their place: Oure childrē shal remayne in the fenced cities, because of ¶ indwellers of the londe. We will not turne home agayne, tyll the children of Israel haue taken euery one his inheritance in possession: for we wyll not inheret with them beyonde Iordane: for oure inheritaunce shal fall vnto vs vpon this syde Iordane Eastwarde.

Moses sayde vnto them: ¶ Yf ye wil do this, that ye wil harness youre selues to the warre before the LORDE, then go ouer Iordane before the LORDE, who so euer is harnesssed amonge you, tyll he haue dryuen out his enemies before his face, and vntyll the londe be subdued before the LORDE, then shal ye returne, ¶ be vngiltye before the LORDE, and before Israel, ¶ so shal ye haue this londe in possession before the LORDE. But yf ye will not do so, beholde, ye shal offende agaynst the LORDE, and be sure, that youre synne shal fynde you out. Buylde cities now therefore for youre children, and shepfoldes and stalles for youre shepe and catell. and do as ye haue spoken.

sayde vnto Moses: Thy seruantes shal do as my lordē hath cōmaunded. Oure children, wyues, substance, ⁊ all oure catell, shal be in ⁊ cities of Gilead. But we thy seruantes will go all harnesssed for the warre vnto battail before ⁊ LORDE, as my lordē hath saide.

The Moses cōmaunded Eleasar ⁊ prest ⁊ Iosua the sonne of Nun, ⁊ the chefe fathers of the tribes of the children of Israel, and saide vnto them: Yf the children of Gad ⁊ the children of Ruben go ouer Iordane with you, all prepared to fight before the LORDE, ⁊ when the londe is subdued vnto you, thē geue them the londe of Gilead in possessiō. But yf they go not ouer with you in harness, then shal they inheret with you in ⁊ lōde of Canaā.

The children of Gad and the children of Rubē answered, ⁊ sayde: As ⁊ LORDE hath spoken vnto thy seruantes, so wyll we do: we wil go harnesssed before the LORDE in to ⁊ lāde of Canaan, and possesse oure euherit-aunce on this syde Iordane.

So Moses gaue vnto ⁊ children of Gad and to the children of Ruben, ⁊ and to the halfe trybe of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, ⁊ kyngdome of Sihon kyng of the Amorites and the kyngdome of Og the kyng of Basan, the londe with the cities therof in all ⁊ coastes of ⁊ cōuntre rōunde aboute. Thē ⁊ children of Gad buylded Dibon, Atharoθ, Aroer, Athroθ, Sophau, Iaaser, ⁊ Iegabeha, Beth-nimra, ⁊ Betharan, stronge fenced cities, ⁊ shepe foldes. The children of Ruben buylded Heszbō, Eleale, Kiriathaim, Nebo, Baal Meon, ⁊ turned ⁊ names, ⁊ Sibamas ⁊ gaue names vnto ⁊ cities which they buylded. And ⁊ children of Machir the sonne of Manasse wente in to Gilead, ⁊ conquered it, and droue out the Amorites ⁊ were therin. Then Moses gaue Gilead vnto Machir ⁊ sonne of Manasse, ⁊ he dwelt therin. Iair ⁊ sonne of Manasse wente and conquered the vyllagies therof, and called them Hauoth Iair. Nobah wente, and cōquered Kenath, with the townes belonginge therto, and called it Nobah, after his awne name.

Thus the two trybes and the halfe trybe haue their enheritaunce allready, on this syde Iordane, ouer agaynst Iericho, Eastwarde.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: "These are fy names of the men, which shal deuyde the londe amonge you. Eleasar the prest, and Iosua the sonne of Nun. And the captayne of euery trybe shal ye take, to deuyde the londe.

D And these are the names of the men: Caleb the sonne of Iephune of the trybe of Iuda. Semuel the sonne of Ammihud of the trybe of Simeon. Elidad fy sonne of Cision of the trybe of Ben Iamin. Buki the sonne of Iaghi of the trybe of the childre of Dan. Hannuel the sonne of Ephod, of the trybe of the children of Manasse amonge the children of Ioseph. Kennuel the sonne of Siphthan, of the trybe of the children of Ephraim. Elizaphan the sonne of Parnach, of the trybe of the childre of Zabulon. Palthiel the sonne of Asan, of the trybe of the childre of Isachar. Abihud the sonne of Seloni, of fy trybe of the children of Asser. Pedahel the sonne of Ammihud, of the trybe of the children of Nephtali. These are they whom fy LORDE commaunded, that they shulde deuyde the inheritaunce vnto the children of Israel in the londe of Canaan.

The xxxv. Chapter.

A AND the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho, and sayde: Commaunde the childre of Israel, that they geue vnto fy Leuites of the inheritaunce of their possession, cities to dwell in. The suburbs also aboute the cities shal ye geue vnto the Leuites, that they maye dwell in the cities, and in the suburbs to haue their catell, and substaunce, and all their beestes.

The suburbs which ye geue vnto fy Leuites, shal reache fro the wall of fy cite outwarde, a

M. cubites rounde aboute. Thus ye shal measure without the cite on fy East syde, two thousande cubites: and on fy South syde, two thousande cubites: and on fy West syde, two thousande cubites: and on fy North syde, two thousande cubites, so fy the cite be in the myddes. This shal be their suburbs.

†And amonge the cities which ye shal geue vnto the Leuites, ye shall geue the sixe fre cities, that he which comitteth a slaughter, maye flye thither. Besydes the same ye shal geue the yet two and fourtie cities: so fy all fy cities which ye geue vnto fy Leuites, be eight and fourtye with their suburbs. And of fy same ye shal geue the more, from the fy haue moch in possession amonge the children of Israel: and the lesse from them, that haue litle in possession. Euery one (acordinge to his enheritaunce that is deuyled vnto him) shall geue of his cities vnto the Leuites.

And the LORDE talked with Moses and saide: Speake to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto the: "Whan ye come ouer Iordane in to fy londe of Canaan, ye shall chose out cities to be fre cities, fy who so comytteth slaughter vnawarres, maye flye thither. And soch fre cities shalbe amonge you because of the auenger of bloude, that he which hath comytted slaughter, dye not, tyll he stonde in iudgment before the congregacion. And of these cities which ye shall geue, there shalbe sixe fre cites. Thre shal ye geue on this side Iordane, and thre in the londe of Canaan.

These are the sixe fre cities, both for fy childre of Israel and for the straungers, and for soch as dwell amonge you, fy who so euer hath slaine eny soule vnawarres, maye flye thither.

‡He fy smytheth eny man with an yron weapō, fy he dye, the same is a murthurer, and shal dye the death. Yf he cast at him with a stone (wherwith eny man maye be slayne) fy he dye therof, then is he a murthurer, and shal dye the death. Yf he smyte him with an hand-weapon of wodd (wherwith eny man maye be slayne) that he dye, then is he a murthurer, and shal dye the death. The auenger of bloude shal bringe fy murthurer to death. Whan he fyndeth him, he shal slaye him. Yf he thrust at him of hate, or cast ought at him with laience of wayte, or smyte him of envye with his hande, that he dye, then shal he that hath slayne him, dye the death: for he is a murthurer. The auenger of bloude shal brynge him to death, as soone as he fyndeth him.

D "But yf he thrust him by chaunce, ⁊ not of envye, or hurle ought at him without eny layenge of wayte, or cast at him with a stone (wherof a man maye dye, ⁊ sawe it not) so yf he dye, ⁊ is not his enemye, nether thought him eny euell, the shal the cōgregacion iudge betwene him yf hath cōmytted yf slaughter, and the auenger of bloude, in such cases. And the cōgregacion shal delyuer the deed slayer from the hande of yf auenger of bloude, ⁊ shal let him come agayne to the fre cite, whither he was fled: ⁊ there shall he abyde vnto yf death of the hye prest, which was anoynted with yf holy oyle. But yf the deed sleyer go out of the borders of his fre cite, that he was fled vnto, and the auenger of bloude fynde him without yf borders of his fre cite, and kyll him, he shal not be gyltye of bloude. For he shulde haue bydden in his fre cite vntyll yf death of the hye prest, ⁊ after yf hye prestes death to come agayne vnto the londe of his enheritaunce. This shalbe a statute of the lawe vnto you amōge youre posterities in all youre dwellings.

E The deed slayer shal be slayne at yf mouth of witnesses. *One witness shal not answere ouer a soule to death. And ye shal receaue none attonement ouer the soule of the deed-slayer (for he is gyltye of death) but he shal dye the death. And ye shal receaue none attonement of him, which is fled to the fre cite, yf he shulde come agayne to dwell in the londe, tyll the hye prest dye. And defyle not ye yf londe wherin ye dwell. For who so is gyltye of bloude, defyleth the londe: and the londe can not be reconcyled from the bloude that is shed therein, but onely thorow the bloude of him that shed it. Defyle not ye the londe that ye dwell in, wherin I dwell also. For I am the LORDE, which dwell amōge yf children of Israel.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

AND yf chefe fathers of the kynred of the childrē of Gilead yf sonne of Machir (which was the sonne of Manasse of the kynred of the children of Ioseph) came forth, and spake before Moses, and before the captaines amonge the chefe fathers of the children of Israel, and saide: Syr, the LORDE hath ⁊ commaunded, that ye shulde geue the londe by lott vnto the childrē of Israel to inheret. And thou my lorde hast commaunded thorow the LORDE, ⁊ that the enheritaunce of oure brother Zelaphead shulde be geuē vnto his daughters. Now yf eny men out of the trybes of Israel take them to wyues, then shal oure fathers enheritaunce be lesse: and as moch as they haue, shal come to yf enheritaunce of the trybe that they come vnto. Thus shal the lott of oure inheritaunce be mynished. So whan the yeaere of Iubilye commeth vnto the childrē of Israel, then shal their enheritaunce come to yf enheritaunce of the trybe, where they are. Thus shal oure fathers enheritaunce be mynished, as moch as they haue.

C Moses charged the childrē of Israel (acordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE) and sayde: The trybe of the children of Ioseph hath sayde righte. This is it that yf LORDE commaundeth the daughters of Zelaphead, and sayeth: ⁊ Let them mary as they like best, onely that they mary in yf kynred of the trybe of their father, that the enheritaunce of the children of Israel fall not frō one trybe to another. For euery one amonge the children of Israel shall cleue to the enheritaunce of the trybe of his father: ⁊ euery daughter that possesseth eny enheritaunce amonge the trybes of the children of Israel, shal be maryed vnto one of the kynred of the trybe of hir father: ⁊ yf euery one amonge the children of Israel maye enioye his fathers enheritaunce, and that the enheritaunce fall not from one trybe to another: but that euery one maye cleue to his awne enheritaunce amonge the trybes of the children of Israel.

D As the LORDE cōmaunded Moses, euē so dyd yf daughters of Zelaphead, Mahela, Thirza, Hagla, Milca ⁊ Noa ⁊ were married vnto their fathers brothers sonnes, of yf kynred of the children of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph. So their enheritaunce remainyd in the trybe of the kynred of their father.

These are the commaundemētes ⁊ lawes, which yf LORDE commaunded by Moses vnto the childrē of Israel, in the felde of the Moabites by Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho.

Chap. VII.

They are commaunded (when they come in the lode of Canaan) to make no frendshipe ner to kepe company with the people therof, but vterly to rote them out, and not to be afrayed of them.

Chap. VIII.

He exorteth them, not to forget the commaundementes of God, but to remembre what singuler kindnes God hath shewed them, & from what troubles he hath delyuered them. And geueth the londe that they are to go vnto, a good reporte.

Chap. IX.

He warneth them that they ascribe not the goodnes that God hath done for them, to their awne power: for yf he had serued them after their awne deseruinge, he had destroyed them euerychone.

Chap. X.

He proceedeth forth in tellinge them their wickednes, & how they departed from Beroth.

Chap. XI.

Consyderinge the multitude of the benefites of God that they had receaued and the pleasaunt londe that they were to receaue, he exorteth them agayne to kepe Gods commaundementes.

Chap. XII.

He descrybeth vnto them againe the statutes & ordinaūces of the LORDE.

Chap. XIII.

How men shal knowe false prophetes and how they ought to be punished.

Chap. XIII.

For so moch as they are a cleane people of God, they are commaunded to auoyde the customes of the Heythen, as in shauynge their heades, in eatinge certayne meates, &c.

Chap. XXXIIII.

Moses goeth vp to the mount, where he dyeth. The children of Israel make lamentacion for him.

The first Chapter.

A THESE are the wordes that Moses spake vnto all Israel on the other syde Iordane in the wilderness, in the playne felde towarde the reed see, betwene Paran, Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Disahab, eleuen daies iourney from Horeb, by the waye of mount Seir vnto Cades Bernea. And it fortuneth the first daye of the eleuenth moneth in the fortieth yere, that Moses spake vnto ¶ children of Israel according vnto all as ¶ LORDE commaunded him, * after he had smytten Sihon ¶ kynge of the Amorites which dwelt at Heszbou: and Og the kynge of Basan, that dwelt at Astaroth, and at Edrei.

On the other syde Iordane in ¶ lande of the Moabites, beganne Moses to declare this lawe, and sayde: The LORDE oure God spake vnto vs vpon mount Horeb, ¶ sayde: Ye haue bene lōge ynough vpon this mountayne, turne you, ¶ departe hence, that ye maye come to the mountaynes of the Amorites, and to all their neighbours in ¶ felde, vpon mountaynes, and in the valleys towarde the South and towarde the see syde, of the lande of Canaan: and to mount Libanus, euen vnto the greate water Euphrates. Beholde, I haue delyuered you the londe, go in, and take it in possession, which the LORDE sware vnto youre fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob,† that he wolde geue it vnto thē, and their seide after them.

Then saide I vnto you at the same tyme: "I am not able to beare you my self alone, for the LORDE youre God hath increased you, so that this daye ye are as ¶ starres of heauen in multitude." (The LORDE God of youre fathers make you yet many thousand tymes mo, ¶ blesse you, as he hath promysed you.) How can I alone beare soche cōbraunce, ¶ charge, ¶ stryfe amōge you? Prouyde here men of wysdome ¶ vnderstandinge, such as are knowne amonge youre trybes, thē wil I set to be heades vnto you.

Then answered ye me, and sayde: It is a good thinge, that thou sayest thou wilt do. Then toke I ¶ heades of youre trybes, wyse and famous mē, and set them ouer you to be heades, ouer thousandes, ouer hundreds, ouer fiftye and ouer ten: and officers amonge youre trybes.

And I charged youre iudges at ¶ same tyme, ¶ sayde: Heare youre brethrē, ¶ iudge righteously betwene euery man and his brother, and the straunger. Ye shall knowe no persone in iudgment, but shall heare the small as well as the greate, and be afraied of no man: for the Iudgment is Gods. But yf eny cause be to harde for you, † let it be broughte vnto me, ¶ I maye heare it. Thus commaunded I you at the same tyme, all ¶ ye shulde doo.

Then departed we from Horeb, and walked thorow the whole wyldernes (which is greate and terryble as ye haue sene) by the waye to ¶ mountaynes of the Amorites, as the LORDE oure God commaunded vs, and came vnto Cades Bernea. Then sayde I vnto you: Ye are come to ¶ mountaynes of ¶ Amorites, which the LORDE oure God shal geue vs. Beholde, there the londe before the, which the LORDE thy God hath geuē vnto the: Go vp, ¶ conquere it, as ¶ LORDE God of thy fathers hath sayde vnto the: ‡ feare not, and be not discouraged.

Then came ye all vnto me, and sayde: Let vs sende men before vs, † to spye vs out the londe, and to bryng vs worde agayne, by what waye we shal go vp, and to what cityes we shal come. That pleased me well, and I toke twolue men from amonge you, of euery trybe one. Which whan they were departed, and wente vp to hye cōuntre, and came to the ryuer Eseol, they spyed it out, and toke of the frute of ¶ londe with thē,⁴ and broughte it downe vnto vs, and broughte vs worde agayne, and sayde: It is a good londe, that the LORDE oure God hath geuen vs.

But ye wolde not go vp, and were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE youre God, and murmured in youre tentes, and sayde: Because the LORDE hateth vs, therefore hath he broughte vs out of the londe of Egipte, to delyuer vs in to the handes of the Amorites, to destroye vs. Whither shal we go vp? Oure brethren haue discouraged oure hertes, ¶ sayde: "The people is greater ¶ of hyer stature thē we, ¶ cityes are greate, ¶ walled euen vp to heauen. Morouer we haue sene there the children of Enakim.

But I sayde vnto you: Feare not, and be not afraied of them: for the LORDE youre

God goeth before you, and shall fighte for you, like as he dealeth with you in Egip̃te before youre eyes, and in the wyldernes: where thou sawest, that the LORDE thy God bare the (euen as a man beareth his sonne) thorow out all the waye that ye haue walked, tyll ye came to this place. And yet for all this ye haue not beleued on the LORDE your God, which wente before you, to searche you out a place, where ye shulde pitch youre tentes: by night in the fyre (to shewe you the waye, wherin ye shulde go)<sup>a</sup> ⁊ on the daye tyme in the cloude.

Whan the LORDE herde ȝ voyce of youre wordes, he was wroth, and swore, and saide: <sup>b</sup>There shall none of this euell generacion se that good londe, which I sware to geue vnto youre fathers, excepte Caleb the sonne of Iephune, he shal se it. <sup>c</sup>And vnto him wyl I geue the londe that he hath troddē vpon, ⁊ to his children, because he hath perfectly folowed the LORDE.

f The LORDE was angrye with me also for youre sakes, and sayde: <sup>d</sup>Thou also shalt not go in thither. But Iosua ȝ sonne of Nun, which stondest before the, he shal go in thither: Corage him, for he shal deuyde the enheritaunce out vnto Israel. And youre childrē, <sup>e</sup>of whō ye sayde they shulde be a praye, and youre sonnes which this daie vnderstonde nether good ner bad, they shal go in thither, vnto them wil I geue it, and they shall enioye it. But as for you, turne you, and take youre iourney to the wyldernes, euen the waye to the reed see.

<sup>f</sup>Then answered ye, ⁊ sayde vnto me: We haue synned agaynst ȝ LORDE, we wil go vp, and fighte, accordinge to all that the LORDE hath commaunded vs. Now whan ye had prepared youre selues, euery one in his harness, ⁊ were at the poynte to go vp to the mountaynes, ȝ LORDE sayde vnto me: Speake vnto them, ȝ they go not vp, ⁊ that they fighte not (for I am not amōge you) that ye be not smytten before youre enemies. Whan I tolde you this, ye wolde not heare, ⁊ were disobedient vnto the worde of the LORDE, and were presumptuous, and wente vp to ȝ mountaines. Then the Amorites that dwelt vpon the moũtaynes, came out against you, and chased you, as Bees do, and smote you at Seir, euen vnto Horma. Now whan ye came againe, and wepte before the LORDE, he wolde not heare youre voyce, and enclined not his eares vnto you. <sup>g</sup>So ye abode in Cades a longe season.

The ij. Chapter.

THEN turned we vs, and toke oure iourney to the wildernes, <sup>h</sup>euen the waye to the reed see (as the LORDE sayde vnto me) and compassed mount Seir a longe season. And ȝ LORDE saide vnto me: Ye haue cōpassed this mountayne now lōge ynough, turne you Northwarde, and commaūde the people, and saye: Ye shal go thorow ȝ coastes of youre brethren the children of Esau, which dwell at Seir: ⁊ they shal be afraied of you. But take diligēte hede to youre selues, that ye prouoke them not: for I wyl not geue you one fote bredth of their londe. <sup>i</sup>For mount Seir haue I geuen to the children of Esau to possesse. Ye shal bye meate of them for moneye, that ye maye eate. And water shal ye bye of them for moneye, that ye maye drynke. For the LORDE thy God hath blessed the in all the workes of thy handes. He hath considered thy iourneyes thorow this greate wyldernes: and this fortye yeares hath the LORDE thy God bene with the, so that thou hast wanted nothinge.

Now whan we were departed from oure brethren the children of Esau, that dwelt vpon mount Seir, by the waye of the felde from Elath ⁊ Ezeon gaber, we turned vs, ⁊ wente by the waye of the wyldernes of ȝ Moabites. Then sayde the LORDE vnto me: <sup>j</sup>Thou shalt not vexe the Moabites, ner prouoke the vnto battayll, for I wil not geue the of their londe to possesse. For Ar haue I geuen vnto the children of Lot in possession. <sup>k</sup>The Emims dwell there before tyme, which were a greate stronge people, ⁊ hie of stature, as the Enakims: and were taken for giauntes, like as ȝ Enakims. And ȝ Moabites called them Emims. <sup>l</sup>The Horites also dwelt in Seir afore tyme, ⁊ ȝ children of Esau droue them out, and destroyed them before them, ⁊ dwelt in their steade: like as Israel dyd in ȝ lōde of his possession, that the LORDE gaue them.

And we wente ouer. The tyme that we were goinge frō Cades Barnea, tyll we came ouer the ryuer Sared, was eight & thirtie yeares: tyll all the men of warre were waysted out of the hoost, * as the LORDE sware vnto them. The hande of the LORDE also was agaynst them, to destroye thē out of the hoost, tyll they were consumed.

And whan all the men of warre were consumed, so y they were deed amonge the people, the LORDE spake vnto me, and sayde: This daie shalt thou go thorow the coast of y Moabites by Ar, & shalt come nye vnto y children of Ammon, y whom thou shalt not vexen ner prouoke. For I wyll not geue the of the lōde of the childrē of Ammon to possesse, for I haue geuē it vnto the childrē of Lot in possession. It was takē for a lōde of giauntes also, & giauntes dwelt therein afore tyme. And y Ammonites calle thē Samsumins, which was a people that was greate, many, and of hye stature, as the Enakims.

¶ And these y LORDE destroyed before thē, and let them possesse the same, so that they dwelt in their steade. † Like as he dyd with the childrē of Esau, which dwell vpō mount Seir, whan he destroyed the Horites before them: and let them possesse the same, so that they haue dwelt in their steade vnto this daie. And the Caphthorims came out of Caphther, and destroyed y Auims (y dwelt at Hazarim euen vnto Gaza) & there dwelt they in their steade.

Get you vp now, and departe, and go ouer the ryuer Arnon. Beholde, I haue geuē Sihon y kyng of the Amorites at Heszbōn in to thy hande: go to and conquere, and prouoke him vnto battayll. This daie wyll I begynne, so that all naciōs vnder all the heauen, shal feare & drede y: In so moch y whā they heare of the, they shal tremble and quake for thy commynge.

¶ Then sent I messaungers from y wyldernes of the East vnto "Sihon the kyng at Heszbōn y with peaceable wordes, and caused to saye vnto him: I wil go but thorow thy lōde, I wil go a longe by the hye waye, I wil nether turne to the righte hāde ner to y left. Thou shalt sell me meate for money, that I maye eate: & water shalt thou sell me for money, that I maye drinke. Onely let me go thorow by fote, <sup>a</sup>as the children of Esau (which dwell at Seir) dyd vnto me: and the Moabites that dwell at Ar: vntyll I be come ouer Iordane, in to the lōnde which the LORDE oure God shal geue vnto vs.

But Sihon the kyng at Heszbōn wolde not let vs go by him: for the LORDE thy God hardened his mynde, & made his hert tough that he mighte delyuer him in to thy hādes, as it is come to passe this daie.

And y LORDE sayde vnto me: Beholde, I haue begonne to delyuer Sihon with his lōnde before the: go to and cōquere, and possesse his lōde. "And Sihō came out with all his people to fight agaynst vs at Iahza. But the LORDE oure God delyuered him in to oure handes, so that we smote him with his children and all his people.

Then toke we all his cities at the same tyme, and destroyed vterly all the cities, men, wemen, and children, and let none remaine: saue the catell, which we caught to oure selues, & the spoyle of the cities that we wanne from Aroer, which lyeth vpon the ryuer syde of Arnon, and from the cite on the ryuer vnto Gilead. There was no cite that coulde defende it selfe from vs: the LORDE oure God delyuered vs all before vs. ¶ But vnto the lōnde of the children of Ammon thou camest not, ner to all that was on the ryuer Iabok, ner to y cities vpō y mountaines, ner vnto what so euer the LORDE oure God forbad vs.

whole region of Argob in the kyngdome of Og at Basan. All these cities were ströge, with hye walles, gates, and barres, besyde many other vnwalled townes.

B And we vtterly destroyed them, as we dyd with Sihon the kynge at Heszbou.* All the cities destroyed we vtterly, and the men, women, and children. But all the cattell and spoyle of the cities caughte we for oure selues.

Thus toke we at the same tyme the londe out of the honde of the two kynges of the Amorites beyonde Iordane, from the ryuer of Arnon vnto mount Hermon (which the Sidons call Sirion, but the Amorites call it Senir) all the cities vpon the playne, and all Gilead, and all Basan vnto Salcha and Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan. For onely Og the kynge of Basan remayned ouer of the giauntes. Beholde, his yron bed is here at Itabath amonge the children of Ammon, nyne cubites longe, and foure cubites brode, after the cubite of a man.

This londe conquered we at the same tyme, from Aroer that lyeth on y ryuer of Arnon. <sup>a</sup> And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue halfe mount Gilead with the cities therof: but y remnaunt of Gilead, <sup>a</sup> all Basan the kyngdome of Og, gaue I vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse. C Iair the sonne of Manasse toke all the region of Argob vnto the coastes of Gessuri and Maachati, and Basan called he Hauoth Iair after his awne name, vnto this daye: But vnto Machir I gaue Gilead. And vnto the Rubenites and Gaddites I gaue one parte of Gilead vnto the ryuer of Arnon (at the myddes of the ryuer is y border) and vnto the ryuer Iabok, which is the border of the children of Ammon: the felde also, and Iordane (which is the coaste) from Cinereth vnto the see in the felde, namely, y Salt see vnder mount Pisga, Eastwarde.

<sup>b</sup> And I commaunded you at the same tyme, and sayde: The LORDE youre God hath geuen you this londe to take possession of it, Go youre waye forth therefore harnessed before youre brethren the children of Israel, all ye that be mete for the warre. As for youre wyues, and children and eatell (for I knowe that ye haue moch cattell) let them remayne in youre cities, which I haue geuen you, vntyl the LORDE youre God haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you, that they also maye take possession of the londe, which y LORDE youre God shal geue the beyonde Iordane: and then shal ye turne agayne to youre awne possession, which I haue geuen you.

<sup>c</sup> And I warned Iosua at the same tyme, and sayde: Thine eyes haue sene all that the LORDE youre God hath done vnto these two kynges: euē so shal the LORDE do also vnto all y kyngdomes whither thou goest. Feare them not, for the LORDE youre God shal fighte for you.

And I besoughte the LORDE at the same tyme, <sup>a</sup> and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast begonne to shewe thy seruaunte thy greatnesse and thy mightie hāde. For where is there a God in heauen <sup>a</sup> earth, that can do after thy workes and after thy power? O let me go <sup>a</sup> se y good londe beyonde Iordane, y goodly hye cowntre, and Libanus.

But the LORDE was angrie with me for <sup>32</sup> youre sakes, and wolde not heare me,<sup>d</sup> but sayde vnto me: Be content, speake nomore to me of this matter. <sup>e</sup> Get the vp to the toppes of mount Pisga, and lifte vp thine eyes towarde the west, and towarde the north, and towarde the south, and towarde y east: and beholde it with thine eies, for thou shalt not go ouer this Iordane. And geue Iosua his charge, and corage him, and bolde him, for he shal go ouer Iordane before the people,<sup>f</sup> and shal deuyde vnto them the londe, that thou shalt se.<sup>g</sup> And so we abode in the valley ouer agaynst the house of Peor.

LORDE thy God destroyed from amonge you.<sup>a</sup> But ye that cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, are all alie this daye. Beholde I haue taughte you ordinaunces and lawes, such as the LORDE my God commaunded me, that ye shulde do euē so in the londe, in to ſ which which ye shal come, to possesse it.

Kepe them now therefore and do them:* for that is youre wysdome and vnderstondinge in the sight of all nacions, which whā they haue herde all these ordinaunces, shall saye: O what a wyse and vnderstondinge folke is this? and how excellent a people? For where is there so excellent a nation, that hath goddes so nye him, as the LORDE oure God is nye vnto vs,† as oft as we call vpon him? And where is there so excellent a nation, that hath so righteous ordinaunces and lawes, as all this lawe which I laye before you this daye.

33 Take hede to thy selie now, and kepe well thy soule, that thou forget not the thinges which thine eyes haue sene, and that they departe not out of thy hert all the dayes of thy life. <sup>a</sup>And thou shalt teach them thy children and thy childers children, the daye whā thou stodest before the LORDE thy God by mount Horeb, whan the LORDE sayde vnto me: Gather me the people together, that I maye make them heare my wordes, which they shal lerne, that they maye feare me all the dayes of their life vpon earth,‡ a that they also maye teach their children.

And ye came nye, a stode vnder ſ mount. But the mount burit euen vnto the myddes of heauen, and there was darknesse, cloudes, and myst. And ſ LORDE spake vnto you out of the myddes of the fyre. The voyce of his wordes ye herde, neuertheless ye sawe no ymage,<sup>c</sup> but herde the voyce onely. §And he declared vnto you his couenaunt, which he comaunded you to do, namely, the ten verses, and wrote them vpon two tables of stone. And the LORDE commaunded me at the same time, to teach you ordinaunces a lawes that ye might do thereafter in the londe, in to the which ye go to possesse it.

C Kepe well youre soules therefore, for ye sawe no maner of ymage, in the daye whā the LORDE spake vnto you out of the fyre vpon mount Horeb,|| that ye destroye not youre

<sup>a</sup> But you hath the LORDE taken, and broughte you out of the yron furnace, namely, out of Egypte, that ye shulde be the people of his enheritaunce, as it is come to passe this daye. And the LORDE was angrie with me for youre sakes,† so that he sware, ſ I shulde not go ouer Iordane, ner come in to that good londe, which the LORDE thy God shall geue the to enheritaunce. Take hede therefore vnto youre selues, that ye forget not the couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and that ye make no ymages of eny maner of faszhion†† as the LORDE thy God hath commaunded. For the LORDE thy God is a consumingye fyre<sup>c</sup> and a gelous God.

Yf whan ye haue begotten children, and childers children, and haue dwelt in the londe, ye marre youre selues, †† make you ymages of eny maner of faszhion, and do euell in the sighte of ſ LORDE youre God, to prouoke him: §§ I call heauen and earth to recorde ouer you this daie, that ye shall shortly perishe frō the londe, in to ſ which ye go ouer Iordane to possesse it. he sware vnto youre fathers, he broughte you out with a mightie hæde, and delyuered you frō the house of bondage, out of the hande of Pharao kynge of Egipte.

Thou shalt vnderstonde now therfore, that the LORDE thy God is a mightie and true God, which kepeth couenaunt and mercy vnto them that loue him, and kepe his comaundementes, euen thorow out a thousande generations: And rewardeth them that hate him, before his face, that he maye destroye them: and wyl not be longe in tarienge to rewarde them (before his face) that hate him. Kepe now therfore the commaundementes, and ordinaunces and lawes, which I commaunde the this daye, that thou do thereafter.

¶ And yf ye shall heare these lawes and kepe them, and do thereafter, then shal the LORDE thy God also kepe the couenaunt and mercy with the, which he sware vnto thy fathers: and shal loue the, blesse the, and multiplie the: he shal blesse the frute of thy wombe, and the frute of thy londe, thy corne, wyne and oyle, the frute of thy kyne, and the frute of thy shepe, in the londe that he sware vnto thy fathers to geue the. Blessed shalt thou be aboue all nacions, there shal no vnfrutefull personne be in the, ner amonge thy catell. The LORDE shall put from the all maner of dysease, and shal brynge vpon the none of y<sup>e</sup> euell sicknesses of Egipte, * which thou hast sene, but shall put them vpon all those that hate the.

¶ Thou shalt brynge to naught all the nacions, which the LORDE thy God shal delyuer the. Thine eye shall not spare them, and their goddes shalt thou not serue, for that shalbe thy decaye. Yf thou shalt saye in thyne hert: These nacions are mo then I, how ca I dryue them out? Feare them not. Remembre what the LORDE thy God did vnto Pharao and to all the Egipcians, thorow greate tentacions (which thou hast sene with thine eyes) thorow tokens and wōders, thorow a mightie hande and a stretched out arme, wherewith the LORDE thy God brought the out. He (euen the LORDE thy God) shall rote out the nacions before the by litle and litle. Thou canst not consume them at one time, y<sup>e</sup> the beestes of the felde increase not vpon the. The LORDE thy God shall delyuer them before the, and shall smite them with a greate slaughter, tyll they be destroyed. And he shal delyuer their kynges in to thine hæde, and thou shalt destroye their names from vnder heauen. There shal noman make the resistance before the, vntyll thou haue destroyed them.

The ymagines of their goddes shalt thou burne with fyre, <sup>e</sup> and shalt not desyre the syluer or golde that is on them <sup>f</sup> or to take it vnto the, that thou sware not thy self therin: for it is abhominacion vnto the LORDE thy God. ALL the commaundementes which I commaunde y<sup>e</sup> this daye, shal ye kepe, so y<sup>e</sup> ye do thereafter, that ye maye lyue and multiplie, and come in, and take possession of the lande, which y<sup>e</sup> LORDE sware vnto youre fathers: and thynke vpon all y<sup>e</sup> waie thorow the which the LORDE thy God hath led the this fortye yeares in the wyldernes, <sup>g</sup> that he mighte chasten the, and proue the, to wete what were in thyne herte, whether thou woldest kepe his comaundementes or no. ## The ix. Chapter.

HEARE O Israel, This daie shalt thou A go ouer Iordane, that thou maiest come in to conquire the nacions, which are greater and mightier then thou, <sup>h</sup>greate cities, walled vp vnto heauen, a greate people and of an hye stature, namely the childre of Enakin, whom thou hast knowne, and of whom thou hast herde saye: Who is able to stonde agaynst the children of Enakim? Therefore shalt thou knowe this daye, that the LORDE thy God goeth before the, <sup>i</sup>a cōsumynge fyre. He shal destroye thē, and shall subdue them before the, and shal driue them out,  $\tau$  shortly shall he brynge thē to naught, as the LORDE hath promysed the.

<sup>j</sup>Now whan the LORDE thy God hath expelled them out before the, saye not thou thē in thine hert: The LORDE hath brought me in to take possession of this lande for myne awne righteousnes sake, where as  $\gamma$  LORDE yet dryueth out the Heithen before the, because of their vngodlynnes.<sup>k</sup>

For thou comest not in to take their londe in possession, for thine awne righteousnes sake, and because of thy right hert: but the LORDE dryueth out these Heythen, for their awne vngodlynnes sake, and that he maye perfourme the worde, which the LORDE hath sworne vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob.

B Vnderstonde now therfore, that the LORDE thy God geueth not the this londe to possesse it, for thine awne righteousnes sake. For thou art a styffnecked people.

Remembre and forget not, how thou displeasedest the LORDE thy God in the wyldernes. Sence  $\gamma$  daye that thou departedst out of the londe of Egipte, tyll ye came vnto this place, haue ye bene dishobedient vnto the LORDE.

<sup>l</sup>For in Horeb ye angred the LORDE, so that of wrath he wolde haue destroyed you, whan I was gone vp to  $\gamma$  mount, to receaue the tables of stone, namely the tables of the couenaunt  $\parallel$ which the LORDE made with you, and I abode fortye dayes  $\tau$  fortye nightes vpon the mount, and ate no bred,  $\tau$  dranke no water: and the LORDE gaue me  $\gamma$  two tables of stone, wrytten with the fynger of God, and in them was acordinge to all the wordes, which the LORDE sayde vnto you vpon the mount out of the fyre, "in the daye of the gatherynge together.

¶ And after the fortye dayes and fortye nightes, § LORDE gaue me § two tables of stone, namely § tables of the couenaunt, and sayde vnto me: "vp, & get § downe quickly from hence, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of Egipte, haue marred thē selues, they are soone gone out of the waye, which I commaunded them, and haue made them a molten ymage.

And the LORDE saide vnto me: I se this people, that it is a styffnecked people: let me alone, that I maye destroye them, and put out their name from vnder heauē. I wyl make of the a people mightier and greater thē this is.

¶ And as I turned me, & wente downe frō the mount which brent with fyre, & had § two tables of the couenaunt in both my hādes, I looked, & beholde, ye had synned agaynst § LORDE your God, so § ye had made you a molten calfe, & were soone turned out of § waie which the LORDE had commaunded you. Then toke I the two tables, & cast them out of both my handes, & brake thē before your eyes, & I fell before the LORDE * (euen as at the first tyme) fortye dayes & fortye nightes, & nether ate bred, ner drāke water, because of all youre synnes which ye had synned, whan ye dyd soch euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath. For I was afraied of the wrath and indignacion, wherwith the LORDE was angrie with you, euen to haue destroyed you. And the LORDE herde me at that tyme also. /

Morouer the LORDE was very angrie with Aaron, so that he wolde haue destroyed him, but I made intercession for Aaron also at § same tyme. As for youre synne (namely, the calfe that ye had made) § I toke it, and burnt it with the fyre, and smote it a sunder, & grynde it in peces, euen vnto dust, and cast the dust in to the broke that descended from the mount.

Ye displeased the LORDE also, *at Tabera, †and at Massa, §and at the lustgraues, ‡and whā he sent you from Cades Barnea, and sayde: Go vp, and conquere the londe which I haue geuen you. And ye were disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE your God, and beleued not on him, and herkened not vnto his voyce: § for ye haue bene disobediet vnto the LORDE, as long as I haue knowne you.

Thē fell I before § LORDE fortye daies and fortye nightes, which I laye there. For § LORDE sayde, he wolde destroye you. But I made intercession vnto the LORDE, and sayde: "O LORDE LORDE, destroye not thy people and thine inheritaunce, which thou thorow thy greate power hast deliuered, and broughte out of Egipte with a mightie hāde. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isaac and Iacob. Loke not vpon the stubbornnesse, and vngodlynnesse and synne of this people (that the londe wherout thou hast broughte vs, saye not: The LORDE was not able to bringe them in to the lande, that he promysed them, and because he hated them, therfore hath he broughte them out, to destroye thē in the wyldernes:.) For they are thy people & thine inheritaunce, which thou hast broughte out with thy greate power, and with thy stretched out arme.

The x. Chapter.

AT the same tyme sayde the LORDE ¶ vnto me: "Hew § two tables of stone like vnto the first, and come vp vnto me in to the mount, and make § an Arke of wod, and in the tables I wyl wryte the wordes, that were in the first, **which thou brakest, and thou shalt laye them in the Arke. So I made an Arke of Fyrry tre, and hewed two tables of stone (like as the first were) & wente vp into the mount, and § two tables were in my hande.

¶ Then wrote he in § tables (acordinge as the first wrytinge was) the ten verses, which the LORDE spake vnto you out of the fyre vpon the mountayne, at the tyme of the gatherynge together. And the LORDE gaue thē vnto me. And I turned me, & wente downe from the mount, and layed the tables in the Arke which I had made, 'that they mighte be there, as the LORDE commaunded me.

 fathers, to loue thē: and hath chosen their sede after thē, namely you, aboue all nacions, as it is come to passe this daye.

 straunger, to geue him fode ⁊ rayment.
<sup>e</sup> Therefore shal ye loue a straunger, for ye youre selues also were straungers in the londe of Egipte.

<sup>f</sup> Thou shalt feare the LORDE thy God, him onely shalt thou serue, vnto him shalt thou cleue: ⁊ swaere by his name. He is thy thy God made the: as ⁊ starres of heauen in with youre handes, because the LORDE thy God hath blessed the. * Ye shall do none of the thinges, ŷ we do here this daye, euery man what semeth him good in his awne eyes. For ye are not yet come to rest, ner to ŷ enheritaunce which the LORDE thy God shal geue the.

B But ye shal go ouer Iordane, and dwell in the londe ŷ the LORDE youre God shall deuyde out vnto you, ⁊ he shal geue you rest from all youre enemies rounde aboute, and ye shal dwell safe. Now when the LORDE thy God hath chosen a place, to make his name dwell there, ye shall brynge thither all ŷ I haue commaunded you, namely, youre burnt sacrifices, youre other offerynges, youre tythes, the Heueofferynges of youre handes, ⁊ all youre fre vowe, which ye shall vowe vnto ŷ LORDE: and there shal ye eate, and reioyse before the LORDE youre God, ye and youre sonnes, and youre daughters, and youre seruantes, and youre maydes, and the Leuites that are within your gates, ⁊ for they haue no porcion ner inheritaunce with you.

Take hede vnto thy selfe, that thou offer not thy burntofferings in what so euer place thou seyst: but in the place which ŷ LORDE shall haue chosen in one of thy trybes, there shalt thou offer thy burntofferings, and do all that I commaunde the. Not withstandinge thou mayest kyll and eate flesh within all thy gates, after all the desyre of thy soule, acordinge to the blessinge of the LORDE thy God, which he hath geue the: ⁊ both the cleane and vncleane maye eate it, as of the Roo and herte, onely the bloude shalt thou not eate, but poure it out as water vpon the earth.

C But within thy gates mayest thou not eate of the tythes of thy corne, of thy wyne, ⁊ of thy oyle, ner of ŷ first borne of thine oxen and of thy shepe, or of any of thy vowe which thou hast vowed, or of thy frewyl-offerynges, or Heueofferings of thy handes: but before the LORDE thy God shalt thou eate them, in the place which the LORDE thy God choseth, thou ⁊ thy sonne, and thy daughter, thy seruaut, thy mayde, and the Leuite that is within thy gates, ⁊ thou shalt reioyse before ŷ LORDE thy God, ouer all ŷ thou puttest thine hande vnto. § And bewarre, that thou forsake not the Leuite, as long as thou lyuest vpon the earth.

But when the LORDE thy God shal enlarge thy bordes of thy londe (as he hath promysed the) and thou saye: I wil eate flesh (for so moch as thy soule longeth to eate flesh) then eate flesh acordinge to all the desyre of thy soule. But yf the place that the LORDE thy God hath chosen (to let his name be there) be farre from the, then kyll of thy oxen and of thy shepe, which the LORDE hath geuen the, as he hath commaunded the, and eate it within thy gates acordinge to all ŷ desyre of thy soule. <sup>d</sup> Euen as a Roo or Hert is eaten, maiest thou eate it: both the cleane and vncleane maie eate it indifferently. || Onely bewarre, that thou eate not the bloude: for the bloude is the life. Therefore shalt thou not eate the life with the flesh, but shalt poure it out like water vpon the earth, ŷ thou mayest prosper, and thy children after the, when thou hast done that which is righte in the sighte of the LORDE.

D But when thou halowest oughte it is thine, or makest a vowe, thou shalt take it, and brynge it vnto the place, that the LORDE hath chosen, and do thy burntofferings with the flesh and bloude vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God. The bloude of thine offryng shalt thou poure vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God, and eate the flesh. Take hede, and heare all these wordes, which I commaunde the, ŷ it maye go well with the, and thy children after ŷ for euer, when thou hast done ŷ which is righte and acceptable in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

<sup>e</sup> When the LORDE thy God hath roted out the Heithen before the, whither thou comnest in to conquire them, ⁊ when thou hast cōquered them, ⁊ dwelt in their londe, bewarre then, ŷ thou fall not in the snare after the, when they are destroyed before the: ⁊ that thou axe not after their goddes, ⁊ saye: Euē as these nacons haue serued their goddes, so wil I do also. ¶ Thou shalt not do so vnto the LORDE thy God. For all that is abhominacion vnto the LORDE, ⁊ that he hateth, ŷ same haue they done vnto their goddes. For they haue burnt euen their sonnes and their daughters with fyre vnto their goddes.

All that I commaunde you, shal ye kepe, out thre cities in the myddes of the lode, y the LORDE thy God shal geue y to possesse. Thou shalt prepare the waye, and parte the coastes of thy londe (which y LORDE thy God shal deuyde out vnto the) in to thre partes, that whosoever hath commytted a slaughter, maye flie thither. And this shalbe the cause, that whosoever hath committed a slaughter, maye flye thither, and lyne.

Yf eny man smyte his neighbour vnawarres, and hath not hated him in tyme passed (as when a man goeth vnto the wod with his neighbour to hew downe tynber, and he turneth his hande with the axle to hewe downe the wod, and the yron sylppeth from the helue, and hyteth his neighbour, that he dyeth) the same shal flye in to one of these cities, that he maye lyue, lest the auenger of bloude folowe after the deedseier, whyle his hert is whote, and ouertake him, whyle the waye is so farre, and slaye him, where as yet no cause of death is in hi, for so moch as he hated him not in tyme passed. Therefore commaunde I the, that thou appoynte out thre cities.

And whan the LORDE thy God enlargeth thy borders, as be hath sworne vnto thy fathers, y geueth the all the lode which he promysed thy fathers to geue (so that thou kepe all these comaundementes, and do y I commaunde the this daye, y thou loue the LORDE thy God, and walke in his wayes all thy life longe) the shalt thou adde yet thre cities vnto these thre, that innocent bloude be not shed in thy londe (which the LORDE thy God geueth the to inheritaunce) and so bloude come vpon the.

But yf eny man beare hate agaynst his neighbour, and layeth waite for him, and ryseth agaynst him, and smyteth him that he dye, and flyeth in to one of these cities, then shall the Elders of the same cite sende thither, and cause him to be fetched from thence, and deluyner him in to the handes of the auenger of bloude, that he maye dye: thine eye shal not pitie him, and the giltie bloude shalt thou put awaye fro Israel, that thou mayest prospere.

Thou shalt not remoue thy neighbours marck, which they of olde tyme haue set in thine inheritaunce, that thou enheretest in the londe, which the LORDE thy God hath geuen the to possesse it.

One witnesse shal not stonde vp alone agaynst a man, ouer eny trespass or synne, what maner of synne so euer it be, y a man can do, but in the mouth of two or thre witnessess shal euery matter be established.

But yf an vnrighteous wytnesse stonde vp agaynst eny man, to testifye eny trespass vpon him, then shal both the men that strye together, stonde before the LORDE, before the prestes and Iudges, which shall be at the same tyme. And the iudges shall make diligent inquisition: y yf the witnesse be founde false, and hath geue false witnesse agaynst his brother, then shall ye do vnto him, euen as he thoughte to do vnto his brother: that thou mayest put awaye the euell from the that other maye heare and feare, and take nomore vpon them to do such wicked poyntes agaynst you. Thine eye shal not pitie him. Soule for soule, eye for eye, tothe for tothe, hande for hande, fote for fote.

And Moses with the prestes and Leuites spake vnto all Israel, and sayde: Take hede and heare O Israel: This daye art thou become the people of the LORDE thy God, that thou mayest be obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE thy God, and do acordinge vnto all his commaundementes and ordinaunces, which I comaunde the this daye.

And these shal stonde vpon mount Eball to curse: Ruben, Gad, Asser, Zabulon, Dan and Nephtali. And the Leuites shal begynne, and saye vnto euery man of Israel, with a loude voyce:

AND yf thou shalt herken vnto ſ̄ voyce of the LORDE thy God, to obserue and do all his commaundementes which I commaunde ſ̄ this daye, then shall the LORDE thy God set ſ̄ an hye aboute all nacions vpon earth, and all these blessinges shal come vpon the, and ouertake the, because thou hast bene obedient vnto the voyce of the LORDE thy God. Blessed shalt thou be in the towne, and blessed in the felde. He hath caused you to walke fortye yeares in the wyldernes. <sup>a</sup>Your clothes are not waxed olde vpon you, nether is thy shue waxed olde on thy fote. Ye haue eaten no bred, and dronken no wyne, ner stronge drynke, that ye mighte knowe, that he is <sup>y</sup> LORDE youre God.

Ye stonde this daye all before the LORDE youre God, the chefe rulers of youre trybes, youre Elders, youre officers, euery man in Israel, youre children, youre wyues, <sup>y</sup> straungers that are in thine hoost, † from the hewer of thy wodd vnto <sup>y</sup> drawer of thy water: that thou shuldest enter in to the couenaunt of the LORDE thy God, and in to the ooth which the LORDE thy God maketh with the this daye, that he mighte set the vp this daye to be a people vnto himselfe, and that he mighte be thy God, as he hath sayde vnto the, † and as he sware vnto thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Iacob.

<sup>C</sup> For I make not this couenaunt and this ooth with you onely, but both with you <sup>y</sup> are here this daye, and stonde with vs before the LORDE oure God, and also with them that are not here with vs this daye. For ye knowe how we haue dwelt in the londe of Egipte, and how we came thorow the myddes of the Heythen, whom ye passed by, and sawe their abominacions and their Idols, wodd and stone, syluer and golde, which were with them: Lest there be amoge you man or woman, or an housholde, or a trybe, which turneth away his hert this daye from the LORDE oure God, to go and to serue <sup>y</sup> goddes of these nations: and lest there be amonge you some rote, that beareth gall † wormwodd: so that though he heare the wordes of this curse, he blesse him selfe yet in his hert, and saye: § Tush, it shal not be so euell. I wil walke after the || meanyng of myne awne hert, that the dronken maye perishe with the thyrstie.

Then shall not the LORDE be mercifull vnto him, but his wrath and gelousy shall smoke ouer soch a man, and all the curses that are wrytten in this boke, shall lighte vpon him: and the LORDE shal put out his name from vnder heauen, and shall separate him vnto euell out of all the trybes of Israel, accordinge vnto all the curses of the couenaunt, that is wrytten in the boke of this lawe.

So the posterities of youre childre which <sup>D</sup> shal ryse vp after you, and the straungers that come out of farre countrees, shall saye (whan they se the plagis of this londe, and the diseases wherwith the LORDE hath snytten it) that he hath brent vp all their londe with brymstone and salt, so <sup>y</sup> it can not be sowne, ner is frutefull, nether growth there eny grasse therin, ¶ Like as Sodom, Gomor, Adama and Zeboin are ouerthrowne, which the LORDE ouerthrewe in his wrath and anger.

Then shall all nacions saye: <sup>**</sup> Wherefore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe? What greate wrothfull displeasure is this? Then shalt it be sayde: Euen because they haue forsaken the couenaunt of <sup>y</sup> LORDE God of their fathers (which he made with them whan he broughte them out of the londe of Egipte) and they wete, and serued other goddes, and worshipped the, euen soch goddes as they knewe not, and whom he had not denyded vnto them. Therefore the wrath of the LORDE waxed whote ouer this londe, to brynge vpon it all the curses that are wrytten in this boke. And the LORDE thrust them out of their londe with greate wrath, indignacion † displeasure † hath cast them in to another londe, as it is come to passe this daye.

These are the †† secretes of the LORDE oure God, which are opened vnto vs and oure children for euer, <sup>y</sup> we shulde do all the wordes of this lawe.

But thou shalt turne, and herken vnto the voyce of the LORDE, to do all his commaundementes, which I commaunde the this daye. C § For the commaundement which I commaunde ſ this daye, is not to wonderfull for the, ner to farre, ner yet in heauen, that thou needest to saye: Who wil go vp for vs in to heauen, and brynge it vnto vs, that we maie heare it and do it? Nether is it beyonde the see, that thou needest to saye: Who wyll go ouer the see for vs, and fetch it vs, that we maye heare it, and do it? For the worde is very nye vnto the, euē in thy mouth and in thine hert, that thou do it.

¶ Beholde, I haue layed before you this daye, life and good, death and euell. For I cōmaunde the this daye, to loue the LORDE thy God, and to walke in his wayes, and to kepe his commaundementes, ordinaunces, and lawes, that thou mayest lye and multiplye, and that the LORDE thy God maye blesse the in the londe, whither thou goest to possesse it.

D But yf thou turnest awaye thine hert, so that thou wilt not heare, but fall a waye, to worships other goddes and to serue them, I certifie you this daye, that ye shal perishe, & not lye longe in the londe, whither thou goest ouer Iordane to possesse it.

¶ I take heauen and earth this daye to recorde ouer you: I haue layed before you life and death, blessinge and cursinge, that thou mayest chose life, and that thou and thy sede maye lye, ſ ye maye loue the LORDE your God, and herken vnto his voyce, and cleue vnto him: (For he is thy life and thy lōge age) that thou mayest dwell in the londe, which the LORDE sware vnto thy fathers Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, to geue them.

¶ And he commaunded them, and sayde: ¶ At the ende of seuen yeares, in the tyme of the Fre yeare, in the feast of Tabernacles whan all Israel come to appeare before the LORDE thy God, in the place that he shall chose, thou shalt cause this lawe to be proclaimed before all Israel in their eares, namely, before the congregation of the people, both of men, wemen, children, and thy straungers which are within thy gates: that they maye heare and lerne to feare the LORDE their God, and be diligent to do all the wordes of this lawe: and that their children also which knowe nothinge, maye heare and lerne to feare the LORDE youre God, all youre lyue dayes which ye lyue in the londe, whither ye go ouer Iordane to possesse it.

Moses wente with Iosua, and stode in the Tabernacle of witness. And the LORDE appeared in the Tabernacle in a cloudy pyler: and the same cloudy pyler stode in the dore of the Tabernacle.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, and this people wyll ryse vp, and go a whoringe after straunge goddes of the londe in to the which they come, § and wyll forsake me, and breake the couenaunt which I haue made with them. And then shall my wrath waxe whote agaynst them, at the same tyme, ¶ I shal forsake the, and hyde my face frō them, that they maye be consumed. ¶ And so whan moch aduersite ¶ trouble commeth vpō the, they shal saye: Is not all this euell come vpō me, because God is not with me? But I shal hyde my face at the same tyme because of all the euell that they haue done, in that they haue turned vnto other goddes.

¶ Wryte now therefore this songe, ¶ teach it the children of Israel, and put it in their mouth, that this ¶ songe maye be a witness vnto me amonge the children of Israel. For I wil brynge them in to the londe which I sware vnto their fathers, that floweth with mylke and hony. ** And whan they eate, and are full and fatt, they shal turne vnto other goddes, and serue them, and blaspheme me, and breake my couenaunt.

And so whan moch myschefe and tribulation is come vpon them, this songe shall answere before them for a witness. It shall not be forgotten out of the mouth of their sede: for I knowe their ymaginacion, that they go aboute euen now, before I brynge them in to the londe, which I sware vnto them.

So Moses wrote this songe at the same tyme, and taughte it the children of Israel. And the LORDE gaue Iosua the sonne of Nun a charge, and sayde: ¶ Be stronge and bolde, for thou shalt brynge the children of Israel in to the londe, which I sware vnto them, and I wil be with the.

Now whan Moses had wrytten out all the wordes of this lawe in a boke, he commaunded the Leuites (which bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt) and sayde: Take the boke of this lawe, and laye it by the syde of the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, that it maye be there a wytnesse agaynst the: for I knowe thy stubburnesse and thy harde neck. ¶ Beholde, whyle I am yet aloue with you this daye, ye haue bene disobedient vnto the LORDE: how moch more after my death?

¶ Gather now vnto me all the Elders of youre trybes, and youre officers, ¶ I maye speake these wordes in their eares, ¶ and take heauen and earth to recorde agaynst them. For I am sure that after my death ye shall marre youre selues, and turne asyde out of the waye, which I haue commaunded you: and so shall my fortune happen vnto you hereafter, because ye haue done euell in the sighte of the LORDE, in prouokynge him thorow the workes of youre handes.

So Moses spake out the wordes of this songe euen to the ende, in the eares of all the congregation of Israel.

The xxxij. Chapter.

HERKEN (O ye heauens) I wyll speake:
 "and let the earth heare the wordes of my mouth.

* My doctryne droppe as doth the raine,
 and my speach flowe as doth the dew.

Euen as the rayne vpon the grasse, and as the droppes vpon the herbe.

For I wyl call vpon the name of the LORDE, geue ye the glory vnto oure God.

† Perfecte are the workes of the Stone, for all his wayes are righteous.

God is true, and no wickednes is there in him, righteous and iust is he.

The frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion hath marred them selues to himwarde and are not his children, because of their deformyte.

Thankst thou the LORDE thy God so, thou foolish and vnwyse people?

Is not he thy father? and thy LORDE?
 Hath he not made thee, and prepared the?

Remembre the dayes that are past, conside the yeaeres of the generacions afore tyme.

 cions and scatred the children of men.

33 Then set he the borders of the nacions aaccordinge to the nombre of the children of Israel.

¶ For the LORDES parte is his folke,
 Iacob is the meetlyne of his enheritaunce.

He founde him in the wyldernes, euen in the drye deserte where he roared.

He led him aboute, and gaue him vnderstandinge: He kepte him as the aple of his eye.

As an Aegle stereth vp hir nest, and floter-eth ouer hir yonge: Euen so stretched he out his fethers, and toke him & bare him on his wynges.

The LORDE onely was his gyde, & there was no straunge God with him.

He caried him ouer & heighth of the earth, and fed him with the increase of the felde.

¶ He caused him sucke hony out of the rocke, and oyle out of the harde stone.

Butter of the kyne, and mylke of the shepe, with the fat of the lambes, and rammes of the sommes of Basan, and hegoates with the fat of the kydneyes, and wheate: And gaue him drynke of the very bloude of grapes.

** And whan he was fat and had ynough, he waxed wanton.

He is fat, and thicke, and smothe, & hath letten God go, that made him, and dyspyed the rocke of his saluacion.

He hath prouoked him to indignacion, & thorow straunge goddes, and thorow abhominacion hath he angred him.

¶ They offred vnto felde deuels, & not vnto their God.

Vnto goddes whom they knewe not, euē vnto new goddes, & came newly vp, whom their fathers honoured not.

Thy rocke that begat &, hast thou dyspyed:
 and hast forgotten God that made the.

And whan the LORDE sawe it, he was moued vnto wrath ouer his sonnes and his daughters.

And he sayde: I wyl hyde my face from them, I wyl se what their ende shal be: for it is a frowarde generacion, they are childre in whom is no fayth.

They haue prouoked me in it that is not
 God: with their vanites haue they angred me.

†† And I agayne wil prouoke them, by those that are no people: by a foolish nacion wil I anger them.

For the fyre is kyndled in my wrath, and shal burne vnto & nethermost hell, and shal consume the londe with the increase therof, and set the foundacions of & mountaynes on fyre.

I wil heape myscheues vpō them, I wil spende all myne arowes at them.

They shal pyne awaye thorow honger, & be consumed of the feuers, and of bytter sicknesses.

¶ I wil sende amonge them & tethe of beestes, and furious serpentes.

Without shall the swearde robbe them, &
 feare in the chambers, both the yonge man and yonge woman, the suckynge children with the gray headed man.

I wyl saye: Where are they? I shall make

For it is a people, wherin is no counsell, and there is no vnderstandinge in them.

O that they were wyse & vnderstode this, that they wolde cōsidre what shulde happē vnto them hereafter.

How cōmeth it, & one shall chace a thousande of them, and & two shall put ten thousande to flighte?

Is it not so, euen because their rocke hath solde them, and because the LORDE hath geuen them ouer?

¶ For oure rocke is not as their rocke, * of thise are oure enemies iudges them selues.

For the LORDE shall iudge his people, † and shal haue compassion on his seruantes. For he shal considre that their power is awaie, and that it is gone with them, which were shut vp and remayned ouer.

And he shal saie: ‡ Where are their goddes, their rocke wherin they trusted?

Of whose sacrifices they ate & fatt, and dranke the wyne of their drynkofferings? Let them ryse vp and helpe you, and be youre proteccion.

¶ Se now that I I am, and that there is none other God but I.

I can kyll and make alyue: § what I haue smytten, that can I heale: ¶ and there is noman able to delyuer out of my hande.

For I wil lifte vp my hande to heauen, & wyl saie: I lyue euer.

¶ Reioyse ye Heythen with his people: for he wil auenge the bloude of his seruantes, and wyl auenge him on his enemies, & wil be mercifull vnto the londe of his people.

And Moses came and spake all the wordes of this songe in the eares of the people, he and Iosua the some of Nun. Now whā Moses had made an ende of speakinge all these wordes vnto all Israel, he sayde vnto thē: ¶ Take to hert all & wordes, which I testifye vnto you this daye, that ye commaunde youre children, to obserue and do all the wordes of this lawe. For it is no vaine worde vnto you, but it is youre life: & this worde shal prolonge youre life in & londe, whither ye go ouer Iordane to conquire it.

And & LORDE spake vnto Moses & same daie, & sayde: Get the vp to this mount Abarim, vpon mount Nebo, which lyeth in & londe of the Moabites ouer agaynst Iericho, & beholde the londe of Canaan, which I shall geue vnto the children of Israel in possessiō. And dye thou vpon the mount, whan thou art come vp, and be gathered vnto thy people. ¶ like as Aaron thy brother dyed vpon mount Hor, and was gathered vnto his people: Because ye trespassed agaynst me amonge the children of Israel by the ** water of stryfe at Cades in the wilderness of Zin, and sanetified me not amonge the children of Israel. For thou shalt se the londe ouer against the, which I geue vnto & children of Israel but thou shalt not come in to it.

The xxiiij. Chapter.

THIS is the blessinge, wherwith Moses † the man of God blessed & childre of Israel before his death, and saide: ¶ The LORDE came from Sinai, †† and rose vp vnto thē from Seir. He appeared fro mount Paran, and came with many thousande sayntes. At his righte hande is there a lawe of fyre for them: O how loued he the people? All his sayntes are in his hande, †† they shall set them selues downe at thy fete, and receaue of thy wordes. Moses commaunded vs the lawe.

The first Chapter.

AFTER the death of Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE, spake the LORDE vnto Iosua & sonne of Nun Moses mynister: My seruaunt Moses is deed, vp now, and go ouer this Iordane, thou and all this people in to the londe that I haue geuen the children of Israel. * All the places that the soles of youre fete shal treade vpon, haue I geuen vnto you, as I sayde vnto Moses: From the wyldernesse and this Libanus vnto the greate water Euphrates: all the londe of the Hethites vnto the greate see towarde the west, shal be youre border. There shall noman be able to withstonde & all thy life longe. <sup>a</sup> And like as I was with Moses, so wil I be with the also. † I will not fayle the nether forsake the. Be stronge and bolde: for vnto this people shalt thou deuyde & londe, which I sware vnto their fathers, to geue it them.

‡ Be strōge therefore and very bolde, that thou mayest kepe and do euery thyng acordinge to the lawe, that Moses my seruaunt commaunded the. Turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte, § & thou mayest deale wysely whither so euer thou goest. § And let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exerceyse thy selfe therin daie and nighte, that thou mayest kepe and do euery thyng acordinge to it that is wrytē therein: Then shalt thou prospere in thy waies, and deale wysely. Lo, I haue commaunded the to be stronge and bolde. Feare not, and be not afrayed: for the LORDE thy God is with &, whither so euer thou goest.

Then commaunded Iosua the officers of the people, and sayde: Go thorow the hoost, and charge & people, and saye: Prepare you vytayles, for ouer thre dayes shal ye go ouer this Iordane, that ye maye come in and take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue you.

And to the Rubenites, Gaddites, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse, sayde Iosua: Thynke vpon the worde, ¶ that Moses the seruaunt of & LORDE spake vnto you, and sayde: The LORDE youre God hath brought you to rest, and geuen you this londe. Let youre wyues and children and catell remayne in & londe, that Moses gaue you on this syde Iordane: But ye youre selues (as many as be fightinge men) shal go forth before youre brethren in harnesse, and helpe them, tyll the LORDE haue broughte youre brethren to rest also as well as you: that they also maye take possession of the londe, which the LORDE youre God shal geue them: Then shal ye turne agayne in to the londe of youre possession, that ye maye enioye it, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE hath geuen you on this syde Iordane towarde & Easte. And they answered Iosua and sayde: ¶ All that thou hast commaunded vs, wyl we do: and whither so euer thou sendest vs, we wyl go thither. Like as we haue obeyed Moses, so wyl we be obedient also vnto the: Onely that the LORDE thy God be with &, like as he was with Moses. Who so euer disobeyeth thy mouth, and herkeneth not vnto thy wordes in all that thou hast commaunded vs, shal dye: Onely be thou stronge and bolde.

For we haue herde, how the LORDE †dried vp the water in the reed see before you, whā ye departed out of Egipte: †and what ye dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites, Sihon and Og beyonde Iordane, how ye roted them out, and destroyed them. And sence we herde thesē, oure hert hath failed vs, nether is there a good stomacke more in eny man, by the reason of youre commynge. For the LORDE youre God is both the God aboue in heaue and beneth vpon earth.

C Sweare now then vnto me y euen by the LORDE (for so moch as I haue dealete mercifully with you) that ye wyl also shewe mercy vpon my fathers house: and geue me a true token, that ye wyl let my father lyue, and my mother, my brethren, and my sisters, and all that they haue, and delyuer oure soules from death. The men sayde vnto her: || Yf we shewe not mercy and faithfulnessse vpon the, whan the LORDE geueth vs the londe, then let oure soule dye for you, so farre as thou betrayest not oure deuyce. Then let she them downe thorow the wyndowe by a coarde: for hir house was in the wall of the cite, and in the wall was hir dwellynge. And she sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vp to the mountaynes, lest they mete you that folowe vpon you: and hyde youre selues there thre dayes, tyll they be come agayne y folowe after you: and then get you youre waye.

D But the men sayde vnto her: As for this oath that thou hast taken of vs, we wyl be discharged of it whan we come in to y londe, excepte thou knyttest in the wyndowe y lyne of this rosecoloured rope (y thou hast lettē vs downe with all) † gatherest vnto y in to the house, thy father, thy mother, thy brethren † all thy fathers house. And loke who so euer goeth out at the dore of thy house, his bloude be vpon his owne heade, and we giltlesse. But of all those y are in thy house, yf a hande be layed vpon thē, their bloude shalbe vpō oure heade. And yf thou bewrayest eny of this deuyce of ours, thē wil we be discharged of the oath y thou hast takē of vs. She sayde: Let it be so as ye saye, and she let thē go. And they wente their waye. And she knyt the rose coloured lyne in the wyndowe.

They wente on their waye, and came to the mountaynes, and remayned there thre dayes, tyll they that folowed vpon them were come agayne: for they soughte them thorow euery strete, † yet they founde them not. So the two men turned agayne, and departed from the mountaynes, and passed ouer (Iordane) and came to Iosua the sonne of Nun, and tolde him euery thinge, as they had founde it, † they sayde vnto Iosua: The LORDE hath geuē vs all the londe in to oure handes, and all they that dwell in the londe, are sore afraied of vs.

The iij. Chapter.

A AND Iosua rose vp early, and they departed from Setim, † came vnto Iordane, he and all the children of Israel, and remayned there all night, afore they wete ouer. But after thre dayes wente the officers thorow y hoost, and commaunded the people, and sayde: Whan ye se the Arke of y couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, and the prestes from amōge the Leuites bearinge it, departe ye then out of youre place, and folowe after (but so, that there be rowme betwene you and it by two thousande cubites, ⁊ that ye come not nye it) ⁊ ye maye knowe what waye ye shulde go: for ye neuer wente that waye afore.

B "And Iosua sayde vnto the people: Haloue youre selues, for tomorow shal thy LORDE bringe wonderous thinges to passe amōge you. And vnto the prestes he sayde: Beare ye the Arke of ⁊ couenaūt, and go before the people. Then *bare they the Arke, and wente before the people. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: This daye wyl I begynne to make the greate in the sighte of all Israel, that they maie knowe, how that like as I was with Moses, so am I with the also. And commaunde thou the prestes that beare the Arke, and saye: Whan ye come before in the water of Iordane, stonde styll.

C And Iosua sayde vnto the children of Israel: Come hither, ⁊ heare the worde of the LORDE youre God. He sayde morouer: By this shal ye perceaue, that the luyngue God is amōge you, and that he shall dryue out before you ⁊ Cananites, Hethites, Heuites, Pheresites, Girgosites, Amorites and Iebusites. Beholde, the Arke of the couenaunt of him ⁊ hath donynion ouer all londes, shall go before you in Iordane. Take now therfore twolue men out of ⁊ trybes of Israel, out of euery trybe one. And whan the soles of the fete of the prestes that beare ⁊ Arke of the LORDE the gouernoure of all londes, are set in the water of Iordane, then shal ⁊ water of Iordane withdrawe it selfe from the water that floweth from aboue, that it maye stonde on a heape.

D Now whan the people departed out of their tentes, to go ouer Iordane, ⁊ the prestes bare the Arke of the couenaunt before the people, and came in to Iordane, ⁊ dypte their fete before in the water (as for Iordane on all his banckes it was full of all maner waters † of the londe) then the water that came downe frō aboue, stode straight vp vpon one heape, very farre from the cite of Adom, that lyeth on the syde of Zarthan: But the water that ranne downe to the see (euen to the salt see) fell awaye, and decreased.

⁊ So ⁊ people wente thorow ouer agaynst Iericho. And the prestes that bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, stode drye in ⁊ myddes of Iordane, readye prepared: ⁊ all Israel wēte thorow drye shod, vntyll ⁊ whole people were all come ouer Iordane.

The iiii. Chapter.

AND ⁊ LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Take A you twolue men, out of euery trybe one, ⁊ comaunde them, ⁊ saye: †Take vp twolue stones out of Iordane, from the place where the fete of the prestes stode in their araye: ⁊ cary them with you, ⁊ ye maie leaue them in ⁊ lodginge, where ye shal lodge this night. The Iosua called twolue mē which were prepared of the children of Israel, out of euery trybe one, ⁊ sayde vnto thē: Go youre waye ouer before the Arke of the LORDE youre God in the myddes of Iordane, ⁊ take euery man a stone vpon his shulder, after the nombre of the trybes of ⁊ children of Israel, ⁊ they maye be a token amōge you. And whan youre children axe their fathers here after, and saye: What do these stones there? That ye maye then saye vnto them, how that the water of Iordane claued in sunder before the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, whan it wente thorow Iordane, ⁊ that these stones are set for a perpetuall remembrance vnto the children of Israel.

Then dyd the children of Israel as Iosua B commaunded them, and bare twolue stones out of the myddes of Iordane (as the LORDE had sayde vnto Iosua) ⁊ accordinge to the nombre of the trybes of the children of Israel, and broughte the same with them in to the lodginge, and lefte them there. And Iosua set vp twolue stones in ⁊ myddes of Iordane, where ⁊ fete of the prestes stode, that bare ⁊ Arke of the couenaunt: and there they be yet vnto this daye. As for ⁊ prestes that bare ⁊ Arke, they stode in the myddes of Iordane, vntyll all was perfourmed that the LORDE charged Iosua to saye vnto ⁊ people || accordinge as Moses gaue Iosua in commandemēt. The people also made haist, and wente ouer. Now whan all the people was gone ouer, the Arke of the LORDE wente ouer also, and the prestes wente before the people.

¶ And the Rubenites, ⁊ Gaddites, and ⁊ C halfe trybe of Manasse wente harnesssed before the childrē of Israel, like as Moses had sayde vnto thē: Aboute a fortye thousande men ready harnesssed to the warre, wente before the LORDE to the battayll, vpon ʒ felde of Iericho. *In that daye the LORDE made Iosua greate in the sighte of all Israel: and like as they feared Moses, so stode they in awe of him, all his life longe.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Commaunde the prestes which beare the Arke of witness, that they come vp out of Iordane. So Iosua commaunded the prestes, ⁊ sayde: Come vp out of Iordane. And whan the prestes ʒ bare the Arke of the couenaunt of ʒ LORDE were come out of Iordane, and trode with the soles of their fete vpon the drye londe, ʒ water of Iordane came agayne in to his place, and flowed (like as afore tyme) vpon all his bankes.

¶ It was ʒ tenth daye of the first moneth, whan the people came vp out of Iordane: ⁊ they pitched their tentes in Gilgall vpon ʒ East syde of ʒ cite of Iericho. And ʒ twolue stones which they had taken out of Iordane, dyd Iosua set vp at Gilgall, ⁊ saide vnto the children of Israel: †Whan youre children axe their fathers hereafter, ⁊ saie: What meane these stones? Ye shall tell thē, ⁊ saie: Israel wēte drye thorow Iordane, what tyme as ʒ LORDE youre God dyed vp ʒ water of Iordane before you, vntyll ye were ouer: like as the LORDE youre God dyd in the reed see, ‡ which he dyed vp before vs, ʒ we mighte go thorow: that all the people vpon earth mighte knowe the hāde of the LORDE, how mightie it is, to the intent that ye shulde allwaye feare the LORDE youre God.

The v. Chapter.

¶ NOW whan all the kynges of ʒ Amorites that dwelt beyonde Iordane westwarde, and all the kynges of ʒ Cananites by the see syde herde, how ʒ LORDE had dyed vp the water of Iordane before the children of Israel, tyll they were come ouer ʒ their hert fayled them, nether was there eny more corage in them at the presence of the children of Israel.

At the same tyme sayde ʒ LORDE vnto Iosua: Make the knyues ¶ of stone, and circuncyse the children of Israel agayne the seconde tyme. Then Iosua made him knyues of stone, and circuncysed the childrē of Israel vpon the toppe of the foreskynnes. And the cause why Iosua circuncysed all the males of the people ʒ were come out of Egipte, is this: for all the men of warre dyed in ʒ wildernesse by the waye, after they were departed out of Egipte: for all the people that came forth, were circuncysed.

But all the people that were borne in ʒ wyldernesse by the waye (after they departed out of Egipte) were not circuncysed: for the children of Israel walked fortye yeares in the wyldernesse, vntyll all the people of the men of warre that came out of Egipte, were consumed, because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE, like as the LORDE sware vnto them, ¶ that they shulde not se the londe, which the LORDE sware vnto their fathers to geue vnto vs, enen a londe that floweth with mylke ⁊ honye: their children which were come vp in their steade, dyd Iosua circuncyse: for they had the foreskynne, and were not circuncysed by the waye.

And whan all the people were circuncysed, they abode in their place, euē in ʒ tētes, tyll they were whole. And ʒ LORDE saide vnto Iosua: To daie haue I turned ʒ shame of Egipte awaye from you, ⁊ the same place was called Gilgall vnto this daye. And whyle the children of Israel laye thus at Gilgall, they kepte Easter ** the fourteenth daye of the moneth at euē in the felde of Iericho. And they ate of the corne of the lōde the seconde daye of the Easter: namely, vneleueded bred, ⁊ fyrmentye of ʒ yeare, euē the same daye. And vpon the morow, the †† Manna fayled, whan they ate of the corne of ʒ londe, so that the children of Israel had nomore Manna, but ate of the corne of the londe of Canaan the same yeare.

And it fortuneth that whā Iosua was by Iericho, he liſte vp his eyes, ⁊ was awarre, that there stode a mā agaynst him, and had a naked swerde in his hande. And Iosua wēte to him, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Art thou one of vs, or of oure enemies? He sayde: No, but I am †† the prynce of the LORDES hoost, and now am I come. Then fell Iosua downe to the earth vpon his face, ⁊ worshipped him, and sayde vnto him: What sayeth my LORDE vnto his seruauſt? ## The vi. Chapter.

AS for Iericho, it was shut & kepte because of the childrē of Israel, so that no man mighte go out ner in. But the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Beholde, I haue geuen Iericho with ſ kynges and men of warre therof, in to thy hande. Let all the men of warre go once rounde aboute ſ cite, and do so sixe dayes. But vpon the seuenth daye let the prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke, and go the same seuenth daye seuen tymes aboute the cite, and let the prestes blowe the trompettes. And whan the horne of the yere of Iubilye bloweth and maketh a sounde, so that ye heare the trompettes, all the people shal make a greate shoute, then shal the walles of the cite fall downe, and ſ people shal fall in, euery one straight before him.

B Then Iosua the sonne of Nun called ſ prestes, and sayde vnto them: Beare ye the Arke of the couenaunt, and let seuen prestes take the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE. But vnto the people he sayde: Get you hence, and go rōde aboute the cite: and let him that is harnesssed, go before the Arke of the LORDE. Whan Iosua had spoken this vnto the people, the seuen prestes bare the seuen trompettes of the yere Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE, and wente & blew the trompettes, and the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt folowed after them: and who so was harnesssed, wente before the prestes that blew the trompettes, and the multitude folowed the Arke. And all was full of ſ noyse of the trompettes. But Iosua commaunded the people, and sayde: Ye shall make no shoute, ner let youre voyce be herde, nether shall ye geue one word out of youre mouth, vntyll the daye ſ I saye vnto you: Make a shoute, then make a shoute.

C So the Arke of the LORDE wente once rounde aboute the cite, and came agayne in to ſ hooste, & remayned therein: for Iosua vsed to ryse vp early in the mornynge. And the prestes bare the Arke of the LORDE: so dyd the seuen prestes beare the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilye before ſ Arke of the LORDE, and wente and blew the trompettes: and who so was harnesssed, wente before thē, but ſ multitude folowed ſ Arke of the LORDE. And all was full of the noyse of the trompettes.

The seconde daye wente they once aboute the cite also, and came agayne in to the hoost. Thus dyd they sixe dayes. But vpon the seūth daye whan the mornynge sprynge arose, they gat them vp early, and wente after the same maner seuen tymes aboute ſ cite, so that vpon the same one seuenth daye they wente seuen tymes aboute the cite.

And at the seūth tyne whan the prestes blew the trompettes, Iosua sayde vnto the people: Make a shoute, for ſ LORDE hath deliuered you the cite: Howbeit this cite, & all that is therein, shalbe damned vnto the LORDE: * onely the harlot Rahab shal lyue, & all that are with her in ſ house, for she hyd the messaugers, whom we sent forth. † Onely beware of it that is damned, lest ye damne youre selues (yf ye take ought of it which is damned) and make the hoost of Israel to be damned, and brynge it in to mysfortune. But all the syluer and golde, with the ornamētes of brasse & yron, shalbe sanctified vnto the LORDE, that it maye come to the LORDES treasure.

Then made the people a greate shoute, and the prestes blew the trompettes (for whan the people herde the noyse of the trompettes, they made a greate shoute) ‡ and the walles fell, and the people clynmed vp in to the cite, eueryone straight before him. Thus they wanne ſ cite, and ſ destroyed all that was in the cite with the edge of the swerde, both man and woman, yonge and olde, oxe, shepe, and Asse.

But Iosua sayde vnto ſ two men which had spied out the londe: Go in to the house of the harlot, and bringe out the woman frō thence with all that she hath, acordynge as ye haue sworn vnto her. Then ſ yonge men (the spyes) wente in, and brought forth Rahab with hir father and mother, & brethren, and all that she had, and all hir kynred, and caused her to dwell without the hoost of Israel. As for the cite, they brent it with fyre, & all that was therein: onely the syluer and golde, and the ornamētes of brasse and yron put they vnto the treasure in the house of ſ LORDE: but Iosua let ¶ the harlot Rahab lyue, with hir fathers house, and all that she had: & she dwelt in Israel vnto this daie, because she had hyd the messaungers whō Iosua sent vnto Iericho to spye.

At the same tyme sware Iosua, and sayde: * Cursed be that man before the LORDE, which setteth vp this cite of Iericho & buyldeth it: Whan he laieth y<sup>e</sup> foundaciō therof, let it cost him his first sonne: And whā he setteth vp the gates of it, let it cost him his yōgest sonne. Thus the LORDE was with Iosua, so that he was spoken of in all londes.

The vij. Chapter.

BUT the children of Israel had cōmytted a sinne in the "thinge y<sup>e</sup> was damned: for Achan the sonne of Charmi the sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah, of y<sup>e</sup> trybe of Iuda, toke some of it y<sup>e</sup> was dāned. Then was the wrath of the LORDE fearece ouer the children of Israel.

Now whan Iosua sent out men from Iericho vnto Hai, which lyeth besyde Bethauē on y<sup>e</sup> east syde of Bethel, he sayde vnto thē: Go vp, and spye the londe. And whan they had gone vp, and spied out Hai, they came agayne to Iosua, and sayde vnto him: Let not all the people go vp, but vpon a two or thre thousande, that they maye go vp and smyte Hai, lest all the people weerye them selues there, for they are but fewe.

So then wente vp, of the people vpon a thre thousande men, and they fled before the men of Hai, and they of Hai smote vpon a syxe and thyrtye men of them, and chaced them from the porte vnto Sebarim, and smote them downe the waye. Then was the hert of the people discouraged, † and became like water. As for Iosua he rente his clothes, and fell vpon his face vnto the earth before the Arke of the LORDE, vntill the eueninge, with the Elders of Israel, and cast dust vpon their heades.

33 And Iosua sayde: Oh LORDE LORDE, wherfore hast thou broughte this people ouer Iordane, to delyuer vs in to the handes of the Amorites to destroye vs? O that we had taried beionde Iordane, as we begāne. Oh my LORDE, what shal I saye, whyle Israel turneth his backe vpon his enemies? Whā the Cananites heare of this, they shal compass vs rounde aboute, yee and rote out oure names from of the earth. What wilt thou do then vnto thy greate name?

Then sayde the LORDE vnto Iosua: Stōde vp, why lystest thou so vpon thy face? Israel hath offended, and trāsgressed ouer my couenaunt, which I commaunded thē. They haue taken also of the thinge that was damned, and haue stollen, and dyssembled, and layed it amonge their ornaumes. The children of Israel are not able to stonde before their aduersaries, but must turne their backes vpon their enemies: for they are acursed. I wyll no more be with you from hēce forth yf ye put not out the damned from amonge you.

Stonde vp, and sanctifie the people, and saye: ‡ Sanctifie youre selues agaynst tomorow for thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: ‡ There is a damned thinge in the O Israel, therefore canst thou not stonde before thine enemies, tyll ye put awaye the damned from amonge you. And ye shall ryse vp early, one trybe after another: and loke which trybe so euer the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one kynred after another: and loke which kynred the LORDE taketh, the same shall come forth, one house after another. And loke what house the LORDE taketh, the same shal come forth, one housholder after another. And who so euer is founde in y<sup>e</sup> curse, the same shalbe burnt in the fyre with all that he hath: because he hath gone beyonde the couenaunt of the LORDE, and committed folye in Israel.

Then Iosua gat him vp by tymes in the mornyng, and brought forth Israel, one trybe after another, and y<sup>e</sup> trybe of Iuda was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynreds in Iuda, y<sup>e</sup> kined of the Serahites was taken. And whan he had brought forth the kynred of the Serahites, one housholde after another, Sabdi was taken. And whā he had brought forth his house, one housholder after another, Achan the sonne of Charmi y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah of the trybe of Iuda, was taken.

And Iosua sayde vnto Achan: My sonne, geue the glory vnto the LORDE the God of Israel, and geue him the prayse, and tell me, what thou hast done, and hide nothinge fro me.

Then answered Achan vnto Iosua, and sayde: Verely I haue synned agaynst y<sup>e</sup> LORDE God of Israel, thus & thus haue I done: I sawe amōge y<sup>e</sup> spoiles a costly Babilonish garment, and two hūdreth Sycles of syliuer and a tunge of golde, worth fiftye Sycles in weicht, vnto the which I had a lust, and toke it: and beholde, it is hyd in the grounde in my tente, and the syliuer vnder it.

Then Iosua sent messaugers thither, which ranne to the tente, and beholde, it was hyd in his teute, and the siluer vnder it. And they toke it out of the tente, and broughte it vnto Iosua, and to all the children of Israel and poured it before the LORDE. Then Iosua and all Israel with him, toke Achan the sonne of Serah with the siluer, the garment and goldē tunge, his sonnes and daughters, his oxen and asses, and shepe, and all that he had broughte they in to ſ valley of Achor.

And Iosua sayde: For so moch as thou hast troubled vs, the LORDE trouble the this daye. And all Israel stoned him, and burned him with fyre with all that he had. And when they had stoned him, they made ouer him a greate heape of stones, which remaineth vnto this daye. (So the LORDE turned from the rigorousnes of his wrath.) Therefore is the same place called ſ valley of Achor vnto this daye.

The viij. Chapter.

AND ſ LORDE saide vnto Iosua: Feare not, and be not afraied. "Take all the men of warre with the, and ryse, and get the vp vnto Hai. Beholde, I haue geuen in to thy hande, the kynge of Hai with his people in his cite & countre. And thou shalt do with Hai and the kynge of it, *as thou dydest with Iericho and the kynge therof, sauynge that ye shal deale amōge you their spoyle & catell: but set thou a preuy watch behynde the cite.

Then Iosua arose, and all ſ men of warre, to go vp vnto Hai: and Iosua chose thirtie thousande fightinge men, and sent them out by night, and commaunded them, and sayde: Take hede, ye shal be ſ preuye watch behynde the cite, but go not to farre from the cite, and se that ye be redye altogether. As for me and all the people that is with me, we wyll make vs to the cite. And when they come forth agaynst vs (†as afore) we wyll flye before them, that they maye folowe out after vs, tyll we haue prouoked them forth of the cite: for they shal thinke that we flye before them, like as at ſ first. And whyle we flye before them, ye shal get you vp out of the preuy watch, and wyinne the cite. For ſ LORDE youre God shal deluyer it in to youre handes. But when ye haue wonne the cite, set fyre vpon it, doynge sacordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE. Beholde, I haue commaunded you.

So Iosua sent them awaye, & they wente vnto the place of the preuy watch, and laye betwixe Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of Hai. But Iosua abode that night amōge the people. And in the mornyng he arose early, and set the people in order, and wente vp with the Elders of Israel before the people towarde Hai: and all the men of warre that were with him, wente vp, & gat them forth, and came ouer agaynst the cite, and pitched their tentes on the north syde of Hai, so ſ there was but a valley betwene him and Hai.

He had taken aboute a fyue thousande men, and set them in the hynder watch betwene Bethel and Hai, on the west syde of the cite, and they ordred the people of the whole hoost that was on the north syde of the cite, so that the vttemost of the people reached vnto the west ende of the cite. So Iosua wente the same nighte in to the myddes of the valley.

But when the kynge of Hai sawe that, he made haist, and gat him vp early, and the men out of the cite, to mete Israel to ſ battayll, with all his people, euen righte before the felde: for he wyst not that there was a preuy watch behynde him on the backe syde of the cite. But Iosua and all Israel were feble before them, and fled by the waye to ſ wyldernesse. Then cried all the people in the cite, that they shulde folowe vpon them, and they folowed after Iosua and russhed out of the cite, so that there remainyd not one man in Hai and Bethel, which wente not out to folowe vpon Israel, and they lefte the cite standinge open, that they mighte persecute Israel.

Thē sayde ſ LORDE vnto Iosua: Reach out the speare that thou hast in thine hande, towarde Hai: for I wyll deluyer it in to thy hande. And when Iosua reached out the speare that was in his hande, towarde ſ cite, ſ hinder watch brake vp out of their place, and ranne (when he had stretched out his hande) and came in to the cite, and wanne it, and made haist, & set fyre vpon it. And the men of Hai turned them, and looked behynde them, and the smoke of the cite wente vp towarde heauen, and they had no place to fle vnto, nether hither ner thither: and the people that fled towarde the wyldernes turned aboute, to folowe vpon them.

¶ And whan Iosua and all Israel sawe, ¶ the hynder watch had woune the cite (for ¶ smoke of the cite ascended) they turned againe, and smote the men of Hai. And they in the cite came forth also agaynst them, so ¶ they came in the myddes amonge Israel on both the sydes, and they slewe them, so that there was not one man of them left ouer or escaped: and they toke the kynge of Hai alyue, and broughte him vnto Iosua. And whā Israel had slayne all the inhabitors of Hai, which had folowed vpon them in the felde and in the wildernes: and whan they were all fallen thorow the edge of the swerde, tyll they were destroyed, thē turned all Israel vnto Hai, and smote it with the edge of ¶ swerde. And of all them which fell that daye fro man vnto womā, there were twolue thousande, all men of Hai.

¶ But Iosua withdrew not his hande (wherewith he reached out the speare) tyll all the inhabitors of Hai were vtterly destroyed, * sauyng the cattell and the spoyle of ¶ cite, dyd Israel parte amonge them selues, accordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE, which he comaunded Iosua. And Iosua burned vp Hai and made an heape therof for euer, which is there yet vnto this daye. And the kynge of Hai caused he to be hanged on a tre vntyll the euen.

* But whā the Sonne was gone downe, he comaunded to take his body from the tre, and to cast it vnder the gate of the cite, and made vpon him a greete heape of stones, which is there yet vnto this daye.

¶ ¶ Then buylded Iosua an altare vnto the LORDE God of Israel vpon mount Ebal accordinge as Moses the seruaunt of ¶ LORDE comaunded the children of Israel, as it is wyrtten in the boke of the lawe of Moses euen an altare of whole stone, wherupon there was no yron lifted: and he offred burntofferings and healthofferings, and there vpon the stones he wrote before the childrē of Israel.

And all Israel with their Elders and officers and iudges, stode on both the sydes of the Arke, right ouer agaynst the prestes ¶ bare the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, the stranger as well as one of them selues, the one halfe besyde mount Grysim, and the other halfe beside mount Ebal, † as Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE comaunded afore, to blesse the people of Israel. Afterwarde caused he to proclame all the wordes of the lawe of the blessinge and cursynge, as it is wyrtten in the boke of the lawe. There was not one worde that Moses comaunded, but Iosua caused it to be proclaimed before all the congregacion of Israel, and before the weme, and children, and straungers which walked amonge them.

The ir. Chapter.

NOW whan all the kynges that were beyonde Iordane vpon the mountaynes, and in the lowe countrees, ¶ in all the hauens of the greete see, and besyde mount Libanus, herde this (namely, ¶ Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and Iebusytes) they gathered thē selues together with one acorde, to fighte agaynst Iosua, and agaynst Israel.

But whan the inhabitors of Gibeon herde, what Iosua had done with Iericho and Hai, they dealte craftely, wēte on their waie, and made a message, and toke olde sackes vpon their asses, and olde rente wyne botels, and olde mended shues vpon their fete, and put on olde and peeced garmentes, and all ¶ bred of their vytailes was harde and moulde, and they wente vnto Iosua in to ¶ hoost at Gilgall, and sayde vnto him, and to euery man in Israel: We are come out of a farre cowntre, therefore make now a couenaunt with vs. Then sayde euery man in Israel vnto ¶ Heuyte: Peraduenture thou dwellest amonge vs, how can I then make a couenaunt with the?

They saide vnto Iosua: We are thy seruautes. Iosua sayde vnto them: What are ye, ¶ whence come ye? They sayde: Thy seruautes are come out of a very farre cowntre, because of the name of the LORDE thy God: for we haue herde the reporte of him, and all that he dyd in Egyp̄te, and all that he dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites beyōde Iordane, Sihon the kynge at Heszbō, and Og the kynge of Basan, which dwelt at Arathoth. Therefore sayde oure

Elders and all the inhabitants of oure countre : Take fode with you for youre iourney, and go mete them, and saye vnto them : We are youre seruautes, therefore make now a bonde with vs : This oure bred that we toke out of oure houses for oure foode, was new when we toke oure iourney towards you : but now lo, it is harde & mouldie. And these bottels fylled we new, and lo, they are rête. And these oure clothes and shues are waxed olde, by & reason of the sore longe iourney.

Then the captaynes toke their vytayles, and axed not the mouth of the LORDE. * And Iosua made peace with them, and set vp a couenaunt with them, that they shulde be saued alyue, and the rulers of the congregacion sware vnto them. But thre dayes after that they had made a couenaunt with them, they herde, that they were their neighbours, and dwelte amonge them : For as the children of Israel wente forth on their iourney, they came on the thirde daye vnto their cities, which are called Gibeon, Caphira, Beeroth, and Cirath learim, and smote thê not, because that the rulers of the congregacion had sworne vnto them by the name of the LORDE the God of Israel.

But whan all the congregacion murmured agaynst the rulers, all the rulers sayde vnto the whole congregacion : We haue sworne vnto them by the LORDE the God of Israel, therefore maye we not touch them. But this wil we do vnto them : Let them lyue, that there come no wrath vpon vs, because of the ooth that we haue made vnto them.

And the rulers sayde vnto them : Let them lyue, that they maye be theuers of wodd and bearers of water for the whole congregacion, as the rulers haue sayde vnto them. Then Iosua called them, and commened with them, and sayde : Wherefore haue ye disceaued vs, and sayde, that ye were farre from vs, where as ye dwell amonge vs ? Therefore shall ye be cursed, so that of you there shall not cease seruautes to hew wodd and to beare water for the house of my God.

They answered Iosua, & sayde : It was tolde thy seruautes, that the LORDE thy God commaunded Moses his seruaunt, that he shulde geue you the whole lode, and that he wolde destroye all the inhabitants of the londe before you : therefore were we sore afraied of oure lyues before you, and thus haue we done. But now lo, we are in thy handes : loke what thou thinkest good and righte to do vnto vs, that do.

And he dyd euen so vnto them, and delyuered them from the children of Israels hâde, that they shulde not slaye them. So vpô the same daye Iosua made them bewers of wodd and water bearers for the congregacion, and for the altare of the LORDE vnto this daye, in the place that he shall chose.

The x. Chapter.

WHAN Adonisedech the kynge of Ierusalem herde, that Iosua had wonne Hai, and dammed it, and done vnto Hai and & kynge of it, like as he dyd vnto Ierieho and to the kynge therof, and that they of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were come vnder them, they were sore afraied. For Gibeon was a greate cite, like as one of the kynges cities, and greater then Hai, and all the citesyns therof were men of armes. Therefore sent he vnto Hoham the kynge of Hebron, and to Pirea the kynge of Iarnuth, and to Iaphia the kynge of Lachis, and to Debir the kynge of Eglon, and caused to saie vnto them : Come vp vnto me, and helpe me, that we maie smyte Gibeon, for they haue made peace with Iosua and the children of Israel. Then came the fyue kynges of the Amorites together, and wente vp, the kynge of Ierusalem, the kynge of Hebron, & kynge of Iarnuth, the kynge of Lachis, the kynge of Eglon, with all their armies, & layed sege vnto Gibeon, and foughte agaynst it.

Howbeit they of Gibeon sent vnto Iosua to Gilgall, and caused to saye vnto him : Withdrowe not thine hande from thy seruautes, come vp soone vnto vs : delyuer and helpe vs, for all the kynges of the Amorites that dwell vpon the mountaynes, are gathered together agaynst vs. Iosua wente vp from Gilgall, and all the warryers and all the men armes with him. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua : ¶ Feare them not, for I haue geue them in to thy hande. There shall not one of them be able to stonde before the. So Iosua came sodenly vpon them, for all that night wente he vp from Gilgall. ¶ And the LORDE discomfited thê before Israel, and smote them with a greate slaughter at Gibeon :

* 2 Reg. 21. a. † Deu. 29. b.

‡ Iosua. 9. c. § Iosua. 8. a. || Esa. 28. d.

¶ they chased them the waie downe to Beth Horon, and smote them vnto Aseka and Makeda.

C And whan they fled before Israel, the waye downe to Bethoron, the LORDE caused a greate hayle from heauen to fall vpon them, vnto Aseka, so that they dyed: ¶ many mo of them dyed of the hayle, then the children of Israel slewe with the swerde.

Then spake Iosua vnto the LORDE (the same daye that the LORDE gaue ouer the Amorites before the children of Israel) and sayde in the presence of Israel: *Sonne, holde styll at Gibeon, and thou Moone in the valley of Aialon.

Then the Sonne helde styll, and y Moone stode, vntyll the people had auenged thē selues on their enemies. Is not this wrytten in the booke of the righteous? Thus the Sonne stode styll in the myddes of heauen, and dyffered to go downe for the space of a whole daye after. And there was no daye like vnto this (nether before ner after) whan the LORDE herkened vnto the voyce of one man: for the LORDE fought for Israel. And Iosua wente agayne to Gilgall in to the tētes, and all Israel with him. As for the fyue kynges, they were fled, and had hyd thē selues in the caue at Makeda.

D Then as it tolde Iosua: We haue fōūde the fyue kynges hyd in the caue at Makeda. Iosua sayde: Rolle greate stones then before the hole of the caue, and set men there to kepe them.

As for you, stonde not ye styll, but folowe after your enemies, and smyte them behynde, and let them not come in their cities, for the LORDE youre God hath deliuered thē in to youre hande. And whan Iosua and y children of Israel had ended the sore greate slaughter vpo them, so y they were brought to naught, the remnaunt of them came in to the stronge cities.

So all the people came agayne to the hoost vnto Iosua to Makeda in peace, and no man durst moue his tunge agaynst the children of Israel. Iosua sayde: Open the mouth of the caue, and brynge the fyue kynges forth vnto me. They dyd so, and broughte the kynges vnto him out of the caue: the kinge of Ierusalem, the kinge of Hebrō, the kinge of Iarmuth, the kinge of Lachis, the kinge of Eglon.

Whan these fyue kynges were broughte forth vnto him, Iosua called euery man of Israel, and sayde vnto the rulers of the men of warre that wente with him: Come forth and treade vpon the neckes of these kynges with youre fete. And they came forth, and trode vpon their neckes with their fete. And Iosua saide vnto them: Be not afraied, and feare not: be stronge and bolde, for thus shal the LORDE do vnto all youre enemies, agaynst whom ye fighte.

And Iosua smote them afterwarde, and put them to death, and hanged them vpon fyue trees. And they hanged styll vpon the trees vntyll the euenyng. †But whan the Sonne was gone downe, he commaunded to take them of from the trees: and they cast them in the caue, wherin they had hyd them selues, ¶ before the hole of the caue they layed greate stones, which are there yet vnto this daye. The same daye wanne Iosua Makeda also, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and the kynges therof, and ‡damned it, and all the soules that were therin, and let none remayne escaped: and dyd vnto the kynges of Makeda as he dyd vnto the kynges of Iericho.

Then Iosua and all Israel with him departed fro Makeda vnto Lybna, ¶ foughte agaynst it. (And the LORDE gaue it with y kynges therof in to the bande of Israel) and smote it and all the soules that were therin, with the edge of the swerde, and let not one remayne in it: and dyd vnto the kinges therof as he had done vnto the kynges of Iericho.

Afterwarde wente Iosua and all Israel with him from Lybna vnto Lachis, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it. And the LORDE deliuered Lachis also in to the bande of Israel, so that they wanne it vpon the seconde daye, and smote it with y edge of the swerde, and all the soules that were therin, accordinge to all as he had done vnto Lybna. At the same tyme Horam y kynges of Gazer wente vp, to helpe Lachis. But Iosua smote him with all his people, tyll there remaine not one.

And Iosua wente with all Israel from Lachis, vnto Eglon, and layed sege vnto it, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it the same daye, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and damned all the soules that were therin the same daye, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Lachis.

After that wente Iosua with all Israel from Eglon vnto Hebron, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it, and smote it with  $\hat{y}$  edge of the swerde, and the kyng of it, and all the cities therof, and all the soules that were therein, and let not one remayne, acordynge vnto all as he had done vnto Eglon: and damned it, and all the soules that were therein.

B Then turned Iosua agayne with all Israel towarde Debir, and fought agaynst it, and wanne it, with the kinge of it, and all  $\hat{y}$  cities therof, and smote them with the edge of the swerde, and damned all  $\hat{y}$  soules that were therein, and let not one remayne ouer. Euen as he had done vnto Hebrō and Lybna with their kynges, so dyd he also vnto Debir, and the kyng therof.

Thus Iosua smote all the londe vpon the mountaynes, and towarde the south, and in the lowe countrees, and by the ryuers, with all their kynges, and let not one remaine ouer and damned all that had breth, *as the LORDE God of Israel had commaunded. And Iosua smote them from Cades Bernea vnto Gaza, and all the londe of Gosen vnto Gibeon, and toke all these kynges with their lōde at one tyme: for the LORDE God of Israel foughte for Israel. And Iosua wente agayne with all Israel to the tentes vnto Gilgal.

The xi. Chapter

B WHAN Iabin the kyng of Asor herde this, he sent vnto Iabob the kyng of Madon and to the kyng of Samron, and to the kyng of Achsaph, and to the kynges that dwelt towarde the north vpon the mountaynes, and in the playne on the southsyde of Cineroth, and in the lowe countrees, and in the lordshippes of Dor by the see syde: and to the Cananites towarde  $\hat{y}$  east and west, to  $\hat{y}$  Amorites, Hethites, Pheresites, and Iebusites, vpon the mountaynes and to the Heuites, vnder mount Hermon in the londe of Mispa. These wete out with all their armies, a greate people, as many as  $\hat{y}$  sonde of the see, and exceeding many horses and charettes. All these kinges gathered thē selues, and came, and pitched together by  $\hat{y}$  water of Meram, to fight with Israel.

B And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Feare them not, for tomorow aboute this tyme wil I deluyner them all slayne, before the children of Israel: thou shalt lame their horses, and burne their charettes with fire. †And Iosua came sodenly vpon them, and all the men of warre with him by the water of Merom, † fell vpon them. And the LORDE deluyered them in to  $\hat{y}$  handes of Israel, and they smote them, and chased them vnto greate Sidō and to the warme water, and to the playne of Mispa towarde  $\hat{y}$  east: and smote them, vntyll there remayned not one.

Then dealte Iosua with them as  $\hat{y}$  LORDE had saide vnto him, † lamed their horses, † brent their charettes. And he turned backe at the same tyme, † wanne Hasor, † smote  $\hat{y}$  kyng of it with the swerde (for Hasor was afore tyme  $\hat{y}$  head cite of all these kyngdomes) and smote all the soules that were therein with the edge of the swerde, and damned it, † let nothinge remayne that had breth, † damned Hasor with fyre. All the cities of these kyngdomes wane Iosua also, and smote thē with the edge of the swerde, and damned them, † accordinge as Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE commaunded.

Howbeit the cities that stode vpon the hilles, dyd not the children of Israel burne with fyre: but Hasor onely dyd Iosua burne. § And all the spoyles of these cities and the catell, dyd the children of Israel deale amonge them, but smote all the men with the edge of the swerde, tyll they had destroyed them, and let nothinge remayne that had breth. As the LORDE commaunded his seruaunt Moses, and as Moses commaunded Iosua, euen so dyd Iosua, so that there was nothinge vndone of all that the LORDE commaunded Moses.

So Iosua toke all this lōde vpon  $\hat{y}$  mōntaynes, † all  $\hat{y}$  lyeth towarde the south, † all the londe of Gosen, and the lowe countre, † the playne felde, and the mountayne of Israel with the valley therof, from the mountayne that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, vnto Baalgad, in the playne of moūt Libanus beneth mount Hermon. All their kynges toke he, and smote them, and put thē to death. || Howbeit he warred a longe season with these kynges.

Yet was there not one cite, that yelded it selfe peaceably vnto the children of Israel ¶ (excepte the Heuites, which dwelt at Gibeon) but they wanne them all with battayll. And this was done so of the LORDE that their hert was so hardened, to come against the children of Israel with battayll, y they might be dāned, ⁊ no fauoure to be shewed vnto them, but to be destroyed. *as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

At the same tyme came Iosua, and rote out the Enakims from y mountayne, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, from euery mountayne of Iuda, and from euery mountayne of Israel, and damned thē with their cities, and let none of the Enakims remayne in the londe of the children of Israel, saue at Gasa, ⁊ at Gath, at Asdod, there remayned of them.

Thus Iosua conquered all the londe according vnto all as the LORDE sayde vnto Moses, ⁊ gaue it vnto Israel to enheritaunce, ⁊ vnto euery trybe his porcion, and y londe rested from warre.

Moses the seruauent of the LORDE and the childrē of Israel smote them. ¶ And Moses the seruauent of y LORDE gaue it vnto the Rubenites, Gaddites and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in possession.

These are the kynges of the lōde, whom

Iosua ⁊ the children of Israel smote on this syde Iordane westwarde, frō Baalgad vpō the playne of mount Libanus, vnto y moūt that parteth the londe vp toward Seir, ⁊ that Iosua gaue vnto the trybes of Israel in possession, vnto euery one his parte, what so euer was in y moūtaynes, valleyes, playne felde, by the ryuers, in y wyldernes ⁊ toward the south, the Iethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pheresites, Heuites, and Iebusites.

The kyng of Iericho, the kyng of Hai, which lyeth besyde Bethel, the kyng of Ierusalem, the kyng of Hebron, the kyng of Iarmoth, the kyng of Lachis, the kyng of Eglon, the kyng of Geser, the kyng of Debir, the kyng of Geder, the kyng of Horma, the kyng of Arad, y kyng of Libna, the kyng of Adulla, the kyng of Makeda, the kyng of Bethel, the kyng of Tapnah, the kyng of Hephher, the kyng of Aphek, the kyng of Lasaron, the kyng of Madan, the kyng of Hasor, the kyng of Simron Meron, the kyng of Achsaph, the kyng of Tahenah, the kyng of Megido, the kyng of Cades, the kyng of Iaknean by Carmel, the kyng in the lordshippes of Dor, the kyng of the Heithen at Gilgall, the kyng of Thirza. These are one and thirtie kynges.

But from the north it is all y londe of the Cananites, and Maara of the Sidonians vnto Aphek, euen vnto the border of the Amorites. But Moses smote them and droue them out.

And Balaam the sonne of Beor the prophecier, dyd the children of Israel kyll with the swerde amonge the other that were slayne: and the border of y childrē of Ruben was Iordane. This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ruben amonge their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

Vnto the trybe of the children of Gad amonge their kynreds gaue Moses, so that their border was, Iahesar and all the cities in Gilead, and the halfe lōde of the children of Ammon, vnto Aroer, which lyeth before Rabbath: and from Heszbou vnto Ramath Mispē ⁊ Betomin: and fro Mahanaim vnto the border of Debir. But in the valley, Beth Iaram, Beth Nimra, Suchoth and Zaphon (which remayned yet of the realme of Sihon kynge of Heszbou) and was by Iordane, vnto the edge of the see of Cyneroth, on this syde Iordane eastwarde. This is the inheritaunce of the children of Gad in their kynreds, cities ⁊ vyllages.

¶ Vnto the halfe trybe of the children of Manasse after their kyureds, gaue Moses, so that their border was fro Mahanaim, all Basan, all the kyngdome of Og kynge of Basan, and all the townes of Iair which lye in Basan, namely thre score cities. And halfe Gilead, Astaroth, Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan, vnto the children of Machir the sonne of Manasse. This is the halfe porcion of the children of Machir after their kyureds.

This is it that Moses dealete out vpon the felde of Moab beyonde Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho eastwarde. ¶ But vnto y trybe of Leui gaue Moses no enheritaunce: for the LORDE God of Israel is their enheritaunce, as he hath promysed them.

cōmaunded Moses, so dyd the childrē of Israel, and deuyded the londe.

B Then came forth the children of Iuda to Iosua at Gilgall: and Caleb ſonne of Iephunne the Kenisite sayde vnto him: Thou knowest what ſayde vnto Moses the man of God, concerning me and the in Cades Bernea. I was fortye yeare olde, whan Moses the seruauit of the LORDE ſent me out from Cades Bernea, to spye out the londe, and I broughte him worde agayne, euen as I had it in my hert. Howbeit my brethren that wente vp with me, discouraged the hert of the people: but I folowed ſayde vnto the vttemost.

C Then ſware Moses vnto me the ſame daye, and sayde: The londe wherupon thou haſt troden with thy fote, ſhalbe thine enheritaunce and thy childrens for euer, becauſe thou haſt folowed the LORDE my God vnto the vttemost. And now hath the LORDE letten me lyue, ſayde. It is now fyue and fortie yeare ſence ſayde ſpake this vnto Moses, whā Israel walked in the wilder- nesse. And now lo, this daie am I fyue and foure ſcore yeare olde and am yet as ſtronge to daye, as I was in that daye whan Moses ſent me out: euen as my ſtrength was then, ſo is it now alſo to fighte, and to go out and in.

D Geue me now therfore this mountayne, wherof the LORDE ſpake in that daye, and thou herdeſt it the ſame daye: for now the Enakims dwell thereon, and it hath greates and ſtronge cities: yf happily the LORDE wyl be with me, that I maye dryue the out, as he hath ſayde. Then Iosua bleſſed him, and ſo gaue Hebron vnto Caleb the ſonne of Iephunne. Therfore was Hebron the enheritaunce of Caleb the ſonne of Iephunne the kenisite, vnto this daye, becauſe he folowed the LORDE God of Iſrael vnto the vttemost. * But afore tyme was Hebron called Kiriath-arba, and greates people were there amonge the Enakims. And the lode ceaſed from warre.

The rb. Chapter.

A THE lot of the trybe of the children of Iuda amonge their kynreds, was ſayde coaſte of Edom by the wyldernesſe of Zin, which borderth ſouthwarde on the edge of the ſouth cōtrees. Their ſouth borders were from the vttemost ſyde of the ſalt ſee, that is, from the coaſt that goeth ſouthwarde, and commeth out from thence towardes ſayde of Acrabbim, and goeth forth thorow Zinna, and yet goeth vp from the ſouth towardes Cades Bernea, and goeth thorow Heſron, and goeth vp to Adara, and fetcheth a compaſſe aboute Carcaa, and goeth thorow Aſmona, and commeth forth to the ryuer of Egipte, ſo that the ſee is the ende of ſayde border. Let this be your border ſouthwarde.

But the eaſt border is from the ſalt ſee to the vttemost parte of Iordane.

The border northwarde, is from the ſee coaſt which is on ſayde edge of Iordane, and goeth vp vnto Beth Hagla, and ſtretcheth out from the north vnto Betharaba, and commeth vp vnto the ſtone of Bohen the ſonne of Ruben, and goeth vp vnto Debir from ſayde valley of Achor, and from the north coaſte that is towardes Gilgall, which lyeth ouer agaynſt Adumim pwarde, which is on the north ſyde of the water. Then goeth it vnto ſayde water of Enſemes, and commeth out vnto the ** well of Rogell. Then goeth it vp to the valley of the ſonne of Hinnam, a longe beſyde the Iebuſite that dwelleth from ſayde ſouthwarde, that is Ieruſalem: and commeth vp vnto the toppe of the mount which lyeth before the valley of Hinnam from the weſtwarde, that borderth on the edge of the valley of Raphaim towardes the north.

C Then commeth it from the toppe of the ſame mount vnto the water well of Nephtoah, and commeth out vnto the cities of mount Ephron, and boweth towardes Baala, that is Kiriath Iarim, and fetcheth a compaſſe aboute from Baala weſtwarde vnto mount Seir, and goeth by the north ſyde of the mount Iarim, that is Chesaſalon: and cometh downe to Bethſemes, and goeth thorow Thimna, and breaketh out on the north ſyde of Acron, and ſtretcheth forth towardes Sicon, and goeth ouer mount Baala, and commeth out vnto Iabueel: ſo that their vttemost border is the ſee.

The weſte border is the greates ſee. This is the border of the children of Iuda rounde aboute in their kynreds. Caleb the ſonne of Iephunne had his porcion geue him amonge the children of Iuda (as the LORDE cōmaunded

D And Caleb droue from thence the three sonnes of Enak, Sesai, Ahiman, and Thalmas begotten of Enak. And from thence he wente vp to the inhabitants of Debir. (As for Debir, it was called Kiriath Sepher afore tyme.) And Caleb sayde: † Who so smytheth Kiriath Sepher and wynneth it, I wyll geue him my daughter Achsa to wyfe. Then Athniel the sonne of Kenas the brother of Caleb waune it: and he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wyfe.

And it fortuneth whan they wente in, that she was counceled of hir houszbande, to axe a peece of londe of hir father. And she fell downe from the asse. Then sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: Geue me a blessinge, for thou hast geue me a south (and drye) londe: geue me welles of water also. Then gaue he her welles aboue and beneth.

E This is the inheritaunce of the trybe of Iuda amonge their kynreds. And the cities of the trybe of the children of Iuda, from one to another by the coastes of the Edomites toward the south, were these: Cabzeel, Eder, Iagur, Kina, Dimona, Adada, Kedes, Hazor, Iethnam, Siph, Telem, Bealot, Hazor Hadatha, Kiriath Hezron that is Hasor: Amā, Senna, Molada, Hazor Gadda, Hesmon, Beth palet, Hazer Sual, Beer Seba, Bisziotitha, Baala, Iim, Azem, Eltholad, Chesil, Harna, Ziklag, Madnanna, San Sāna, Lebaoth, Silhim, Ain, Rimō. § These are nyne and twenty cities ¶ their vyllages.

But in the lowe countrees was Esthaol, Zaren, Asna, Saroah, Engannim, Thapua, Enam, Iarmoth, Adullam, Socho, Aseka, Saaraim, Adithaim, Gedera, Giderothim. These are fourtene cities ¶ their vyllages.

J Zenā Hadasa, Migdal Gad, Dilean, Mispā, Iakthiel, Lachis, Bazekath, Eglō, Chabon, Lachmā, Chithlis, Gedoroth, Beth Dagon, Naama, Makeda. These are sixtene cities and their vyllages.

Libna, Ether, Asen, Iephtah, Asua, Nezib, Keila, Achsib, Maresa. These are nyne cities and their vyllages. Ekron with hir daughters and vyllages. From Ekron vnto the see, all that reacheth vnto Asdod and the vyllages therof. Asdod with the daughters and vyllages therof. Gasa with hir daughters and vyllages vnto the water of Egipte. And the greate see is his border.

But vpon the mount was Samir, Iatir, Socho, Danna, Kiriath Sanna, that is Debir: Anab, Esthemo, Annim, Gosen, Holon, Gilo. These are eleuen cities and their vyllages. Maon, Carmel, Siph, Iuta, Iesrael, Iakdea, Sanoah, Kain, Gibeā, Thimna. These are ten cities and their vyllages. Halhul, Bethzur, Gedor, Maarath, Beth Anoth, Elthekon. These are sixe cities and their vyllages. Kiriath Baal (that is Kiriath Iearim) Harabba, two cities ¶ their vyllages. And in the wylder nesse was Betharaba, Middin, Sebacha, Nibsan, and the Salt cite, and Engaddi. These are sixe cities and their vyllages. ¶ But the Iebusites dwelt at Ierusalem, and the children of Iuda coude not dryue them awaye. So the Iebusites remayne with the children of Iuda at Ierusalem vnto this daye.

The xvi. Chapter.

A ND the lot fell vnto the children of Ephraim frō Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho, vnto the water on the east syde of Iericho, and the wylder nesse, ¶ goeth vp from Iericho thorow the mountayne of Bethel, and commeth out from Bethel vnto Lus, and goeth thorow the coast of Arciataroth, and stretcheth downe westwarde vnto ¶ coaste of Iaphleti to ¶ border of the lower Bethoron, and vnto Gaser: and the ende therof is by the greate see. This the children of Ioseph (Manasses ¶ Ephraim) receaued to inheritaunce.

The Border of the children of Ephraim amonge their kynreds of their inheritaunce from the east, was Ataroth Adar vnto the ypper Bethoron, ¶ goeth out westwarde by Michmethath that lyeth toward the north, there fetcheth it a compasse toward the east syde of the cite Thaanath Silo, and goeth there thorow from the east vnto Ianoha, and commeth downe from Ianoha vnto Ataroth and Naaratha, and bordreth on Iericho, and goeth out at Iordane. From Thapuah goeth it westwarde vnto Naalkama, and the out goinge of it is at the see.

This is the inheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Ephraim amonge their kynreds. And all the borders, cities with their vyllages of the childre of Ephraim laye scatred amonge the enheritaunce of the children of Manasse. And they droue not out y Cananites, which dwelt at Gaser. So y Cananites remayned amōge Ephraim vnto this daye, and became tributaries.

The xvij. Chapter.

AND the lot fell vpon the trybe of Manasse (for * he is Iosephs first sonne) and it fell vpon Machir the first sonne of Manasse y father of Gilead: for he was a mā of armes, therefore had he Gilead and Basan. It fell also vnto the other children of Manasse, namely vnto y childrē of Abieser, the children of Helek, the children of Asriel, the children of Sechem, the children of Hephher, and the children of Semida: These are the childrē of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, males, amonge their kynreds.

* But Zelaphead the sonne of Hephher the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, had no sonnes, but doughters, and their names are these: Mahala, Noa, Hagla, Milca, Tirza, and they came before Eleasar the prest, and before Iosua the sonne of Nun, and before the rulers, and sayde: The LORDE commaunded Moses, to geue vs enheritaunce amonge oure brethren. And so they had enheritaunce geuen them amonge their fathers brethren, acordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

B There fell vpon Manasse ten meetynes without the londe of Gilead and Basan, which lyeth beyōde Iordane. For y doughters of Manasse receaued enheritaunce amonge his sonnes: but the other children of Manasse had the londe of Gilead. And the border of Manasse was frō Asser forth vnto Michmethath, that lyeth before Sichem, and reacheth vnto the righte syde of them of En Tapuah: for the londe of Tapuah fell vnto Manasse, and the border of Manasse is vnto the childrē of Ephraim. Then commeth it downe to Nabelkana towarde the south syde of the ryuer cities, which are Ephraims amonge the cities of Manasse. But from the north is the border of Manasse by the ryuer, and goeth forth by the see syde, south warde vnto Ephraim, and to Manasse northwarde, and the see is his coaste. And it shal border on Aser from the north, and on Isachar from the easte.

So (amōge Isachar and Asser) Manasses had Beth Sean and the townes therof, and Iebllaam and the townes therof, and them of Dor and their townes, and them of En Dor and their townes, ⁊ them of Taanaach and their townes, and them of Mageddo and their townes, and the thirde parte of (the cite) Nophet. And the children of Manasse coude not dryue awaye the inhabitants of these cities, but the Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. Howbeit whan the children of Israel were able, they made the Cananites tributaries, and droue them not out.

Then spake the children of Ioseph vnto Iosua, and sayde: Wherefore hast thou geue me but one porcion and one meetlyne of enheritaunce, and I am yet a greate people, as the LORDE hath blessed me so largely? Then sayde Iosua vnto them: For so moech as thou art a greate people, go vp therfore in to y wodd, and make thy selfe rowme there in the londe of the Pheresites and Raphaim, seynge moūt Ephraim is to narowe for the.

D Then sayde the children of Ioseph: We shal not be able to attayne vnto the mountaynes, for there are yron charettes amonge all the Cananites, that dwell in the londe of Emek, by whom lyeth Beth Sean and the vyllages therof, and Iesrael in Emek. Iosua sayde vnto the house of Ioseph, euen to Ephraim and Manasses: Thou art a greate people, ⁊ for so moech as thou art so greate, thou must not haue one lot, but the mountayne where y wod is, shal be thine: rote y out for y, so shall it be the outgoinge of thy porcion, whan thou dryuest out the Cananites, which haue yron charettes, ⁊ are mightie.

The xvij. Chapter.

AND all the multitude of the children of Israel gathered them selues together vnto Silo, and they set vp y Tabernacle of witnesse, and the londe was subdued vnto them. But there were yet seuen trybes of the childrē of Israel, vnto whom they had not deuyded their enheritaunce. And Iosua sayde vnto the children of Israel: How longe are ye so slowe, to go and cōquere the londe, which the LORDE God of youre fathers hath geuen you? Chose you thre men out of euery trybe, y I maye sende them, and that they maye get them vp and go thorow the londe, and deserybe it acordinge to the enheritaunces therof, and come vnto me.

Deuyde the londe in seven partes. Iudas shal remayne vpon his borders of the south syde, and the house of Ioseph shal remayne vpon his borders of the north parte: but deserybe ye the londe in seven partes, and bryng theyme vnto me, then shal I cast y lot for you before the LORDE oure God. * For the Leuites haue no porcion amonge you, but the presthode of the LORDE is their enheritaunce. <sup>a</sup>As for Gad & Ruben and y halfe trybe of Manasse, they haue receaued their enheritaunce beyonde Iordane eastwarde, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE gaue them.

B Then the men gat vp, to go their waye. And whan they were aboute to go for to deserybe the londe, Iosua commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and walke thorow the londe, and deserybe it, and come agayne vnto me, that I maye cast y lot for you before the LORDE at Silo. So the men departed, and wente thorow the londe, and deserybed it in seven partes vpon a letter acordinge to the cities, and came to Iosua in to the hoost at Silo. Then Iosua cast the lot ouer them at Silo before the LORDE, and there distributed the londe amonge the children of Israel, vnto euery one his parte.

And the lot of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin fell acordinge to their kynreds, and the border of their lot wente out betwene the children of Iuda & the children of Ioseph. And their border was on y north quarter of Iordane, and goeth vp from the north syde of Iericho, and commeth vp to the mountayne westwarde, and goeth out by the wyldernesse of Bethauen, and goeth from thence towarde Lus, euen by the south syde of Lus (that is Bethel) and commeth downe vnto Ataroth Adar by the mountayne which lyeth on y south syde of the lower Bethoron. Then boweth it downe, and fetcheth a compasse vnto the south west quarter from the mount that lyeth ouer agaynst Bethoron towarde the south, and goeth out vnto Kiriath Baal, y is Kiriath Iearim, a cite of the children of Iuda. This is the west border.

C But the south border is from Kiriath-Iearim forth, and goeth out towarde the west, and commeth forth vnto y water well of Nephthah:

and goeth downe by the edge of the mount, that lyeth before the valley of the sonne of Hinnam: and goeth downe thorow the valley of Hinnam on y south syde of the Iebusites, and commeth downe to the well of Rogell, and stretcheth from the northwarde, and commeth out vnto En Semes, and commeth forth to the heapes that lye vp towarde Adummim, and cometh downe vnto the stone of Bohem the sonne of Ruben, and goeth a longe besyde y playne felde which lyeth north warde, and commeth downe vnto y playne felde, and goeth besyde Beth Hagla that lyeth towarde the north, and his ende is at the north border of the Salt see, vnto y edge of Iordane south warde. This is the south border.

But Iordane shal be the ende of the east quarter. This is the enheritaunce of y children of Ben Iamin in their borders rounde aboute, amonge their kynreds.

The cities of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin amonge their kynreds are these: Iericho, Beth Hagla, Emek Kezitz, Betharaba, Zemaraim, Bethel, Auim, Haphar, Aphra, Caphar Amonai, Aphni, Gaba: these are twolue cities and their villages.

Gibeon, Rama, Beeroth, Mispa, Caphira, Moza, Rekem, Ierpeel, Tharcala, Zela, Eleph, and the Iebusites, that is Ierusalem, Gibeath, Kiriath: these are fourente cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ben Iamin in their kynreds.

THE xiiij. Chapter.

THEN fell the seconde lot of the trybe of the children of Simeon acordinge to their kynreds, and their enheritaunce was amonge the enheritaunce of y children of Iuda. † And to their enheritaunce they had Beer Seba, Molada, Hazar Sual, Baala, Azem, El Tholad, Bethul, Harma, Ziklag, Betha Markaboth, Hazar Sussa, Beth Lebaoth, and Saruben: these are thirtene cities & their villages. Ain, Rimmon, Ether, Asan: these are foure cities and their villages. And all y villages that lye aboute the cities vnto Balath Beer Ramath towarde the south. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Simeon in their kynreds: for the enheritaunce of the children of Simeon is vnder the porcion of the children of Iuda. For so much as the enheritaunce of the children of Iuda was to greate for them, therefore inhereted the children of Simeon amonge their enheritaunce.

The thirde lot fell vpon the childrē of Zabulon after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was vnto Sarid, ⁊ goeth vp westwarde to Mareala, ⁊ bordreth vpon Dabaseth, and reacheth vnto the ryuer that floweth ouer agaynst Iakneam: ⁊ turneth from Sarid eastwarde vnto the border of Cisloth Thabor, and cometh out vnto Dabrat, and reacheth vp to Iapia, and from thence goeth it westwarde thorow Githa Hephher, and Itha Kazim, and commeth out towarde Rimōn, Hamthoar Hanea, ⁊ fetcheth a compasse aboute from the north vnto Nathon, ⁊ the goynge out of it is in y valley Iephtha El, Katath, Nahalal, Simron, Iedeala, ⁊ Beth-lehem: These are twolue cities and their vyllages. This is the enheritaunce of the childrē of Zabulon in their kynreds: these are their cities and vyllages.

The fourth lot fell vpō the childrē of Isachar after their kynreds, ⁊ their border was Iesraela, Chessulloth, Sunem, Hapharaim, Sion, Anaharath, Raabith, Kislon, Abez, Kemeth, En Ganim, Enhada, Beth Pazez, ⁊ bordreth vpon Thabor, Sahazima, Beth Semes, and y outgoinge of it was at Iordane. These are sixtene cities and their vyllages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Isachar in their kynreds, cities and vyllages.

The fifth lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Asser, after their kynreds. And their border was Helkath, Hali, Beten, Achsaph, Alamelech, Ameid, Misaal, and borderth on Carmel vnto the see, and on Sihor, and Libnath, and turneth towarde the east vnto Beth Dagon, and bordreth on Zabulon, and on the valley of Iephthael, and towarde the north syde of Beth Emek and Negiel: ⁊ commeth out vnto Cabul on the left syde of Ebron, Rehob, Hamon and Cana, vnto greate Sidon. And turneth towarde Rama, vnto the stronge cite of Zor, and turneth towarde Hossa, and goeth out vnto the see, after y meetlyne towarde Achsib, Vma, Aphek, Rehob.

These are two and twenty cities and their vyllages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Asser in their kinreds cities and vyllages.

Nephtali in their kyureds. And their border was frō Heleph Elon thorow Zaanaim, Adai Nekeb, Iabne El vnto Lakum, and goeth out vnto Iordane, and turneth westwarde to Asnoth Thabor, and cometh out from thence vnto Hukok, and bordreth on Zabulon towarde the south, and on Asser towarde the west, and on Iuda by Iordane towarde the east: and hath stronge cities, Zidimzer, Hamath Rakath, Chinnaret, Adama, Rama, Aiazor, Kedes, Edrei, En Hazor, Iereon, Migdal Elharē, Beth Anath, Beth Sames. These are nyentene cities and their vyllages. This is the enheritaunce of y trybe of the children of Nephtali in their kynreds, cities, and vyllages.

The seuenth lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Dan after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was Zarea, Esthaol, Irsames, Saalabin, Aialon, Iethla, Elon, Thimnata, Ekron, Eltheke, Gibethō Baalath, Iehud, Bnerbarak, Gat Rimōn, Me Iarkon, Rakon with the border by Iapho, and on the same goeth the border of the children of Dan out. And the children of Dā wente vp, and foughte agaynst Lesem, and wanne it, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and toke it in possession, ⁊ dwelt therin, and *called it Dan, after y name of their father. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Dan in their kynreds, cities, and vyllages.

And whā y lōde was all parted out with the borders therof, the children of Israel gaue Iosua the sonne of Nun, an enheritaunce amonge them, and (acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE) they gaue him y cite that he requyred, namely, y Thimnath Serah, vpon mouēt Ephraim: there buylded he the cite, and dwelt therin.

These are the enheritaunces which Eleasar the prest and Iosua y sonne of Nun, and the chefest of the fathers amonge y tribes, denied out by lot vnto the childrē of Israel at Silo before the LORDE, euen before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnes, and so they ended the deuydinge out of the londe.

The xx. Chapter.

AND the LORDE spake vnto Iosua, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel: Geite amonge you fre cities, ⁊ wherof I spake vnto you by Moses, that a deedsleyer which sleyeth a soule vnawarres and vnnittingly, maye flye thither, y they maye be fre amoge you from the auenger of bloude. And he that flyeth to one of those cities, shal stonde without before the porte of the cite, and shewe his cause before the Elders of the cite, then shall they take him to them in to the cite, and geue him place to dwell with them.

And yf the auenger of bloude folowe vpon him, they shall not delyuer the deed-slayer in to his handes, for so moch as he hath slayne his neighbour vnawarres, and was not his enemye afore: but he shall dwell in y cite, tyll he stonde before the congregacion in iudgment, vntyll the hye prest dye, which shall be at that tyme. Then shall the deed-slayer returne, and go vnto his awne cite, and vnto his house to the cite, from whence he was fled.

Then appoynted they Kedes in Galile vpon mount Nepthali, and Sechem vpon mount Ephraim, and Kiriatharba, that is Hebron vpon moit Iuda. And beyode Iordane on the east syde of Iericho, they gaue Beser in the wilderness vpon the playne out of the trybe of Ruben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the trybe of Gad, and Golan in Basan out of the trybe of Manasse.

These were the cities appoynted for all y children of Israel, and for the straungers which dwelt amonge them, that whosoever had slayne a soule vnawarres, might flye thither, that he shulde not be put to death by the auenger of bloude, tyll he had stonde before the congregacion.

The xxi. Chapter.

THEN the chefe fathers amonge the Leuites came forth vnto Eleasar the prest and to Iosua the sonne of Nun, and to y auuncient fathers amoge the trybes of the children of Israel, and spake vnto them at Silo in the loude of Canaan, and sayde: "The LORDE commaunded by Moses, that we shulde haue cities geuen vs to dwell in, and the suburbes of the same for oure catell. Then the children of Israel gaue of their enheritaunce these cities and the suburbes therof, vnto the Leuites, acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

And the lot fell vpon the kynred of the Kahathites, and the children of Aaron the prest amonge the Leuites, had by the lott thyrte cities of the trybe of Iuda, of the trybe of Simeon, and of the trybe of Ben Iamin. The other childre of Kahath of the same kynred, had by the lot ten cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, of the trybe of Dan, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse.

But the children of Gerson of the same kynred had by the lot thyrte cities, of the trybe of Isachar, of the trybe of Asser, of y trybe of Nepthali, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse at Basan.

The children of Merari of their kynred had twolue cities, of the trybe of Ruben, of the trybe of Gad, and of the trybe of Zabulon. So the children of Israel gaue these cities and their suburbes vnto the Leuites by lott, as the LORDE commaunded by Moses.

Of the trybe of the children of Iuda, and of the trybe of the children of Simeon, they gaue these cities (which they named by name) vnto the children of Aaron of the kynred of the Kahathites amonge the children of Leui: for the first lot was theirs.

So they gaue them Kiriatharba, which was the fathers of Enak, that is Hebron vpon the mount Iuda, and the suburbes therof rounde aboute. * But the felde of the cite and the villages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune for his possession.

Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron the prest, the fre cite of the deed sleyers, Hebron and the suburbes therof, Libna and the suburbes therof, Iathir and the suburbes therof, Esthuma and the suburbes therof. Holon and the suburbes therof, Debir and the suburbes therof, Ain and the suburbes therof, Iuta and the suburbes therof, Beth Semes and the suburbes therof, euen nyne cities of these two trybes.

But of the trybe of Ben Iamin they gaue foure cities, Gibeon and y suburbes therof, Gaba, and the suburbes therof, Anathot and the suburbes therof, Almon and the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the children of Aaron the prest were thirtene with their suburbes.

The kynreds of the other children of Kahath the Leuites, had by their lott foure cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, and they gaue the fre cite of the deedsleiers, Sechi and the suburbes therof vpon mount Ephraim Gaser and the suburbes therof, Kibzaim and the suburbes therof, Bethron and the suburbes therof.

D Of the trybe of Dan foure cities, Eltheke and ȝ suburbes therof, Gibthon and the suburbes therof, Aialou and the suburbes therof, Gath Rinon and the suburbes therof. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses two cities, Thaaenach and the suburbes therof, Gath Rimon and the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the other children of ȝ kynred of Kahath. were ten with their suburbes.

But vnto the children of Gerson amonge the kynreds of the Leuites were geuen, Of the halfe trybe of Manasse two cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Gola in Basan and the suburbes therof, Beasthra, and the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Isachar foure cities, Kision and the suburbes therof, Dabrach and the suburbes therof, Iarmuth and the suburbes therof, Engannim and the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Asser foure cities, Miseal, Abdon, Helkath and Rehob with the suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Nephtali thre cities, the fre cite Kedes (for the deedslayer) in Galile, Hamoth, Dor, and Karthan with the suburbes therof: so that all the cities of the kynred of the Gersonites were thirtene with their suburbes.

32 Vnto the kynreds of Merari the other Leuites were geuen, Of the trybe of Zabulon foure cities, Iakneam, Kartha, Dimna and Nahalal with ȝ suburbes therof. Of the trybe of Ruben foure cities, Bezer, Iahza, Kedemoth and Mephaat with their suburbes. Of the trybe of Gad foure cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaïm, Heszboun and Iaeser with their suburbes: so that all the cities of the children of Merari amonge their kynreds of ȝ other Leuites, were twelue. Thus all the cities of the Leuites amonge ȝ possession of the children of Israel, were eight and fortye with their suburbes. And these cities were so dealte out, that euery one had their suburbes rounde aboute, the one as the other.

Thus the LORDE gaue the children of Israel all the londe, which he had sworne vnto their fathers to geue: ⁊ they toke possession of it, and dwelt therein. And the LORDE gaue thē rest before all those ȝ were aboute them *like as he sware vnto their fathers, ⁊ none of their enemies stode agaynst thē, but all their enemies delynered he in to their hande. And their myssed nothinge of all the good that the LORDE had promysed vnto the house of Israel, it came euery whyt.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THEN Josua called ȝ Rubenites and 2 Gaddites, and ȝ halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto them: Ye haue kepte all, ⁊ that Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE commaunded you, and haue herkened vnto my voyce in all ȝ I haue commaunded you. Ye haue not forsaken youre brethrē a longe season, vnto this daye, and haue wayted vpon the commaundement of the LORDE youre God. For so moch now as the LORDE youre God hath broughte youre brethrē to rest, as he promysed them, turne you now, and go youre waye to youre tentes in to the londe of youre possession, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE gaue you beyōde Iordane.

But take diligent hede now, that ye do acordinge to the commaundement and lawe which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE hath commaunded: ⁊ That ye loue the LORDE youre God, and walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, and eleue vnto him, and serue him with all youre hert and with all youre soule. So Josua blessed them, and let them go. And they wente vnto their tentes. 33

Vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse had Moses geuen possession at Basan: vnto the other halfe gaue Josua amonge their brethren on this syde Iordane westwarde. And whan he let them go to their tentes and blessed them, he sayde vnto them: Ye come home agayne with greate good vnto youre tētes, with excedyng moche catell, syluer, golde, brasse, yron and rayment, ȝ distribute therfore the spoyle of youre enemyes amonge youre brethren.

So the Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasse returned, and wente from the children of Israel out of Silo (which lyeth in the londe of Canaan) to go in to the countre of Gilead to the londe of their possession, that they mighte possesse it, acordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE by Moses.

And whan they came vnto the heapes by Iordane, which lye in the londe of Canaan, the same Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasses buylded there besyde Iordane, a fayre greate altare. But whan the children of Israel herde saye: Beholde, the children of Ruben, the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse haue buylded an altare ouer agaynst the londe of Canaan vpon the heapes by Iordane on this syde the children of Israel, they gathered them selues together with the whole congregacion at Silo, to go vp agaynst thē with an armye. And (in the meane season) they sent to them in to the londe of Gilead, Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and with him ten chefe prynces amonge the houses of their fathers, out of euery tribe in Israel one. And they came to the children of Ruben, to the children of Gad, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in the londe of Gilead, and sayde:

¶ Thus sayeth the whole congregacion of the LORDE vnto you: * What trespass is this, ŷ ye haue trespassed agaynst the God of Israel, that ye shulde turne backe from ŷ LORDE this daye, to builde you an altare, for to fall awaye from the LORDE?

† Haue we not ynough of the wickednesse of Peor? from the which we are not yet clensted this daye, and there came a plage amonge the congregacion of the LORDE: and ye turne you backe this daye from the LORDE, and this daye are ye fallen awaye from the LORDE, that he maye be wroth to daye or tomorrow at the whole congregacion of the LORDE.

¶ Yf the londe of youre possession be vncleane, then come ouer in to the londe that the LORDE possesseth, where the dwellynge of the LORDE is, and take possessions amonge vs, and fall not awaye from the LORDE and from vs, to builde you an altare without the altare of the LORDE oure God. † Did not Achan the sonne of Serah trespass in the thinge that was damned, and the wrath came ouer ŷ whole congregacion of Israel and he wente not downe alone for his mysdede?

¶ Then answered the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto the heades and prynces of Israel: The mightie God ŷ LORDE, the mightie God the LORDE knoweth, and Israel knoweth also, yf this be a trangressyng or trespassyng agaynst the LORDE, then let it not helpe vs this daye: Yf we haue buylded the altare, because we wolde turne awaye backe from the LORDE, to offre burnt-offer ynges or meatoffer ynges theron, or to make eny deedoffer ynges vpon it, then let the LORDE requyre it: And yf we haue not done it rather for very feare of this thinge, and sayde: To daye or tomorrow mighte youre children saye vnto oure children:

What haue ye to do with the LORDE the God of Israel? The LORDE hath set Iordane for a border betwene vs and you ye children of Ruben and Gad, ye haue no porcion in the LORDE: By this shulde youre children make oure children to turne awaye from the feare of the LORDE.

¶ Therefore sayde we: Let vs make oure children an altare, not for sacrifice, ner for burntoffer ynges, ‡ but that it maye be a tokē betwene vs and you, and oure posterities, that we maye serue the LORDE in his sighte with oure burntoffer ynges, deedoffer ynges, and other offer ynges: and ŷ youre children to daye or tomorrow neade not to saye vnto oure children: Ye haue no parte in the LORDE.

¶ And we sayde: But yf they shulde speake so vnto vs, or to oure posterities to daye or tomorrow, then maye we saye: Beholde the symilitude of ŷ altare of the LORDE, which oure fathers made, not for sacrifice, ner for burntoffer ynges, but for a wytnesse betwene vs and you.

¶ God forbydde, that we shulde fall awaye from the LORDE, to turne backe from him this daye, and to buylde an altare for sacrifice, for burntoffer ynges and for eny presente, without ŷ altare of the LORDE oure God, that stondest before his Habitacon.

¶ But whan Phineas the prest, and the chefe of the congregacion, the prynces of Israel which were with him, herde these wordes, that the children of Ruben, Gad, and Manasse had spoken, they pleased them well. And Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest sayde vnto the children of Rubē, Gad and Manasse: This daye we knowe, that ŷ LORDE is amonge vs, in that ye haue not trespassed agaynst the LORDE in this dede. Now haue ye deliuered the children of Israel out of the hande of the LORDE.

¶ Then Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and the rulers returned out of the londe of Gilead, from the children of Ruben and Gad vnto ŷ londe of Canaan to the children of Israel, and brought them worde agayne of the matter.

¶ Then were the children of Israel well

cōtente with the thinge. And they praysed the God of Israel, and sayde nomore that they wolde go vp agaynst them with an armye, to destroye the londe that the childrē of Ruben and Gad dwelt in. And y childrē of Ruben and Gad called the name of the altare: This altare be witnesse betwene vs, that the LORDE is God.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND after a longe season, whan the LORDE had broughte Israel to rest from all their enemies rounde aboute: and Josua was now olde and well stricken in age, he called all Israel and their Elders, heades, iudges, and officers, and sayde vnto them: I am olde and well aged, and ye haue sene all that the LORDE youre God hath done vnto all these nacions in youre sighte. For the LORDE youre God himself hath foughte for you. Beholde, I haue parted amonge you y rēnaunt of the nacions by lot, vnto euery trybe his enheritaunce from Iordane forth, and all the nacions whom I haue roted out vnto the greatesee westward.

B And the LORDE youre God shal thrust them out before you, and dryue them awaye from you, that ye maye haue their londe in possession, as the LORDE youre God hath promysed you. Be strōge now therfore, that ye maye obserue and do all that is wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses: *so that ye turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte: that ye come not amonge y remnaunt of these naciōs, which are with you: And se that ye make no mention ner tswaere by the names of their goddes, nether serue them, ner bowe youre selues vnto them: But cleue vnto the LORDE youre God, as ye haue done vnto this daye: thē shal the LORDE dryue awaye greatesee and mightie nacions before you, like as there hath no man bene able to stonde before you vnto this daye. †One of you shall chace a thousande: for the LORDE youre God fighteth for you, accordinge as he promysed you. Take diligent hede therfore vnto youre soules, that ye loue the LORDE youre God.

¶ But yf ye turne backe, and cleue vnto these other nacions, and make mariages with them, so that ye come amonge them, and they amonge you, be ye sure then, that the LORDE youre God shal nomore dryue out all these nacions before you, ‡but they shall be vnto you a snare and net, and prickes in youre sydes, and thornes in youre eyes, vntyll he haue destroyed you from the good lōde, which the LORDE youre God hath geuen you.

Beholde, ¶ this daye do I go the waye of all the worlde, and ye shal knowe euen from all youre hert and from all youre soule, that there hath not fayled one worde of all the good that the LORDE youre God promysed you. Nowe like as all the good is come that the LORDE youre God promised you: ¶ euen so shal the LORDE cause all euell to come vpon you, tyll he haue destroyed you from this good lōde, which the LORDE youre God hath geuen you: yf ye transgresse y couenaunt of the LORDE youre God, which he hath commaunded you. And yf ye go youre waye and serue other goddes, and worshipec thē, then shall the wrath of the LORDE waxe whote ouer you, ¶ shal shortly destroye you out of the good lōde, y he hath geuen you.

The xxiij. Chapter.

IOSUA gathered all the trybes of Israel together vnto Sichem, and called the Elders of Israel, the heades, iudges and officers. And whā they were come before God, he sayde vnto all the people: Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: **Your fathers dwelt afore time beyōde y water, Abrahā ¶ Nahor with Tarah their father ¶ serued other goddes. ††Then toke I youre father Abraham beyōde the water, ¶ caused him to walke in the lōde of Canaan, ¶ multiplied his sede, and gaue him Isaac, ‡ and vnto Isaac I gaue Iacob and Esau, and gaue Esau moūt Seir to possesse. ‡†As for Iacob, ¶ his childrē, they wente downe in to Egipte.

Then sent I Moses and Aaron, and played Egipte † as I haue done amonge thē. After y ‡§ brought I you and youre fathers out of Egipte. And whan ye came to y see, and the Egiptians folowed vpon youre fathers with charettes and horse men vnto the reed see, then cryed they vnto the LORDE, which put a dareknesse betwene you and the Egiptians, and broughte the see vpon them, and ouerwhelmed them. And youre eyes haue sene what I dyd to y<sup>e</sup> Egipcians, & ye dwelt in y<sup>e</sup> wilderness a lōge season. * And I broughte you in to y<sup>e</sup> londe of the Amorites, which dwelt beionde Iordane: & whā they fought agaynst you, I deluyered them in to youre hande, that ye mighte haue their countre in possession, and I destroyed them before you. † Then Balac the sonne of Ziphor the kynge of the Moabites gat him vp, and foughte agaynst Israel: and he sente and bad call Balaam the sonne of Beor, to curse you, neuer-theles I wolde not heare him, but I blessed you, and deluyered you out of his hande.

C And whan ye wente ouer Iordane, and came vnto Iericho, the citesyns of Iericho foughte agaynst you, the Amorites, Pheresites, Cananites, Hethites, Girgosites, Heuites, & Iebusites: howbeit I deluyered thē in to youre hande. ‡ And I sent hornettes before you, which droue them out before you, namely the two kynges of y<sup>e</sup> Amorites: not thorow thy swerde, ner thorow thy bowe. § And I haue geuen you a londe wherupon ye bestowed no labour, and cities which ye haue not buylded, that ye might dwell therein, and that ye might eate of the vynyards and olyue trees which ye haue not planted. Feare the LORDE now therefore, ¶ and serue him perfectly and in the trueth, and let go the goddes, whom youre fathers serued beyonde the water and in Egipte, and serue ye y<sup>e</sup> LORDE.

D But yf ye like not to serue the LORDE, thē chose you this daye whom ye wyll serue: the God whom youre fathers serued beionde y<sup>e</sup> water, or y<sup>e</sup> goddes of the Amorites, in whose lōde ye dwell. As for me and my house, we wyll serue the LORDE. Then answered the people, and saide: God forbidde, that we shulde forsake the LORDE, & serue other goddes. For the LORDE oure God brought vs and oure fathers out of the londe of Egipte frō the house of bondage, and did soch greate tokens before oure eyes, and preserued vs all y<sup>e</sup> waye that we wente, and amonge all the nations, whom we trauayled by. And the LORDE thrust out before vs all the people of the Amorites that dwelt in the londe. Therefore wyll we also serue the LORDE, for he is oure God.

serue the LORDE: for he is an holy God, mightie, and gelous, which spareth not youre transgressions and synnes. But yf ye forsake the LORDE, and serue a straunge god, then shall the LORDE turne him, and do you euell, and consume you, after that he hath done you good. The people sayde vnto Iosua: Not so, but we will serue the LORDE. Then sayde Iosua vnto the people: Ye are witnesses ouer youre selues, that ye haue chosen you the LORDE, to serue him. And they sayde: Yee. Then put awaye from you (sayde he) the straunge goddes y<sup>e</sup> are amonge you, and encluye youre hert vnto the LORDE the God of Israel. And the people sayde vnto Iosua: We wyll serue the LORDE oure God, and be obedient vnto his voyce. § So Iosua made a couenaunt with the people y<sup>e</sup> same daye, and laied statutes & lawes before them at Sichem.

f And Iosua wrote this acte in the boke of the lawe of God, and toke a greate stone, & set it vp there vnder an oke, which was in y<sup>e</sup> Sanctuary of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, and sayde vnto all the people: Beholde, this stone shall be witness ouer you: For it hath herde all the wordes of the LORDE, which he hath spoken vnto vs, and shall be a witness ouer you, that ye denye not youre God. So Iosua let the people go euery one to his enheritaunce.

And it fortunied after these actes, ¶ Iosua the sonne of Nun y<sup>e</sup> seruaūt of the LORDE dyed, whan he was an hundredth and ten yere olde, and was buried in the border ¶ of his enheritaunce at Thimnath Serah, which lyeth on the mount Ephraim, on the north side of mount Gaas. And the children of Israel serued the LORDE as longe as Iosua lyued, and the Elders (that lyued longe after Iosua) which knewe all the workes of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, that he had done vnto Israel. ¶ The bones of Ioseph, which the children of Israel had broughte out of Egipte, buried they at Sichem, in the peece of the londe. ** y<sup>e</sup> Jacob boughte of the children of Hemor y<sup>e</sup> father of Sichem for an hundredth pens, and was the enheritaunce of the children of Ioseph. ## The first Chapter.

AFTER the death of Iosua the children of Israel axed the LORDE, and sayde: Who shall go vp ⁊ be oure captayne of warre against ſ Cananites? The LORDE sayde: Iuda shall go vp. * Beholde, I haue deliuered the londe in to his hande. Then sayde Iuda vnto his brother Simeon: Go vp with me in to my lot, and let vs fighte against the Cananites, then wyl I go agayne with the in to thy lot: So Simeon wente with him.

Now whan Iuda wente vp the LORDE deliuered the Cananites and Pheresites in to their hādes, ⁊ they slewe tē thousande mē at Besek: ⁊ they foude Adoni Besek at Besek, ⁊ foughte agaynst him, and slewe the Cananites and Pheresites. But Adoni Besek fled, and they folowed after him: and whan they had ouertaken him, they cut of the thōbes of his handes and fete.

B Then sayde Adoni Besek: Thre score and ten kynges with the thombes of their hādes ⁊ fete cut of, gathered vp the meate ſ was lefte vnder my table. † Now as I haue done, so hath God rewarded me agayne. And he was broughte vnto Ierusalē, where he dyed.

But ſ childrē of Iuda foughte agaynst Ierusalem, and wāne it, ⁊ and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and set fyre vpon the cite. Then wente the children of Israel downe, to fighte agaynst ſ Cananites, ſ dwelt vpon the mount, and towarde the south, and in the valleys. § And Iuda wente agaynst the Cananites, which dwelt at Hebron. (As for Hebron, it was called Kiriatharba afore tyme) and they smote Sesai, ⁊ Achiman, and Thalmāi.

C And from thence he wente agaynst ſ inhabitants of Debir (but Debir was called Kiriath Sepher aforetyme.) And Caleb sayde: ¶ He ſ smytheth Kiriath Sepher, ⁊ wynneth it, I wyl geue him my daughter Achsa to wife. Then Athniel the sonne of Kenas, Calebs yongest brother wāne it. And he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wife. And it fortunēd ſ whan they wēte in, she was couceiled of hir housz-bande, to axe a peece of londe of hir father. And she fell from the asse. Thē sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth ſ? She sayde: Geue me a blessinge, for thou hast geuen me a south ⁊ drye londe, geue me also a watery londe. Then gaue he her a londe that was watery a boue and beneth.

And the childrē of ſ Kenyete Moses brother in lawe, wente vp out of the ¶ palme cite, with the children of Iuda in to the wylder-nesse of Iuda, that lyeth on ſ south syde of the cite Arad: ** and wente their waye, ⁊ dwelt amonge the people. And Iuda wente with his brother Simeon, ⁊ they smote the Cananites at Zephath, ⁊ damned them, ⁊ called the name of the cite Horma. †† Iuda also wanne Gasa with the borders therof, ⁊ Ascalon with hir borders, ⁊ Accaron with the coastes therof. And the LORDE was with Iuda, so that he conquered the mountaynes: but them that dwelt in the valley coulede he not conquere, because they had yron charettes. And acordinge as Moses had sayde, they gaue Hebron vnto Caleb, which droue out the thre sonnes of Enak. ‡ Howbeit ſ children of Ben Iamin drone not out ſ Iebusites which dwelt at Ierusalem, but ſ Iebusites dwelt amonge the children of Ben Iamin at Ierusalem vnto this daye.

Likewyse the children of Ioseph wēte vp also vnto Bethel, ⁊ the LORDE was with thē. And the house of Ioseph spyed out Bethel (which afore tyme was called Lus) and the watch men sawe a man goinge out of the cite, and saide vnto him: Shewe vs where we maye come in to the cite, §§ ⁊ we wyl shewe mercy vpon the. And whan he had shewed them where they mighte come in to the cite, they smote ſ cite with the edge of the swerde: but they let the man go ⁊ all his frendes.

Then wēte the same man vp in to ſ countre of the Hethites, ⁊ buylded a cite, and called it Lus, ⁊ so is the name of it yet vnto this daye. And Manasses ¶ droue not out Beth Sean with the vyllages therof, ner Thauenah with the vyllages therof, ner the inhabitants of Dor with the vyllages therof: ner the inhabitants of Ieblean with the vyllages therof, ner the inhabitants of Mageddo with the vyllages therof, and ſ Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. But whan Israel was mightie, he made the Cananites tributaries, and droue them not out.

Asser droue not out ſ inhabitors of Aco, ⁊ ſ inhabitors of Sidon, of Ahelab, of Achsib, of Helba, of Aphik ⁊ of Rehob, but ſ Asserites dwelt amonge the Cananites that dwelt in the lode, for they droue thē not out.

Nephtali droue not out ſ inhabitors of Beth Semes, ner of Beth Anath, but dwelt amonge the Cananites which dwelt in the londe: howbeit they of Beth Semes and of Beth Anath were tributaries.

And the Amorites subdued the childrē of Dan vpon the mountaine, and suffred them not to come downe in to the valley. And the Amorites beganne to dwell vpo mount Heres at Aiolon and at Saalbin. Howbeit ſ hande of ſ house of Ioseph was to sore for them, and they became tributaries. And the border of the Amorites was, as a mā goeth vp towarde Acrabim, and from the rocke, ⁊ from the toppe.

The ij. Chapter.

BUT there came vp a messaūger of ſ LORDE from Gilgall vnto Bochim, and sayde: I haue caried you vp hither out of Egipte, and broughte you in to the londe that I sware vnto youre fathers, ⁊ saide: "I wyl neuer breake my couenaut with you, that ye shulde make no couenaut with the indwellers of this londe, but breake downe their altares: Neuertheles ye haue not herkened vnto my voyce. Wherefore haue ye done this? Then saide I morouer: I wil not dryue them out before you, that they maye be a fall vnto you, and their goddes a snare. And whan ſ messaūger of the LORDE had spoken these wordes vnto all the children of Israel, the people lifte vp their voyce, ⁊ wepte, and called ſ name of the place Bochim, and offred there vnto the LORDE.

For whan Iosua had sente awaye ſ people, and the childrē of Israel were gone, euery one to his enheritaūce, for to take possession of the londe, ⁊ the people serued the LORDE as longe as Iosua lyued and ſ Elders, which lyued longe after Iosua, and ſ sawe all the greate workes of the LORDE, which he dyd for Israel.

Now whan Iosua the sonne of Nun, the seruaut of the LORDE, 'was deed (whan he was an hūdreth and ten yeare olde) they buried him in ſ border of his inheritaunce at Timnath Heres vpon mount Ephraim on the north syde of mount Gaas. And whan all the same generacion was gathered vnto their fathers, there came vp after them another generacion, which knew not the LORDE, ner the workes that he had done for Israel.

"Then wroughte the children of Israel euell before the LORDE, and serued Baalim, and forsoke ſ LORDE the God of their fathers (which broughte them out of the londe of Egipte) and folowed other goddes ⁊ the goddes of the nacions that dwelt rounde aboute them, ⁊ worshipped them, ⁊ displeased the LORDE: for they forsoke ſ LORDE euer more and more, and serued Baal and Astaroth.

Then ſ wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpo Israel, ⁊ he deliuered thē in to ſ handes of those ſ spoyled thē, that they mighte spoyle them, ⁊ solde thē in to the handes of their enemies rōnde aboute, ⁊ they were not able to withstonde their enemies eny more, but what waye so euer they wolde out, ſ hāde of the LORDE was agaynst thē to their hurte (euen as the LORDE "sayde and sware vnto them) and they were sore oppressed.

Now whan the LORDE raysed them vp iudges, which helped them out of the hande of soch as spoyled thē, they folowed not the iudges nether, but wente a whoringe after other goddes, ⁊ worshipped them, and were soone gone out of ſ waye ſ their fathers walked in, to heare the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, ⁊ dyd not as they dyd.

But whan ſ LORDE raysed vp iudges vnto them, the LORDE was with ſ iudge, and helped them out of the hande of their enemies, as longe as the iudge lyued. : For the LORDE had pitie of their complaynte, which they made ouer those ſ subdued thē and oppressed them.

Neuertheles whan the iudge dyed, they turned backe, 'and marred all more thē their fathers, so that they folowed other goddes to serue them and to bowe them selues vnto them: they wolde not fall from their purposes, ner from their obstinate waye.

Therefore waxed the wrath of the LORDE allwaie so whote ouer Israel, that he sayde: For so much as the people haue transgressed my couenaunt, which I commaunded their fathers, & folowe not my voyce, I wil from hence forth dryue out none of the Heythen, whō Iosua lefte behynde him, whā he dyed, * that by them I maye proue Israel, whether they wil kepe the waye of the LORDE, to walke therin, as their fathers dyd, or not. Thus the LORDE suffred all these nacions, so that in a shorte tyme he droue them not out, whom he had not geuen ouer in to Iosuas hande.

The iij. Chapter.

THESE are the nacions, whom the LORDE suffred to remayne, ŷ by them he mighte proue Israel, which had no vnderstandinge in the warres of Canaan: onely because ŷ the trybes of the childrē of Israel might knowe & lerne to warre, which afore had no knowlege therof, namely: The fyue lordes of ŷ Philistynes, & all the Cananites, & Sidonians, & the Hethites ŷ dwelt vpon mount Libanus, fro mount Baal Hermon, vntyll a man come vnto Hemath. The same remayned, that Israel mighte be proued by them, that it mighte be knowne whether they wolde herken to the commaundementes of the LORDE, which he commaunded their fathers by Moses.

Now whan the children of Israel dwelt thus amōge the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites & Iebusites, † they toke their daughters to wyues, and gaue their daughters vnto their sonnes, & serued their goddes, and wroughte wickednes before the LORDE, & forgot the LORDE their God, & serued Baalim & Astaroth. Then ŷ wrath of ŷ LORDE waxed whote ouer Israel, & he solde thē vnder the hāde of Cusan Risathaim kyng of Mesopotamia, & so ŷ childrē of Israel serued Cusan Risathaim viij. yere.

Thē cried the childrē of Israel vnto the LORDE, & the LORDE raysed thē vp a sauioure which delyuered thē, namely, † Athniel ŷ sonne of Kenas, Calebs yongest brother. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpon him, & he was iudge in Israel, & wente out a warre fare. And ŷ LORDE delyuered Cusan Risathaim the kyng of Syria in to his hāde, so ŷ his hande was to strōge for him. § Then was the londe in rest fortye yeaes. And Athniel the sonne of Kenas dyed.

But the children of Israel dyd yet more euell before the LORDE. Then the LORDE strenghted Eglon the kyng of ŷ Moabites agaynst ŷ childrē of Israel, because they wrought wickednesse before ŷ LORDE. And he gathered vnto him ŷ childrē of Ammon, & the Amalechites, & wete and smote Israel, and conquered the † cite of the palme trees. And the children of Israel serued Eglon ŷ kyng of ŷ Moabites eightene yere. Thē cried they vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE raysed thē vp a sauioure, namely Ehud the sonne of Gera ŷ sonne of Iemini, which was a man that mighte do nothinge with his righte hande.

And whā the childrē of Israel sent a present by him vnto Eglon the kyng of the Moabites, Ehud made him a two edged dagger of a spanne longe, & gyrded it vnder his garmēt vpō his righte thye, & broughte ŷ present vnto Eglon the kyng of ŷ Moabites. As for Eglon, he was a very fat man.

And whan he had delyuered the presente, he let the people go that had caried the present, and he himselfe turned backe from the Idols at Gilgall, & caused to saye thus (vnto the kyng:) I haue a secrete thinge to tell the O kyng. And he commaunded to kepe sylence, & all they that stode aboute him, wente out from him.

And Ehud came in vnto him. He sat in a sylled Sommer perler, which was for him selfe alone. And Ehud saide: I haue somewhat to saye vnto the of God. Thē rose he vp frō his seate. But Ehud put forth his lefte hande, & toke the dagger from his righte thye, & thrust it in to his bely, so ŷ the hefte wente in also after the blade, & the fatt closed the hefte: for he drue not ŷ dagger out of his bely, & ŷ fylthines departed frō him. But Ehud gat him out at the backe dore, & put to ŷ dore after him, and lockte it.

Now whan he was gone, his seruantes came in, and sawe that the dore of the Sommer perler was lockte, and they sayde: peraduenture he is gone to the preuye in the sylled Sommer perler.

As for Ehud, he was gotten awaye, whyle they made so longe tariēge, & he wente ouer by the Idols, and ranne his waye vnto Seirath.

And whan he came in * he blewē f̄ trompet vpō mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel wente with him from the mount, and he before them, and he saide vnto them: Folowe me, for the LORDE hath delyuered the Moabites youre enemies in to youre hande. And they folowed him, & wanne f̄ ferye of Iordane, f̄ goeth towardē Moab, & suffred no man to go ouer, and at f̄ same tyme they smote of the Moabites vpō a ten thousande men, all nobles and men of armes, so that there escaped not one. Thus were the Moabites broughte vnder the hande of the children of Israel at that tyme, and the londe was in rest foure score yeaeres.

Afterwarde was † Samgar f̄ sonne of Anath, which slewe sixe hundred Philistynes with an oxes gadd, and delyuered Israel also.

The iiij. Chapter.

BUT the children of Israel dyd yet more euell before f̄ LORDE, whan Ehud was deed. And the LORDE solde thē in to the hande of Iabin the kynge of the Cananites, which dwelt at Hazor, & the chefe captayne of his hooste was Sissera, and he dwelt at Haroseth of the Heythen. And the childrē of Israel cried vnto the LORDE: for he had nyne hūdreth yron charettes, and subdued the children of Israel by violence twentye yeaere.

At f̄ same tyme was Iudgesse in Israel the prophetisse Debbora, the wyfe of Lapidoth, and she dwelt vnder f̄ palme of Debbora betwene Rama & Bethel, vpon mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel came vp vnto her to the lawe. She sent forth, † & called for Barak the sonne of Abi Noam of Kedes Nephtali, and sayde vnto him: Hath not f̄ LORDE the God of Israel cōmaunded the: Go thy waye, and get the vp vnto mount Thabor, & take with the ten thousande men of the children of Nephtali & Zabulon? For I wil make Sissera the chefe captayne of Iabins hoost to come to the vnto f̄ water of Cyson, with his charettes and with his multitude, and I wyll delyuer him in to thy hande. Barak sayde vnto her: Yf thou wilt come with me, I wil go: but yf thou wilt not come with me, I wil not go.

She sayde: I wyll go with the: neuerthelesse the prayse shal not be thine in this iourney that thou goest, but f̄ LORDE shal delyuer Sissera in to a womāns hande. So Debbora gat hir vp, and wente with Barak vnto Kedes. Then Barak called Zabulon and Nephtali vnto Kedes, and wētē on fote with ten thousande men. And Debbora wente with him also. As for Heber the Kenyte he was departed from the Kenytes from the children of † Hobab Moses brother in lawe, and had pitched his tent by f̄ Oke of Zaanaim besyde Kedes.

Then was it tolde Sissera, f̄ Barak the sonne of Abi Noā, was gone vp vnto mount Thabor: & he gathered all his charettes together, nyne C. yron charettes, & all the people f̄ was with him from Haroseth of the Heythē, vnto the water Cyson. Debbora sayde vnto Barak: Vp, this is the daie wherin the LORDE hath delyuered Sissera in to thy hande: for f̄ LORDE shal go forth before f̄. So Barak wente fro mount Thabor, and f̄ ten thousande men after him.

But the LORDE discomfited Sissera with all his charettes & hoost, & made thē afraied of the edge of the swerde before Barak, so f̄ Sissera leapte of his charet, & fled on fote. Neuerthelesse Barak folowed vpon the charettes & the hoost vnto Haroseth of the Heythen, & all Sissersas hoost fell thorow f̄ edge of the swerde, so f̄ not one escaped. As for Sissera, he fled on fote vnto the tente of Iael, f̄ wife of Heber f̄ Kenite. For there was peace betwene kynge Iabin at Hasor, & the house of Heber the Kenite.

Iael wētē forth to mete Sissera, & sayde vnto him: Turne in my lorde, turne in to me, & be not afraied. And he turned in vnto her in to the tente, & she couered him with a garment. He sayde vnto her: I praye f̄ geue me a litle water to drynke, for I am a thyrst. † Thē opened she a mylke pot, & gaue him to drynke, and couered him. And he sayde vnto her: Stōde in the tente dore, & yf one come t̄ axe, is there eny man here? saye Noman.

But whā Barak folowed after Sissera, Iael wente for to mete him, and sayde vnto him: Come hither, I wil shewe the the man, whom thou sekest. And whan he came in vnto her, he sawe Sissera deed, ⁊ the nale stickinge in his temples. Thus God broughte downe Iabin the kyng of the Cananites before the children of Israel at that tyme, ⁊ the hande of the children of Israel wente ⁊ subdued Iabin ⁊ kyng of the Cananites, tyll they had roted him out. Then Debhora and Barac the sonne of Abi Noam, sange at the same tyme, and sayde:

The vi. Chapter.

AND whan the children of Israel dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, the LORDE deluyered them vnder the hande of the Madianites vij. yeares. And whā the hande of the Madianites was to mightie ouer the children of Israel, the children of Israel made them clyffes in ȝ mountaynes, and canes and holdes, to defende them selues from ȝ Madianites. And whan Israel sowed eny thinge, ȝ Madauites and Amalechites, and the children towarde the south came vp vpon them, and pitched their tētes agaynst them, and destroyed the increase of the londe downe vnto Gasa, ⁊ let nothinge remayne ouer of the beestes in Israel, nether shepe, ner oxen, ner asses. For they came vp with their catell and tentes, as it had bene a greate multitude of greshoppers (so that nether they ner their camels mighte be nombred) and fell in to the londe, that they mighte destroye it. Thus was Israel excedinge small before the Madianites. Then cried the children of Israel vnto the LORDE.

But whan they cried vnto the LORDE because of ȝ Madianites, ȝ LORDE sent the a prophet, which sayde vnto the: Thus saith the LORDE the God of Israel: I caried you out of Egipte, ⁊ broughte you out of ȝ house of bondage, ⁊ deluyered you from the hande of the Egipcians, ⁊ from the hāde of all them that oppressed you, and I haue thrust them out before you, ⁊ geuen you their lōde and sayde vnto you: I am the LORDE youre God. * Feare not ye the goddes of the Amorites, in whose londe ye dwell: neuer-theles ye haue not herkened vnto my voyce.

And there came an angell of the LORDE, ⁊ sat him downe vnder an Oke at Aphra, which belonged vnto Ioas the father of ȝ Esrites, and his sonne Gedeon was thrashing wheate in the barne, that he mighte flye away before the Madianites.

Then appeared vnto him the angell of ȝ LORDE, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE with ȝ thou mightie giaunte. But Gedeon sayde vnto him: Syr, yf the LORDE be with vs, wherefore is all this then happened vnto vs? And where are all the wonders, which oure fathers tolde vs, ⁊ sayde: The LORDE brought vs out of Egipte? But now hath the LORDE forsaken vs, and deluyered vs in to the hande of the Madianites.

The LORDE turned him vnto him, ⁊ sayde: Go thy waye in this thy strength, thou shalt deluyer Israel out of the hande of ȝ Madianites. I haue sent the. But he sayde: My LORDE, wherwithall shal I deluyer Israel? Beholde, my kynred is the smallest in Manasse, ⁊ I am the leest in my fathers house? The LORDE sayde vnto him: I will be with the, so ȝ thou shalt smyte the Madianites, euen as though they were but one man.

He sayde vnto him: Yf I haue fōude grace in thy sighte, then make me a token, that it is thou, which speakest with me: go not awaye, tyll I come to ȝ, and brynge a meat-offerynge, to set before the. He sayde: I wyll tary, tyll thou cōmest agayne. And Gedeon wēte, and made ready a kydd, and an Ephā of vñleuended floure, and layed the flesh in a maunde, and put the broth in a pot, and broughte it forth vnto him vnder the Oke, and came nye. But the angell of God sayde vnto him: † Take the flesh and the vñleuended bred, ⁊ set it vpon the stonye rocke that is here, and poure the broth thereon. And he dyd so. Then the angell of the LORDE stretched out the staffe that he had in his hande, and with the ende of it he touched the flesh and the vleuended flour: * and the fyre came out of the rocke, and consumed the flesh and the vleuended flour. And the angell of the LORDE vanysht out of his sight.

¶ Now whā Gedeon sawe that it was an angell of † LORDE, he sayde: "O LORDE LORDE, haue I thus sene an angell of † LORDE face to face? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Peace be with the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. Thē Gedeon buylded an altare there vnto † LORDE, and called it: The LORDE of peace. The same stondesth yet vnto this daye at Apra. † belōgeth vnto the father of † Ésrites.

And in † same night sayde † LORDE vnto him: Take a fedd bullocke frō amōge thy fathers oxen, and another bullocke of seuen yeare olde, and breake downe the altare of Baall which is thy fathers, and cut downe the groue that stondesth by it, and buylde thou an altare vnto the LORDE thy God aboue vpon the toppe of this rocke, and make it ready, and take the other bullocke, and offre a burnt-offerynge with the wodd of the groue that thou hast hewen downe. Then toke Gedeon ten men of his seruantes, and dyd as † LORDE sayde vnto him: but he was afayed to do this by daye tyme, for his fathers house and the people in † cite, and so he dyd it by nighte.

¶ Now whan the people in the cite rose vp early in the mornyng, beholde, Baals altare was broken, and the groue hewen downe by it, and the other bullocke a burnt-offerynge vpon the altare that was buylded, and one sayde vnto another: Who hath done this? And whan they soughte and made searche, it was sayde: Gedeon the sonne of Ioas hath done it. Thē sayde the people of † cite vnto Ioas: Brynge forth thy sonne, He must dye, because he hath broken Baals altare, and hewen downe the groue therby. But Ioas sayde vnto all them that stode by him: Wyl ye stryue for Baal? Wil ye delyner him? He † stryue for him, shal dye this mornyng. Yf he be God, let him auēge him selfe, because his altare is broken downe. From † daye forth was he called Ierubaal, because it was sayde:

Whan † Madianites now † Amalechites, and the childre towarde the south had gathered thē selues together, and were passed thorow (Iordane) and had pitched their tentes in the valley of Israel, the sprete of the LORDE endued Gedeon, and he caused the trumpet to be blowne, and called (the house of) † Abieser, that they shulde folowe him: and he sent messaugers vnto all Manasse, and called them, † they shulde folowe him also: and he sent messaugers likewyse vnto Asser and Zabulon and Nephtali, which came vp to mete him.

And Gedeon sayde vnto God: Yf thou wilt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast saide, thē wil I laye a flese of woll in the courte: yf † dew be onely vpon † flese, and drye vpon all the grounde, then wyl I perceaue, that thou shalt delyuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast sayde. And it came so to passe. And whan he rose vp early on the morow, he wrāge † dew out of the flese, and fylled a dyszshe full of water. And Gedeon sayde vnto God: † Be not wroth at me, that I speake yet this one tyme, I wyl proue yet but once with the flese, let it be drye onely vpon the flese, and dew vpon all the grounde. And God dyd so the same night: so that it was drye onely vpon the flese, and dew vpon all the grounde.

The viij. Chapter.

THEN Ierubaal (that is Gedeon) gat him vp early, and all the people that was with him, and pitched their tentes besyde the well of Harod, so that he had the hoost of the Madianites on the north side behynde the hyl of More in the valley. But the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: The people that be with † are to many for me to delyuer Madian in to their hande, lest Israel boost them selues agaynst me, and saye: My hande hath delyuered me. Cause a proclamacion now to be made in the eares of the people, and saye: † He that feareth, and is afayed, let him turne backe, and get him soone fro mount Gilead. Then returned there of the people aboute a two and twenty thousande so that there was left but ten thousande.

‡ Deu. 20. b. 1 Mac. 3. g.

The people are yet to many: brynge them downe to the water, there wyl I proue them for  $\text{f}$ : and of whom I saye that he shal go with the, the same shal go with the: but of whō I saie that he shal not go with the, the same shall not go. And he broughte the people vnto  $\text{f}$  water. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Whosoeuer licketh of the water with his tūge, as a dogg licketh, make him stonde asyde and lykewyse who soeuer falleth downe vpo his knees to drynke. Then was the nombre of them that had licked out of the hande to the mouth, thre hundred men. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Thorow the thre hūdreth which haue licked, wyl I deluyuer you, and geue ouer the Mādianites in to thy hāde: As for the other people, let them go euery one vnto his place.

$\text{C}$  And they toke vytayles with them for  $\text{f}$  people, and their trompettes: but the other Israelites let he go, euery one vnto his tente. And he strengthened himselfe with the thre hundred men, and the Mādianites hoost laye before him beneth in the valley. And the same night sayde the LORDE vnto him: Vp, and go downe in to the hoost, for I haue geuen them ouer in to thy hande. But yf thou be afrayed to go downe, then let thy seruauant Pura go downe with the vnto the hoost,  $\text{f}$  thou maiest heare what they saie: after that shalt thou be bolde, and thy honde stronge, that thou mayest go downe in to the hoost.

Than wente Gedeon downe with his seruauant vnto  $\text{f}$  vttemost parte of  $\text{f}$  watchmē of armes  $\text{f}$  were in  $\text{f}$  hoost. And  $\text{f}$  Mādianites and Amalechites, and all the children of the south, had layed them selues beneth in the valley, as a multitude of greshoppers, and their Camels were not to be nombred for multitude, euē as the sonde on  $\text{f}$  see shore. Now whan Gedeon came, beholde, one tolde another his dreame,  $\text{r}$  sayde: Beholde, I haue dreamed a dreame: Me thoughte a bakē barleye lofe came rollinge downe to  $\text{f}$  hoost of  $\text{f}$  Mādianites: and whan it came to the tente, it smote it, and ouerthrew it, and turned it vpsyde downe, so that the tente fell. Then answered the other: That is nothinge els then  $\text{f}$  swerde of Gedeon the sonne of Ioas  $\text{f}$  Israelite: God hath geuē ouer the Mādianites with all the hoost in to his hande.

the interpretation of it, he worshipped, and came agayne in to the hoost of Israel, and sayde: Vp, for the LORDE hath deluyered  $\text{f}$  hoost of the Mādianites in to youre hāde. And he denyded the thre hundred men in to thre partes, and gane euery one a trompet in his hande, and emptye pytchers, and lampes therin, and sayde vnto them: \* Loke vnto me, and do ye euē so, and beholde, whā I come to the vttemost parte of the hoost, euen as I do, so do ye also. Whan I blowe  $\text{f}$  trompet, and all that are with me, then shal ye blowe  $\text{f}$  trōpettes also rounde aboute all the hoost, and saye: Here the LORDE  $\text{r}$  Gedeon. Thus came Gedeon and the thre hundred men with him vnto the vttemost parte of  $\text{f}$  hoost (aboute the tyme whan the mydwatch begynneth) and waked vp the watchmē, and blew with the trompettes, and smote asunder the pitchers in their handes.

So all the thre companies blew with  $\text{f}$   $\text{f}$  trompettes, and brake the pitchers. But the lampes helde they in their lefte hande, and the trompettes in their righte hāde, so that they blew, and cried: Here the swerde of the LORDE and Gedeon. And euery one stode in his place aboute the hoost. Then ranne all the hoost, and cried and fled. And whyle the thre hundred men blew the trompettes,  $\text{f}$  LORDE broughte it so to passe, that \*euery mans swerde in all  $\text{f}$  hoost was agaynst another, and the hoost fled vnto Bethsitha Zereratha, and vnto the border of the playne of Mehohab besyde Tabath. And  $\text{f}$  men of Israel of Nephtali, of Asser,  $\text{r}$  of Manasse cried, and folowed vpon the Mādianites.

And Gedeon sent messaungers vp vnto all mount Ephraim, sayenge: Come downe against the Mādianites, and stoppe the water from them vnto Beth Bara and Iordane. And then cryed all they that were of Ephraim, and stopped the water from them vnto Bethbara and Iordane, and toke two prynces of the Mādianites Oreb and Zeb, and slewe Oreb vpon the rocke of Oreb, and Zeb in the wynepresse of Zeb, and folowed vpon the Mādianites, and broughte the heades of Oreb and Zeb, vnto Gideon ouer Iordane.

* Iud. 9. g.

* 1 Re. 14. c. 2 Pa. 20. d.

vs, that thou hast not called vs, whā thou wentest forth to fight agaynst ꝑ Madianites? and they chode sore with him. But he sayde vnto them: What haue I done now that is like youre acte? Is not the aftergadderynge of Ephraim better then the whole haruest of Abieser? * God hath deliuered ꝑ prynces of the Madianites Oreb and Zeb in to youre hande, how coulede I do that ye haue done? Whā he had sayde this, their blast was swaged from him.

Now whan Gedeon came vnto Iordane, he wente ouer with the three hundreth mē that were with him, and they were weery, and folowed vpon their chace. And he sayde vnto the men of Sucoth: I praye you geue the people that are with me, some loaues of bred (for they are weery) that I maye folowe vpon Zebea and Salmana the kinges of the Madianites.

But the rulers of Sucoth sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy handes already, that we must geue bred vnto thy men of warre? Gedeon sayde: Well, whan the LORDE deliuereth Zebea and Salmana in to my hāde, I wyll threshsbe youre flesh with thornes of the wyldernesse and with breares. And from thence he wente vp vnto Penuel, and spake euen so vnto them. And the mē of Penuel gaue him like answer as they of Sucoth. And he sayde also vnto the men of Pennel: Yf I come peaceably agayne, I wil breake downe this tower.

As for Zebea and Salmana, they were at Karkar, and their hoost with them vpon a fyftene thousande, which were all that were left of the whole hoost of the children of the East: for there were fallen an hundreth and twenty thousande, that coulede drawe the swerde.

And Gedeon wente vp by the waye, where they dwell in the tentes on the east side of Nobah and Iakbeha, & smote the hoost, for the hoost was careless, and mystrusted nothinge. And Zebea and Salmana fled, but he folowed after them, and toke ꝑ two kynges of the Madianites Zebea and Salmana, and put all the hoost in feare.

Now whan Gedeon ꝑ sonne of Ioas came agayne frō the battayll out of ꝑ east, he toke a lad of the men of Sucoth, & examyned him, which wrote him vp the names of the rulers of Sucoth, and their Elders, euē thre score and seuentene men.

And he came to the men of Sucoth. & sayde: Beholde, here is Zebea & Salmana, cōcernynge whō ye laughed me to scorne, & sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy hādes all ready, that we must geue bred vnto thy men which are weery? And he toke the Elders of the cite, and thornes out of the wildernes, and breres, and caused ꝑ men of Sucoth to be torne therewith. * And the tower of Pennel brake he downe, and slewe the men of the cite.

And he saide vnto Zebea and Salmana: What maner of mē were they whō ye slewe at Thabor? They sayde: They were euen like the, & goodly men, as yf they had bene a kynges childrē. He sayde: They were my brethren, euen my mother somes: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf ye had lettē them lyue, I wolde not slaye you.

And he saide vnto his first borne sonne Iether: Stonde vp, & slaye them. Howbeit the lad drue not out his swerde, for he was afayed, for so moch as he was yet but a lad. Zebea & Salmana sayde: Stonde thou vp, & slaye vs, for as the man is, soch is also his strēgh. So Gedeon arose, and slewe Zebea and Salmana, and toke the ornamentes that were aboute their Camels neckes.

Then sayde certayne in Israel vnto Gedeon: Be thou lorde ouer vs, thou and thy sonne, and thy sonnes sonne, for so moch as thou hast deliuered vs from ꝑ hande of ꝑ Madianites. Neuertheles Gedeon saide vnto them: I wil not be lorde ouer you, nether shal my sonne be lorde ouer you, but the LORDE shalbe lorde ouer you.

Gedeon sayde vnto them: One thinge I desyre of you, Euery man geue me the earinge that he hath spoyled. (For in so moch as ꝑ men were Ismaelites, they had earringes.) They sayde: Them wyll we geue the. And they spred out a cloth, and euery man cast the earinge theron that he had spoyled. And the golden earynges which he requyred, had in weight, a thousande and seten hundreth Sycles of Golde, besyde the spanges and cheynes, and scarlet rayment which the kynges of the Madianites dyd weere, and besyde the neckbandes of their Camels. And Gideon made a cote armour therof, and set it in his cite at Aphra. And all Israel wente there a whoringe after it, and it turned to an occasion of fallinge vnto Gedeon and his house.

¶ Thus were ¶ Madianites brought downe before the children of Israel, and liſte vp their heade nomore: and the londre was in rest fortye yeares, as lōge as Gedeon lyued.

And Ierubaal the sonne of Ioas wētē ¶ dwelt in his house. "And Gedeon Had thre score ¶ ten sonnes, which were come out of his thye: for he had many wyues. And his concubyne which he had at Sichē, bare him a sonne also, whom he called Abimelech. And Gideon the sonne of Ioas dyed in a good age, ¶ was buried at Aphra in ¶ sepulchre of his father Ioas the father of the Esrites.

But whan Gedeon was deed, the childrē of Israel turned backe, and wente awhoringe after Baalim, and made a couenaunt with Baal Berith, ¶ he shulde be their God. And ¶ childrē of Israel thoughte not on ¶ LORDē their God, which had deluynered them frō the hande of their enemies rounde aboute: and they shewed not mercy vnto the house of Ierubaal Gedeon, accordinge to all the good that he had done vnto Israel.

The ix. Chapter

¶ ABIMELECH the sonne of Ierubaal, wente vnto Sichē to his mothers brethren, ¶ spake vnto them, ¶ to all the kynred of his mothers fathers house, and sayde: I praye you speake in the eares of all the men at Sichem: What is better for you, that thre score and ten men all children of Ierubaal shulde be lordes ouer you, or that one man shulde be lordē ouer you? Remembre also that I am youre boie and youre flesh.

Then spake his mothers brethrē all these wordes for him, in ¶ eares of all ¶ men at Sichem. And their hert enclined to Abimelech, for they thoughte: He is oure brother: and gaue him thre score and ten syluerlinges out of ¶ house of Baal Berith. And with them Abimelech hyred men that were vagabundes and of light condicions, which folowed him. And he came to his fathers house vnto Aphra, and slew his brethren the children of Ierubaal, ¶ euen thre score men and tē vpon one stone. But Iotham the yongest sonne of Ierubaal remayned ouer, for he was hydd. And all the men of Sichem, and all the house of Millo gathered them selues together, and wente and made Abimelech kynge by the Oke that stondeth at Sichem.

¶ Whan this was tolde Iotham, he wente, and stode vpon the toppe of mount Grisin, and liſte vp his voyce, cried, and sayde: Heare me ye men of Sichem, that God maye heare you also. * The trees wente to anointe a kinge ouer them, and sayde vnto the Olyue tre: Be thou oure kynge. But the Olyue tre answered them: Shall I go and leaue my fatnesse (which both God and men commende in me) and go to be puſt vp aboute the trees? ¶ Then sayde the trees vnto the fygge tre: Come thou and be kynge ouer vs. But the fygge tre sayde vnto thē: Shal I leaue my swetes and my good frute, and go to be puſt vp aboute the trees? ¶ Then sayde the trees vnto the thorne buszshe: Come thou, and be kynge ouer vs. And the thorne buszshe sayde vnto the trees: Yf it be true, ¶ ye anoynte me to be kynge ouer you, thē come, and put youre trust vnder my shadowe. Yf no, then go fyre out of the thorne buszshe, ¶ cōsume ¶ Cedar trees of Libanō.

¶ Yf ye haue done right now and iustly, ¶ ye haue made Abimelech to be kynge: and yf ye haue done well vnto Ierubaal and to his house, and haue done vnto him as he deserved vnto you. Which (euen my father) foughte for youre sakes, and ioperde his lyfe, to deluyer out of the Madianites hāde, euē you, which are rysen vp this daye agaynst my fathers house, ¶ haue slaine his childrē, thre score personnes ¶ ten vpon one stone, and haue made you a kynge (euen Abimelech the sonne of his handmaide) ouer the men at Sichem, for so moch as he is youre brother.

¶ Yf ye haue done right now and iustly vnto Ierubaal and his house this daye, then reioyse ouer Abimelech, and let him reioyse ouer you. Yf no, then go fyre out from Abimelech, and cōsume the men of Sichem and the house of Millo: And fyre go out also frō the men of Sichem, and from the house of Millo, and consume Abimelech. And Iothā (whan he had spoken this out) fled, and gat him out of the waye, and wente vnto Ber, and dwelt there because of his brother Abimelech.

D Now when Abimelech had reigned three yere ouer Israel, * God sent an euell mynde betwene Abimelech and the men of Sichem (for the men of Sichem despyed Abimelech), and rehearsed the wronge done to the sonnes of Ierubaa, and their bloude, and layed it vpon Abimelech their brother which slewe them, and vpon the men of Sichem that strenghted his hande therto, that he mighte slaye his brethren.

And the men of Sichem set an hynder watch vpon the toppes of the mountaynes, and spoyled all them that walked nye them by the waye, and it was tolde Abimelech. But there came Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren, and entred in to Sichem, and the men of Sichem put their trust in him, and wete out in to the felde, and gathered their vynyardes, and pressed them, and made a daunse, and wente in to their gods house, and ate and dranke, and cursed Abimelech.

E And Gaal y sonne of Ebed sayde: Who is Abimelech? and what is Sichem, that we shulde serue him? Is he not the sonne of Ierubaa, and hath set Sebul his seruaut ouer the men of † Hemor the father of Sichem? Wherefore shulde we serue him? Wolde God the people were vnder my hãde, y I mighte put downe Abimelech.

And it was tolde Abimelech: Increace thine booste, and departe. For Sebul the chefe ruler of the cite, whan he herde the wordes of Gaal y sonne of Ebed, he was wroth fully displeased, and sente message secretly to Abimelech, and caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethren are come to Sichem, and make the cite to be agaynst the.

Arise therefore by nyght, thou and thy people that is with the, and laye wayte for thẽ in the felde: and to morow whan the Sonne aryseth, get the vp soone, and fall vpon the cite: and yf he and the people that is with him come out vnto the, thẽ deale with him, as thyne hande fyndeth.

F Abimelech stode vp by night, and all the people that was with him, and layed wayte for Sichem with foure companies of men of warre. And Gaal the sonne of Ebed wete out and stode at the dore of the gate of the cite.

But Abimelech gat him vp out of the hinder watch, and the people that was with him. Now whan Gaal sawe the people, he sayde vnto Sebul: Beholde, there commeth a people downe from the toppe of y mount. Sebul saide vnto him: Thou seist y shadowe of the mountaines as though they were mẽ. Gaal spake yet more and sayde: Beholde, there commeth a people downe from y myddes of the loude, ⁊ one bonde of men cometh by the waye to y witch Oke. Thẽ sayde Sebul: Where is now thy mouth y sayde: Who is Abimelech, that we shulde serue him? Is not this y people, whom thou hast refused? Go forth now, and fighte with him.

Gaal wente forth before the citesyns of Sichem, and foughte with Abimelech. But Abimelech chased him, so that he fled, and there fell many slayne euen vnto the gate of the cite. And Abimelech abode at Aruma. But Sebul droue awaye Gaal and his brethren, so that they must not remaine at Sichem. Vpon the morowe wente the people forth in to y felde. Whã this was tolde Abimelech, he toke the people, and parted them in to three bodes of men, and wayted for thẽ in the felde. Now whan he sawe y the people wete out of the cite, he rose agaynst thẽ, and smote them.

Abimelech and y company of men that was with him, fell vpon them, and stepte vnto the dore of the porte: but the other two companies fell vpon all them that were in the felde, and slewe them. Thẽ foughte Abimelech agaynst the cite all y same daye, and wanne it, and slewe the people that was there in, and brake downe y cite, and sowed salt theron.

Whan all the men of the tower of Sichem herde this, they wente in to a stronge holde of y house of their God Berith. But whan Abimelech herde, that all the men of the tower of Sichem had gathered thẽ selues together, he wente vp vnto mount Zelmon, and all the people that was with him, and toke an axe in his hãde, and hewed downe a braunch of a tre, and toke it vp, ⁊ layed it vpon his shulder, and sayde vnto all the people that was with him: † As ye haue sene me do, make ye haist, and do euen so as I. Then all the people hewed downe euery one a braunch, and folowed Abimelech: and they layed them to the holde, and set fyre vpon them agaynst them and the holde: and all the men of the tower of Sichem dyled thorow the smoke and fyre, vpon a thousande men and women.

¶ As for Abimelech, he wete vnto Thebetz, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it. But in the myddes of the cite, there was a stronge tower, vnto the which all the men and women, and all the citesyns of the cite fled, and shutt it after them, and clymmed vp to the toppe of the tower. Then came Abimelech vnto the tower, and foughte agaynst it, and came nye vnto the dore of the tower, that he might burne it with fyre. * But a woman cast a peece of a mylstone vpon Abimelechs heade, and brake his brane panne. Then Abimelech in all the haist, called the seruauant that bare his wapen, and sayde vnto him: Drawe out thy swerde,<sup>a</sup> and kyll me, that it be not sayde of me: A woman hath slayne him. Then his seruauant thrust him thorow, and he dyled. Whan the Israelites which were with him, sawe, † Abimelech was deed, they gatt them awaye euery one vnto his awne place.

Thus God recompenced Abimelech the euell that he had done vnto his father, whā he slewe his thre score and ten brethren: like wyse all the euell of the men of Sichem, dyd God rewarde them vpon their heade: and so the curse of Iotham ‡ sonne of Ierubael came vpon them.

The x. Chapter.

¶ AFTER Abimelech there rose vp another sauioire in Israel, Thola a mau of Isachar, and the sonne of Pua, the sonne of Dodo. And he dwelt at Samir vpō the mount Ephraim, and iudged Israel thre and twentye yere, and died, and was buried at Samir.

After him stode vp oue Iair a Gileadite, and iudged Israel two and twentye yere, and had thirtie sonnes,† rydinge vpon thirtie asses foales: and had thirtie cities, whose names are Hauoth Iair (that is, the cities of Iair) vnto this daye, and lye in Gilead. And Iair dyed, and was buried at Canon.

¶ But the children of Israel wrought wickednes in the sighte of the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth, and the goddes of Siria, and the goddes of Sidon, and the goddes of Moab, and the goddes of ‡ children of Ammon, and the goddes of the Philistines, and forsoke ‡ LORDE, and serued him not. Then was ‡ wrath of ‡ LORDE fearce vpon Israel, and he gaue thē ouer vnder the hāde of the Philistynes, and of the children of Ammō. And they vexed and oppressed ‡ children of Israel eightene yere longe, all the children of Israel that were beyonde Iordane in the londe of the Moabites, which lyeth in Gilead. The children of Ammon also wente ouer Iordane, and fought agaynst Iuda, Ben Iamin, and agaynst the house of Ephraim, so that Israel was very sore troubled.

Then cryed the children of Israel vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned agaynst the, for we haue forsaken oure God, † & serued Baalim. But the LORDE sayde vnto the childrē of Israel: Did not the Egipcias, the Amorites, the children of Ammon, ‡ Philistines, the Sidonians, the Amalechites and Maonites oppresse you, and I helped you out of their hande, whan ye cryed vnto me? Yet haue ye forsaken me, and serued other goddes? Therefore wyll I helpe you nomore. ‡ Go youre waye, and crye vpon the goddes whom ye haue chosen, let them helpe you in the tyme of youre trouble.

But the childrē of Israel sayde vnto the LORDE: We haue synned, do thou vnto vs what pleaseth the, onely deluyuer vs at this tyme. And they put the straunge goddes frō them, and serued the LORDE, And his soule had pytie on the myserie of Israel.

And the children of Ammon called them selues together, and pitched in Gilead: But the children of Israel gathered them selues together also, and pitched at Mispā. And ‡ people of the chefest of Gilead sayde amōge them selues: Who so euer begynneth to fight agaynst the children of Ammon, shalbe heade ouer all them that dwell in Gilead.

The xi. Chapter.

¶ IEPHTHAE a Gileadite was a valeaūt man of armes, but an harlottes childe. Gilead begat Iephthae. But whan the wyfe had borne children vnto Gilead, and the same wyues childrē were waxē greate, they thrust out Iephtae, and sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not be heire in oure fathers house, for thou art another womā sonne. Thē fled he from his brethrē, and dwelt in the londe of Tob. And there resorted vnto him vagabūdes, and wēte out with him. And after a certayne tyrne foughte the children of Ammon with Israel.

Now whā the childrē of Ammon foughte thus with Israel, the Elders wente from Gilead to fetch Iephthae out of the londe of Tob, and sayde vnto him: Come, and be oure captayne, and fight agaynst the children of Ammon. But Iephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Are not ye they that hate me and haue thrust me out of my fathers house, and now come ye to me whan ye are in trouble?

§ The Elders of Gilead sayde: Therefore come we now againe vnto the, that thou mayest go with vs, and fighte agaynst the children of Ammon, and be oure captaine ouer all that dwell in Gilead. Iephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Yf ye fetch me agayne to fighte agaynst the childrē of Ammon, and the LORDE deliuer them before me shal I then be youre heade? The Elders of Gilead saide vnto Iephthae: The LORDE be hearer betwene vs, yf we do not as thou hast sayde. So Iephthae wēte with the Elders of Gilead. And the people made him heade and duke ouer them. And Iephthae spake all this before the LORDE at Mispā.

Then sente Iephthae messaungers to the kynge of the children of Ammon, and caused to saye vnto him: What hast thou to do with me, that thou comest vnto me to fight agaynst my londe? The kynge of the childrē of Ammon answered Iephthae's messaungers Because that Israel toke awaye my londe (whan they departed out of Egipte) from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto Iordane: geue it me agayne now therefore peaceably.

© But Iephthae sent yet mo messaungers to § kynge of the children of Ammon, which sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth Iephthae: * Israel hath taken no londe, nether from the Moabites ner from the children of Ammon: for when they departed out of Egipte, Israel walked thorow the wyldernes vnto the reed see, and came to Cades, and † sent messaungers to the kynge of the Edomites, and sayde: Let me go thorow thy londe. But the kynge of § Edomites wolde not heare thē. They sent lykewyse vnto the kynge of the Moabites, which wolde not also. Thus Israel abode in Cades, and compased the lōde of the Edomites and Moabites, and came on the eastsyde of the londe of the Moabites and pitched beyonde Arnon, and came not within the coaste of the Moabites. † For Arnon is the border of the Moabites.

And Israel sent messaungers vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites at Hesbon, and caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy londe vnto my place. Neuertheles Sihon wolde not trust Israel to go thorow the border of his londe, but gathered all his people, and pitched at Iahza, and foughte with Israel. Howbeit the LORDE God of Israel gaue Sihon with all his people in to Israels hāde, so that they slewe them. Thus Israel conquered all the londe of the Amorites that dwelt in § same countrie. And they toke possessiō of all the borders of the Amorites, from Arnon vnto Iabok, † from § wyldernes vnto Iordane. So § LORDE God of Israel droue awaye the Amorites before his people of Israel, and wilt thou cōquere them? Is it not so, yf thy God Camos gaue the oughte to possesse, woldest thou not possesse it? What so euer the LORDE oure God hath geuē vs before vs to possesse, that shal we conquere and take in possession.

‡ Hast thou better right (thinkest thou) thē § Balac the sonne of Ziphor, the kynge of § Moabites? Dyd he euer go to lawe or fighte agaynst Israel? Though Israel haue dwelt now vpo a thre hūdreth yere in Hesbon, and in the vyllages therof, in Aroer and in the vyllages therof, and in all the cities that lye by Arnon. Why dyd not ye rescue it at the same tyme? I haue not offended the, † thou doest me euell to fighte agaynst me. The LORDE geue sentence this daie betwene Israel and the children of Ammon.

Neuertheles the kynge of the children of Ammon wolde not heare § wordes of Iephthae, which he sent vnto him. Then came § sprete of the LORDE vpon Iephthae, and he wente thorow Gilead and Manasse, and thorow Mispā which lieth in Gilead, and fro Mispā that lieth in Gilead, vnto § children of Ammon.

And Iephthae vowed a vowe vnto the LORDE, and sayde: ¶ Yf thou wilt deliuer the childrē of Ammon in to my hande, what so euer commeth (first) out at the dore of my house in my waye, whan I returne agayne peaceably from the childrē of Ammon, that same shalbe the LORDES, and I wyl offre it for a burntofferynge.

So Iephthae wente vpon the children of Ammon, to fighte against them. And § LORDE gaue them in to his hande, and he smote the from Aroer tyll thou comest vnto Minnith, euen twenty cities, and vnto the playne of § vynyardes a very greate slaughter, and thus were the children of Ammon subdued before the children of Israel.

Now whan Iephthae came to Mispā vnto his house, beholde, his daughter wente out to mete him with tabrettes and daunces: and she was his onely childe, & he had els nether sonne ner daughter. And whan he sawe her, he rente his clothes, & sayde: Alas my daughter, thou makest my hert soroufull, and discomfortest me: for I haue opened my mouth vnto the LORDE, and can not call it agayne.

She sayde: My father, yf thou hast opened thy mouth vnto the LORDE, then do vnto me as it is proceeded out of thy mouth, accordinge as the LORDE hath auēged the of thyne enemies the children of Ammon. And she sayde vnto hir father: Do this for me, geue me leue to go downe vpō the mountaynes two monethes, that I maye bewepe my virginite with my playfeeres. He sayde: Go thy waye. And he let her go two monethes. Then wente she with her playfeeres, and bewayled hir mayden heade vpon the mountaynes. And after two monethes she came agayne vnto hir father. And he dyd vnto her accordinge as he had vowed. And she had neuer bene in daunger of eny man. And it was a custome in Israel, that the daughters of Israel shulde go euerie yere, and mourne for the daughter of Iephthae the Gileadite, foure dayes in the yere.

AND they of Ephraim made insurrection, & wente northwarde, & sayde vnto Iephthae: * Wherefore wētest thou to the battayll agaynst the children of Ammon, & hast not called vs, that we mighte go with the? We wil burne thy house and the with fyre. Iephthae sayde vnto the: I and my people had a greate matter with § children of Ammon, and I cried vpon you, but ye helped me not out of their handes. Now whan I sawe § there was no helper, I put * my soule in my honde, and wente agaynst the children of Ammon, and the LORDE deluyered them in to my hande. Wherefore come ye vp to me, to fighte agaynst me?

And Iephthae gathered all the men in Gilead, & foughte agaynst Ephraim. And the men in Gilead smote Ephraim, because they sayde: Ye Gileadites are as they § fle away before Ephraim, (and dwell) amōge Ephraim & Manasse. And the Gileadites toke § ferye of Iordane from Ephraim. Now whā one of § fugityue Ephraites dyd saye: Let me go ouer, § men of Gilead sayde: Art thou an Ephraite? yf he answered: No, they bad him saye: Schibolet, & he sayde: Schibolet, & coule not speake it righte: then they toke him, & slew him at § ferye of Iordane, so § the same tyme there fell of Ephraim two & fortye M. Iephthae iudged Israel sixe yeaues. And Iephthae § Gileadite dyed, & was buried in one of the cities of Gilead.

After him iudged Israel one Ebzan of Bethleem, which had thirtie sonnes and as many daughters: and his thirtie daughters gaue he forth to mariage, and thirtie daughters toke he from without for his sonnes, and iudged Israel seuen yere, and died, and was buried at Bethleem.

After him iudged Israel one Elon a Zabulonite, & he iudged Israel ten yere, & was buried at Aialon in the londe of Zabulon.

After him iudged Israel one Abdō a sonne of Hillel, a Pirgathonite, which had fortye sonnes, & thirtie neuies († which rode vpō seuentye Asses foales) and he iudged Israel eighte yere, and dyed, & was buried at Pirgathon in the londe of Ephraim vpon the mount of the Amalechites.

shalt conceaue, and beare a sonne, *vpō whose heade there shal come no rasoure: for ſ childre shal be a Nazaree of God, euen from his mother wombe, and shall begynne to deliuer Israel out of the hande of the Philistynes.

3 Then came ſ woman and tolde hir husbāde, ⁊ sayde: There came a mā of God vnto me, ⁊ his proporcion was to lōke vpon as an angell of God, very terrible, so ſ I axed him not whence he came, ⁊ whither he wolde: nether tolde he me his name. But he sayde vnto me: beholde, thou shalt conceaue ⁊ beare a sonne: drynke no wyne therfore ner strōge drynke, ⁊ eate no vncleane thinge: † for the childre shal be called a Nazaree of God, euen frō his mother wombe vnto his death.

Then Manoah prayed the LORDE, ⁊ sayde: Oh LORDE, let ſ man of God whom thou hast sent, come to vs agayne, ſ he maye enforme vs what we shall do vnto the childre which shalbe borne. And God herde the voyce of Manoah, ⁊ the angell of God came to his wife agayne. But she sat in ſ felde, and hir huszbāde Manoah was not with her. Thē ranne she in all the haist, ⁊ tolde hir huszbāde, ⁊ saide vnto him: beholde, ſ man hath appeared vnto me, ſ came to me to daye.

E Manoah gat him vp, ⁊ wente after his wife, and came to the man, and sayde vnto him: Art thou ſ man that spake to the woman? He sayde: Yee. And Manoah sayde: whā it commeth to passe that thou hast sayde, what shal be the maner and worke of ſ childre? The angell of the LORDE sayde vnto Manoah: He shal kepe him from all that I tolde the woman: he shal not eate that which commeth of the vyne, and shal drynke no wyne ner stronge drynke, and eate no vncleane thinge: ⁊ all that I haue cōmaunded her, shal he kepe.

Manoah sayde vnto ſ angell of the LORDE: let vs holde the here (I praye the) we will prepare a kydd for the. Neuertheles ſ angell of the LORDE answered Manoah: ‡ Though thou kepest me here, yet wyl I not eate of thy bred. But yf thou wilt make a burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, thou mayest offe it. (For Manoah wist not that it was an angell of the LORDE.) And Manoah sayde vnto the angell of the LORDE: What is thy name, that we maye prayse ſ, whan it commeth now to passe, that thou hast sayde? But the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: § Why axest thou after my name, which is wonderfull?

Then toke Manoah a kyd and a meatofferynge, ⁊ layed it vpō a rocke vnto the LORDE, ¶ which doth ſ wonders him selfe. But Manoah and his wife behelde it. And whā the flamme wente vp from ſ altare towardes heauen, the angell of the LORDE ascēded vp in the flamme of the altare. Whan Manoah ⁊ his wife sawe ſ, they fell downe to ſ earth vpō their faces. And the angell of ſ LORDE appeared nomore vnto Manoah ⁊ his wife. Thē knewe Manoah, that it was an angell of the LORDE, and he sayde vnto his wife: ¶ We must dye the death, because we haue sene God. But his wife answered him: Yf the LORDE wolde haue slaine vs, he had not receaued the burntofferynge and meatofferynge of oure bandes: nether had he shewed vs all these thinges, ner letten vs heare soch as is now come to passe.

And the woman broughte forth a sonne, and called his name Samson. And the childre grewe, and the LORDE blessed him. And the sprete of the LORDE begāne to be with him in the tentes of Dan, betwene Zarga and Esthaol.

SAMSON wente downe vnto Thimnath, 2 ⁊ there he sawe a woman amōge the daughters of ſ Philistynes. And whan he came vp, he tolde his father ⁊ his mother, ⁊ sayde: I haue sene a woman amōge the daughters of the Philistynes, I praye you geue me the same to wife. His father ⁊ his mother sayde vnto him: Is there not a woman amōge the daughters of thy brethren, ⁊ in all thy people, but thou must go ⁊ take a wife amōge the Philistynes, which are vncircumcised?

Samson sayde vnto his father: Geue me this womā, for she pleaseth myne eyes. But his father ⁊ his mother knewe not ſ it came of the LORDE, ⁊ that he soughte an occasion agaynst the Philistynes. For the Philistynes reigned ouer Israel at ſ same tyme. So Samson wente downe with his father and with his mother vnto Thimnath.

B And whan they came to the vynyardes of Thimnath, beholde, there came a yonge roaringe lyon against him. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpon him, and he rente him in peces, euen as a kydd is parted a sunder, and yet had he nothinge at all in his hãde, and he tolde it not vnto his father & his mother.

Now whan he came downe, he spake with the woman, and she pleased Samsons eyes. And after certayne dayes he came agayne, to receaue her, & wente out of ſ waye, that he mighte se ſ deed carcas of the lyon: and beholde, in ſ lyons carcas there was a swarme of beyes, and hony: and he toke of it in his hande, and ate therof by the waye: and wete vnto his father and to his mother, and gaue them to eate also. But he tolde them not, that he had taken the hony out of the lyons carcas.

C And whan his father came downe to the woman, Samson made a feast there, as the yonge men vsed to do. And whan they sawe him, they gaue him thirtie companions to be with him. Samson sayde vnto them: I wil expresse a darke sentence vnto you, yf ye expounde me the same with in these seuen dayes of the feast, I wyll geue you thirtie shertes, and thirtie chaunge of raymente. But yf ye can not expounde it, then shall ye geue me thirtie shertes, & thirtie chaunge of rayment. And they sayde vnto him: Shewe forth thy ryddle, let vs heare it. He sayde vnto them: Meate wente out from the deuourer, and swetenesse from the mightie. And in thre dayes they coule not expounde the ryddle.

Vpon the seuenth daye they sayde vnto Samsons wife: Persuade thy huszbande, that he tell vs what the ryddle meaneth, or els we shal burne the and thy fathers house with fyre. Haue ye called vs hither, to brynge vs to pouerte? Then wepte Samsons wife before him, and sayde: Thou art displeased at me, and louest me not: thou hast expressed a darke sentence vnto the children of my people, and hast not tolde it me.

D But he sayde vnto her: Beholde, * I haue not tolde it vnto my father and mother, and shulde I tell it the? And she wepte before him those seuen dayes, whyle they had ſ feast. But on the seuēth daye he tolde it her, for she was so importune vpon him. And she expounded the darke sentence vnto the children of her people. Then sayde the men of the cite vnto him vpon the seuenth daye or euer the Sonne wente downe: What is sweter then hony? What is stronger then the lyon? But he sayde vnto thē: Yf ye had not plowed with my calfe, ye shulde not haue founde out my ryddle. And the sprete of ſ LORDE came vpon him, and he wente downe vnto Ascalon, and slewe thirtie men of them, & toke their spoyle, and gaue chaunge of rayment vnto thē, ſ had expounded the ryddle. And he was wrothfully displeased, & wente vp vnto his fathers house. As for Samsons wife, she was geuen vnto one of his companions, which belonged vnto him.

The xv. Chapter.

IT fortunèd after certayne daies aboute the wheate haruest tyme, ſ Samson visited his wife with a kydd. And whā he thoughte, I wyl go to my wife in to the chamber, hir father wolde not let him in, and sayde: I thoughte thou wast displeased at her, and I gaue her vnto thy frende. But she hath a yonger sister which is more beutyfull then she, let ſ same be thine for her. Thē sayde Samson vnto thē: I haue once gottē a righte occasion agaynst the Philistynes, I wyl do you displeasure.

And Samson wete and catched thre hundred foxes, and toke fyre brandes, and festened one tayle to another, and put euer a fyre brande betwene two tayles, and kynled the same with fyre, and let them go amonge the Philistynes corne, and thus he brent ſ stoukes and the stondinge corne, and ſ vynyardes, and the olyue trees.

Then sayde the Philistynes: Who hath done this? And they sayde: Samson the husbnde of the Thimnites daughter, because he toke awaye his wife from him, and gaue hir vnto his frende. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and brent her and hir father also with fyre.

But Samson sayde vnto them: I can suffre you to do this, neuertheles I wyl be awged vpon you my selfe, and then wyl I leaue of. And he smote them sore both vpo the shulders & loynes: and wete downe, & dwelt in the stone clyffe at Etam. Then wente the Philistynes vp, and layed sege vnto Iuda, & pitched at Lechi. But they of Iuda sayde: Wherefore are ye come vp against vs? They answered: we are come vp to bynde Samson, y we maye do vnto him, as he hath done vnto vs.

C Then wete there thre M. men of Iuda downe to the stone clyffe of Etam, and sayde vnto Samson: Knowest thou not that the Philistynes raigne ouer vs? Wherefor hast thou done this then vnto vs? He sayde: As they dyd vnto me, so haue I done vnto the agayne. They sayde vnto him: We are come downe to bynde the, and to delyuer f in to the hãde of the Philistynes. Samson sayde vnto the: Then sweare and promyse me, y ye wyll not slaye me. They answered him: We wyll not kyll the, we wil but bynde the, and delyuer the in to their hande, and wyl not slaye f. And they bounde him with two new coardes and caried him from the stone. And when he came vnto Lechi, the Philistynes shouted, and rãne vnto him. But f sprete of f LORDE came vpon him, and the coardes aboute his armes were like thredes burnt in the fyre, so f the bondes were lowsed from his hondes.

D And he founde the cheke bone of a deed asse: then put he forth his hande, and toke it, and slewe a thousande men therwith: And Samson sayde: With an olde asses cheke bone, yee euẽ with the cheke bone of an asse haue I slayne a thousande men. And when he had sayde f, he cast f cheke bone out of his hande, and called the place Ramath Lechi. But whã he was sore a thyrst, he called vpõ the LORDE, and saide: Soch greate health hast thou geuẽ by the hãde of thy seruaut, but now must I dye a thyrst, and fall in to f hande of f vncircũcised. Thẽ God opened a gome tothe in f chekebone, and f water wete out: and when he dranke, his sprete came agayne, and he was refreszshed. Therefore vnto this daye it is yet called f well of f cheke bone of him f made intercession. And he iudged Israel in the tyme of the Philistynes twetye yere.

The xvi. Chapter.

A SAMSON wente vnto Gasa, and there he sawe an harlot, and laye with her. Thẽ was it saide vnto the Gasites: Samson is come hither. And they compased him aboute, and caused to laye wayte for him preuely, and watched all the nighte in the gate of f cite, and all that nighte they helde them styll, and sayde: Abyde, tomorow when it is lighte, we wyll slaye him. But Samson laye vnto mydnighte, then rose he at mydnighte, and toke holde on both f syde portes of f gate of the cite, with both the postes, and lifte them out with the barres, and layed them vpon his shulders, and bare them vp to f toppe of f mount ouer agaynst Hebron.

After this he fell in to the loue of a woman by f broke of Sorek, whose name was Dalila, vnto whom the prynces of the Philistynes came vp, and sayde vnto her: Persuade him, and loke wherin he hath soch greate strẽgh, and how we maye ouercome him, y we mighte bynde him and subdue him, so wyll we geue the euery man a M. and an C. syluerlinges. And Dalila sayde vnto Samson: I praye the tell me, wherin thy greate strẽgh is, and how thou mightest be bounde to be subdued. Samson sayde vnto her: Yf I were bounde with seũ roapes of fresh senowes, which are not yet dried vp, I shulde be weake, and as another man. Thẽ the prynces of the Philistynes broughte vp vnto her seuen new roapes, which were not yet dried vp. And she bounde him therwith. (But there was wayte layed for him besyde her in the chamber) and she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Neuertheles he brake the roapes in sunder, euẽ as a twyned threde breaketh, when it hath caught the heate of the fyre. And it was not knowne wherin his strength was.

C Then sayde Dalila vnto Samson: beholde, thou hast begyled me and dyssembled with me: tell me yet, wherewithall mayest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf they bounde me with new coardes, wherewith no labour hath bene done, I shulde be feble, and as another man. Then toke Dalila new coardes, and bounde him withall, and sayde: The Philistynes vpõ the Samson (but there was wayte layed for him in the chamber.) And he brake them from his armes, euen as it had bene a threde.

Dalila sayde vnto him: Yet hast thou begyled me and dessembled with me: O tell me yet, wherewithall mightest thou be bounde? He answered her: Yf thou playtest seũ hayrie lockes of my heade together in a fyllet, and fastenest them in with a nayle (I shulde be weake.) And she saide vnto him: The Philistynes vpõ the Samson. But he awaked out of his slepe, and drue out f playted hayrie lockes with the nale and the fyllet.

D The sayde she vnto him: How cāst thou saye ŷ thou louest me, where as thine hert is not yet with me? Thre tymes hast thou disceaue me, and not tolde me wherein thy greate strength is. So whan she was euery daye importune vpon him with her wordes, ⁊ wolde not let him haue rest, his soule was faynte euen vnto the death, ⁊ he shewed her his whole hert, ⁊ sayde vnto her: * There came neuer rasoure vpon my heade, for I am a Nazaree of God fro my mothers wombe. Yf I were shauen, my strength shulde departe fro me, so that I shulde be weake, and as all other men. Now whan Dalila sawe that he had opened all his hert vnto her, she sent ⁊ called for the prynces of the Philistynes, ⁊ sayde: Come yet once vp, for he hath opened his whole hert vnto me.

E Thē came the prynces of the Philistynes vp vnto her, ⁊ broughte the money with them in their handes. And she made him to slepe vpon hir lappe, ⁊ called one which shoue of the seuē hayrie lockes of his heade. And she beganne to vexe him. Thē was his strength departed frō him. And she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Now whā he awoke out of his slepe, he thoughte: I wil go forth as I haue done afore tyme, ⁊ ease my selfe, ⁊ knewe not ŷ the LORDE was departed from him. But the Philistynes toke him, ⁊ put out his eyes, and broughte him downe to Gasa, ⁊ bounde him with fetters, and made him to grynde in the preson. But the heer of his heade beganne to growe agayne, where it was shauen of.

F Whan ŷ prynces of the Philistynes were gathered together, to make a greate sacrifice vnto Dagon their god, and to be ioyfull, they sayde: Oure god hath delynered Samson oure enemye in to oure hande. Like wyse whan ŷ people sawe him, they prayed their god, ⁊ sayde: Oure god hath delynered in to oure handes oure enemye, ŷ destroyed oure londe, ⁊ slewe many of vs. Now whan their hert was ioyfull, they sayde: Let vs fetch Samson, that he maye make some pastyme before vs. Then fetched they Samson out of the preson, ⁊ he made pastyme before them. And they set him betwene two pilers. But Samson sayde vnto the lad ŷ led him by the hande: Let me touche the pilers wher vpon the house stondeth, ŷ I maye leane ther vnto. As for ŷ house, it was full of men ⁊ women. All the prynces of the Philistynes were there also, and vpon the rofe were aboute a thre thousande men and women, which behelde what pastyme Samson made.

But Samson called vpon the LORDE, ⁊ G sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thynke vpon me, ⁊ strength me but this once O God I beseke the, ŷ for both myne eyes I maye anēge me on the Philistynes. And he toke holde of ŷ two mydpilers, that the house stode vpon ⁊ was holden by, the one in his righte hāde, ⁊ ŷ other in his lefte, ⁊ saide: My soule dye with the Philistynes, ⁊ he bowed him selfe mightly. Then fell the house vpon the prynces ⁊ vpon all the people that were therein, so that there were mo of ŷ slayne which dyed in his death, thē he slewe whyle he lyued. Then came his brethern downe and all his fathers house, and toke him, and caried him vp, and buried him in the graue of his father Manoah betwene Zarga and Esthaol. He iudged Israel twentye yeare.

The xviij. Chapter.

THERE was a man vpō mount Ephraim, A named Micha, which sayde vnto his mother: The thousande and hundreth syluerlinges which thou hast taken vnto the, ⁊ sworne, and spoken of before myne eares: beholde, ŷ same money is by me, I haue taken it vnto me. Then sayde his mother: The blessinge of the LORDE haue thou my sonne. So he gaue his mother the thousande ⁊ hundreth syluerlinges agayne. And his mother saide: That money haue I sanctified vnto the LORDE with my hande for my sonne, to make a molten ymage: therfore I geue it the agayne. Neuertheles he delyuered ŷ money agayne vnto his mother.

Then toke his mother two hundreth syluerlinges, ⁊ put them forth to ŷ goldsmith, which made a molten ymage, ŷ was afterwarde in Michas house. And thus the man Micha had a gods house, ⁊ made an ouerbody cote, ⁊ Idols, and fylled ŷ handes of one of his sonnes, ŷ he mighte be his prest. ⁊ At ŷ tyme was there no kynge in Israel, ⁊ euery man dyd the thinge ŷ was righte in his awne eyes. There was a yōge man of Bethleem Iuda, amōge the kynreds of Iuda, and he was a Leuite, and was a straunger there. The same wente out of the cite of Bethleem Iuda, to walke whither he coulede.

¶ And whā he came vp to mount Ephraim vnto the house of Micha, to go on his iourney, Micha axed him: Whence comest thou? He answered him: I am a Leuite of Bethleem Iuda, and am walkyng where I can. Micha sayde vnto him: Tary with me, thou shalt be my father and my prest, I will geue the euery yere ten syluerlinges and thy appoynted raymēt, and meate and drynke: and the Leuite wēte on. And the Leuite agreed to abyde with the man: and he helde the yonge mā, as one of his owne sonnes. And Micha fylled the Leuites hande, that he mighte be his prest, and so he was in Michas house. And Micha sayde: I am sure the LORDE wyll do me good now, that I haue a Leuite to my prest.

The xliij. Chapter.

¶ At that tyme was there no kynge in Israel. And ŷ trybe of ŷ Danites soughte them an enheritaunce to dwell in, * for vnto that daie there was no enheritaunce fallen vnto them amonge the trybes of Israel. And the childre of Dan sent out of their kynreds fyue captaynes (which were men of armes) from Zarga and Esthaol, to spye and search out the londe. And they sayde vnto them: Go youre waie, and search out the londe. And they came vp to mount Ephraim in to ŷ house of Micha, and taried there all nighte. And whyle they were there with Michas huszsholde, they knewe ŷ voyce of the yonge man the Leuite, and sayde vnto him: Who broughte ŷ hither? What makest thou here? and why woldest thou come hither?

¶ He answered thē: Thus ⁊ thus hath Micha done vnto me, ⁊ hath hyred me to be his prest. They sayde vnto him: Oaxe at God, ŷ we maye perceauē, whether oure iourney which we go, shal prospere well or not. The prest answered them: Go youre waye in peace, youre iourney ŷ ye go, is before the LORDE. Then the fyue men wente their waye, ⁊ came vnto Lais, and sawe that the people which was therin, dwelt sure, euen as ŷ Sidonians, at rest, and carelesse, and that there was no lorde in the londe to vexē them, and were farre from the Sidonias, and had nothinge to do with eny man.

And they came to their brethre to Zarga and Esthaol. And their brethren saide vnto them: How is it with you? They sayde: Arise, let vs go vp vnto them, for we haue sene the londe, ŷ it is a very good londe: make haist therefore, ⁊ be not slacke to go, that ye maye come to take possession of the londe. Whan ye come, ye shall come to a carelesse people, and the londe is wyde: for God hath delyuered this place in to youre hande, where nothinge wanteth of all ŷ is vpon earth.

Then wente there thence out of the kynreds of Dan from Zarga and Esthaol, sixe hundreth men ready wapened to ŷ battayll, and wente vp, and pitched at Kiriath Iearim in Iuda: therfore called they the same place, ŷ hoost of Dan, vnto this daye, which is behinde Kiriath Iearim.

And frō thence they wēte vp vnto moūt Ephraim, and came to the house of Micha. Then answered the fyue men that wēte out to spye the londe of Lais, ⁊ sayde vnto their brethren: Knowe ye not that in these houses there is an ouerbody cote, Idols, ⁊ molten ymages? Now maye ye loke what ye haue to do. They departed thence, and came to the house of the yonge man the Leuite in Michas house, and saluted him frēdly. But the sixe hundreth men, which were of ŷ children of Dan, stode ready harnessed before ŷ gate. And the fyue men that were gone out to spye ŷ londe, wēte vp, and came thither, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, ⁊ the molten Idols. In the meane whyle stode ŷ prest at the gate, with the sixe hundreth readye harnessed.

Now whā these were come in to Michas house, and toke the ymage, the ouerbody cote, and the molten Idols, the prest sayde vnto them: What do ye? They answered him: Holde thy peace, and laye thine hande vpon thy mouth, and go with vs, ŷ thou mayest be oure father ⁊ prest. Is it better for the to be prest in one mans house, then amonge a whole trybe ⁊ kynred in Israel? This pleased the prest well, ⁊ he toke both the ouerbody cote, and the Idols, and the ymage, and came in amonge the people. And whan they turned them and wente thence, they sent their children, and catell, and such precious thynges as they had, before them.

Whan they were come farre now from the house of Micha, the men ŷ were in Michas houses gathered the together by Michas house, and folowed the childre of Dan, and cried vpon the childre of Dan. They turned their faces about, and sayde vnto Michas: What ayleth the, the thou makest such a crienge? He answered: Ye haue taken awaye my goddes, and the prest, and are goinge youre waie, and what haue I behynde? What is here? And yet ye saye vnto me: What ayleth the? But the childre of Dan saide vnto him: Let not thy voyce be herde amonge vs, that some wrothfull man thrust not at the, and so thy soule and the soule of thy house be destroyed. So the childre of Dan wete on their waye. And Michas, whan he sawe they were to stronge for him, turned backe, and came agayne to his house.

But they toke that Michas had made, and the prest whom he had, and came vnto Laish, to a quyet carelesse people, and slewe them with the edge of the swerde, and burnt the cite with fyre, and there was no man to deliuer them: for they laye farre fro Sidon, and had to do with no man. And they laye in the valley, which is besyde Beth Rehob. Then buylded they the cite, and dwelt therin, and called it Dan, after the name of their father Dan, whom Israel begat. And the cite was called Laish afore tyme.

And the children of Dan set vp the ymage for them, and Ionathan the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Manasse, and his sonnes were prestes amonge the trybe of the Danites, vnto the tyme they were led awaye captiue out of the londe. And thus they set amonge the ymage of Michas, which he had made, as longe as the house of God was at Silo.

The xii. Chapter.

At the same tyme was there no kynge in Israel, and there was a man of Leui, which was a straunger besyde mount Ephraim, and had taken him a concubine of Bethleem Iuda to wife. And whan she had played the harlot besyde him, she ranne fro him to hir fathers house vnto Bethleem Iuda, and was there foure monethes longe. And hir husband gat him vp, and wente after her, to speake frendly with her, and to fetch her againe, and had a seruauit and a couple of asses with him. And she led him in to hir fathers house. But whan the damsels father sawe him, he was glad, and receaued him: and his father in lawe, the damsels father kepte him, so that he taried thre dayes with him: thus they ate and dröke, and remained there all nighte.

But on the fourth daye he gat him vp early, and wolde go his waye. Then sayde the damsels father vnto his sonne in lawe: Refresh thine hert first with a morsell of bred, and then shal ye go. And they sat them downe, and ate and dronke both together: Then sayde the damsels father vnto the man: Oh tarye all nighte, for we maie refresh thine hert. But the man arose, and wolde nedes go. And his father in lawe constrayned him to tarye all nighte. On the fifth daye in the mornyng he gat him vp, and wolde be gone. Then sayde the damsels father: I praye the comforte thine hert, and let vs tary till the daye be farther past, and so they ate both together.

And the man gat him vp, and wolde go with his concubine and with his seruauit. But his father in lawe the damsels father, saide vnto him agayne: Lo, the daye is spent, and it begynneth to be euen, tary all night: beholde, here is lodginge yet this daye, abyde here this night, it shal refresh thine hert: tomorrow by times get you vp, and go youre waye vnto thy tent. Neuertheles the man wolde not tary, but gat him vp, and wete his waye, and came ouer agaynst Iebus (that is Ierusalem) and his couple of asses laden, and his concubine with him.

Now whan they were come nye vnto Iebus, the daye fell fast awaye. And the seruauit saide vnto his master: I praie you go on, and let vs turne in to this cite of the Iebusites, and tarye therein all night. Notwithstandinge his master sayde vnto him: I wil not turne in to the cite of the aleauntes, that are not of the children of Israel, but I wyl go ouer vnto Gibeon. And he sayde vnto his seruauit: Go thou before, that we maye come to some place, and tarye at Gibeon or at Ramah all night. And they wente on and walked, and the Sonne wente downe vpon the harde by Gibeon, which lyeth in the trybe of Ben Iamin: and they turned in there, for they mighte come in, and tarye at Gibeon all nighte. But whan he came in, he sat him downe in the strete of the cite: for there was woman that wolde lodge them in his house that night.

And beholde, then came there an olde man from his worke out of the felde in the euen-inge: and he was also of mount Ephraim, and a straüger at Gibea: but  $\text{f}$   $\text{m}$  of that place were  $\text{f}$  childrē of lemini. And whan he lifte vp his eies,  $\tau$  sawe the straunger in the strete he sayde vnto him: Whither wilt thou go?  $\tau$ whence comest thou? He answered him:

 We are goinge on oure iourney from Bethleē Iuda, vntyll we come besyde mount Ephraim, whēce I am, and wente vnto Bethleem Iuda, and now I go vnto  $\text{f}$  house of  $\text{f}$  LORDE  $\tau$ no mā wil harbarow me. We haue strawe and prouēder for oure asses, and bred and wyne for me and thy handmayden, and for the yonge man which is with thy seruauant, so  $\text{f}$
 we wante nothinge.

$\text{f}$  The olde man sayde: Peace be with the:
 what soeuer thou wantest, thou findest it with me, onely tarye not in the strete all night.
 And he broughte him in to his house, and gaue the asses prouender: and they washed their fete, and ate  $\tau$  dronke. And whā their hert was now ioyfull, the men of the cyte, the children of Belial, came, and compased the house rounde aboute, and russhed at  $\text{f}$  dore, and sayde vnto  $\text{f}$  olde man, which was the good man of  $\text{f}$  house: Bringe out the mā which is come in to thy house, that we maye knowe him.

*But the good man of the house wente forth to them, and sayde vnto them: Oh no my brethren, do not so wickedly, consideringe this man is come in to my house: Oh do not soch folye. Beholde, I haue a daughter yet a virgin, and this man hath a cōcubine, those wil I brynge forth vnto you, that ye maye humble them, and do with them as ye lyke:
 but do not soch foly vnto this man. Neuer-theles the men wolde not herken vnto him.
 Then toke  $\text{f}$  man his concubine and broughte her forth vnto them: and they knewe her, and dealte shamefully with her all  $\text{f}$  night vntill the mornynge. And whan the mornynge brake on, they let her go.

$\text{f}$  Then came the woman early in the morn-ynge, and fell downe at the dore of the mā's house that her lorde was in, and laye there tyll it was light. Now whan hir lorde rose vp in the mornynge, and opened the dore of the house, and wente forth to go on his iour-ney, beholde, his concubine laye at the dore of the house, and hir handes vpon the thresholde. He saide vnto her: stonde vp, let vs go. Neuertheles she gaue him no answeere.

 Thē toke he her vp vpon his asse, gat him vp,
 and wente vnto his place.

Now whan he came home, he toke a swerde, and helde his concubynne, and cut her with the bones and all in to twolue peeces, and sent them in to all the coastes of Israel. Who so euer sawe it, sayde: Soch a thinge hath not bene done ner sene, sence the tyme that  $\text{f}$ children of Israel departed out of the londe of Egipte, vnto this daye. Now as concernynge this, take youre advysement, and geue youre counsell, and shew it forth.

The xx. Chapter.

THEN wente the children of Israel out  $\text{a}$ and gathered a congregacion together as one man, frō Dan vntill Bersaba, and from the londe of Gilead vnto the LORDE to Mispā: and there came together of all the quarters of the people, and of all the trybes of Israel in to the congregacion of the people of God, foure hundreth thousande fote men that drue out  $\text{f}$  swerde. But the children of Ben Iamin herde, how that  $\text{f}$  children of Israel were gone vp vnto Mispā. And the children of Israel sayde: Tell vs, how happened this euell?

Then answered the Leuite the huszbande of the woman that was slayne, and sayde: I came to Gibea in Ben Iamin with my concu-byne, to tary there allnight, then the cytesins of Gibea gat them vp agaynst me, and compased me aboute in the house by night, and thoughte to slaye me, and defyled my cōcubyne, so that she dyed: then toke I my cōcubyne, and cut her in peces, and sent the peces in to euery cowntre of the inheritaunce of Israel: for they haue done an abhominacion and folye in Israel. Beholde, here are ye children of Israel: aduise you well, and take this matter in hande.

So all the people gat them vp as one mā,  $\text{b}$ and sayde: Nomā shal go in to his tente, ner departe to his house, but this wil we do now agaynst Gibea: Let vs cast lot, and take ten men of an hundreth, and an hundreth of a thousande, and a thousande of ten thousande, out of all  $\text{f}$  trybes of Israel,  $\text{f}$  they maie take fode for  $\text{f}$  people, to come  $\tau$  do with Gibea Ben Iamin, acordynge to their folye which they haue done in Israel. Thus all the men of Israel beyng confederate, gathered them selues together as one man vnto the cite: and the trybes of Israel sent men vnto all the kindreds of Ben Iamin, and caused to saye vnto them: What maner of wickydnes is this, that is done amonge you? Delyuer here therefore the men the children of Belial at Gibeā, that we maye put them to death, and do awaye the euell out of Israel. Neuertheles the children of Ben Iamin wolde not folowe the voyce of their brethren the children of Israel, but gathered them selues out of ʒ cities vnto Gibeā, to go forth in battayll agaynst the children of Israel.

C And the same daye were there nombred of the children of Ben Iamin out of the cities, sixe and twenty thousande men, that drue the swerde, beside the citesyns of Gibeā of whom there were tolde seuē hundred chosen men. And amonge all this people there were chosen out seuē hundred men, which vsed not the right hande but the lefte, and yet with the slyng coulde they touch an heer, and not mysse. But the men of Israel, beside them of Bē Iamin, were nombred foure hundred thousande, which drue the swerde, ʒ were all men of armes. And the children of Israel arose, and wente vp to the house of God (in Silo) and axed at God, and sayde: Who shall go vp for vs to beginne the battayll with ʒ children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE saide: Iuda shall begynne.

So the children of Israel gat thē vp in ʒ mornynge, ʒ pitched ouer agaist Gibeā, ʒ euery man of Israel wote out to fighte with Ben Iamin, and set them selues in aray to fighte agaynst Gibeā. Then fell the children of Ben Iamin out of Gibeā, and slewe the same daye amonge Israel two ʒ twenty thousande to the grounde.

D But the people of the men of Israel comforted them selues, and made them ready to fighte yet more in the same place, after they had prepared them selues the daye afore. And the children of Israel wente vp, and wepte before the LORDE vntyll the euenynge, and axed at the LORDE, ʒ sayde: Shall we go eny more to fighte with ourē brethren the children of Ben Iamin? The LORDE sayde: Go vp vnto them. And whan the children of Israel gat them vp to the childrē of Ben Iamin on ʒ next daye, the Ben Iamites fell out of Gibeā agaynst them the same daye, and slewe yet eightene thousande of ʒ children of Israel to the grounde, which all drue the swerde.

Then wente all the children of Israel vp, and all the people, and came to the house of God, and wepte, and taried there before the LORDE, ʒ fasted that daye vntyll the euen, and offred burntofferynges and deedofferynges before the LORDE. And the children of Israel axed at the LORDE (the Arke of the couenaunt of God was there at that tyme, and Phineas the sonne of Eleazar the sonne of Aaron stode before him at the same tyme) ʒ they sayde: Shal we go forth eny more to fighte with ourē brethren the childrē of Ben Iamin, or shal wē leaue of? The LORDE sayde: Go vp, tomorow wyl I delyuer them in to youre handes.

E And the children of Israel set a preuy watch agaynst Gibeā rounde aboute, and so the children of Israel wente vp to the children of Ben Iamin on the thirde daye, and set them selues in aray agaynst Gibeā like as the other two tymes afore. Thē came the children of Ben Iamin out agaynst the people, ʒ brake out of the cite, ʒ begamme to slaye certayne wounded of the people (like as the other two tymes afore) in the felde vpon two stretes: wherof one goeth towarde Bethel, the other vnto Gilead vpon a thirte men in Israel. Then thought the childrē of Ben Iamin: They are smytten before vs like as afore. But the childrē of Israel sayde: Let vs flye, that we maie prouoke them out of the cite in to the hye stretes.

Then all the men of Israel gat them vp from their place, and prepared them selues vnto Baal Thamar. And the hinder watch of Israel brake out of their place, from ʒ caue of Gaba, and came vnto Gibeā, twenty thousande chosen men out of all Israel, so that it was a sore battayll: but they knewe not that the euell shulde happen vnto them. Thus the LORDE smote Ben Iamin before the children of Israel, so that the same daye the children of Israel destroyed fyue ʒ twenty thousande and an hundred men in Ben Iamin, which all drue the swerde.

F For whan the childrē of Ben Iamin sawe that they were smitten, the men of Israel gaue them rowme (to flye). For they trusted to the watch, which they had sett by Gibeā. And the watch made haist also, ʒ brake forth vnto Gibeā, and wente vpon it, and smote all the cite with the edge of  $\hat{y}$  swerde. They were appoynted betwene them selues the men of Israel and the hynder watch, to fall vpon them with the swerde, whan the smoke of the cite arose. Now whan the men of Israel turned them in the battayll, and Ben Iamin beganne to smyte the wounded in Israel vpon a thirtie men, and thoughte, they are smytten before vs, like as in the battayll afore, then beganne there a piler of smoke to arise vp from the cite. And Ben Iamin looked behinde them: and beholde, the flamme of  $\hat{y}$  cite wente vp vnto heauen. And the men of Israel turned them, and were feerce vpon  $\hat{y}$  men of Ben Iamin: for they sawe that the euell wolde happen vnto them.

And they turned them before the men of Israel in the waye to the wyldernes, but the battayll folowed vpon them. And them of the cite destroyed they amōge them. And they compased Ben Iamin rounde aboute, and folowed vpon them vnto Menuah, and trode them downe tyll afore Gibeā eastwarde. And there fell of Ben Iamin eightene thousande men, which were all men of armes.

Whan the remnaunt of Ben Iamin sawe that, they turned them and fled towarde the wyldernes vnto the stonye rocke of Rimō. But in the same strete they slewe fyue thousande men, and folowed vpon them vnto Gideom, and slewe two thousande of thē: and so there fell the same daye of Ben Iamin fyue and twenty thousande men which drue  $\hat{y}$  swerde, and were all mē of armes. Onely sixe hundreth men turned backe, and fled towarde the wyldernes vnto the stonye rocke of Rimō, and abode in the rocke of Rimō foure monethes. And the men of Israel came agayne to the children of Ben Iamin, and smote them that were in the cite with  $\hat{y}$  edge of the swerde, both mē and catell and all that was founde: and what soeuer was foude in the cite, they cast it in to the fyre.

The xxi. Chapter.

THE men of Israel had sworē at Mispā, and sayde: Noman shal geue his daughter to the Ben Iamites to wife. And the people came to the house of God (in Silo)  $\tau$  abode there before God vntill the euenynge, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte sore, and sayde:

O LORDE God of Israel, wherfore is this come to passe in Israel this daye? But on the morow the people gat thē vp early, and builded there an altare, and offred burnt-offerings and deedofferynges.

And the children of Israel sayde: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp with the congregacion vnto the LORDE? For there was a greate oath made, that who so came not vp to Mispā vnto the LORDE, shulde dye the deeth. And the children of Israel were sory for Ben Iamin their brother, and sayde: This daye is there one trybe lesse in Israel. How wyll we do that the remnaunt maye haue wyues? For we haue sworne by the LORDE, that we wyl not geue thē wyues of oure daughters. And they sayde: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp to the LORDE vnto Mispā? And beholde, there was not one man of the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead.

Then sent the congregacion twelue thousande men of armes thither, and commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and smite the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead with the swerde, the women also and the children, but so that ye do after this maner: * Se that ye damne all them that are males, and all the women that haue lyen with men. And amonge the citesyns of Iabes in Gilead they foude foure hundreth damself, which were virgins, and had lyen with noman: those they broughte in to the hoost vnto Silo, which lyeth in the londe of Canaan.

Then sent the whole congregacion. <sup>c</sup> and caused to talke with the children of Ben Iamin, which were in the stonie rocke of Rimō and called vnto them frendly. So the children of Ben Iamin came agayne at the same tyme, and they gaue them women which they had of the women of Iabes in Gilead, and founde no mo after that maner. Then were the people sory for Ben Iamin, that  $\hat{y}$  LORDE had made a gappe in the trybes of Israel. And the Elders of the congregaciō sayde: What wil we do, that the remnaunt maye haue wyues also? for the wemē in Ben Iamin are destroyed, and they sayde: The inheritaunce of them of Ben Iamin that are escaped, must nedes remayne, that there be not a trybe destroyed out of Israel:  $\tau$  we can not geue them oure doughters to wiues. For the children of Israel haue sworne and sayde: Cursed be he that geueth a wyfe to the Ben Iamites.

And they sayde: Beholde there is a yearly feast of the LORDE at Silo, which lieth on the northsyde of the Gods house, and on the eastside of the strete as a mā goeth from Bethel vnto Sichein, and lieth on the south side of Libona. And they commaunded the children of Ben Iamin, ⁊ sayde: Go youre waye, and wayte in the vynyardes. And whan ye se that the doughters of Silo go forth by cōpanyes to claunse, get you out of the vynyardes, and euery man take him a wyfe of the doughters of Silo, and go youre waye in to the lōde of Ben Iamin. As for their fathers and brethren, whan they come to lawe with vs, we wyll saye vnto them: Be fauourable to them, for they haue not taken thē in battaill: but ye gaue thē not vnto them by time, and it is youre faute.

The children of Ben Iamin did so, and acordinge to their nombre toke them wyues from the daunse, whom they caught by violence, and wente their waye, ⁊ dwelt in their awne inheritaunce, and buylded cities and dwelt therein. The children of Israel also gat them vp from thence at the same time, euery one to his trybe and to his kinred, and departed thēce, euery man to his awne inheritaunce. * At ŷ time was there no kyng in Israel, and euery man dyd ŷ thinge ŷ was right in his awne eies.

Chap. IIII.

Boos marieth Ruth, which beareth him Obed Dauids graundfather.

The first Chapter.

IN ŷ tyme whan the Iudges ruled, there was a derth in the londe. And there wente a mā from Bethleē Iuda to take his journey in to the londe of the Moabites with his wife and two sonnes, which man was called Eli Melech, and his wife Naemi, ⁊ his two sonnes, the one Mahelon, and the other Chilion: these were Ephrates of Bethleem Iuda. And whan they came in to the londe of ŷ Moabites, they dwelt there. And Eli Melech Naemis huszbande dyed, ⁊ she was left behinde with hir two sonnes, which toke Moabitish wyues: the one was called Arpa, the other Ruth. And whan they had dwelt there ten yere, they dyed both, Mahelon and Chilion, so that the woman remainyd desolate of both hir sonnes and hir huszbande.

Then gat she her vp with both hir sonnes wyues, ⁊ wente agayne out of the lōde of ŷ Moabites (for she had herde in the londe of

B the Moabites, ŷ the LORDE had visited his people π geuen them bred) π so she departed from ŷ place where she was, π both hir sonnes wyues with her. And as they wēte by the waye to come agayne in to the londe of Iuda, she sayde vnto both hir sonnes wyues: Go youre waye, π turne backe ether of you to hir mothers house: the LORDE shewe mercy vpon you, as ye haue done on thē ŷ are deed π on me. The LORDE graunte you, ŷ ye maie fynde rest ether of you in hir huszbādes house (whom ye shal get) and she kyssed them.

Then lift they vp their voyce, and wepte, π sayde vnto her: We wil go with the vnto thy people. But Naemi sayde: Turne agayne my daughters, why wolde ye go with me? How can I haue children eny more in my body, to be youre huszbādes? Turne agayne my daughters, and go youre waye, for I am now to olde to take an huszbande.

C And though I shulde saye: I hope this night to take an huszbande π to brynge forth children, yet coulde ye not tary till they were growne vp: for ye shulde be to olde, so that ye coulde haue no huszbādes. No my daughters, therefore am I sory for you, for ŷ hāde of the LORDE is gone forth ouer me.

Then lifte they vp their voyce, and wepte yet more, and Arpa kyssed hir mother in lawe (and turned backe agayne) but Ruth abode styll by her. Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, thy syster in lawe is turned backe vnto hir people and to hir god, turne thou agayne also after thy sister in lawe. Ruth answered: Speake not to me therof, that I shulde forsake the, and turne backe from the: whither so euer thou goest, thither wil I go also: and loke where thou abydest, there wil I abide also: Thy people is my people, π thy God is my God. Loke where thou diest, there wil I dye, and euen there wil I also be buried. The LORDE do this and that vnto me, death onely shal departe vs.

D Now whan she sawe, that she was stedfastly mynded to go with her, she spake nomore to her therof. So they wente on both together, till they came vnto Bethleem. And whan they were come in to Bethleem, the whole cite was moued ouer them, and sayde: Is not this Naemi? Neuerthelesse she sayde vnto them: call me not Naemi, but Mara: for the Allmightie hath made me very sory. I departed full, but the LORDE hath brought me home agayne emptye. Why call ye me then Naemi? whā the LORDE hath brought me lowe, and the Allmightie hath made me sory?

It was aboute the tyme of the begynninge of the barlye haruest, whan Naemi and hir sonnes wife Ruth ŷ Moabitisse, came agayne from the londe of the Moabites vnto Bethleem. There was a kinsman also of ŷ kynred of Eli Melech Naemis huszbande, whose name was Boos, which was an honest man.

The ij. Chapter.

A ND Ruth the Moabitisse saide vnto A Naemi: Let me go in to ŷ felde, π gather eares of come, after him, in whose sight I shal finde fauoure. She sayde vnto her: Go thy waie my daughter. She wēte on, π came π gathered after ŷ reapers in ŷ field. And it fortunēd that the same felde was the inheritaunce of Boos, which was of the kynred of Elimelech, and beholde, Boos came from Bethleem, and sayde vnto the reapers: The LORDE be with you. They answered: The LORDE blesse the. And Boos sayde vnto his yongman which had the ouersight of ŷ reapers: Whose damsell is this? The yonge man that was set ouer ŷ reapers, answered and sayde: It is the damsell the Moabitisse, which came agayne with Naemi from the londe of the Moabites. And she sayde: Let me plucke vp and gather (B I prae the) betwene the sheues after the reapers: and thus is she come, and hath stonde here euer sence the mornynge, and within a litle whyle she wolde haue bene gone home agayne.

Then sayde Boos vnto Ruth: Hearest thou my daughter? Thou shalt not come vpon another mans londe to gather, and go not awaye from hence, but tary with my dāsel, and loke where they reape in ŷ felde, go thou after them: for I haue cōmaunded my seruantes that no man touch the. And yf thou be a thyrst, go thy waye to the vessell π drynke, where my seruantes drawe. Then fell she downe vpon hir face, and bowed hir self downe to the earth, and sayde vnto him: How haue I founde this fauoure in thy sighte, that thou woldest knowe me, which am yet a stranger?

Boos answered and sayde vnto her: It is tolde me altogether, what thou hast done vnto thy mother in lawe after thy huszbādes death. C how that thou hast left thy father and thy mother, and thy natie cowntre, and art come to a people, whom thou hast not knowne afore. The LORDE recompence the thy doinge, and thy rewarde be perfecte with the LORDE God of Israel, vnto whom thou art come to put thy trust vnder his wynges. She sayde: let me fynde fauoure (syr) before thine eyes, for thou hast comforted me, and spoken frendly vnto thy handmayde, where as I am not yet like one of thy handmaydes.

Boos sayde vnto her: Whan it is eatinge tyme, come hither, and eate of the bred, and dyppe thy morsell in the vyneger. And she sat hir downe besyde the reapers. And he set parched corne before her, and she ate, & was satisfied, and lefte ouer. And whā she rose to gather, Boos commaunded his seruantes, and sayde: Let her gather betwene the sheues also, and do her no dishonestye: and cast of the sheues vnto her, and let it lye that she maye gather it vp, and se that noman reprove her for it.

So she gathered in the felde vntyll euen and she shooked out what she had gathered, and it was almost an Epha of barley: and she toke it vp, and came in to the cite, and shewed hir mother in lawe what she had gathered. She toke forth also, and gaue her of that which was left, wherof she was satisfied. The sayde hir mother in lawe vnto her: Blessinge haue the man that hath knowne the, where thou hast gathered and laboured this daye.

She tolde hir mother in lawe by whom she had laboured, and sayde: The mans name, by whom I haue wroughte to daye, is Boos. Naemi sayde vnto hir daughter in lawe: The blessinge of the LORDE haue he, for he hath not lefte of to be mercifull vnto the luyunge * and to the deed. And Naemi sayde vnto her: The same man belongeth vnto vs, and is oure nye kynsman. Ruth the Moabitisse saide: He saide morouer vnto me: Thou shalt resorte vnto my seruantes, tyll they haue made an ende of all my haruest. Naemi sayde vnto Ruth hir daughter in lawe: It is better my daughter, that thou go forth with his damsels, lest eny man withstode the in another felde. Thus she kepte herselfe with Boos damsels, so that she gathered vntill the barley haruest and the wheate haruest was out, and came againe to hir mother in lawe.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Naemi hir mother in lawe sayde vnto her: My daughter, I wyll prouyde rest for the, that thou maiest prospere. Boos oure kynsman, by whose damsels thou hast bene, casteth vp barley now this night in his barne. Bathe thyselfe therfore, and moffell the, and put on thy clothes, and go downe vnto the barne, so ŷ nomā knowe the, tyll they haue all eaten and dronken.

Whan he layeth him downe then to sleape, mark ŷ place where he lyeth downe, and come thou, and take vp the couerynge at his fete, and laye the downe, so shall he tell the what thou shalt do. She sayde vnto her: what so euer thou saiest vnto me, I wil do it.

She wente downe to the barne, & dyd all as hir mother in lawe had comaunded her. And whā Boos had eatē & dronkē, his hert was mery, & he came and layed him downe behynde a heape of sheues. And she came secretly, and toke vp the coueringe at his fete, and layed hir downe. Now whā it was midnight, the man was afrayed, and groped aboute him, and beholde, a woman laye at his fete. And he sayde: Who art thou? She answered: I am Ruth thy handmayden, sprede thy wynges ouer thy hādmayden: for thou art the nexte kynsman.

He sayde: The LORDES blessinge haue thou my daughter. Thou hast done a better mercy here after then before, ŷ thou art not gone after yonge men, nether riche ner poore. Feare not now my daughter: All ŷ thou hast sayde, will I do for the: for all the cite of my people knoweth, ŷ thou art a vertuous womā. Trueth it is now, ŷ I am a nye kynsmā, but there is one nyer then I. Tarye thou all-nighte. Tomorrow yf he take the, well: yf he like not to take ŷ, then wil I take ŷ my selfe, as truly as ŷ LORDE lyneth. Slepe thou tyll ŷ mornynge. And she slepte at his fete vntyll ŷ morow. And she rose vp or euer one coulede knowe another. And he thoughte thus: That no mā knowe now ŷ there hath come a woman in to the barne, and he sayde: Reach me the cloke ŷ thou hast on the, & holde it forth. And she helde it forth. And he meet her sixe measures of barley, and layed it vpon her, & she wente in to the cite, & came to hir mother in lawe, which sayde:

+ Some reade: Anoynte the.

How is it with the my daughter? And she tolde her all  $\hat{y}$  the mā had done vnto her,  $\tau$  sayde: These sixe measures of barley gaue he me, for he sayde: Thou shalt not come emptye vnto thy mother in lawe. She sayde: Abyde my daughter, tyll thou se what  $\hat{y}$  matter wil growe to: for the man wilt not ceasse, tyll he brynge it to an ende this daye.

The iij. Chapter.

BOOS wente vp to  $\hat{y}$  gate, and sat him downe there:  $\tau$  beholde, whan  $\hat{y}$  nye kynsman wente by, Boos spake vnto him,  $\tau$  sayde: Come  $\tau$  syt the downe here (and called him by his name.) And he came  $\tau$  sat him downe,  $\tau$  he toke ten men of the Elders of  $\hat{y}$  cite,  $\tau$  sayde: Syt you downe here. And they sat thē downe. Thē sayde he to the nye kynsman: Naemi which is come againe frō the lōde of the Moabites \* offreth to sell  $\hat{y}$  pece of londe,  $\hat{y}$  was oure brothers Eli Melech, therefore thoughte I to shewe it before thine eares,  $\tau$  to tell the: Yf thou wilt redeme it, then bye it before the citesyns  $\tau$  before the Elders of my people: but yf thou wylt not redeme it, then tell me,  $\hat{y}$  I maie knowe: for there is no nye kynsmā excepte thou, and I nexte after the.

He sayde: I wil redeme it. Boos saide: In the daye  $\hat{y}$  thou byest the lōde out of  $\hat{y}$  hande of Naemi, thou must take Ruth also the Moabitisse the wife of the deed, that thou mayest rayse vp a name to  $\hat{y}$  deed in his inheritance. Thē sayde he: I can not redeme it, lest I happlye destroye myne awne enheritaunce. Redeme thou  $\hat{y}$  I shulde redeme, for I can not redeme it. But this was an olde custome in Israel concernynge the redemyng  $\tau$  chaūginge,  $\hat{y}$  all matters mighte be stable, the one put of his shue,  $\tau$  gaue it vnto  $\hat{y}$  other:  $\hat{y}$  was the testimony in Israel.

And the nye kynsman sayde vnto Boos: Bye thou it,  $\tau$  he put of his shue. And Boos sayde vnto the Elders and to all the people: Ye are witnesses this daie,  $\hat{y}$  I haue boughte out of the hande of Naemi, all that belonged to Eli Melech, and all that was Chilions and Mahelons: And Ruth the Moabitisse Mahelons wife, take I to wife,  $\tau$  that I maye rayse vp a name vnto  $\hat{y}$  deed in his inheritance, and that his name be not roted out from amonge his brethren, and out of the gate of his place: Of this are ye witnesses. And all the people that was in the gate with the Elders, saide: We are witnesses. The LORDE make the woman that cometh in to thy house, as Rachel and Lea ( $\tau$  which both haue buylded vp the house of Israel) that she maye be an ensample of vertue in Ephrata, and haue an honorable name in Bethleem. And thy house be as  $\hat{y}$  house of Phares ( $\hat{y}$  whō Thamar bare vnto Iuda) thorow the sede, that the LORDE shall geue the of this damsell.

So Boos toke Ruth, and she became his wife. And whan he laye with her, the LORDE graunted her  $\hat{y}$  she conceaued, and bare a sonne. Thē sayde the women vnto Naemi: Praisey be the LORDE, which hath not suffred a kynsman to ceasse from the at this tyme, that his name maye contynue in Israel: he shal restore thy life agayne, and prouyde for thine age. For thy sonnes wife which hath loued the, hath borne him that is better vnto the, then seuen sonnes.

And Naemi toke the childe, and layde it vpon hir lappe, and became the nurse of it, and hir neighbours gaue him a name  $\tau$  sayde: There is a childe borne vnto Naemi, and they called his name Obed. The same is the father of Isai, which is  $\hat{y}$  father of Dauid.

This is  $\hat{y}$  generaciou of Phares. ¶ Phares begat Hesrom. Hesrom begat Aram. Aram begat Aminadab. Aminadab begatt Naasson. Naasson begat Salmon. Salmon begat Boos. Boos begat Obed. Obed begat Isai. Isai begat Dauid.

The first Chapter. c

2 THERE was a man of Ramathaim Sophim of mount Ephraim, * whose name was Elcana † some of Ieroham, ‡ sonne of Elihu, § sonne of Tohu, ¶ sonne of Zuph, † was an Ephrate. And he had two wyues, § one was called Anna, § other Peninna. As for Peninna, she had children, but Anna had no childrē. And § same man wēte vp frō his cite † at his tyme, to worshippe and to offer vnto the LORDE Zebaoth at Silo. There were the prestes of the LORDE Ophni and Phineas, the two sonnes of Eli. Now when it came vpon a daye that Elcana offred, he gaue partes vnto his wife Peninna, and to all his sonnes and daughters. But vnto Anna he gaue one deale heuely, for he loued Anna. Neuertheles the LORDE had closed hir wombe, & hir aduersary cast her in the tethe with hir vnfrutefulnes, because the LORDE had closed hir wombe: thus dyd she euery yere, when they wente vp to the house of the LORDE, and thus she prouoked her. So she wepte, and ate nothinge. But Elcana hir huszbande sayde vnto her: Wherfore wepest thou? and why eatest thou not? And wherfore is thine hert so greued? Am not I better vnto the then ten sonnes?

Then stode Anna vp, when she had eaten and drunken at Silo. But Eli the prest sat vpon a stole by the poste of the temple of the LORDE. And she was full of heuyenes in hir herte, and prayed vnto the LORDE, and wepte, and vowed a vowe, and sayde: O LORDE Zebaoth, yf thou wilt loke vpon the aduersite of thy handmayden, and thynke vpon me, and not forget thy handmayden, and wilt geue thy handmayden a sonne, I wil geue him vnto the LORDE all his life longe, * and there shal no rasoure come vpon his heade.

And whā she had prayed longe before † LORDE, Eli toke hede to hir mouth, for Anna spake in hir hert, hir lippes onely moued, but hir voyce was not herde. Then thoughte Eli she had bene drunken, and sayde vnto her: How longe wilt thou be drunken? Let come from the the wyne that thou hast by the. Neuertheles Anna answered and sayde: No my lorde, I am a soroufull woman, wyne and stronge drynke haue I not drunken † but haue poured out my hert before † LORDE. Counte not thy handmayden a doughter of Belial: for out of my meuy thoughte and sorow haue I spoken hitherto.

C Eli answered her, and sayde: Go thy waye in peace, the God of Israel shal graunte † thy peticion that thou hast desyred of him. She sayde: Let thy handmayden fynde fauoure in thy sighte. So the woman wente hir waye and ate, and loked nomore so soroufully: and on † morow they gat them vp by tymes. And whan they had worshipped before † LORDE, they returned, and came home vnto Ramatha.

And Elcana laye with Anna his wife, and the LORDE remembered her. And after certayne dayes, she cōceaued and bare a sonne, and called his name Samuel, for I haue desyred him (sayde she) of the LORDE. And whan the man Elcana wente vp with all his houszholde to offre sacrifice and his vowe vnto the LORDE at soch tyme as † custome was, Anna wente not vp, but sayde vnto hir huszbande: (I wil not go vp) tyll † childe be weened: then will I brynge him, that he maye appeare before the LORDE, and cōtynue there † for euer.

D Elcana hir huszbande sayde vnto her: Thā do as thou thynekst best, tary tyll thou haue weened him: but the LORDE perfourme that he hath spoken. So the woman abode, and gaue hir sonne sucke, tyll she weened him. And whan she had weened him, she broughte him vp with her, with thre bullockes, with an Ephī of fyne floure, and a bottell of wyne, and broughte him in to † house of the LORDE at Silo.

Neuertheles the childe was yet but yonge.

And they slewe a bullocke, and broughte the childe vnto Eli. And she sayde: O my lorde, as truly as thy soule lyueth my lorde, I am the woman that stode here by †, and made intercession vnto the LORDE, whan I prayed for this childe. Now hath † LORDE graunted me my peticion, which I desyred of him, therefore haue I genen him ouer vnto the LORDE, as longe as he is lent vnto the LORDE. And they worshipped † LORDE there.

The ij. Chapter.

AND Anna prayed, and sayde: My hert reioyseth in the LORDE, † my horne is exalted in the LORDE.

My mouth is opened wyde vpo myne enemies, for I am glad of thy saluacion.

There is no man holy as the LORDE, for without the is nothinge, and there is no cōforte like vnto oure God.

Let go youre greate boostinge of hie thynges, let go out of youre mouth that olde byworde: for the LORDE is a God † knoweth all thinges, † he hath set all workes in order.

The bowe of the mightie is broken, and the weake are gyrded aboute with strength.

They that were fylled afore, are solde for bred: and they that were hongrie, are satisfied: vntyll the baren bare seuen, and tyll she that had many childrē, was become weake.

† The LORDE slayeth, and geueth life: he ledeth vnto hell, and bryngeth out agayne.

The LORDE maketh poore and maketh riche: He bryngeth lowe and exalteth.

¶ He taketh vp the neady out of the dust, and lifeth vp † poore out of the myre, that he maye set them amonge the prynces, and to let them inheret the seate of honoure: for the foundacions and corners of the worlde are the LORDES, and he hath set the compase of the earth thereon.

He shall preserue the fete of his sayntes, but † vngodly shal be put to sylce in darrenesse. ¶ For there is no mā that can do oughte of his owne power.

The LORDES enemies shal be put in feare before him, he shal thöder vpo thē in heauē.

The LORDE shall iudge the endes of the worlde, † shal geue strēth vnto his kynge, † shal exalte the horne of his anoynted.

Elcana wente his waye to Ramath vnto his house. And the childe became the LORDES mynister before Eli the prest. But Elis sonnes were the childre of Behai, and knewe not the LORDE, ner the dutye of the prestes vnto the people: but whan eny man wolde offre oughte, the prestes boye came, whyle the flesh was seethinge, and had a thre forked fleshoke in his hande, and thrust it in to the cauldron, or ketell, or panne, or pot: and loke what he drue forth with the fleshoke, that toke the prest therof. Thus dyd they vnto all Israel, which came thither vnto Silo.

Like wyse, or euer they burned the fatt, the prestes lad came, and sayde vnto him that broughte the offerynge: Geue me the flesh, that I maye roste it for the prest, for he wyl receaue no sodden flesh of  $\frac{1}{2}$ , but rawe. Yf eny man sayde then vnto him: Let the fat burne as it oughte to do this daye, and afterwarde take what thine hert desyreth, then sayde he vnto him: Thou shalt geue it me euen now: yf no, I wyl take it from the by violēce. Therefore was the synne of  $\frac{1}{2}$  childre very greate before the LORDE, for  $\frac{1}{2}$  people spake euell of  $\frac{1}{2}$  meatofferynge of  $\frac{1}{2}$  LORDE. But Samuel was a mynister before the LORDE, and the childe was gyrded with an ouer body cote of linnen. His mother also made him a litle cote of sylke, and broughte it vp vnto him at cōuenient tymes, whā she wente vp with hir husbande to offer  $\frac{1}{2}$  offerynge in due season.

And Eli blessed Elcana  $\pi$  his wife, and sayde: The LORDE geue the sede of this woman, for this good that thou hast lent vnto the LORDE. And they wēte vnto their place. And the LORDE vysited Anna, so that she cōceated and bare thre sonnes and two daughters: but the childe Samuel grewe vp with the LORDE.

As for Eli, he was very olde, and herde of all that his sonnes dyd vnto all Israel, and how they laye with the women that serued God before the dore of the tabernacle of witness, and he sayde vnto them: wherfore do ye this? For I heare of youre euell conuersacion of all this people. Not so my childre, this is no good reporte that I heare, ye cause the people of the LORDE to offende. \*Yf eny mā synne agaynst a man, the iudge cā redresse it. But yf eny mā synne agaynst  $\frac{1}{2}$  LORDE, who can redresse it? Neuertheles they herkened not vnto the voyce of their father, for the LORDES wyll was to slaye them. But the childe Samuel wente and grewe vp,  $\pi$  was accepted of the LORDE  $\pi$  of mē.

There came a man of God to Eli, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I shewed my selfe vnto thy fathers house, whan they were yet in Egipte vnder  $\frac{1}{2}$  house of Pharaο, and chose him there vnto my selfe before all the trybes of Israel, for the presthode, that he shulde offer vpon myne altare, and burne incense, and weere the ouerbody cote before me,  $\pi$  vnto thy fathers house I gaue all the offerings of the children of Israel. Why layest thou thy selfe then agaynst my sacrifices and meatofferings, which I commaunded (to offer) in the habitation: and thou honourest thy sonnes more then me, that ye mighte fede youre selues with the firstlinges of all the meatofferings of my people of Israel?

Therefore sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue spoken, that thy house and thy fathers house shulde walke before me for euer. But now sayeth the LORDE: That be farre frome. But who so euer honoureth me, him wil I honoure also: as for those  $\frac{1}{2}$  despyse me, they shal not be regarded. Beholde,  $\pi$  the tyme shal come, that I wyl breake thyne arme in two, and the arme of thy fathers house, so that there shal no oldeman be in thy house. And thou shalt se thine aduersaries in the habitation, in all the good of Israel, and there shal nener be olde man in thy fathers house. Yet wyl I not rote out euery man of the fro myne altare, but  $\frac{1}{2}$  thyne eyes maye be consumed,  $\pi$  that thy soule maye be sory:  $\pi$  a greate multitude of thy house shal dye, whan they are come to be men.

And this shalbe a token vnto the, that shal come vpon thy two sonnes Ophai and Phineas: "They shall both dye in one daye. ¶ But vnto my selfe I wyl rayse vp a faithfull prest, which shal do acordinge as it is in my hert  $\pi$  in my soule: vnto him wyl I buylde a sure house, that he maye allwaye walke before myne anoynted. And who so euer remayneth of thy house, shall come and worships him for a syluer peny and for a pece of bred, and shall saye: I praye the leaue me to one prestes parte, that I maye eate a morsell of bred.

The iij. Chapter.

AND whan the childe Samuel mynistred vnto the LORDE vnder Eli, the worde of  $\gamma$  LORDE was deare at the same tyme, nether was there eny sure  $\tau$  manifest vision. And it fortunated at the same tyme, that Eli laye in his place, \*and his eyes beganne to be dymme, so that he coulde not se. And Samuel had layed him downe in  $\gamma$  temple of the LORDE (where the Arke of God was) before  $\gamma$  lampe of God was put out. And the LORDE called Samuel. He answered: Beholde, here am I. And he ranne vnto Eli,  $\tau$  sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. But he saide: I haue not called the, go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. And he wente his waye, and layed him downe to slepe.

B The LORDE called againe: Samuel. And Samuel arose,  $\tau$  wente vnto Eli,  $\tau$  sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Neuertheles he sayde: My sonne, I haue not called the. Go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. As for Samuel, he knewe not the LORDE as yet,  $\tau$  the worde of  $\gamma$  LORDE was not yet shewed vnto him. And  $\gamma$  LORDE called Samuel  $\gamma$  thirde tyme. And he arose,  $\tau$  wente vnto Eli,  $\tau$  sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Then perceaued Eli  $\gamma$  the LORDE called  $\gamma$  childe,  $\tau$  he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye agayne,  $\tau$  laye the downe to slepe: and yf the LORDE call the eny more, then saye: Speake LORDE, for thy seruauent heareth. Samuel wete his waye, and layed him downe in his place. Thē came  $\gamma$  LORDE,  $\tau$  stode, and called like as afore: Samuel, Samuel. And Samuel sayde: Speake (LORDE) for thy seruauent heareth. And the LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Beholde, I do a thinge in Israel,  $\gamma$  who so euer shall heare it, both his eares shal glowe. In  $\gamma$  daie will I rayse vp vpon Eli \* all  $\gamma$  I haue spokē cōcernynge his house. I will take it in hande,  $\tau$  perfourme it: for I haue tolde him,  $\gamma$  I wilbe ludge ouer his house for euer, because of the wickednes,  $\gamma$  he knewe how shamefully his childrē behaued thē selues, and hath not once loked sowerly therto. Therefore haue I sworne vnto  $\gamma$  house of Eli,  $\gamma$  this wickednes of  $\gamma$  house of Eli shall not be recoyled nether with sacrifice ner with meatoffringe for euer.

And Samuel laye vnto  $\gamma$  morow,  $\tau$  opened the dores of the house of the LORDE.

But Samuel was afraied to tell the vysyon vnto Eli. Then Eli called him  $\tau$  sayde: Samuel my sonne. He answered: Beholde, here am I. He sayde: What is  $\gamma$  worde  $\gamma$  the LORDE hath spokē vnto the? hyde it not fro me. God do this  $\tau$  that vnto  $\gamma$ , yf thou hyde oughte fro me, of all that he hath talked with the. Then Samuel tolde him all-together,  $\tau$  hyd nothinge from him. He sayde: It is the LORDE, let him do what pleaseth him.

Samuel grewe vp,  $\tau$  the LORDE was with him,  $\tau$  there fell none of all his wordes vpō the earth. And all Israel frō Dan vnto Bersaba, knewe  $\gamma$  Samuel was faithfull to be a prophet of the LORDE. And the LORDE appeared agayne at Silo: for the LORDE shewed him selfe vnto Samuel at Silo, thorow the worde of the LORDE.

The iij. Chapter.

AND all Israel spake of Samuel. And Israel wente forth to the battayll against the Philistynes,  $\tau$  pitched besyde the † Helpe stone: As for the Philistynes, they pitched at Aphek, and prepared them selues agaynst Israel. And whan the battayll beganne, the hoost was deuyded, so that Israel was smyttē before the enemies,  $\tau$  in the edge in the felde they slewe aboute a foure thousande men. And whan the people came in to the hoost, the Elders of Israel sayde: Wherefore hath the LORDE caused vs to be smytten this daie before the Philistynes? Let vs take vnto vs the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt from Silo,  $\tau$  let it come amōge vs, that it maye helpe vs from the hande of oure enemies. And the people sent vnto Silo,  $\tau$  caused to fet thēce the Arke of  $\gamma$  couenaunt of the LORDE Zebaoth, that syteth vpon the Cherubins. And with the Arke of the couenaunt of God there were the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas.

And whan the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the hoost, all Israel shouted with a greate shoute, so that the earth sounded withall. But whan the Philistynes herde  $\gamma$  noyse of  $\gamma$  shoute, they sayde: what noyse is this of soch greate shoutinge in the tentes of the Hebrues? And whan they per-ceased y the Arke of the LORDE was come in to the hoost, they were afrayed ⁊ sayde: God is come in to the hoost. And they sayde morouer: Wo vnto vs, for it hath not bene thus afore tyme. Wo vnto vs. Who wil delyuere vs frō the hande of these hye goddes? These are the goddes that smote Egipte with all maner of plagis in the wyldernes. Be stronge now and manly ye Philistynes, that ye serue not the Hebrues \* as they haue serued you. Be manly and fighte.

Then foughte the Philistynes, ⁊ Israel was smytten, ⁊ euery one fled vnto his tēte, ⁊ there was a very greate slaughter, so that there fell of Israel thirte thousande fotemē, ⁊ the Arke of God was takē, ⁊ the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas dyed.

Then rāne there one of Ben Iamin out of the fore fronte of the battayl, ⁊ came vnto Silo the same daye, ⁊ had his clothes rente, and had earth vpō his heade. And whan he came in, Heli sat vpon the seate, that he mighte lōke towards the waye: for his herte was fearfull aboute y Arke of God. And whan the man came in to the cite, he tolde it forth: and all the cite cried. And whan Eli herde y noyse of the cryēge, he axed: What noyse of busynes is this? The man came haistely, and tolde Eli. (As for Eli, he was fourescore and eightene yeare olde, ⁊ his eyes were dymme, so that he coulde not se.) The man sayde vnto Eli: I come and am fled this daye out of the hoost. He sayde: How is it my sonne?

Then answered the tydinge bringer, ⁊ sayde: Israel is fled before the Philistynes, and a greate slaughter hath bene amonge the people, ⁊ thy two sonnes Ophni ⁊ Phineas are deed, yee ⁊ the Arke of God is takē awaye. Whan he had made mencion of the Arke of God, he fell downe backward from the seate by the gate, and brake his neck, and dyed: for he was olde, ⁊ an heuy man. He iudged Israel fortie yeares. The wife of his sonne Phineas was with childe, ⁊ shulde shortly be delyuered, whan she herde the tydinges y the Arke of God was taken, and y hir brother in lawe and hir huszbāde were deed, she bowed hir selfe and trauayled: for hir payne came vpon her. And whan she was now at the poynte of death, the wemen that stode by her, sayde: Feare not, thou hast a yōge sonne.

But she gaue no answer, nether regarded it, and she called the childe Icabod, and sayde: The glory is gone from Israel, because the Arke of God was taken awaye, and hir brother in lawe and hir huszbande. And she sayde morouer: The glory is gone from Israel, for the Arke of God is takē awaye.

The b. Chapter.

AS for the Arke of God, the Philistynes A toke it and broughte it from the stone of helpe vnto Aszdod in to the house of Dagon, and set it besyde Dagon. And whan they of Aszdod rose vp early on the morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face vpon the earth, before the Arke of the LORDE. But they toke vp Dagon, and set him agayne in his place. Neuertheles whan they rose vp early on the nexte morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face agayne vpon the earth before the Arke of the LORDE: but his heade and both his hādes hewen of vpon the threszholde, so that the block laie there onely. Therefore the prestes of Dagon, and all they that go in to his house, treade not vpō the threszholde of Dagon at Aszdod vnto this daye.

But the hande of the LORDE was heuy B vpon them of Aszdod, and destroyed them, and smote Aszdod and all the borders therof in secrete places. Whan the men of Aszdod sawe that they were so plaged, they sayde: § Let not the Arke of the God of Israel tary with vs, for his hande is to harde vpō vs ⁊ vpon oure god Dagon. And they sent forth and gathered all the prynces of the Philistynes vnto them, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the God of Israel? Then answered they of Geth: Let the Arke of the God of Israel be borne aboute. And they caried the Arke of the God of Israel rounde aboute.

But whā they bare it aboute, there was a very greate rumoure in the cite thorow the hande of the LORDE, and smote the people of the cite, from the smallest vnto the greatest, and destroyed them in the secrete places. Then sent they the Arke of the LORDE vnto Ekron. But whā the Arke of the LORDE came vnto Ekron, they of Ekron cried: They haue caried the Arke of God aboute vnto me, to slaye me and my people.

Then sente they forth, and gathered all y D prynces of the Philistynes together, and sayde:

* Iud. 13. a. † 1 Re. 2. g.

‡ 1 Reg. 3. a. § Deut. 32. e.

Sende away the Arke of the God of Israel agayne vnto hir place, that it slaye not me ⁊ my people: for there is a very greate rumoure with the deed in all the cite, and the hande of God is there. And the people that dyed not, were smytten in secrete places, so that the noyse of the cite wete vp vnto heauen.

The bi. Chapter.

A THUS was the Arke of the LORDE in the londe of the Philistynes seven monethes. And the Philistynes called their prestes and soysayers, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the LORDE? Shewe vs, wher with shal we sende it vnto hir place? They sayde: Yf ye wyll sende away the Arke of the God of Israel, sende it not away emptye, but geue a trespase offeringe: so shal ye be made whole, and ye shal knowe, why his hande departeth not from you.

They sayde: What is the trespase offeringe that we shall geue him? They answered: Fyue hynder partes of golde, and fyue golden myce, acordinge to the nombre of the fyue prynces of ⁊ Philistynes. For there hath bene one maner of place vpon you all, and vpon youre prynces. Therefore must ye make youre hynder partes of one fasshion and youre myce, which haue destroyed youre londe, that ye maye geue the God of Israel the honoure: peradventure his hāde shal be the lighter vpon you and vpon youre God, and vpon youre londe. B Why harden ye youre hert, as the Egipcians and Pharaο hardened their hert? When he shewed him selfe vpon them* dyd not they let them departe to go their waye?

Go to now therefore, and make a new cart, and take two mylke kyne, vpon ⁊ which there neuer came yock, and yocke them to ⁊ cart, and let their calues tary behynde them at home: and take ye the Arke of the LORDE and laye it vpon the cart: and the Jewels of golde that ye geue him for a trespase offeringe put in a coffer beside it, ⁊ sende it awaye and let it go. And loke well: yf it go the waie of hir awne coaste Beth Semes, thē hath he done vs all this greate euell: Yf no, then shal ye knowe that his hande hath not touched vs, but ⁊ it is happened vnto vs by chaūce.

The men dyd so, and toke two yonge mylke kyne, and yocked them to a cart, and helde their calues at home, and layed the Arke of the LORDE vpon the cart, and the coffer with the golden myce, and with the ymages of their disease. And the kyne wente straight waye vnto Beth Semes vpon one hye strete, and wente on blearnyge, and turned nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte. And the prynces of the Philistynes wente after them vnto ⁊ coast of Beth Semes.

The Beth Samites were euen reapyngne downe their wheate haruest in the valley, and lyfte vp their eyes, and sawe the Arke, and reioysed to se it. The cart came in to the felde of Iosua the Beth Semite, and there it stode styll. And there was a greate stone, and they claued the tymber of the cart, and offred the kyne vnto the LORDE for a burntofferyngne.

But the Leuites toke downe the Arke of the LORDE, and the coffer that was by it, wherin the Jewels of golde were, and set thē vpon the greate stone. The men of Beth Semes offred burntofferynges, and other offeringes also vnto the LORDE the same daye. And whan the fyue prynces of the Philistynes had sene it, they departed agayne the same daye towarde Ekron.

These are the golden diseases, that the Philistynes offred for a trespase offeringe vnto the LORDE: Aszdod one, Gasa one: Ascalon one, Gath one, and Ekron one: and golden myce, acordinge to the nombre of all the cities of the Philistynes amonge the fyue prynces, from the walled cite vnto the vyllage, and vnto the greate playne felde, wher vpon they set the Arke of the LORDE (which was) vnto this daye vpon the felde of Iosua the Beth Semite.

And certaine of Beth Sames were slaine because they had sene ⁊ Arke of the LORDE, and he slewe fyfte thousande and seentye men of the people. Then mourned the people, because the LORDE had done so greate a slaughter in the people. And the men at Beth Semes sayde: Who maye stōde before the LORDE so holy a God? And to whō shal he go frō vs? And they sent messaungers to ⁊ inhabitants of Kiriath Iearim, saiege: The Philistynes haue brought the Arke of God agayne, come downe, ⁊ fetch it vp vnto you.

The biij. Chapter.

SO the men of Kiriath Iearim came downe, ⁊ fetched vp ⁊ Arke of ⁊ LORDE, ⁊ brought it in to  $\hat{y}$  house of \*Abinadab at Gibeā,  $\pi$  they consecrated Eleazar his sonne,  $\hat{y}$  he might kepe  $\hat{y}$  Arke. And fro  $\hat{y}$  daye that the Arke of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE abode at Kiriath Iearim,  $\hat{y}$  tyme extended forth so longe tyll it came to twentye yeares: and all the house of Israel wepte after the LORDE.

But Samuel sayde vnto all the house of Israel:  $\dagger$  Yf ye turne you withall youre hert vnto the LORDE, then put awaye from you the straunge goddes and Astaroth, and directe youre hert vnto the LORDE and  $\dagger$ serue him onely, so shall he deluyer you out of the hande of the Philistynes. Then the childrē of Israel put awaye Baalim and Astaroth from them, and serued the LORDE onely.

B Samuel saide: Gather all Israel together vnto Mispā, that I maye praye for you vnto the LORDE. And they came together vnto Mispā, and drue water,  $\pi$  poured it out before the LORDE, and fasted the same daye, and there they sayde: We haue synned vnto the LORDE. So Samuel iudged the children of Israel at Mispā.

But whan the Philistynes herde that  $\hat{y}$  children of Israel were come together vnto Mispā, the prynces of the Philistynes wēte vp against Israel. Whan  $\hat{y}$  childrē of Israel herde that, they were afrayed of  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes,  $\pi$  sayde vnto Samuel: Ceasse not to crye vnto the LORDE oure God for vs,  $\hat{y}$  he maie helpe vs out of the hande of  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes.  $\S$  Samuel toke a fat lambe,  $\pi$  offred an whole burntofferynge vnto the LORDE,  $\pi$  cried vnto the LORDE for Israel, and the LORDE herde him. And whyle Samuel was offerynge  $\hat{y}$  burnt sacrifice,  $\hat{y}$  Philistines came to fight agaynst Israel. But the LORDE thondred a thonder vpon the Philistynes the same daye  $\pi$  discōfyted thē, so  $\hat{y}$  they were smyttē before Israel. Thē wente  $\hat{y}$  men of Israel forth,  $\pi$  chaced  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes,  $\pi$  smote them till vnder Beth Car. Then toke Samuel a stone,  $\pi$  set it vp betwene Mispā  $\pi$  Sen,  $\pi$  called it  $\hat{y}$  Help stone,  $\pi$  sayde:  $\text{“Hither to hath the LORDE helped vs. Thus were the Philistynes brought downe,  $\pi$  came nomore within the border of Israel. And  $\hat{y}$  hāde of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE was against the Philistynes, as longe as Samuel lyued.”}$

D So Israel gat the cities agayne, that the Philistynes had conquered, fro Ekron vnto

Gath, with the borders therof, those did Israel rescue out of the hande of the Philistynes:  $\pi$  Israel had peace with the Amorites. Samuel iudged Israel as lōge as he liued,  $\pi$  wēte aboute euery yeare vnto Bethel  $\pi$  Gilgal  $\pi$  Mispā:  $\pi$  whā he had iudged Israel in all these places, he came agayne vnto Ramath for there was his house,  $\pi$  there he iudged Israel.  $\pi$  builded an altare there vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE.

The viij. Chapter.

BUT whan Samuel waxed olde, he set his sonnes to be iudges ouer Israel. His firstborne sonne was called Ioel  $\pi$  the secōde Abia,  $\pi$  they were iudges at Bersaba. Neuertheles his sonnes walked not in his wayes, but enclyned vnto couetousnes,  $\pi$   $\parallel$ toke giftes,  $\pi$  wraisted the lawe. Then all  $\hat{y}$  Elders in Israel gathered thē selues together,  $\pi$  came to Ramath vnto Samuel,  $\pi$  saide vnto him: Beholde, thou art waxen olde,  $\pi$  thy sonnes walke not in thy wayes.  $\S$  set a kynge now ouer vs therefore, to iudge vs, as all  $\hat{y}$  Heithē haue. Thē was Samuel displeased whā they sayde: Geue vs a kynge, to iudge vs. And Samuel prayed before the LORDE.

The LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Herken vnto the voice of the people in all  $\hat{y}$  they haue sayde vnto the.  $\ast\ast$  For they haue not refused the, but me,  $\hat{y}$  I shulde not be kinge ouer them. They do vnto the as they haue done euer, sence the daie  $\hat{y}$  I brought them out of the londe of Egipte vnto this daye, and haue forsaken me, and serued other goddes. Herkē now therefore vnto their voyce. Yet testifye vnto them, and shewe them  $\dagger$ the lawe of the kynge that shall raigne ouer them.

And Samuel tolde all the wordes of the LORDE vnto  $\hat{y}$  people, that requyred a kinge of him. This shal be the lawe of the kynge  $\hat{y}$  shal raigne ouer you:  $\dagger$  Your sonnes shall he take for his charettes, and for horsmen to runne before his charettes, and to be rulers  $\pi$  captaynes, to be plowmen to tyll his londe and to be reapers in his haruest, and to make his harnesses, and soch thinges as belonge to his charettes. As for youre daughters, he shall take thē, to be Apotecaries, cokes and bakers.  $\text{“Your best londe and vynyardes, and oyle-gardens shall he take, and geue vnto his seruantes: Of youre sedes also and viniardes”}$

shal he take the Tithes, ⁊ geue vnto his chāberlaynes and seruautes. And youre seruautes and youre maydes, and youre best yonge men, and youre asses shal he take, and do his busynes withall. Of youre flockes shal he take the Tithes, and ye shal be his seruautes. Whan ye shal crye then at the same tyme ouer youre kynge, whom ye haue chosen you, the LORDE shall not heare you at the same tyme. Neuerthelesse the people refused to heare the voyce of Samuel, and sayde: Not so, but there shall be a kynge ouer vs, ⁊ we maye be as all other Heithē, ⁊ oure kynge maie iudge vs, ⁊ go forth before vs, and gouerne oure warres. And Samuel sayde vnto the men of Israel: Go youre waye euery one vnto his cite.

The ix. Chapter.

THERE was a man of Ben Iamin named * Cis, the sonne of Abiel, the sonne of Zeor, the sonne of Bethorah, ⁊ sonne of Apiah, the sonne of a man of Iemini, a valeaunt man, which had a sonne named Saul, which was so goodly a yonge man, that there was not a goodlier amonge the children of Israel, higher by the heade then all the people. Cis the father of Saul had lost his asses, and he sayde vnto Saul his sonne: Take one of the children with the, get the vp, go thy waye, and seke the asses. And he weute his waye thorow mount Ephraim, and thorow the lode of Solisa, and founde them not. They wente thorow the lode of Saalim, ⁊ there they were not. They passed thorow ⁊ lode of Iemini, ⁊ fōūde thē not. But whā they came in to the londe of Zuph, Saul sayde vnto the childe that was with him: Come, let vs go home agayne, lest my father let go the asses, and take care for vs. He sayde: Beholde, here is an honorable man of God in this cite, all that he sayeth, commeth to passe. Let vs go thither now, peraduenture he maye shewe vs oure waye which we go. But Saul saide vnto his childe: Though we shulde go, what brynge we the man? For the bred is gone out of oure walet, and els haue we no gifte to brynge the man of God, what haue we? The childe answered agayne, and sayde: Beholde, I haue the fourth parte of a syluer Sycle by me, ⁊ same wyll we geue the man of God, that he maye shewe vs oure waye.

(Afore tyme in Israel, whan a man wente to axe counsell at the LORDE, he sayde: Come, let vs go to the Seer: for they that now are called prophetes, were called Seers afore tyme.) Saul sayde vnto his childe: Thou hast well spoken, come let vs go. And whan they wente vnto the cite where the man of God was, and came vp to the cite, they founde damsels which were gone forth to drawe water, vnto them they sayde: Is the Seer here? They answered them and sayde: Yee. Beholde, he is there, make haist, for he came in to the cite this daye, because the people haue a sacrifice to do to daye in the hye place. Whan ye come in the cite, ye shal fynde him, afore he go vp to the hye place for to eate: for the people wyll not eate tyll he come. For he shall blesse the offeringe, then shal they eate that are called. Therefore go youre waie vp, for euē now shal ye fynde him.

And whan they came vp to the cite, and were euen in the myddes of the cite, beholde, Samuel came forth in their waye, and wolde go vp to the hye place. († But the LORDE had opened Samuels eare the daye afore, or euer Saul came, and sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme wyll I sende a man vnto the out of the lode of Ben Iamin, him shalt thou anoynte to be pryncce ouer my people of Israel, that he maye delyuer my people from the hande of the Philistynes: for I haue loked vpon my people, and their crye is come before me.) Now whan Samuel behelde Saul, the LORDE answered him: lo, ⁊ is the man of whom I tolde the, that he shulde raigne ouer my people.

Then came Saul vnto Samuel vnder ⁊ gate, and sayde: Tell me (I praye the) where is the Seers house? Samuel answered Saul, and sayde: I am the Seer. Go vp before me vnto the hye place: for ye shall eate with me to daye, tomorrow wyll I lett the go, and all that is in thyne hert, wyll I tell the: and as for the Asses which were lost thre dayes ago, care not thou for them, for they are founde. And to whom shall belonge all that is pleasaunt in Israel? Shall it not belonge vnto the and to all thy fathers house? Saul answered: Am not I a sonne of Iemini, * and of the smallest trybe, and my kynred the leest amonge all the kynreds of y trybe of Ben Iamin? Why speakest thou so the vnto me? Samuel toke Saul & his childe & brought them in to the perler where they shulde eate, and satt them aboute those that were called, of whom there were aboute a thirtie men. And Samuel sayde vnto the coke: Geue me the porcion that I gaue the, and bad the kepe it by the. Then the coke toke vp a shulder, and bare it forth, and set it before Saul. And (Samuel) sayde: Beholde, this is left, laye it before the, and eate: for it was keppe for the agaynst this tyme, when I called the people. Thus Saul ate with Samuel the same daye.

And when they were gone downe from the hye place vnto the cite, he talked with Saul in the chamber. And they rose vp early on the morow. And when the mornynge sprynge arose, Samuel called Saul in the chamber, and sayde: Vp, y I maye sende the thy waye. And Saul gat him vp: & they both wete forth together, he and Samuel. And when they came downe to the ende of the cite, Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Speake vnto y childe, that he go on forth before vs, but stode thou styll now, that I maie shewe the what God hath sayde:

The x. Chapter.

THEN toke Samuel a glasse of oyle, and poured it vpō his heade, and kissed him, and sayde: Seist thou that the LORDE hath anoynted the, to be the prince ouer this enheritaunce? When thou goest now for me, thou shalt fynde two men besyde † Rachels graue in the coast of Ben Iamin at Zelzah, which shal saie vnto the: The asses are founde, whom thou wentest to seke: and beholde, thy father hath put the asses out of his mynde, and taketh thoughte for the, and sayeth: What shall I do for my sonne?

And when thou goest on forth from thence, thou shalt come to the Oke of Thabor, there shall three men fynde the, which go vp vnto God towarde Bethel: one beareth thre kiddes, another thre loaues of bred the thyrd a bottel with wyne: and they shall salute the, and geue the two loaues, which thou shalt take of their hande. After that shalt thou come to the hyl of God, § where the Philistynes watch is: and whā thou comest there in to the cite, there shall mete the a company of prophetes commynge downe from the hye place, and before them a Psaltery, and tabret, a pype and a harpe, and they them selues prophecience. And the sprete of the LORDE shall come vpon the, and thou shalt prophecye with them, and shalt be chaunged in to another man.

Whan these tokens now come vnto the, || then do what so euer commeth vnder thynne hande: for God is with the. Thou shalt go downe before me vnto Gilgall: Beholde, thither wyl I come downe vnto the, that thou mayest offre burntofferynge and deedofferynge. ¶ Seuen dayes shalt thou tarye till I come to the, and shewe the what thou shuldest do. And when he turned his shulder to go from Samuel, God chaunged him another hert, and all these tokēs came the same daye.

And when they came vnto the hill, beholde, there met him a company of prophetes ¶ and the sprete of God came vpon him, so that he prophecied amonge them. But whā they which knewe him before, sawe him that he prophecied with the prophetes, they sayde all amonge them selues: What is happened vnto the sonne of Cis? Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And one y was there, answered and sayde: Who is their father? ** Hereof came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And whā he had left of prophecience, he came vp to the hyl.

Sauls vnclē sayde vnto him and to his childe: Whither wente ye? They answered: To seke the asses. And when we sawe that they were awaye, we came vnto Samuel. Then sayde Sauls vnclē: Tell me, what sayde Samuel vnto you? Saul answered his vnclē: He tolde vs, y the asses were fōide. But of y kyngdome he tolde him nothinge what Samuel had sayde.

Samuel called the people together vnto the LORDE to Mispa, and spake vnto the children of Israel: Thus saieih y LORDE the God of Israel: I broughte Israel out of Egipte, and deliuered you from the hande of y Egipcians, and from the hande of all the kyngdomes that oppressed you. †† But now haue ye refused youre God, which hath helped

Now whan Samuel had brought forth all the trybes of Israel, the trybe of Ben Iamin was taken. And whan he had broughte forth the trybe of Ben Iamin with his kynreds, the kynred of Matri was takē, ⁊ Saul the sonne of Cis was takē. And they sought him, but they founde him not.

Then axed they further at the LORDE, whether he was for to come thither. The LORDE answered: Beholde, he hath hyd him selfe amonge ꝑ vessels. Then ranne they thither, and fetched him. And whan he stode amonge the people, he was hygher by the heade then all the people. And Samuel sayde vnto all the people: There se ye him whom the LORDE hath chosen, for in all the people there is none like him. Then gaue all the people a shoute, and sayde: *God saue the new kinge.

Samuel tolde the people all the lawe of the kyngdome, and wrote it in a boke, and layed it before the LORDE. And Samuel let all the people go, euery one to his awne house. And Saul wente home also vnto Gibea, and there wente with him one parte of the hoost, whose hertes God had touched. But the childre of Belial sayde: What shal this felowe helpe vs, ⁊ and despyed him, ⁊ broughte him no presente. But he made him as though he herde it not.

The xi. Chapter.

NAHAS ꝑ Ammonite wēte vp ⁊ layed sege vnto Iabes in Gilead. And all the men of Iabes sayde vnto Nahas: Be at one with vs, ⁊ we wyl serue the. But Nahas ꝑ Ammonite answered them: I wil make a couenant with you, of this condicion, that I maye thrust out all youre right eyes, and put you to shame amonge all Israel. Then sayde all the Elders of Iabes vnto him: Geue vs seuen dayes respyte, that we maye sende messengers in to all ꝑ coastes of Israel: Yf there be then no sauioire, we wyl go forth vnto the.

So the messangers came vnto Gibea of Saul, and spake this before the eares of the people. Then all ꝑ people lifte vp their voyce, and wepte. And beholde, Saul came after the oxen out of the felde, and sayde: What ayleth the people that they wepe? So they tolde him the eearande of the men of Iabes. § Then came the sprete of God vpon him, whan he had herde these wordes, and his wrath was sore moued, and he toke a couple of oxen, and hewed them in sunder, and sent them in to all the coastes of Israel by the messangers, sayenge: Who so euer goeth not forth after Saul and Samuel, his oxen shalbe thus dealte withall.

Then fell the feare of the LORDE vpon the people, so that they wente forth like as one man, ⁊ and they were tolde at Basek, and of the childre of Israel there were thre hundredre thousande men, and thirtie thousande of the children of Iuda. And they spake vnto the messangers that were come: Saye thus to the men of Iabes in Gilead: Tomorrow shal ye haue helpe, whan ꝑ Sonne is at the whotest. Whan ꝑ messangers came and tolde this to the men of Iabes, they were glad. And the men of Iabes sayde: Tomorrow wyl we come forth vnto you, that ye maye do vnto vs, what so euer it pleaseth you. And on ꝑ nexte morow Saul set the people in thre partes, and came in to the hoost aboute the mornyng watch, and smote the Ammonites tyll the daye was at the whotest. As for those ꝑ remayned, they were so scatred, that two of them abode not together.

Then sayde the people vnto Samuel: Where are they that sayde: *Shulde Saul raigne ouer vs? Delyuer vs here the men, that we maye put them to death. But Saul sayde: There shal noman dye this daye, for to daye hath the LORDE geuen health in Israel. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Come, let vs go vnto Gilgall, and renue the kyngdome there. Then wente all the people vnto Gilgall, and there they made Saul kinge before the LORDE at Gilgal, and offred deed-offerings before the LORDE. And Saul with all the men of Israel reioysed there greatly.

SAMUEL sayde vnto all Israel: Beholde, I haue herkened vnto youre voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, and haue made a kinge ouer you. And now lo, there goeth youre kyng before you. As for me, I am waxen olde and graye heered, and my somes are with you: and I haue gone before you fro my youth vp vnto this daye. Beholde, here am I: answere ye agaynst me before the LORDE and his anoynted, *yf I haue taken eny mans oxe or asse, yf I haue done eny man violence or wronge, If I haue oppressed eny mā, yf I haue receaued a gifte of eny mans hande, and kepte it secretly, I wil restore it you agayne.

They saide: Thou hast done vs nether violence ner wronge, nether oppressed, ner taken ought of eny mans hande. He sayde: The LORDE be witness agaynst you, and so be his anoynted this daye, that ye haue founde nothings in my hāde. They saide: Yee they shalbe witnesses. And Samuel sayde vnto the people: The LORDE which made Moses and Aaron, and broughte youre fathers out of the londe of Egipte (is here present.) Stōde forth now therfore, that I maye iudge you before the LORDE ouer the righteousnes of the LORDE, which he hath done for you and youre fathers.

†Whan Iacob was come in to Egipte, youre fathers cryed vnto the LORDE. †And he sent Moses and Aaron to brynge youre fathers out of Egipte, and to cause them for to dwell in this place.

§But whan they forgat the LORDE their God, he solde them vnder the power of Sisera, the captayne at Hazor ¶and vnder the power of the Philistynes ¶and vnder the power of the kinge of the Moabites, which foughte agaynst them. But they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned, in that we haue forsaken the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth. But now deliuer vs from the hande of oure enemies, and we wyl serue the. **Then the LORDE sent Ierubaal, †Bedan, †Iephthae, §§and Samuel, † deliuered you from youre enemies rounde aboute, and caused you to dwell safe.

¶But whan ye sawe that Nahas the kyng of the children of Ammon came agaynst you ¶ye sayde vnto me: Not thou, but a kyng shal raigne ouer vs, where as notwithstōdinge youre God was youre kyng. Now, there haue ye youre kyng, whō ye haue chosen and desyred: for lo, the LORDE hath set a kyng ouer you. Yf ye shal feare the LORDE now, and serue him, and hearken vnto his voice, and not be dishobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, then shall both ye and youre kyng that raigneth ouer you, folowe § LORDE youre God. But yf ye herken not vnto § voyce of the LORDE, but be dishobedient vnto his mouth, then shal the hande of the LORDE be agaynst you, and agaynst youre fathers.

Stonde forth now also, and beholde this greate thinge, that the LORDE shal do before youre eyes. Is not now the wheate harvest? Yet wyl I call vpō the LORDE, so that he shal cause it thonder and rayne, that ye shall knowe and se the greate euell, which ye haue done in the sight of the LORDE, in that ye haue desyred to haue a kyng.

And whan Samuel called vpon the LORDE, the LORDE caused it to thōder and raine the same daye.

Then all the people feared the LORDE greatly and Samuel, and they sayde all vnto Samuel: Praie thou vnto the LORDE thy God for thy seruantes, that we dye not: for beside oure synnes we haue done this euell also, that we haue desyred vnto vs a kyng. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Feare not, ye haue done all this euell in dede. Neuertheles departe not backe from the LORDE, but serue the LORDE with all youre hert, and go not asyde after vanite, for it profyteth you nothings, and can not deliuer you, in so moch as it is but a vayne thinge. ** For the LORDE shall not forsake his people because of his greate names sake: for the LORDE hath begonne to make you a people vnto him selfe. But God forbyd that I shulde synne so vnto the LORDE, to cease from prayenge for you, and from teachinge you the good † righteous waye. Feare ye the LORDE therfore, and serue him faithfully with all youre hert: for ye haue sene, how greate thinges he doth vnto you. But yf ye do wickedly, both ye † youre kyng shal perishe.

SAUL had bene kyng one yeaere, and whā he had raigned ouer Israel two yeaeres, he chose him thre thousande mō out of Israel: two thousande were with Saul at Michmas vpon the mount of Bethel, and one thousande with Ionathas at Gibeā of Ben Iamin. As for the other people, he let them go euery one vnto his tente. But Ionathas smote y Philistynes in their awne * watch, which was at Gibeā. That came to y Philistynes eares. And Saul caused to blowe the trompes in all the londe, ⁊ to saye: Let the Hebrues heare. And all Israel herde saye: Saul hath smytten the Philistynes watch, for Israel stanke before the Philistynes. And all the people cried after Saul vnto Gilgal.

Then the Philistynes gathered them selues together to fighte with Israel, thirtie thousande charettes, sixe thousande horsmen, and other people besyde, in nombre as the sonde by the See shore, and wente vp, and pitched at Michmas on the eastsyde of Bethauen. Whan the men of Israel sawe that mysfortune laye vpon the neckes of thē (for the people was come therto) they crope in to caues and dennes, in to rockes, and holes and welles. But the Hebrues wente ouer Iordane in to y lande of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul he was yet at Gilgal, and all the people were fayntharted after him. †Then taried he seuen dayes accordinge to the tyme apoynted of Samuel. And whan Samuel came not vnto Gilgal, the people were scatered abrode from him. Then sayde Saul: Brynge me hither a burntofferinge and deedofferings. And he offred a burntofferinge. But whan he had made an ende of the burntofferinge beholde, Samuel came. Then wente Saul forth to mete him, that he might salute him.

But Samuel sayde: What hast thou done? Saul answered: I sawe that the people was scatered abrode fro me, and thou camest not in due season: and the Philistynes were gathered together at Michmas. Then sayde I: Now shall the Philistynes come downe to me vnto Gilgal, and I haue not besought the face of the LORDE: ⁊ so I boldened my selfe, ⁊ offred a burntofferinge.

Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Thou hast done foolishly, and not kepte the commaundement of the LORDE thy God, which he commaunded the. For (yf thou haddest not done this) he had prospered thy kyngdome vpo Israel for euer: but now shall not thy kyngdome contynue. †The LORDE hath soughte him out a man after his owne hert: him hath the LORDE commaunded to be prynce ouer his people, for thou hast not kepte y the LORDE commaunded y. And Samuel arose, and wente vp from Gilgal vnto Gibeā Ben Iamin.

And Saul nombred the people that was founde with him, vpon a sixe hundreth men. Saul ⁊ his sonne Ionathas, and y people that was with them, taried at Gibeā Ben Iamin: but y Philistynes had pitched their tentes at Michmas. And out of the hoost of the Philistynes there wente thre bondes of men to destroye: one turned the waye towarde Ephraim in to the londe of Sual: another turned towarde the waye of Bethoron: the thirde turned towarde the waye, that reacheth to the valley of Zeboim vnto the wyldernes.

But there was not a smyth founde in all the lode of Israel: for y Philistynes thoughte: The Hebrues mighte happily make swerdes and speares. And all Israel were fayne to go downe to the Philistynes, whan eny man had a plowshare, a mattock, an axe, or a sythe to sharpe: and the edges of the plowshares, and mattocks, ⁊ forckes, and axes, were laboured, and the poyntes blont. Now whan the daye of the battayll came, there was nether swerde ner speare founde in the hande of all the people, that was with Saul and Ionathas: but for Saul and Ionathas his sonne there was somewhat founde. And y Philistynes watch wete out ouer by Michmas.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IT fortunat at y same tyme, y Ionathas sayde vnto his lad which was his wapen bearer: Come, let vs go ouer to the Philistynes watch y lyeth aboue, ⁊ he tolde not his father. Saul dwelt at y ende of Gibeā vnder a Pomgranate tre, which was in the suburbe. ⁊ And the people y were by him, were vpon a sixe hundreth men. And Ahia the sonne of Achitob the brother of Icabod, the sonne of Phineas y sonne of Eli y prest of the LORDE at Silo, wayre the ouerbody cote. But the people knewe not that Ionathas was gone.

Betwene the passages where Ionathas soughte to go ouer vnto the Phylistynes watch, there were two hye rockes, the one on the one syde, the other on the other: the one was called Bozez, the other Senne. And y one laye on the north syde towarde Michmas, and the other on the south syde towarde Gaba. And Ionathas sayde vnto his wapen bearer:

* 1 Re. 10. b. † 1 Re. 10. b.

† 1 Re. 16. c. § 1 Re. 13. d.

Come, let vs go ouer to ȝ watch of these vncircumcised, peradventure the LORDE shall worke with vs, * For it is no harde matter for the LORDE to helpe by many or by fewe. Then answered him his wapen bearer: Do all that is in thine hert, go on thy waie, beholde, I am with the, euen as thiue hert wyll.

¶ Ionathas sayde: Well than, Whan we are gone ouer to the men, and come within the sighte of them, yf they saye: stonde styll, tyll we come to you, then wyll we stonde styll in oure place, and not go vp to them. But yf they saye: Come vp to vs, we wyll go vp to them, thē hath the LORDE delyuered them in to oure hande, and this shalbe a token for vs. Now whan they came both in the sighte of the Philistynes watch, the Philistynes sayde: Se, † ȝ Hebrues are gone out of their holes, that they were crepte in to. And the men in the watch answered Ionathas and his wapē bearer, and sayde: Come vp to vs, and we wyll teach you what the matter is. Then sayde Ionathas to his weapen bearer. † Come vp after me, the LORDE hath delyuered them into Israels hande. And Ionathas clamme vp with handes and fete, and his wapen bearer after him. And Ionathas smote them downe before him, and his wapē bearer slewe behynde him, so that the first slaughter that Ionathas and his wapen bearer dyd, was vpō a twentye men, with in the length of halue an aker of londe, which a pare of oxen maye tyll in one daye.

¶ And there came a fearfulness and flight in the hoost vpon the felde, and amonge all the people of the watch: and vpon the † destroyers there came a fearfulness also and flight, so that the londe was in a rumoure, and † there came a flight thorow God. And Sauls watchmē at Gibea Bē Iamin sawe, that ȝ multitude gat them awaye, and ranne to and fro.

Saul sayde vnto the people that was with him: Tell and se which of vs is gone awaye. And whan they nombred, beholde, Ionathas † his wapen bearer was not there. Then saide Saul vnto Ahia: Brynge hither the Arke of God (for at that tyme was the Arke of God with the children of Israel.) And whyle Saul was yet speakynge to the prest, the multitude in the Philistynes hoost gat vp, ranne, and was greate. And Saul sayde vnto the prest:

Withdrowe thine hande. And Saul cried, and all the people that was with him, and came to the battayll. And beholde, ** euery mans swerde was agaynst another, and there was a very greate rumoure.

The Hebrues also that were with ȝ Philistynes afore, and had gone vp with them in the hoost on euery syde, ioyned them selues vnto Israel which were with Saul and Ionathas. And all the men of Israel which † had hyd thē selues vpon mount Ephraim, whan they herde that the Philistynes fled, folowed after them in the battayll. Thus ȝ LORDE helped Israel at that tyme, and ȝ battayll lasted vnto Bethauen.

And whan the men of Israel came forth, Saul charged all the people the same daye, and sayde: Cursed be euery man, which eateth bred vntyll euen, that I maye auenge me on myne enemies. Then all the people taisted no bred. And all the people of the londe came in to the wodd. But there laye hony vpon the felde: and whan the people came in to the wodd, beholde, the hony flowed, but no man put of it to his mouth with his hāde: for the people were afraid because of the ooth. As for Ionathas he had not herde, that his father had charged the people, and he put forth his staff that he had in his hande, and dyped the ende of it in ȝ hony combe, and turned his hande to his mouth, and his eyes were lighted.

Then answered one of the people, and sayde: Thy father hath charged the people, and sayde: Cursed be euery mā that eateth oughte this daye. Neuertheles the people were faynte. Then sayde Ionathas: My father hath troubled the londe: Se how lighte myne eyes are become, because I haue taisted a litle of this hony. Yf the people this daie had eatē of the spoyle of their enemies that they founde, the slaughter shulde haue bene greater agaynst the Philistynes. Yet smote they the Philistynes the same daye fro Michmas vnto Aialon, and the people were very weery.

And ȝ people turned to the spoyles, and toke shepe and oxen, and calues, and slewe them vpon the earth, † and ate them with the bloude. Then was it tolde Saul: Beholde, the people synne agaynst the LORDE, in that they eate bloude. He sayde: Ye haue done euell: roll vnto me now a greate stone. And Saul sayde morouer: Go abrode amonge the people, and saye vnto them, that euery one brynge me his ox and his shepe, and slaye them here, that ye maye eate, and not to synne agaynst the LORDE with eatynge of bloude. Then broughte all the people euery one his ox with his hāde the same nyghte, and slewe them there. And Saul buylded an altare vnto y LORDE. This is the first altare that he buylded vnto the LORDE.

And Saul sayde: Let vs go downe after the Philistynes, by nyghte, and spoyle them tyll it be cleare mornyng, that we let none escape. They answered: Do what so euer pleaseth the. But the prest sayde: Let vs go nye here vnto God. And Saul axed at God. Shal I go downe here after y Philistynes? ⁊ wilt thou deliuer thē in to Israels hande? Neuertheles he answered him not at that tyme.

f Then sayde Saul: Let all the armyes of the people come hither, and make search and se, in whom is this synne at this tyme. For as truly as God the Sauoure of Israel lyueth, ⁊ though it be in my sonne Ionathas, he shal dye. And no man answered him of all the people. And he sayde vnto all Israel: Be ye on the one syde, I ⁊ my sonne Ionathas wyl be on this syde. The people sayde vnto Saul: Do as it pleaseth the. And Saul sayde vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: Do thou that right is. Thē was Ionathas and Saul taken: but the people wente forth fre. Saul sayde: Cast the lot ouer me and my sonne Ionathas. So Ionathas was takē. And Saul sayde vnto Ionathas: Tell me, what hast thou done? Ionathas tolde him, ⁊ sayde: I taisted a litle honny with the staff that I had in my hande, and beholde, must I dye therefore? Thē sayde Saul: God do this and that vnto me, Ionathas thou must dye the death.

g But the people sayde vnto Saul: Shulde Ionathas dye, that hath done so greate health in Israel this nyght? God forbyd. * As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shal not one heer of his heade fall vpon y earth: for with God hath he wroughte at this tyme. So the people deliuered Ionathas, that he dyed not. Then wente Saul vp from the Philistynes: and the Philistynes wente vnto their place.

But whan Saul had cōquered the kyngdome

ouer Israel, he foughte against all his enemyes rounde aboute, against the Moabites, agaynst the childrē of Ammon, agaynst the Edomites, agaynst the kyng of Zoba, agaynst y Philistynes: and whither so euer he turned him, he gat y victory. And he made an hoost, and smote y + Amalechites, and deliuered Israel from the hande of all those that spoyled them.

Saul had these sonnes: Ionathas, Isui, and Malchisua. And these were y names of his two daughters: the firstborne Merob, ⁊ y yōgest Michol. And Sauls wife was called Ahinoam, the daughter of Ahimaas. And his chefe captaynes name was Abner, the sonne of Ner, Sauls vnclē. ⁊ Cis was y father of Saul. But Ner y father of Abner was the sonne of Abiel.

There was a mightie sore warre against the Philistynes, as lōge as Saul lyued. And where Saul save a man that was stronge and mete for y warre, he toke him to him.

The xv. Chapter.

SAMUEL sayde vnto Saul: y The LORDE a sent me to anoynte the for to be kyng ouer his people of Israel: heare now therefore the voyce of the wordes of the LORDE. Thus sayeth y LORDE Zebaoth: I haue remembered what Amalek dyd vnto Israel, || ⁊ how he layed wayte for him in y waye, whan he wente out of Egipte: Go thy waye now therefore, and smyte the Amalechites, ⁊ damne them with all that they haue, ⁊ spare him not: but slaye both man and woman, children ⁊ sucklynges, oxen ⁊ shepe, Camels and asses. Saul commaunded the people the same, and nombred them at Talaim, two hūdreth thousande fote men, ⁊ ten thousande men of Iuda. And whan Saul came to the cite of the Amalechites, he set an hynder watch by the ryuer, and sayde vnto y Kenites: Get you hence, departe, and go downe from y Amalechites, y I suyte you not with them, ¶ for ye shewed mercy vnto all the children of Israel, whā they departed out of Egipte. So the Kenites gat them awaye from amonge the Amalechites.

Then smote Saul the Amalechites from Heula vnto Sur (which lyeth ouer against Egipte) ⁊ toke Agag the kyng of y Amalechites alyue, ⁊ damned all y people with the edge of the swerde. Neuertheles Saul and the people spared Agag, and the shepe and oxen  $\hat{y}$  were good and fat, and the lambes, and all that was good, and wolde not damne the: but loke what was foule and nothinge worth, that they dammed.

C Then came the worde of the LORDE vnto Samuel, and sayde: It repenteth me that I made Saul kynge, for he hath turned him selfe backe fro me, and not cōfirmed my wordes. Therefore was Samuel angrye,  $\tau$  cried vnto the LORDE all that nighte. And Samuel gat him vp early, that he might mete Saul in  $\hat{y}$  mornyng. And it was tolde him, that Saul was come vnto Carmel, \*  $\tau$  had set him vp a piler, and was gone aboute, and come downe to Gilgall.

Now whā Samuel came to Saul, Saul sayde vnto him: Blessed be thou vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, I haue perfourmed the worde of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE. Samuel answered: What crye is this then of shepe in myne eares, and the crye of oxen which I heare?

D Saul sayde: They haue broughte them from the Amalechites: for the people spared the best shepe  $\tau$  oxen for the offerynge of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE thy God, the other haue we dammed. Neuertheles Samuel answered Saul: Let me tell the what  $\hat{y}$  LORDE hath sayde vnto me this nighte. He sayde: Saye on. Samuel sayde: † Whan thou wast but small in thine awne eyes, wast thou not  $\hat{y}$  heade amōge the trybes of Israel?  $\tau$  the LORDE anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel? and  $\hat{y}$  LORDE sent  $\hat{y}$  in to the waye,  $\tau$  sayde: Go thy waie  $\tau$  damne the synners the Amalechites, and fighte agaynst them, tyll thou haue vtterly destroyed the? Wherefore hast thou not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, but hast turned thy selfe to the spoyle, and done euell in the sighte of the LORDE?

E Saul answered Samuel: Yee I haue herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE,  $\tau$  haue gone the waye that  $\hat{y}$  LORDE sent me, and broughte Agag the kynge of the Amalechites,  $\tau$  dammed the Amalechites: but  $\hat{y}$  people haue takē of the spoyle, shepe  $\tau$  oxen, and  $\hat{y}$  best amōge the dammed, to offer vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE thy God in Gilgall. Samuel saide: Hath the LORDE pleasure in sacrifices and burnt offerynges, as in obeynge the voyce of the LORDE? Beholde, † obedience is better then offerynge, and to herken is better then the fat of rammes. For disobedience is as  $\hat{y}$  synne of  $\hat{y}$  witcherafte, and rebellion is as the blasphemy of Idolatrye. In so much now as thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, he hath refused the also, that thou shuldest not be kynge.

Then sayde Saul vnto Samuel: I haue Jf synned,  $\hat{y}$  I haue transgressed the commaundement of the LORDE and thy worde: for I was afayed of the people, and herkened vnto their voyce. And now forgeue me my synne,  $\tau$  returne with me, that I maye worshippe  $\hat{y}$  LORDE. Samuel saide vnto Saul: I wil not turne backe with  $\hat{y}$ , for thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, and the LORDE hath refused the also,  $\hat{y}$  thou shuldest not be kynge in Israel. And whan Samuel turned him backe to go his waye, he gat him by  $\hat{y}$  edge of his garment,  $\tau$  rēte it. Then sayde Samuel vnto him: The LORDE hath rente the kyngdome of Israel from  $\hat{y}$  this daye,  $\tau$  geuen it vnto thy neyghboure, which is better then thou. The ouerwynner in Israel also shal not lye, nether shal he repent: for he is no man, that he shulde repent.

He sayde: I haue synned, yet honoure me S now before the Elders of my people and before Israel, and turne backe with me, that I maye worshippe the LORDE thy God. So Samuel turned agayne after Saul, that Saul mighte worshippe the LORDE. But Samuel sayde: Bring me hither Agag the kynge of the Amalechites. And Agag wente vnto him, tēderly. And Agag saide: Thus departeth the bytternesse of death. Samuel sayde: ¶ Like as thy swerde hath made wemen childlesse, so shal thy mother also be with out children amonge wemen. So Samuel hewed Agag in peeces before  $\hat{y}$  LORDE in Gilgall.

¶ And Samuel departed vnto Ramath. But Saul wente vp to his house at Gibeā Saul. And Samuel sawe Saul nomore vnto the daye of his death. Neuertheles Samuel mourned for Saul, because it repented the LORDE, that he had made Saul kynge ouer Israel.

But Samuel sayde: How shal I go? Saul shal perceaue it, and shal slaye me. The LORDE sayde: Take the a calfe from the droue, & saye: I am come to do sacrifice vnto y LORDE. And thou shalt call Isai to y sacrifice, so shall I tell the what thou shalt do, that thou mayest anoynte me him, whom I shall shewe the. Samuel dyd as the LORDE sayde, and came to Bethleem. Then were the Elders of the cite astonnyed, and wente forth to mete him, and sayde: *Is thy commynge peaceable? He sayde: Yee. I am come to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Sanctifye youre selues, & come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Isai and his sonnes, and called them to the sacrifice.

B Now whā they came in, he behelde Eliab, & thoughte, whether he shulde be his anoynted before the LORDE. But y LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: loke not vpon his countenance, ner vpon the tallnesse of his person, For I iudge not after the sighte of man. A man hath respecte vnto the thinge that is before his eyes, but the LORDE loketh vpon the hert. Then Isai called Abinadab, & broughte him before Samuel. And he sayde: This hath not the LORDE chosen. Then Isai broughte Samma. But he sayde: This also hath not the LORDE chosen. Then broughte Isai his seuen sonnes before Samuel. Neuertheles Samuel saide vnto Isai: The LORDE hath chosen none of these.

C And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: Are here all the childrē? He sayde: There is yet one y leest of all, and beholde, he kepeth the shepe. Thē sayde Samuel vnto Isai: Sende & cause him to be fetched, for we will not syt downe at the table, vntyll he come. Then sent he, & caused him be broughte. And he was well coloured with fayre eyes & of a beutyfull countenance. And the LORDE saide: Aryse, and anoynte him, that is he.

Thē toke Samuel his oyle horne, & anoynted him amonge his brethre. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpō Dauid frō y daye forth. As for Samuel, he gat him vp, & wente vnto Ramath.

But the sprete of the LORDE departed from Saul, and an euell sprete from y LORDE vexed him. Then sayde Sauls seruauantes vnto him: Beholde, an euell sprete from God vexeth the. Let oure lorde saie vnto his seruauantes which stonde before him, y they seke a man which can playe vpon the harpe, and instrumente, that whan the euell sprete of God cometh vpon the, he maye playe with his hande, to ease the withall. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes: Prouyde me a mā, that can playe well vpon the instrumente, & brynge him vnto me.

D Then answered one of the children, & sayde: Beholde, I sawe a sonne of Isai y Bethleemite, which can playe vpon the instrumēte, an honest & valeaūt man, and one y hath vnderstōdinge in matters, & is wel fauoured. Thē Saul sent messaungers vnto Isai, sayēge: Sende me Dauid thy sonne, which is with the shepe. Then toke Isai an asse with bred, & a bottell with wyne, and a kyd, and sent it vnto Saul by Dauid his sonne. So Dauid came to Saul, & stode before him, & he loued him well, and he became his wapen bearer. And Saul sente vnto Isai, sayēge: Let Dauid remayne before me, for he hath founde fauoure in my sighte. Now whan the sprete of God came vpō Saul, Dauid toke y harpe, & played with his hande: so was Saul refresshed, & eased, & the euell sprete departed from him.

The xviij. Chapter.

THE Philistynes gathered their hoost to y battayl, and came together to Socho in Iuda, & pitched their tentes betwene Socho & Aseka, at the ende of Damin. But Saul & the mē of Israel came together, & pitched in the Oke valley, & prepared them selues to the battayl agaynst the Philistynes. And the Philistynes stode vpon a hyll on the one syde, and the Israelites vpon a hyll on the other syde, so that there was a valley betwene them.

A Then stepte there forth from amonge the Philistynes a stoute bolde man, named Goliath of † Gath, sixe cubites and an hande breth hye, and had an helmet of stele on his heade, and a fast habergion vpon him, and the weight of his habergion was fyue thousande Sicles of stele, and harnesse of stele had he vpon his legges, and a shyld of stele vpon his shulders: and the shaft of his speare was like a weuers lome, and the yron of his speare had sixe hundreth Sicles of yron, and his wapen bearer wente before him.

B And he stode and called vnto the hoost of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore are ye come forth to prepare youre selues to the battayll? Am not I a Philistyne, and ye the seruauntes of Saul? Chose one amonge you to come downe vnto me: yf he can fighte agaynst me and slaye me, then wil we be youre seruauntes: but yf I can ouercome him and slaye him, then shal ye be oure seruauntes, to do vs seruyce. And the Philistyne sayde: I haue spokē diszdainedly vnto the hoost of Israel this daye. Geue me one, and let vs fighte together. Whan Saul and all Israel herde these wordes of ȝ Philistyne, they were astonnyed, and sore afraied.

But Dauid was the sonne of a man of Ephrata of Bethleem Iuda, whose name was Isai, which had eight sonnes, and was an olde man in Sauls tyme, and was well strycken in age amonge men. And the thre eldest sonnes of Isai were gone with Saul to the battayll. And there names were these: Eliab the first borne, Abinadab the seconde, and Samma the thirde. But Dauid was the yongest of all. So whan the thre eldest were gone with Saul to the battayll, Dauid wente agayne from Saul, to kepe his fathers shepe at Bethleem. But the Philistyne stepte forth early in the mornynge and at euen, and stode there fortye dayes.

C Isai sayde vnto Dauid his sonne: Take this Ephra of firmentye for thy brethren, and these ten loaues of bred (and runne to the hoost vnto thy brethren) ⁊ these ten new cheses, and brynge them to ȝ captayne, and loke how thy brethren do, whether it go well with them or no, and take what they byd the. But Saul and they, and all the men of Israel were in the Oke valley, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes.

Then Dauid gat him vp early in the mornynge, and commytted the shepe to ȝ keper, and toke his burthen, wente his waye, as Isai commaunded him, and came to the tēt. And the hoost was gone forth, and had prepared them selues, and cried in the battayll: For Israel had set them selues in araye, and the Philistynes were agaynst their hoost in their araye also.

Then lefte Dauid the vessell that he bare, with the keper of the stuffe, and ranne to the hoost, and wente in, and saluted his brethren. And whyle he was yet talkynge with them, beholde, then came vp the stoute bolde man, whose name was Goliath, the Philistine of Gath, out of the Philistynes hoost, and spake like as afore, and Dauid herde it. But every man of Israel, whan he sawe the man, fled from him, and was sore afraied of him.

And every man in Israel sayde: Haue ye sene the man commynge vp hither? For he is come vp hither, to speake diszdainedly vnto Israel. And who so euer smyteth him, him wyll the kyng make ryche, and geue him his daughter, and make his fathers house fre in Israel.

Then sayde Dauid vnto the men that stode by him: What shalbe done to the man, that smyteth this Philistyne, and turneth this shame awaye from Israel? For what is he this Philistyne this vncircūcysed, that defyeth the hoost of ȝ lyuynge God? Then the people tolde him as afore: Thus shall it be done vnto ȝ man that smyteth him. And Eliab his greater brother herde him talke with the men, and was very wroth agaynst Dauid, and sayde: Wherefore art thou come downe? and why hast thou left a fewe shepe in the wyl-dernesse? I knowe thy presumptuousnesse well ynough, and the wickednesse of thine hert: for thou art come downe to se the battayll. Dauid answered: What haue I downe now? Is there not an occasion? And he turned him selfe from him vnto another, and spake acordinge as he had sayde before. Then the people answered him like as afore.

And whan they herde the wordes which Dauid sayde, they tolde them in the presence of Saul, and he caused him be fetched. And Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Let no mans hert be discouraged because of him. Thy seruaunt shall go, and fighte with the Philistyne. Neuertheles Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Thou art not able to go agaynst this Phylistyne to fighte with him, for thou art but a childe: but this is a man of warre from his youth vp.

Dauid sayde vnto Saul: Thy seruaunt keppe 32 his fathers shepe, and there came a lyon and a Bere, and caried awaye a shepe from the flocke, then wente I forth after him, and smote him, and delyuered it out of his mouth. * And whan he wolde haue bene vpon me, I toke him by his beerde, and smote him, and slewe him. So thy seruauent smote both the Lyon and § Bere. Therefore shall this Philistyne this vncircumcysed be euen as one of them: for he hath defyed the hoost of the luyngge God. And Dauid sayde: The LORDE that deluyered me from § Lyon and Beer, shall deluyuer me also from this Philistyne.

And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Go thy waye, the LORDE be with the. And Saul clothed Dauid with his clothes, and set an helmet of stele vpon his heade, and put an habergion vpon him. And Dauid girded his swerde aboue his clothes, and beganne to go, for he had neuer bene vsed to it afore. Then sayde Dauid vnto Saul: I can not go thus, for I haue not bene vsed to it, and so he laied it from him, and toke his staff in his hande, and chose fyue slighte stones out of the ryuer, and put them in the shepardes bagge which he had by him, and toke a slynge in his hande, and made him to the Philistyne. And the Philistyne wente forth, and made him to Dauid, and his wapen bearer before him.

Now when the Philistyne looked & sawe Dauid, he thoughte scorne of him: for he was but a childe, well coloured, and beutyfull to loke vpon. And the Philistyne sayde vnto Dauid: Am I a dogg then, that thou comdest vnto me with a staffe? And he cursed Dauid by his God, and sayde vnto Dauid: Come hither to me, I wil geue thy flesh to the foules vnder the heauen, and to the beastes in the felde. Neuertheles Dauid sayde vnto the Philistyne: Thou comdest vnto me with swerde, speare and shyld. But I come vnto the in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth the God of the hoost of Israel, whom thou hast despysed. This daye shall the LORDE deluyder the in to my hãde, that I maye smyte the, and take thy heade from the, and geue the bodies of the hoost of the Philistynes this daye vnto the foules vnder the heauen, and to the wylde beestes vpon the earth, that all the londe maye knowe § Israel hath a God. And all this congregacion shal knowe, that the LORDE saueth nether thorow swerde ner speare: for the battayll is the LORDES, & he shal deluyder you in to oure handes.

Now when the Philistyne gat him vp, and wente forth and drue nye vnto Dauid, Dauid made haiste, and ranne from § hoost vnto the Philistyne. And Dauid put his hãde in his bagg, and toke out a stone, & thrue it with the slynge, *and hytt the Philistyne euen in the fore heade, so that the stone stacke in his fore heade, and he fell downe to the grounde vpon his face.

So Dauid ouercame § Philistyne with the slynge and with § stone, and smote him, and slewe him. And for so much as Dauid had no swerde in his hande, he ranne and stode ouer § Philistyne, †and toke his swerde, and drue it out of the sheeth, and slewe him, and smote of his heade withall. When the Philistynes sawe that the strongest of them was deed, ‡they fled. And the men of Israel and Iuda gat the vp, and cryed and folowed vpon the Philistynes, tyll they came vnto the valley, and to the Portes of Ekron. And the Philistynes fell downe slayne vnto Gath and to Ekron. And the children of Israel turned agayne from chasynge of the Philistynes, and spoyled their tentes. But Dauid toke the heade of the Philistyne, and broughte it vnto Ierusalem, as for his armour, he layed it in his tente.

Whan Saul sawe Dauid go forth agaynst the Philistyne, he saide vnto § Abner his chefe captayne: Abner, whose sonne is this childe? Abner sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth O kyng, I wote not. The kyngge sayde: Axe the whose sonne the yonge mā is. Now whan Dauid came agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, Abner toke him, and broughte him before Saul, and he had the Philistynes heade in his hande. And Saul sayde vnto him: Whose sonne art thou, thou yonge man? Dauid sayde: I am a sonne of thy seruauent Isai the Bethleemite.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND whan he had made an ende of talkyngge with Saul, the soule of Ionathas was bounde with the soule of Dauid, and Ionathas loued him as his owne soule. And Saul toke him the same daye, and let him not go agayne to his fathers house. And Ionathas and Dauid made a couenaunt together, for he loued him as his owne soule. And Ionathas put of his owne cote that he had vpon him, and gaue it vnto Dauid: yee and his cloke, his swerde, his bowe, and his girdell. And Dauid wente forth whither so euer Saul sent him, and behaued him selfe wysely. And Saul set him ouer the men of warre, and he pleased all the people well, and all the seruauntes of Saul.

B It fortuneth, that whan Dauid was come agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, the women wente out of all the cities of Israel with songes & daunces, to mete kyng Saul, with tymbrels, with myrth, and with fyddels. And the women sange one to another, and played & sayde: * Saul hath smytten his thousande: but Dauid his ten thousande.

Then was Saul very wroth, and y worde displeased him sore, and he sayde: They haue ascrybed ten thousande vnto Dauid, and but one thousande vnto me: what shal he haue more but the kyngdome? And from that daye forth, Saul loked sowerly vpō Dauid.

C The nexte daye after came the euell sprete of God vpon Saul, and prophecyed in y myddes of the house. But Dauid played on the instrumente with his hande, as he was wonte daylie. And Saul had a iauelynge in his hande, and cast it, and thoughte: I wyll stycke Dauid fast to the wall. Neuerthelesse Dauid turned himselfe twyse awaye from him. And Saul was afraied of Dauid: for the LORDE was with him, and was departed from Saul. Then Saul put him from him, and set him to be pryncer ouer a thousande men, and he went out and in before the people. And Dauid behaued himselfe wysely in all his doynges, and the LORDE was with him.

D Now whan Saul sawe that he was so exceedynge wyse, he stode in feare of him. But all Israel and Iuda loued Dauid, for he wente out and in before them. And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Beholde, my greatest daughter Merob: wyl I geue the to wyfe: be stronge now, & gouerne the warres of the LORDE. For Saul thought: my hāde shal not be vpon him, but the hande of y Philistynes. Neuertheles Dauid answered Saul: Who am I? & what is my life & the kynred of my father in Israel, that I shulde mary the kynges daughter?

E But whan the tyme came, that Merob y daughter of Saul shulde haue bene geuē vnto Dauid, she was geuen vnto Adriel y Meholathite to wyfe. Neuerthelesse Michol Sauls daughter loued Dauid. Whan this was tolde Saul, y matter pleased him well, & he sayde: I wyl geue him her, y she maye be a snare vnto him, & that the handes of y Philistynes maye come vpon him. And he sayde vnto Dauid: This daye shalt thou be my daughters huszbāde y secōde time. And Saul spake vnto his seruauntes: Talke with Dauid secretly & saye: Beholde, the kinge hath pleasure in the, and all his seruauntes loue the, mary thou therfore the kynges daughter.

And Sauls seruauntes spake these wordes in the eares of Dauid. But Dauid saide: Thynke ye it but a small matter, to mary the kynges daughter? As for me, I am but a poore symple man. And Sauls seruauntes tolde him agayne, and sayde: Soch wordes hath Dauid spoken. Saul sayde: Then saye ye vnto Dauid: The kynges desyreth no dowry, but onely an hundreth foreszkynnes of the Philistynes, that vengeance maye be taken of the kynges enemies. Howbeit Saul thought to cause Dauid be slayne by the hādes of the Philistynes. Then his seruauntes tolde Dauid these wordes, and Dauid was contente with the matter, to mary the kynges daughter.

And after a fewe dayes Dauid gatt him vp, and wente with his men, and smote two hundreth men amonge the Philistynes. And Dauid broughte their foreszkynnes, and made their nombre sufficient vnto the kyng, y he mighte mary the kynges daughter. The Saul gaue him his daughter Michol to wyfe. And Saul sawe and perceaued, that the LORDE was with Dauid. And Michol Sauls daughter loued him. Then was Saul the more afraied, and became his enemye as lōge as he lyued. And whan the prynces of the Philistynes wēte forth, Dauid behaued him selfe more wysely then all the seruauntes of Saul in their outgoynge: so that his name was in greate reputacion.

The xii. Chapter.

SAUL spake to Ionathas his some, and to all his seruauntes, that they shulde kyll Dauid. & Neuerthelesse Ionathas the some of Saul loued Dauid exceedingly, and tolde him, and sayde: Saul my father goeth aboute to slaye the. Kepe the therefore (I praye the) in the mornynge and abyde in secrete, and hyde the. But I wyll go forth, and stonde besyde my father in the felde where thou art, and wyll speake of the vnto my father: and what soeuer I se I shal brynge the worde.

And Ionathas reported ſ̄ best of Dauid vnto Saul his father, and ſayde vnto him: Oh let not the kyng ſynne agaynſt his ſeruaunt, for he hath not ſynned agaynſt the, * he put his lyfe in his hande alſo, and ſmote the Philistyne, ⁊ the LORDE dyd a greate health vnto all Iſrael: this haſt thou ſene, and reioyſed therof. Wherefore wylt thou then offende agaynſt innocent bloude, that thou woldeſt kyll Dauid without a cauſe? Then herkened Saul vnto the voice of Ionathas and ſware: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, he ſhal not dye. Then Ionathas called Dauid, and tolde him all theſe wordes, and brought him to Saul, ſo that he was in preſence like as afore tyme.

But there aroſe a battayll agayne, and Dauid wente forth, and fought agaynſt the Philistynes, and ſmote a greate ſlaughter, ſo that they fled before him. Neuertheleſſe ſ̄ euell ſprete of the LORDE came vpon Saul, and he ſat in his houſe, and had a iauelynge in his hande. But Dauid plaiyd vpon the inſtrument with his hāde. And Saul thought with the iauelynge to ſticke Dauid faſt to the wall. Howbeit, he wente aſyde frō Saul and the iauelynge ſmote in the wall. And Dauid fled, and eſcaped that night.

Notwithſtandinge Saul ſent his meſſaungers to Dauids houſe, that they ſhulde laye wayte for him, and kyll him in the mornynge. Michol Dauids wyfe tolde him this, and ſayde: Yf thou ſaue not thy ſoule this night, thou ſhalt dye to-morrow. † Then Michol let him downe thorow the wyndow, ſo that he wente his waye, fled, and eſcaped. And Michol toke an ymage, and layed it in the bed, and laied a goates ſkynne at the heade of it, and couered it with clothes. Then Saul ſent meſſaungers, to fetch Dauid. But ſhe ſayde: He is ſicke. Neuertheleſſe Saul ſent meſſaungers to ſe Dauid, ⁊ ſayde: Bring him vp to me with the bed, that he maye be ſlayne.

Now whan the meſſaungers came, beholde, the ymage laye in the bed, and a goates ſkynne at the heade of it. Then ſayde Saul vnto Michol: Why haſt thou begyled me, and let myne enemye go, that he mighte eſcape? Michol ſayde vnto Saul: He ſayde vnto me: Let me go, or I wyl kyll the. As for Dauid, he fled, and eſcaped, and came to Samuel vnto Ramath, and tolde him all ſ̄ Saul had done vnto him. And he wente with Samuel, and they abode at Naioth.

And it was tolde Saul: Beholde, Dauid is at Naioth in Ramath. Then Saul ſente meſſaungers to fetch Dauid. And they ſawe a company of prophetes prophecienge, and Samuel had the ouerſight of them. Then came the ſprete of God vpon the meſſaungers of Saul, ſo that they prophecyed alſo.

Whan this was tolde Saul, he ſent other meſſaungers, which prophecied likewyſe. Then ſente he meſſaungers the thyrde tyme, and they in like maner prophecyed. Then wente he himſelfe alſo vnto Ramath, and whan he came to the greate well which is at Secho, he axed and ſayde: Where is Samuel and Dauid? Then was it tolde him: beholde, at Naioth in Ramath. And he wente thither, euen vnto Naioth in Ramath. And ſ̄ ſprete of God came vpon him alſo, and he wēte ⁊ prophecied till he came vnto Naioth in Ramath. And he put of his clothes, ⁊ prophecied likewiſe before Samuel, ⁊ fell downe naked all that daye and all that night. ‡ Here of came the prouerbe: Is Saul alſo amonge the prophetes?

The xx. Chapter.

DAUID fled frō Naioth in Ramath, and came, ⁊ ſpake before Ionathas: What haue I done? What treſpaece haue I made? What haue I ſynned in ſ̄ ſighte of thy father, ſ̄ he ſeketh to kyll me? He ſayde vnto him: God forbyd, thou ſhalt not dye. Beholde, my father doth nothinge, nether greate ner ſmall, but he ſheweth it before myne eares. Wherefore ſhulde my father thē hyde this from me? It ſhal not be ſo. Thē ſware Dauid agayne, and ſayde: Thy father knoweth well, ſ̄ I haue founde fauoure in thy ſighte, therefore ſhal he thinke: Ionathas ſhal not knowe of this, leſt it greue him. Verely, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy ſoule lyueth, there is but one ſteppe betwene me ⁊ death. Ionathas ſayde vnto Dauid: I wil do for the what ſo euer thy hert deſyreth. Dauid ſayde vnto him: Beholde, to-morrow is the newe Mone, that I ſhulde ſyt at the table with the kyng. Let me hyde my ſelfe therfore in the felde vnto the thirde daye at euen. Yf thy father then axe after me, ſaye: Dauid prayed me, ſ̄ he mighte runne to Bethleem vnto his cite, for all his kynred haue there a yearly sacrifice. Yf he saye then: It is good, the stondesth it well with thy seruauit. But yf he be wroth, thou shalt perceaue that he intendeth euell. Do mercy therfore vpon thy seruauit: *for with me thy seruauit hast thou made a couenaunt in the LORDE. But yf there be eny trespase in me, then slaye me thy selfe, for why woldest thou brynge me vnto thy father?

Ionathas sayde: That be farre from the, that I shulde perceaue my father to intende eny euell agaynst the, and shulde not tell the. Dauid sayde: Who shal brynge me worde, yf thy father geue the an harde answer? Ionathas sayde vnto Dauid: Come. let vs go forth in to the felde. And they wente out both in to the felde. And Ionathas sayde vnto Dauid:

LORDE God of Israel, yf I perceaue by my father tomorow or on the thirde daye, that it goeth well with Dauid, ⁊ sende not vnto the, and shewe the before thine eares, then let the LORDE do this and that vnto Ionathas. But yf my father delyte in euell agaynst the, I will shewe it before thine eares also, and let the go, that thou mayest departe in peace.

And the LORDE be with the, as he hath bene with my father. Yf I do it not, then do thou no mercy of the LORDE on me, while I lye, no not whan I dye, and plucke thy mercy fro my house for euer. And whan the LORDE roteth out the enemies of Dauid, euery one out of the londe, then let Dauid rote out Ionathas also with his house, and the LORDE requyre it of the hande of Dauids enemies.

And Ionathas proceded further, and sware vnto Dauid (he loued him so well: for he loued him euen as his owne soule) and Ionathas sayde vnto him: Tomorow is the new Mone, and thou shalt be axed after: for thou shalt be wanted where thou wast wonte to sit. But on the thirde daye come downe soone, ⁊ go in to the place where thou hydest the on the workdaye, ⁊ set the downe by the stone of Asel: then wyl I shute thre arrowes on the side, as though I wolde shute at a marck: and beholde, I wil sende the boye, and saye vnto him, Go seke the arrowes. Yf I saye now vnto the lad: Lo, the arrowes lye hitherwarde behynde the, fetch them, then come thou, for it is peace, and there is no parell, as truly as the LORDE lyueth. But yf I saye vnto the lad: beholde, the arrowes lye yonderwarde before the, then go thou thy waye, for the LORDE hath let the go. *As for that which thou and I haue spoke together, the LORDE is betwene me and the for euer.

Dauid hid himself in the felde. And whā the new Mone came, the kynge sat him downe at the table to eate. Whan the kynge had set him downe in his place as he was wonte by the wall, Ionathas stode vp, but Abner sat him downe besyde Saul. And Dauid was myssed in his place. And Saul spake nothinge that daye, for he thoughte: There is somewhat happend vnto him, that he is not cleane. On the seconde daye of the new Mone, whan Dauid was myssed in his place, Saul saide vnto Ionathas his sonne: Wherefore is not the sonne of Isai come to the table nether yesterdaye ner to daye?

Ionathas answered Saul: He prayed me that he mighte go vnto Bethleem, and sayde: Let me go, for oure kynred hath a sacrifice to do in the cyte, and my brother hath sent for me himselfe: yf I haue founde fauoure now in thy syghte, I wyl go, and se my brethren: therfore is he not come to the kynges table. Then was the kynge wroth at Ionathas, and sayde vnto him: Thou wicked and vnthrift, I knowe how that thou hast chosen the sonne of Isai, to the shame of thy selfe and of thy shamefull mother. For as longe as the sonne of Isai lyueth vpon earth nether thou ner thy kingdome shal prospere. Sende now therfore, and cause him to be fetcht vnto me, for he is a childe of death.

Ionathas answered his father Saul and sayde vnto him: Wherefore shal he dye? what hath he done? Then shot Saul the iauelynge at him, that he might smite him. The perceaued Ionathas, that his father was vitterly determiend to kyll Dauid, and he rose vp from the table in a wrothfull displeasure, and ate no bred the same seconde daye of the new Mone: for he was vexed because of Dauid, that his father had done him soch dishonoure.

On the morow wente Ionathas forth in to the felde, at the tyme appoynted of Dauid, and a litle boy with him, and sayde vnto the boy: Runne and seke me the arrowes which I shute. Whan the boy ranne, he shot an arrowe ouer him. And whan the boy came to the place whither Ionathas had shot ȝ arowe, Ionathas cryed after him, and sayde: The arowe lyeth yonderwarde before the. And he cryed after him agayne: haist the, and stonde not still. Then the boy gathered vp Ionathas arowes, and brought them to his lorde. And the boy knewe nothinge, onely Ionathas and Dauid knewe of ȝ matter.

Then Ionathas gaue his boy his wapens and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, and cary them in to the cite. And whan the boy was gone, Dauid arose from the place towarde the south, and fell vpon his face to the grounde, and worshipped thre tymes, and they kissed one another, and wepte together. But Dauid most specially. And Ionathas saide vnto Dauid: Go thy waye in peace: *What soeuer we both haue sworne ȝ spokē together in the name of the LORDE, the LORDE be witnessse betwene me and the, betwene my sede and thy sede for euer. And Ionathas gat him vp, and came in to the cite.

The xxi. Chapter.

A DAUID came to Nobe to ȝ prest Ahimelech. And Ahimelech was astonnyed, whan he sawe Dauid comminge, and sayde vnto him: Why comest thou alone, and noman is with the? Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech the prest: The kinge hath comytted a matter vnto me, and sayde: Let nomā knowe wherfore I haue sent the, and what I haue commaunded the: for I haue appoynted my seruantes to mete me here ȝ there. †Yf thou haue now ought vnder thy hande, a loafe of bred or fyue, geue me the same in my hande, or what so euer thou findest.

B The prest answered Dauid, and sayde: I haue no comen bred vnder my hande, but the holy bred, yf the yonge men haue onely refrained them selues from wemen. Dauid answered the prest, and sayde vnto him: The wemen were kepte thre dayes from vs whan we departed forth, and the yonge mens vessels were holy. But this waye is vnholy, neuerthelesse it shalbe sanctified to daye in the instrumentes. § Then the prest gaue him of ȝ holy, in so much as there was none other bred but the shewbredes, which were taken vp before the LORDE, that there might be other freshbredes set therin the daye whā he take them awaye.

But the same daye was there a man sparred in before the LORDE, one of Sauls seruantes, named Doeg an Edomite, ȝ mightiest amonge Sauls hyrdmen. And Dauid sayde vnto Ahimelech: Is there not a speare or a swerde here vnder thine hande? I haue not taken my swerde and weapens with me: for the kynges matter requyred haist. The prest sayde: The swerde of Goliath the Philistyne whom thou smotest in the Oke valley, is here wrapped in a cloth behynde the ouerbody cote. Yf thou wylt haue it, take it, for here is els none but it. Dauid sayde: There is not soch another, geue me it.

And Dauid gat him vp, and fled from Saul, and came to Achis ȝ kyng of Gath. But Achis seruantes sayde vnto him: This is Dauid the kyng of the londe, of whom they sung in the daunse, and sayde: † Saul hath smytten his thousande, but Dauid his ten thousande. And Dauid toke these wordes to hert, and was sore afrayed of Achis the kyng of Gath, and altered his countenance before them, and shewed himselfe as he had bene madd in their handes, and stackered towarde the dores of the gate, and his slauerynge ranne downe his beard. Then sayde Achis vnto his seruantes: Beholde, ye se that the man is out of his wyt, why haue ye brought him vnto me? Haue I to fewe madd men, that ye haue brought this hither to be madd before me? Shulde he come in to my house?

The xxij. Chapter.

D AUID wente frō thence, ȝ fled vnto the caue of Adullam. Whan his brethren and all his fathers house herde that, they came downe thither vnto him. And there gathered vnto him all men that were in trouble and det, and sory of hert, and he became their heade, so that there were with him vpon a foure hundred men.

And Dauid wente from thence towarde Mispā in the londe of the Moabites, and sayde vnto the kyng of the Moabites: Let my father and my mother go out and in amonge you, tyll I se what God wil do with me. And he lefte them before the kyng of ȝ Moabites, so that they remayned by him, as longe as Dauid was in the castell. Neuertheles the prophet Gad sayde vnto Dauid: Abyde not in the castell, but go thy waye, and come in to the londe of Iuda. Then departed Dauid, and came in to the wodd of Hareth. And Saul herde that Dauid and the men which were with him, were come forth.

B Now whyle Saul dwelt at Gibeon vnder a groue in Rama, he had a faueling in his hande, and all his seruantes stode by him. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes that stode by him: Heare ye children of Iemini: Shal the sonne of Isai geue lodes and vynyardes vnto you all,  $\tau$  make you all captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hūdreds, that ye haue all conspyred agaynst me, and there is no mā that sheweth it before myne eares, \*for so much as my sonne also hath made a couenant with the sonne of Isai? There is no man amonge you that letteth it for my sake, or  $\gamma$  openeth it vnto myne eares: for my sonne hath stered vp my seruantes against me, that he maye laye wayte for me, as it is manifest.

Then answered Doeg  $\gamma$  Edomite which stode besyde Sauls seruantes, and sayde:  $\dagger$  I sawe the sonne of Isai, that he came vnto Nobe, to Ahimelech  $\gamma$  sonne of Achitob, which axed counsell at the LORDE for him, and gaue him fode,  $\tau$  the swerde of Goliath the Philistyne.

C Then sent the kyng, and caused to call Ahimelech the prest the sonne of Achitob, and all his fathers house, the prestes that were at Nobe, and they came all to the kyng. And Saul sayde: Heare thou sonne of Achitob. He saide: Here am I my lord. And Saul sayde vnto him: Wherefore haue ye cōspired agaynst me, thou  $\tau$  the sonne of Isai, that thou hast geuen him bred and a swerde, and axed counsell at God for him, to stere him vp, that he mighte laye awayte for me, as it is manifest?

Ahimelech answered the kyng and saide: And who is amonge all thy seruantes like Dauid, which is faithfull, and hath married the kynges daughter, and goeth in thine obedience,  $\tau$  is honorably taken in thine house? Haue I begonne then first this daye to axe counsell at God for him? That be farre fro me. Let not the kyng laie soch to his seruantes charge in all my fathers house: for thy seruant knewe not of all these thinges nether small ner greate. Neuertheles the kyng saide: Ahimelech thou must dye  $\gamma$  death, thou and all thy fathers house. And the kyng sayde to his fote men that stode by him: Turne you, and slaye the prestes of the LORDE, for their hande is with Dauid also.

Not withstandinge the kynges seruantes wolde not laye their handes vpon  $\gamma$  prestes of the LORDE, to slaye them. Then saide  $\gamma$  kyng vnto Doeg: Turne the, and slaye the prestes.  $\dagger$  Doeg the Edomite turned him, and slewe the prestes, so that the same daye there dyed fyue and foure score men, which wayre ouerbody cotes of linnen. And Nob the cite of the prestes smote he with the edge of the swerde, both men and women, children and sucklynges, oxen and asses, and shepe.

Neuerthelesse there escaped a sonne of Ahimelech (the sonne of Achitob) whose name was Abiathar, and fled after Dauid, and tolde him, that Saul had slayne  $\gamma$  prestes of the LORDE. Dauid sayde vnto Abiathar: I knewe well the same daye that Doeg the Edomite was there, that he wolde tell Saul. I am giltye of the soules of thy fathers house. Abyde thou with me, and feare not. He that layeth wayte for my lyfe, shall laye wayte for thyne also, and thou shalt be preserued with me.

The xxij. Chapter.

AND it was tolde Dauid: Beholde, the Philistynes fight against Cegila, and spoyle the barnes. Then Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I go,  $\tau$  smyte these Philistynes? And the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid: Go thy waye, thou shalt smyte the Philistynes, and delyuer Cegila. But  $\gamma$  men that were with Dauid, sayde vnto him: Beholde, we are here in feare in lewry, and shall we go to Cegila vnto the hoost of the Philistynes? Thē Dauid axed at the LORDE agayne. And the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Vp, get the downe to Cegila, for I will delyuer the Philistynes in to thy hande.

So Dauid wente with his men vnto Cegila, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes,  $\tau$  droue awaye their catell, and smote them with a greate slaughter. Thus Dauid delyuered them of Cegila. For whan Abiathar the sonne of Ahimelech fled vnto Dauid at Cegila, he bare downe the ouerbody cote with him.

Thē was it tolde Saul, that Dauid was come to Cegila, and he sayde: God hath deliuered him in to my hāde, for he is shut fast in, now that he is come in to a cite which is kepte with gates and barres. And Saul caused for to call all the people downe to ſ battaill vnto Cegila, ſ they might besege Dauid and his men. But whan Dauid perceaued ſ Saul intēded cuell against him, he saide vnto Abiathar ſ prest: Brynge me hither the ouerbody cote. And Dauid sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thy seruauit hath herde, that Saul goeth aboute to come for to destroye the cite of Cegila for my sake. Shal the citysens of Cegila deliyuer me ouer in to his handes? And shal Saul come downe, as thy seruauit hath herde? Tell thy seruauit this, O LORDE God of Israel. And the LORDE saide: He shal come downe.

Dauid sayde: Shall the citysens of Cegila deliyuer me and my men in to Sauls handes? The LORDE sayde: Yee. Thē Dauid gat him vp with his mē, of whom there were vpon a sixe hundred, & walked whither they coulde. Now whan it was tolde Saul that Dauid was escaped from Cegila, he let his iourney stonde. As for Dauid, he remayned in the wildernes in the castell, and abode vpon the mount in the wildernes of Siph. But Saul soughte him as longe as he lyued. Neuertheles God gaue him not in to his handes. And Dauid sawe, that Saul was gone forth to seke after his life. But Dauid was in the wildernes of Siph, in the wodd.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Saul gat him vp, and wēt vnto Dauid in to the wod, and strenghted his hande in God, and sayde vnto him: Feare not, my father Sauls hande shal not finde ſ: and thou shalt be kyng ouer Israel, so will I be the nexte vnto the. And ſ my father knoweth right well. * And they made a couenaunt both together before the LORDE. And Dauid remayned in the wodd. As for Ionathas, he wente home agayne.

But the †Siphites wente vp to Saul vnto Gibeath, and sayde: Is not Dauid hyd with vs in the castell in ſ wodd, vpon moūt Hachila, which lyeth on the righte hande of the wilderness? Let the kyng come downe now therefore accordinge to all the desyre of his hert, and we wyll deliyuer him in to the kynges hande. Then sayde Saul: Blessed be ye of the LORDE, that ye haue had pytie vpon me: Go youre waye now therefore, and be sure, that ye maye knowe and se in what place his fete haue bene, and who hath sene him there: for it is tolde me, that he is full of sotilyte. Loke well and spye out all the places, where he hydeth him, and come agayne to me, whan ye are sure, and I will go with you. Yf he be in the londe, I wyll enquire after him amonge all the thousands in Iuda.

Then gat they them vp, and wente their waye vnto Siph before Saul. But Dauid and his men were in the wyldernes of Maō, euen in the felde on the righte hande of the wildernes. Now whan Saul wente thither with his men to seke him, it was tolde Dauid and he gat him downe to the rocke, and abode in the wilderness of Mahon. Whan Saul herde that, he folowed after Dauid in the wilderness of Mahon. And Saul with his men wente on the one syde of the hyll: Dauid with his men on ſ other syde of ſ hill. But whan Dauid made haist to escape from Saul, Saul with his men compased aboute Dauid and his men, that he might take thē. ‡ Neuertheles there came a messaūger vnto Saul, and sayde: Make haist and come, for the Philistynes are fallē in to the londe. Thē Saul turned him from chacynge of Dauid, and wente agaynst the Philistynes. Therefore is ſ place called § Sela Mahelkoth. And Dauid wente vp from thence, and abode in the castell at En Gaddi.

The xxiij. Chapter.

NOW whan Saul came agayne from the Philistines, it was tolde him: Beholde, Dauid is in the wyldernes of Engaddi. And Saul toke thre thousande chosen men out of all Israel, and wente to seke Dauid with his men vpon the stony rockes of the wylde goates. And whan he came to the shepe foldes by ſ waye, there was a caue, and Saul wente in to ll couer his fete. But Dauid and his men sat behinde within the caue.

Then sayde Dauids men vnto him: Lo, this is the daye, wherof the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Beholde, I wyll deliyuer thyne enemye in to thy hande, that thou mayest do with him what it pleaseth the. And Dauid stode vp, & cut of the tpype of Sauls garment quyetly. Neuertheles it smote him afterwarde in his hert, because he had cut of the tpype of Sauls garment, and sayde vnto his men: The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde do it, & laye my hande vpon my lorde the LORDES anoynted: for he is y anoynted of the LORDE. And Dauid withelde his seruantes with wordes, & suffred the not to ryse vp agaynst Saul.

But whan Saul gat him vp out of the caue, and was goinge his waye, Dauid rose vp also after him, and wente out of the caue, and cried behynde Saul, & sayde: My lorde the kynge. And Saul loked behynde him. And Dauid bowed downe his face to the earth, and worshipped, and sayde vnto Saul: Why herkenest thou vnto the wordes of men, that saye: Dauid seketh thy mysfortune? Beholde, thine eyes se this daye that the LORDE gaue the in to my hande in the caue, and I was counceiled to slaye the: Neuertheles thou wast fauoured, for I sayde: I wil not laye my hande vpon my lorde, for he is the LORDES anoynted. Beholde, my father the tpype of thy garment in my hande, that I wolde not slaye the, whan I cut of the tpype of thy garment. Knowe and se, y there is no euell ner trespace in my hande: nether haue I offended the, and thou folowest after my soule, to take it awaye. The LORDE shal be iudge betwene me and the, and auenge me on the, but my hāde shal not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde prouerbe: Vngodlynes commeth of the vngodly: but my hande shal not be vpon the. Whom persecutest thou O kynge of Israel, whom persecutest thou? a deed dogg? a flee? The LORDE be iudge, and geue sentence betwene me and the, and cōsidre it, and defende my cause, and delyuer me from thy hande.

Now whan Dauid had spoken out these wordes vnto Saul, Saul saide: *Is not this thy voyce my sonne Dauid? And Saul lifte vp his voyce, and wepte, and saide vnto Dauid: Thou art more righteous then I: for thou hast recompensed me good, but I haue rewarded the euell. And this daye hast thou shewed me how thou hast done me good, for so much as y LORDE hath delyuered me in to thy hande, and thou neuertheles hast not slaine me. What is he, which yf he fynde his enemye, wyl let him go in a good waye? The LORDE rewarde the good for y thou hast done vnto me this daye. Beholde now, I knowe that thou shalt be kynge, & the kyngdome of Israel stondesth in thy hande: sweare now therfore vnto me by the LORDE, y thou shalt not rote out my sede after me, nether destroie my name out of my fathers house. And Dauid sware vnto Saul. Then wente Saul home, but Dauid gat him vp with his men vnto the castell.

The xrv. Chapter.

AND Samuel dyed, and all Israel gathered them selues together, mourned for him, & buried him in his house at Ramath. As for Dauid, he rose, and wente downe in to the wyldernes of Paran. And there was a man at Maon, and his possession at Carmel, and the man was of greate power, and had three thousande shepe, and a thousande goates. And it fortunēd that he clypped his shepe at Carmel, and his name was Nabal, but his wyues name was Abigail, and she was a woman of good vnderstandinge, & bewtyfull of face. But the man was harde, and wicked in his doynge, and was one of Caleb.

Now whan Dauid herde in the wyldernes y Nabal clypped his shepe, he sent out ten yonge men, & saide vnto them: Go vp vnto Carmel, & whan ye come to Nabal, salute him frendly on my behalfe, & saye: Good lucke, peace be with the & thine house, & with all y thou hast. I haue herde saye that thou hast shepe clyppers. Now thy shepherdes whom thou hast, haue bene with vs, we haue done them no dishonoure, and they wāted nothinge of their nombre, as long as they were at Carmel: Axe thy yonge men, they shal tell the, and let thy yonge men fynde fauoure in thy sighte: for we are come in a good daye, geue thy seruantes & thy sonne Dauid what thy hande fyndeth.

And whā Dauids yonge men came, and spake all these wordes on Dauids behalfe vnto Nabal, they left of. But Nabal answered Dauids seruantes, & sayde: What is he y Dauid? & who is the sonne of Isai? There are many seruantes now y runne awaye from their masters. Shulde I take my bred, water and flesh, that I haue slayne for my clyppers, & geue it vnto mē whom I knowe not whence they are?

Thē Dauids yonge mē turned their waye agayne. And whan they came agayne vnto

him, they tolde him all these wordes. The sayde Dauid vnto his men: Euery man gyrd his swerde aboute him. And euery one gyrd his swerde aboute him. And Dauid gyrd his swerde aboute him also, and there wete vp after him vpon a foure hundred men, but two hundred remayned with the stuffe.

C Neuertheles one of the yonge men tolde Abigail Nabals wife, and sayde: Beholde, Dauid sent messaungers out of the wyldernes to blesse oure lorde, Notwithstandinge he was fearce vpō them, and yet haue they bene very profitable men vnto vs, and haue done vs no dishonoure, and we wanted none of the nombre as lōge as we walked with them, whan we were in the felde: but they haue bene oure wall daye and nighte, as longe as we kepte the shepe by them. Take hede now therfore, and loke well what thou doest, for there is surely a mysfortune at hande agaynst oure lorde, ⁊ agaynst all his house. And he is a man of Belial, to whom no man darre saye eny thinge. Then Abigail made haist, and toke two hundred loaves of bred, and two botels of wyne, and fyue shepe ready dighte, and fyue measures of firmentye, and an hundred frayles of rasens, and two hundred frayles of fygges, ⁊ layed them vpō asses, and sayde to hir yonge men: Go ye youre waye before me, beholde, I wyl come after. And she tolde Nabal hir housbāde nothinge therof. And as she rode vpō the asse, and wente downe in the shadowe of ⁊ hill, beholde, Dauid ⁊ his mē met hir downe, so that she came vpon them.

D But Dauid sayde: Wel, all that this man had in ⁊ wyldernes, haue I kepte for naughte, so that there wanted nothinge of all that he had, and he rewardeth me euell for good. God do this and yet more vnto the enemies of Dauid, yf vntyll tomorow in the mornynge I leaue this man (of all that he hath) so moch as one that maketh water agaynst ⁊ wall. Now whan Abigail sawe Dauid, she lighte downe from the asse in all the haist, and fell vpō hir face before Dauid, and worshiped him to the grounde, and fell at his fete, and sayde: Oh my lorde, let this trespass be myne, and let thy handmayde speake before thine eares, and heare the wordes of thy handmayden: Let not my lorde set his hert agaynst this Nabal the man of Belial, for he is a foole, acordinge as his name is called: his name is foole, and foolishnes is with him. As for me thy handmayde, I sawe not my lordes yonge men, whom thou dyddest sende.

But now my lorde, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, the LORDE hath kepte the backe, ⁊ thou shuldest not come agaynst bloude, and he hath deliuered thine hande.

Thine enemyes be now as Nabal, and so be they that wolde my lorde euell. Here is ⁊ blessinge, ⁊ thy handmayde hath brought my lorde, take it, and geue it vnto the yonge men, that walke vnder my lorde. For a sure house shal ⁊ LORDE make my lorde, which fighteth the fighte of the LORDE, and no euell shall be founde in the all thy life longe. And yf eny man ryse vp to persecute ⁊, and to laye wayte for thy soule, then shal the soule of my lorde be bounde in the bundell of ⁊ lyuynge, euen with the LORDE thy God. But ⁊ soule of thine enemies shalbe turned backe with the slynge. Whan the LORDE therfore doth all this good for my lorde (which he hath promysed the) and commaundeth ⁊ to be his Duke ouer Israel, then shal it be no stomblinge blocke ner ocaasion of fallynge vnto my lordes hert, that thou hast not shed bloude without a cause, and auenged thy selfe, then shal ⁊ LORDE do good vnto my lorde, and thou shalt thynke vpon thy handmayden.

Then saide Dauid vnto Abigail: Blessed be the LORDE God of Israel, which hath sent the to mete me this daye: and blessed be thy speach, and blessed be thou, which hast kepte me backe this daye, that I am not come agaynst bloude, to auenge me with myne awne hande. Verely (as truly as the LORDE the God of Israel lyueth, which hath hyndred me that I shulde do the no euell.) Yf thou haddest not met me in all the haist, Nabal shulde not haue had lefte him vntyll ⁊ lighte mornynge, so moch as one that maketh water agaynst the wall. So Dauid toke of hir hāde what she had broughte him, and sayde vnto her: Go vp in peace vnto thy house: beholde, I haue herkened vnto thy voyce, and accepted thy personne.

But whan Abigail came to Nabal, beholde, he had prepared a feast in his house like a knynges feast, and his hert was mery, for he was very drunken. And she tolde him nothinge, nether small ner greate vntyll ⁊ cleare mornynge. But whan it was daye, ⁊ the wyne was come from Nabal, his wife tolde him these thinges.

§ Then was his hert deed in his body, so that he became euen as a stone: and ouer ten dayes the LORDE smote him, so ¶ he dyed. Whan Dauid herde that Nabal was deed, he sayde: Blessed be ¶ LORDE which hath auenged my rebuke on Nabal, and preserued his seruauit from euell. And the LORDE hath rewarded Nabal that euell vpon his heade.

And Dauid sent, and caused to talke with Abigail, ¶ he mighte take her to wife. And whan Dauids seruauentes came to Abigail vnto Carmel, they spake vnto her, and saide: Dauid hath sent vs vnto the, that he maye take ¶ to wife. She rose vp, and worshipped vpon hir face vnto the earth, and sayde: beholde, here is thy handmayde, that she maie do seruyce vnto the seruauentes of my lorde, and to waszshe their fete. And Abigail made baist, and gat her vp, and rode vpō an asse, and fyue maydens that were vnder her, and wente after Dauids messaungers, and became his wife. Dauid toke Ahinoam of Iesrael also, and they both became his wyues. But Saul gaue Michol his daughter the wife of Dauid vnto Phalti ¶ sonne of Laïs of Gallim.

The xxi. Chapter.

¶ THEY of Siph came to Saul vnto Gibeath, ¶ sayde: *Is not Dauid hyd vpō the hill of Hachila, which lyeth ouer agaynst the wyldernes? Then Saul gat him vp, and wente downe to the wildernes of Siph, and thre thousande chosen men of Israel with him, to seke Dauid in the wildernes of Siph, and pitched vpon the hill of Hachila, which lyeth by the waye before the wildernes. But Dauid remayned in the wyldernes, and whan he sawe that Saul came after him in to the wildernes, he sent out spyes, and knewe of a snertie, that he was come in dede.

And Dauid gat him vp, and came to the place where Saul had pitched his tēt, and sawe the place where Saul laye with his chefe captayne ¶ Abner ¶ sonne of Ner: for Saul laye in the tent, and the hoost aboute him. Then answered Dauid, and sayde vnto Ahimelech the Hethite, and to Abisai the sonne of Ieru Ia ¶ brother of Ioab: Who wil go downe with me to Saul in to the hoost? Abisai sayde: I wil go downe with the.

¶ So Dauid and Abisai came to the people in the night season, ¶ beholde, Saul laye and slepte in the tent, and his speare stacke in ¶ grounde at his heade. But Abner and the people laye rounde aboute him. The sayde Abisai vnto Dauid: God hath closed thine enemye in thynne hande this daye. Therfore will I now thrust him thorow once with the speare euen in to the grounde, ¶ he shall haue ynough of it. Neuertheles Dauid sayde vnto Abisai: Destroye him not, for who wil laye hande vpon the anyoynted of ¶ LORDE, ¶ remayne vngiltye? Dauid sayde morouer: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf ¶ LORDE him selfe smyte him not, or excepte his tyme come that he dye, or that he go in to the battayll and perishe, the LORDE let it be farre fro me, that I shulde laye my hande on the LORDES anyoynted. Take ¶ speare now therfore at his heade, ¶ the cuppe of water, ¶ let vs go. So Dauid toke ¶ speare ¶ the cuppe of water at Sauls heade, ¶ they wente their waye. And there was no man ¶ sawe it, ner perceaued it, nether awaked, but they slepte every one, for there was a depe slepe fallen vpon them from the LORDE.

Now whan Dauid was come ouer on ¶ other syde, he stode vpon the toppe of the mount a farre of (so that there was a wyde space betwene them) and cried vpon ¶ people, and vpō Abner the sonne of Ner, ¶ sayde: Hearcest thou not Abner? And Abner answered and sayde: Who art thou that cryest so, and diseasest the kynge? And Dauid sayde vnto Abner: Art thou not a man? And where is there soch one as thou in Israel? Why hast thou not then kepte thy lorde ¶ kynge? for there is one of ¶ people come in to destroye thy lorde ¶ kynge. It is not well that thou hast done. As truly as the LORDE lyueth ¶ ye are the children of death, because ye haue not kepte youre lorde the LORDES anyoynted. Beholde now, where is ¶ kynges speare, and the cuppe of water that was at his heade.

Then knewe Saul the voyce of Dauid, and saide: ¶ Is not that thy voyce my sonne Dauid? Dauid sayde: It is my voyce my lorde the kynge. And he sayde morouer: Why doth my lorde so persecute his seruauit? What haue I done? and what euell is there in my hande? Yet let my lorde the kynge heare but the wordes of his seruauit? Yf ¶ LORDE prouoke the against me, let there be smelled a meatofferynge: but yf the childrē of men do it, cursed be they before the LORDE, because they haue thrust me out this daye (that I shulde not dwell in the LORDES inheritance) and saye: Go thy waye, and serue other goddes. So fall not now my bloude vpon the earth from the face of the LORDE. For the kynge of Israel is gone forth to seke a flee, as a partriche is followed on vpō the mountaynes.

And Saul sayde: I haue synned: Come agayne Dauid my sonne, I wil do the nomore hurte, because my soule hath bene deare in thy sighte this daye. Beholde, I haue done foolishly and very vnwisely. Dauid answered and sayde: Beholde, here is the kynges speare, let one of the yongemen come ouer here and fetch it. But the LORDE shal rewarde euery one accordinge to his righteousnes and faith, for ¶ LORDE deliuered ¶ this daye in to my hande: neuertheles I wolde not laie my hande vpō the LORDES anoynted. And as thy soule hath bene greatly reputed in my sighte this daye, so let ¶ LORDE repute my soule in his sighte, ¶ deliuer me from all trouble. Saul saide vnto Dauid: Blessed be thou Dauid my sonne, thou shalt do it, ¶ be able. But Dauid wente his waye, and Saul turned agayne vnto his place.

The xxvij. Chapter.

A DAVID thoughte in his hert: One of these dayes shal I fall in to the handes of Saul: It is better that I get me my waye in to ¶ londe of ¶ Philistynes, that Saul maye leaue of from sekyng me in all the coastes of Israel, so shall I escape his handes. And he gat him vp, and wente ouer (with the sixe hundred men that were with him) vnto Achis the sonne of Maach kynge of Gath. So Dauid remayned by Achis at Gath, with his mē, euery one with his housholde, and Dauid with his two wyues, Ahinoam the Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And whan worde came to Saul that Dauid was fled vnto Gath, he soughte him nomore.

And Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Yf I haue founde grace in thy sighte, then let there be geuen me a place in one of the cities of the londe, that I maye dwell therin. Wherefore shulde thy seruauit dwell in the kynges cite with the? Then Achis gaue him Siclag the same daye. Therefore belongeth Siclag to the kynges of Iuda vnto this daye. The tyme that Dauid dwelt in the londe of the Philistynes, is foure monethes.

Dauid wente vp with his men, and fell in to the londe of the Gessurites and Girsites, and *Amalechites: for these were the inhabitants of this londe of olde, as thou comest to Sur vnto the lode of Egipte. But whā Dauid smote ¶ londe, ¶ the let nether man ner woman lyue, and toke the shepe, oxen, asses, Camels and rayment, and returned and came to Achis. So whan Achis spake: Whither fell ye in to daye? Dauid sayde: Towarde the south parte of Iuda, towarde ¶ south parte of the Ierahmilielites, ¶ towarde the south parte of the Kenites. But Dauid let nether man ner woman come lyuynge vnto Geth, and thoughte: They mighte peraduenture speake ¶ reporte agaynst vs: thus dyd Dauid, and this was his maner as longe as he dwelt in ¶ londe of the Philistynes. Therefore Achis gaue credence vnto Dauid, and thoughte: he hath made him selfe stynte before his people of Israel therefore shal he be myseruauit for euer.

IT fortunat at ¶ same tyme, that the Philistynes gathered their hoost together to the battayll, to go agaynst Israel. And Achis sayde vnto Dauid: Thou shalt knowe, that thou and thy men shal go forth with me in the hoost. Dauid sayde vnto Achis: Well, thou shalt se what thy seruauit shal do. Achis saide vnto Dauid: Therefore wyll I ordene the to be the keeper of my heade as longe as I lyue. ¶ As for Samuel, he was deed, and all ¶ people had mourned for him, ¶ buried him in his cite Ramath. ¶ So Saul had dryuen the soithsayers and expounders of tokens out of ¶ londe. Now whan the Philistynes gathered them selues together, and came and pitched their tentes at Sunem, Saul gathered all the people together, ¶ they pitched at Gilboa. But whan Saul sawe the hoost of the Philistynes, he was afrayed, and his hert was discouraged, and he axed counsell at the LORDE. But ¶ LORDE gaue him no answer, nether by dreames, ner by the ¶ lighte, ner by prophetes.

Thē sayde Saul vnto his seruauentes: Seke me a womā which hath a sprete of soithsayēge, that I maye go vnto her, and axe at her. His seruantes sayde vnto him: Beholde, at Endor is there a woman, which hath a sprete of soythsayenge. And Saul chaunged his clothes, and put on other, and wente his waye and two men with him, and came by nighte vnto the woman, and sayde: Prophecie vnto me (I pray the) thorow the sprete of soythsayenge, and brynge me him vp whom I shal name vnto the. The womā saide vnto him: Beholde, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath rote out the soythsayers & witches from the londe, wherfore wilt thou brynge my soule then in to ſy nett, that I maye be slayne? But Saul sware vnto her by ſ LORDE, and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall no harme happen vnto the for this. Then sayde ſ woman: Whom shal I brynge vp vnto the? He sayde: Brynge me vp Samuel.

Now whan ſ woman sawe Samuel, she cryed loude, and sayde vnto Saul: Wherefore hast thou begyled me? Thou art Saul. And the kyng sayde vnto her: Feare not, what seist thou? The woman sayde vnto Saul: I se goddes cōmyng vnto out of ſ earth? He sayde: How is he shapened? She sayde: There cometh vp an olde man, and is clothed with a longe garment. Then perceaued Saul that it was Samuel, & bowed him selfe downe with his face to the grounde, and worshipped him.

Samuel saide vnto Saul: Why hast thou disquyeted me, to cause me be broughte vp? Saul sayde: I am sore troubled, the Philistynes fighte against me, & God is departed fro me, & geueth me no answer, nether by prophetes ner by dreames: therefore haue I called the, ſ thou mightest shewe me, what I shal do. Samuel sayde: What wilt thou axe at me, seynge the LORDE is departed from the, and is become thine enemye? The LORDE shal do vnto the euen as he spake by me, *and shall plucke the kyngdome out of thy hande, and geue it vnto Dauid thy neyghboure, because thou hast not herkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, ner performed the displeasure of his wrath agaynst Amalek. Therefore hath the LORDE done this now vnto the. Morouer the LORDE shal delyuer Israel with the also in the handes of the Philistynes: †tomorow shalt thou and thy sonnes be with me. And the hoost of Israel shal the LORDE delyuer in to the handes of the Philistynes. Then fell Saul immediatly vnto the earth, for he coule not stonde, and was sore afrayed at these wordes of Samuel, so that there was nomore strength in him: for he had eaten no bred all that daye and all that night.

And the woman wente in to Saul, & sawe that he was sore vexed, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy handmayde hath herkened vnto thy voyce, and I haue put my soule in my hande, so that I haue herkened vnto thy wordes which thou spakest vnto me. Therefore folowe thou also the voyce of thy handmayde. I wil set a morsell of bred before the to eate, that thou mayest come to thy strength, & go thy waye. But he refused, and sayde, I wil not eate. Then his seruantes & the woman cōpelled him, so that he herkened vnto their voyce.

And he rose vp from ſ grounde, and sat vpon the bed. The woman had a fat calfe at home, so she made haist, and kyllid it, and toke meell and dyd kneet it, and baked swete cakes, & broughte them forth before Saul, & before his seruantes. And whan they had eaten, they stode vp, and wete their waye ſ nighte.

The xxij. Chapter.

THE Philistynes gathered all their armies together at Aphek. But Israel pitched at Ain in Iesrael. And the prynces of the Philistynes wete forth with hundreds and with thousandes, but Dauid and his men wete behynde with Achis. Thē sayde the prynces of the Philistynes: What shal these Hebrues do? Achis saide vnto thē: Is not this Dauid ſ seruauent of Saul kyng of Israel, which hath bene with me now yeres and dayes, & I haue founde no euell in him sence the tyme that he fell to me vnto this daye? †Neuertheles the prynces of ſ Philistynes were wroth at him, & sayde vnto him: Let the man turne backe agayne, & abyde in his place, ſ which thou hast appoynted him. that he go not downe with vs to ſ batayll, and become oure aduersary in ſ felde. thousande? Then Achis called Dauid, and sayde vnto him: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, I take the for an honest man, and thy out goynge and ingoynge with me in þy hoost pleaseth me well, and no euell haue I marked in the, sence þy tyme that thou camest to me vnto this daye. But thou pleasest not the prynces. Returne now therefore, and go thy waye in peace, that thou do no euell in the sighte of the prynces of þy Philistynes.

Dauid sayde: What haue I done, & what hast thou marked in thy seruaunt, sence þy tyme that I haue bene in thy presence vnto this daye, that I shulde not come and fighte agaynst the enemies of my lorde the kynge? Achis answered and sayde vnto Dauid: I knowe well that thou pleasest myne eyes euē as an angell of God. But the prynces of þy Philistynes haue sayde: Let him not go vp with vs vnto the batayll. Get the vp therfore tomorow by tymes, and thy lordes seruauntes which are come with the. And whan ye haue gotten you vp early in the mornynge, whan it is lighte, go youre waye. So Dauid & his men gat them vp early, to go their waye in the mornynge, and to come agayne in to the londe of the Philistynes. But the Philistynes wente vp towarde Iesrael.

The xiiij. Chapter.

NOW whan Dauid came to Siclag on the thirde daie with his men, the Amalechites had fallē in on þy south parte and at Siclag, and had smytten Siclag, and burned it with fyre, and had caried awaye the wemē out of it, both small & greate. Neuertheles they had slayne no man, but dryuen thē thence, and were goynge on their waye. Now whan Dauid with his men came to the cite, and sawe that it was brent with fyre, and that their wyues, sonnes & daughters were led awaye captiue, Dauid and the people that was with him lefte vp their voyce, and wepte so longe tyll they coulde wepe nomore. For Dauids two wyues also were caried awaye captiue, Abinoam þy Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And Dauid was very soroufull, for the people wolde haue stoned him: for þy soule of all the people was in greate heynes, euery one ouer his sonnes and daughters.

Neuwertheles Dauid strenghten him selfe in the LORDE his God, & sayde vnto Abiathar þy prest the sonne of Ahimelech: *Bringe me hither the ouerbody cote. And whan Abiathar had broughte the ouerbody cote vnto Dauid, Dauid axed at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I folowe vpon the men of warre, and shal I ouertake them? He sayde: Yee, folowe vpō them, thou shalt ouertake them, and shalt rescue the pray. Then wente Dauid his waye, and the sixe hūdreth men that were with him. And whan they came to the ryuer of Besor, some stode styll. But Dauid and the foure hūdreth men folowed after: As for the two hūdreth men that stode styll, they had bene slowe to go ouer the ryuer of Besor.

And they founde a man of Egipte vpon the felde, him they broughte vnto Dauid, & gaue him bred to eate, and water to drynke, and gaue him a quantite of fygges, & two quantities of rasyns. And whan he had eaten, his sprete came to him agayne: for in thre dayes and thre nightes he had eatē no bred, and dronke no water.

Dauid sayde vnto him: Whose art thou? & whence art thou? He sayde: I am a childe of Egipte, an Amalechites seruaunt, & my master hath forsaken me, because I was sicke thre dayes a goo. We fell here in towarde þy south syde of Chrethus, and vpon Iuda, and towarde þy south parte of Caleb, & haue burned Siclag with fyre.

Dauid sayde vnto him: Wilt thou bringe me downe to these men of warre? He sayde: Swear vnto me by God, þy thou shalt not slaye me, ner deliuer me in to my masters hāde, and I wil brynge the downe to these mē of warre. And he broughte thē downe, and beholde, they were scatred vpon all þy grounde, eatinge and drynkyng, and kepyng holy daye, and were makinge mery chere, because of all the greate spoyles that they had taken out of the londe of the Philistynes and of Iuda.

And Dauid smote them from þy morow tyll the euen, agaynst the nexte daye, so that there escaped none, excepte foure hūdreth yonge men, which rode vpon camels, & fled. So Dauid rescued all that the Amalechites had taken, and his two wyues, & there myssed nothinge, nether small ner greate, nether sonnes ner daughters, ner spoyles: and what so euer they had taken, Dauid broughte all agayne. And Dauid toke the shepe and oxē, and droue y catell before him. And they sayde: This is Dauids spoyle.

And whan Dauid came to the two hundreth men, which had bene slowe to folowe after Dauid, and abode at the ryuer of Besor, they wente forth to mete Dauid, and the people y was with him. And Dauid came to the people, and saluted them frendly.

E Then answered such men as were euell ⁊ Belials men (amonge them that had gone with Dauid) and sayde: Seynge they wente not with vs, they shal haue none of the spoyle that we haue rescued: but let euery mā take his wife ⁊ his children and be goynge.

Then sayde Dauid: Ye shall not do so (my brethren) with that which y LORDE hath geuen vs, and hath preserued vs, and delyuered these men of warre (which were come agaynst vs) in to oure hādes. Who shulde cōsente vnto you herin? like as the porcion is of them that wente downe to the battayll, so shal y porcion be of them also that a bode with the stuffe, ⁊ shalbe deuyded a lyke.

F From that tyme forth hath this bene an ordinaunce ⁊ lawe in Israel vnto this daye. And whan Dauid came to Sielag, he sent of the spoyle vnto the Elders in Iuda his neighbours, and sayde: Beholde, there haue ye the blessinge out of the spoyle of the enemies of the LORDE, namely vnto them of Bethel, vnto them at Ramath in the south, vnto them at Iathir, vnto them at Aroer, vnto them at Siphamoth, vnto them at Eschemoa, vnto them at Rachal, vnto them in the cities of the Ierahmielites, vnto them in the cities of the Kenites, vnto them at Horma, vnto thē at Borasan, vnto thē at Atach, vnto them at Hebron, and vnto all the places where Dauid had walked with his men.

The xxi. Chapter.

BUT y *Philistynes foughte against Israel, and the men of Israel fled before the Philistynes, and fell downe smytten vpon the mount Gilboa. And the Philistynes preassed vpon Saul and his sonnes, and slewe Ionathas, ⁊ Abinadab and Malchisua the sonnes of Saul. And the battayll was sore agaynst Saul, ⁊ the archers fell vpon him with bowes, and he was sore wounded of the archers.

Then sayde Saul vnto his wapēbearer: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vncircumcised come not and slaie me, and make a laughinge stocke of me. Neuertheles his wapenbearer wolde not, for he was sore afrayed. Then toke Saul y B swerde, and fell therin. Now whan his wapenbearer sawe that Saul was deed, he fell also vpon his swerde, and dyed with him. Thus dyed Saul and his thre sonnes, ⁊ his wapenbearer, and all his men together the same daye.

Whan y men of Israel which were beyonde the valley, and beyonde Iordane, sawe, y the men of Israel were fled, and that Saul and his sonnes were deed, they lefte y cities, and fled also. Then came the Philistynes, ⁊ dwelt therin.

C On the nexte daye came the Philistynes to spoyle y slayne, and founde Saul and his thre sonnes lyenge vpon mount Gilboa, and smote of his heade, and toke of his harnesse, and sent it in to the lande of the Philistynes rōunde aboute, to shewe it in the house of their Idols, and amonge the people, ⁊ layed his harnesse in y house of Astaroth: but his body hanged they vp vpō the wall of Bethsan.

Whan they of Iabes in Gilead herde, what the Philistynes had done vnto Saul, they gat them vp, as many as were men of armes, and wente all the nighte, and toke y body of Saul, and the bodies of his sonnes from y wall of Bethsan, broughte thē to Iabes, ⁊ brent them there, and toke their bones, and buried them vnder y tre at Iabes, ⁊ fasted seue dayes.

AFTER  $\text{ḡ}$  death of Saul whan Dauid was come agayne from the "slaughter of  $\text{ḡ}$  Amalechites, and had remayned two dayes at Siclag, beholde, on the thirde daye there came a man out of Sauls hoost, with his clothes rente, and earth vpon his heade. And whan he came vnto Dauid, he fell downe to the grounde, and worshipped. Dauid sayde vnto him: Whence comest thou? He sayde vnto him: Out of the hoost of Israel am I fled. Dauid sayde vnto him: Tell me, what is the matter? He sayde: the people is fled from the battayll, and many of the people are fallen: Yee and Saul also is deed and his sonne Ionathas. Dauid sayde vnto the yonge mā that brought him this worde: How knowest thou that Saul and Ionathas his sonne are deed? The yonge man  $\text{ḡ}$  tolde him this, sayde: I came by chaunce vnto mount Gelboa, and beholde, Saul leaned vpon his speare,  $\text{ṯ}$  the charettes and horsmē folowed harde after him: and he turned him aboute, and sawe me, and called me. And I sayde: Here, am I. And he sayde vnto me: What art thou? I sayde vnto him: I am an Amalechite. And he saide vnto me: Come to me, and kyll me, for anguysh hath gotten holde of me: for my life is yet whole within me. Then stepte I to him and slewe him, for I knowe well that he coulde not lyue after his fall. And I toke the crowne from his

And Dauid sayde to the yonge man that broughte him worde: What art thou? He sayde: I am  $\text{ḡ}$  sonne of a straunger an Amalechite. Dauid sayde: How happeneth it that thou wast not afrayed to laye thine hāde vpon the LORDES anointed to destroye him? And Dauid sayde vnto one of his yonge men: Come hither, and slaye him. And he smote him that he dyed. Then sayde Dauid vnto him: Thy bloude be vpon thyne owne heade. † For thy mouth hath spoken against thyselfe and sayde: I haue slayne the anoynted of the LORDE. And Dauid mourned this lamentacion ouer Saul and Ionathas his sonne, and commaunded to teach the childrē of Iuda the bowe. Beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the righteous.

And there arose a sore harde battayll the same daye. But Abner and the men of Israel were put to flighte of Dauids seruauntes. Thre sonnes of Zeru Ia were there, Ioab, Abisai † Asahel. As for Asahel, he was lighte of fete as a Roo in ſ felde, † folowed after Abner, and turned not asyde nether to the righte hande ner to ſ lefte from Abner. Then Abner turned him aboute, and sayde: Art thou Asahel? He sayde: Yee. Abner sayde vnto him: Go thy waye ether to the righte hande or to the lefte, and get the one of ſ yonge men, and take his harnesse from him. Neuertheles he wolde not leaue of frō him. Then sayde Abner agayne to Asahel: Get the awaye frō me, why wilt thou that I snyte the to the grounde? and how darre I lifte vp my face before thy brother Ioab? Howbeit he wolde not go his waye.

Then Abner thrust him in with a speare in to his bely, so that the speare wēte out behynde him. And there he fell and dyed before him: and who so came to the place where Asahel laye deed, stode styll there. But Ioab and Abisai folowed vpon Abner, till the soune wente downe. And whan they came to þy hyll of Amma, which lieth before Giah, by þy waye to the wildernes of Gibeon, the children of Ben Iamin gathered them selues together behynde Abner, and grewe to a multitude, and stode vpon the toppes of an hyll.

B And Abner called vnto Ioab, and sayde: Shal the swerde the deuoure without ende? Knowest thou not, that it wyll be bytter at the last? How longe wil it be or thou saie vnto the people, that they leaue of from their brethrē? Ioab sayde: As truly as God lyueth yf thou haddest sayde thus daye in the morninge, the people had ceased euery one from his brother. And Ioab blew the trompet, & all the people stode still, and folowed nomore vpon Israel, nether foughte they eny more.

Abner and his men wente all that same night ouer the playne felde, and passed ouer Iordane, & walked thorow all Bithron, and came to the tentes. Ioab turned him from Abner, and gathered all þy people together. And of Dauids seruantes there myssed nyntene men, and Asahel. But Dauids seruantes had smytten so amonge Ben Iamin and the men of Abner, that thre hundredth and thre score men were deed. And they toke vp Asahel, and buried him in his fathers graue at Bethleem. And Ioab with his men wete all that night: and at the breake of the daie they came vnto Hebron.

The iij. Chapter.

AND there was a longe battayll betwene the house of Saul and the house of Dauid. But Dauid wente and increased, and the house of Saul wente and mynished. And vnto Dauid were children borne at Hebron. His firstborne sonne Ammon of Abinoam the Iesraelitisse: the seconde Chileab of Abigail the wyfe of Nabal of Carmel: the thirde Absalon the sonne of Maacha the daughter of Thalmai kynge of Gessur: the fourth Adonia the sonne of Hagith: the fyfth Saphatia the sonne of Abital: þy sixte Iethream of Egla Dauids wife. These were borne vnto Dauid at Hebron.

Now whan it was warre betwene the house of Saul & the house of Dauid, Abner strenghted Sauls house. And Saul had had a concubyne, whose name was Rispa the daughter of Aia. And Iszboeth sayde vnto Abner: Wherefore liest thou with my fathers concubyne? B

Then was Abner very wroth at these wordes of Iszboeth, and sayde: Am I a dogges heade then, that I agaynst Iuda do mercy vnto the house of Saul thy father, and vnto his brethren and kynsfolkes? and haue not deluyered the in to þy hande of Dauid, and thou layest a trespace to my charge this daye for a womans sake? God do Abner this and that, yf I do not *as the LORDE hath sworne vnto Dauid, that the kyngdome maye be taken fro the house of Saul, and þy seate of Dauid set vp ouer Israel and Iuda, from Dan vnto Berseba. Then coulde he not answer him one worde agayne, he feared him so.

And Abner sent messaungers vnto Dauid, sayenge: Whose is the londe? And sayde: Make thy couenaunt with me. Beholde, my hande shall be with the, to turne all Israel vnto the.

He sayde: Wel, I wyll make a couenaunt with the, but one thyng I desyre of the, that thou se not my face, excepte thou brynge me first Michol Sauls daughter, whan thou comest to se my face. Dauid sent messaungers also vnto Iszboeth the sonne of Saul, sayenge: †Gene me my wyfe Michol, whom I married with an hundredth foreskynnes of the Philistynes. Iszboeth sent, and caused for to take her from the man †Palthiel the sonne of Lais. And hir huszbande wente with her, and wepte behynde her vnto Bahurim. Then sayde Abner vnto him: Turne backe agayne, and go thy waye. And he turned backe agayne. C

And Abner talked with the Elders in Israel, and sayde: Your myndes haue bene set afore tyme and longe a goo vpon Dauid, that he mighte be kynge ouer you, do it now therefore, for þy LORDE hath sayde of Dauid: I wil deluyer my people of Israel by the hnde of Dauid my seruaut, from the hande of the Philistynes, and from the hande of all their enemies.

Abner spake also before the eares of Ben Iamin, and wente to speake before the eares of Dauid at Hebron all that Israel and the whole house of Ben Iamin was contente withall. Now whan Abner came to Hebron vnto Dauid, and twety men with him, Dauid made them a D feast. And Abner sayde vnto Dauid: I wyll get me vp, and go gather all Israel together to my lorde the kyng, and that they maye make a couenaunt with the, that thou mayest be kyng, at thy soules desyre.

So Dauid let Abner go from him in peace. And beholde, Dauid seruautes and Ioab came from the men of warre, and broughte a greate spoyle with them. And Abner was not now with Dauid at Hebron, for he had sent him from him, so that he was gone his waye in peace.

32 But whan Ioab and all the hoost with him was come, it was tolde him that Abner the sonne of Ner came to the kyng, and how he had sent him fro him, so that he was gone his waye in peace. Then wente Ioab in to the kyng, and sayde: What hast thou done? Beholde, Abner came to the, why hast thou sent him from the, that he is gone his waye? Knowest thou not Abner the sonne of Ner? For he came to the to disceau the, that he mighte knowe thy outgoynge, and ingoynge, and to spie out all that thou doest. And whan Ioab wente out from Dauid, he sent messaungers after Abner, to fetch him agayne from Boharsira, and Dauid knewe not therof. Now whan Abner came agayne vnto Hebron, Ioab brought him in to y middes vnder y gate, to talke with him secretly, and thrust him there in to y bely that he dyed, because of his brother Asahels bloude.

33 Whan Dauid knewe of it therafter, he sayde: I am vngiltye, and so is my kyngdome for euer before the LORDE concernynge the bloude of Abner y sonne of Ner: but vpon the heade of Ioab fall it, and vpon all his fathers house, and in the house of Ioab there cease not one to haue a renninge yssue and a leprosy, and to go vpon a staffe, and fall thorow the swerde, and to haue scarresse of bred. Thus Ioab and his brother Abisai slewe Abner, * because he had slayne their brother Asahel in the battaill at Gibeon.

Dauid sayde vnto Ioab and to all y people y was with him: Rente youre clothes, and gyrde sack cloth aboute you, and make lamentacion for Abner. And the kyng wente after the Bere. And whan they buried Abner at Hebron, the kyng lifte vp his voyce, and wepte besyde Abners graue, and all the people wepte also.

34 And the kyng mourned for Abner, and sayde: Abner is not deed as a foole dyeth. Thy handes were not bounde, thy fete were not vexed with fetters, thou art fallen as a man falleth before wicked vnthriftes. Then all the people bewayled him yet more.

Now whan all the people came in to eate with Dauid, whyle it was yet hye daye, Dauid sware, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, yf I taist ether bred or oughte els afore the Sone go downe. And all y people knewe it, and it pleased them well all that y kyng dyd in the sighte of all the people. And all the people and all Israel perceaued the same daye, that it came not of the kyng, that Abner the sonne of Ner was slayne. And the kyng sayde vnto his seruautes: Knowe ye not that this daye a pryncce and a greate man is fallen in Israel? As for me, I am yet but tender and anoynted kyng. But the men the children of Zeru Ia are to harde for me. The LORDE recompence him that doth euell, accordinge to his wickednes.

The iiij. Chapter.

35 WHAN Sauls sonne herde y Abner was deed at Hebron, his hādes were feble, 1 all Israel was sory. But there were two men captaynes ouer the soudyers vnder the sonne of Saul, the one was called Baena, the other Rehob, sonnes of Rimon y Berothite, of the childre of Ben Iamin: for Beroth was coūted also in Ben Iamin. And the Berothites were fled vnto Gethaim, 1 were straungers there vnto this daye. Ionathas also the sonne of Saul had a sonne which was lame on his fete, 1 was fyue yeaere olde whan the rumoure of Saul and Ionathas came from Iesrael. And his norse toke him, and fled. And whyle she made haist and fled, he fel, and was lame: And his name was Mephiboseth.

36 Then wente the sonnes of Rimon y Berothite, Rehob 1 Baena, 1 came to the house of Iszboseth, in the heate of the daye, 1 he laye vpō his bed at the noone daie. And they came in to the house to fetch wheate, 1 thrust him in the bely, 1 gat them awaye. For whā they came in to y house, he laye vpō his bed in his chamber. 1 they stickte him to death, 1 smote of his heade, and toke his heade, and departed by the waye of the playne felde all that nighte, and broughte the heade of Isboseth to Dauid vnto Hebron, and sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, there is the heade of Iszboſeth the ſonne of Saul thine enemye, which layed wayte for thy ſoule. This daye hath the LORDE auenged my lorde the kynge of Saul and his ſede.

C Then answered Dauid vnto Rehob and Baena his brother, & ſonnes of Rimou & Berrothite, & ſayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, which hath deliuered my ſoule out of all trouble, *I toke him & brought me worde and ſayde: Saul is deed, and he thoughte he had bene a good meſſaunger, and at Siclag I put him to death, vnto whom I ſhulde haue geuen a rewarde for his meſſage. And theſe vngodly perſonnes haue ſlayne a righteous man in his owne houſe vpon his bed. Yee ſhulde not I requyre his bloude of youre handes, and take you awaye from & earth? And Dauid commaunded his yonge men, which ſlewe them, and ſmote of their handes and fete, and hanged them vp by & pole at Hebron. But the heade of Iszboſeth toke they, and buried it in Abners graue at Hebron.

The b. Chapter.

AND all the trybes of Iſrael came to Dauid vnto Hebron, and ſayde: †Beholde, we are thy bone and thy fleſh. And afore tyme whā Saul was kynge ouer vs, thou leddeſt Iſrael out and in. So the LORDE hath ſayde: Thou ſhalt kepe my people of Iſrael, and ſhalt be the duke ouer Iſrael. And all the Elders in Iſrael came to & kynge vnto Hebron. And kynge Dauid made a couenaunt with them at Hebron before & LORDE. And they anoynted Dauid to be kynge ouer Iſrael. Thyrtye yere olde was Dauid when he was made kynge, and reigned fortye yeres. §At Hebron raigned he ſeuē yeres and ſixe monethes ouer Iuda: but at Ieruſalem he reigned thre and thyrtye yeres ouer all Iſrael and Iuda.

B And the kynge wente with his men to Ieruſalem, agaynſt the Iebuſites, which dwelt in the londe. Neuertheles they ſayde vnto Dauid: Thou ſhalt not come hither but the blynde and lame ſhal dryue & awaie. (They thoughte planely, that Dauid ſhulde not come in.) Howbeit Dauid waane the caſtell of ſion, which is the cite of Dauid. Then ſayde Dauid the ſame daye: ¶Who ſo euer ſmyteth the Iebuſites, and optayneth the perquellies, the lame & the blynde, which (Iebuſites) Dauids ſoule hateth. Herof cometh the prouerbe: *Let no blynde ner lame come in to the houſe. So Dauid dwelt in & caſtell, and called it the cite of Dauid. And Dauid builded roude aboute fro Millo and within. And Dauid grewe, & the LORDE the God Zebaoth was with him.

C And Hiram the kynge of Tyre ſent meſſaungers vnto Dauid, and Cedar trees for walles, and Carpenters, and Maſons, to builde Dauid an houſe. And Dauid knewe, that the LORDE had conſyrmed him kynge ouer Iſrael, and exalted his kingdome for his people of Iſraels ſake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues and concubynes at Ieruſalem, after he was come from Hebron, and there were yet mo ſonnes & daughters borne vnto him. ¶ And theſe are the names of them that were borne vnto him at Ieruſalem: Samma, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebehar, Eliſua, Nepheg, Iaphia, Eliſama, Eliada, Eliphalet.

And whan the Philiftines herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer Iſrael, they wote vp all to ſeke Dauid. Whan Dauid perceaued that, he wote downe in to a caſtell. But the Philiftynes came and ſcattered them ſelues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. **And Dauid axed at the LORDE, and ſayde: Shall I go vp agaynſt the Philiftynes? and wylt thou delyuer them in to my hande? The LORDE ſayde vnto Dauid: Go vp, I wyl delyuer the Philiftynes in to thy hande.

D And Dauid came vnto Baal Prazim, and ſmote thē there, and ſayde: The LORDE hath deuyded myne enemies, euen as the waters parte aſunder: therfore is the ſame place called Baal Prazim. And they lefte their ymages there, but Dauid and his men caried thē awaye.

Neuertheleſſe the Philiftynes wente vp agayne, and ſcattered them ſelues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed at the LORDE. The LORDE ſayde: Thou ſhalt go vp, but compaſe them behinde, that thou mayeſt be vpon them ouer agaynſt the Peer trees: and whan thou heareſt vpon the toppe of the Peertrees, the ſounde of the goinge be bolde, for then is the LORDE gone forth before the, to ſmyte the hoost of the Philiftines. The vi. Chapter.

AND Dauid gathered agayne all the yonge chosen men in Israel, <sup>a</sup>euen thre thousande, and gat him vp, and wente with all the people that was with him of the citesins of Iuda, to fetch vp the Arke of God from thence: whose name is: The name of the LORDE Zebaoth dwelleth theron betwene the Cherubins. * And they caused the arke of God to be caried vpō a new cart, †and fetched it out of ‡house of Abinadab, which dwelt at Gibeā. Vsa and Ahio the sonnes of Abinadab droue §new cart. And whan they broughte it with the Arke from the house of Abinadab which dwelt at Gibeā, Ahio wente before the Arke: and Dauid and all the house of Israel played before the LORDE, with all maner of instrumentes of Pine tre, with harpes, and Psalteries, and tabrettes, and belles, and Cymbals.

¶ And whan they came to the barnesfloore of Nahon, Vsa stretched out his hande, §and helde the Arke of God, for the oxen wete out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE fearce agaynst Vsa, and God smote him there because of his presumpciō, so that he dyed there besyde the Arke of God. Then was Dauid sory, because the LORDE had made soch a rente vpon Vsa, and he called the same place Perez Vsa vnto this daye. And Dauid feared the LORDE the same daie, and sayde: How shall the Arke of the LORDE come vnto me? And he wolde not let it be broughte to him in to the cite of Dauid, but caused it be brought in to §house of Obed Edom the Gathite. And whan the Arke of the LORDE had contynued thre monethes in the house of Obed Edom the Gathite, the LORDE blessed him and all his house.

¶ And it was tolde kyng Dauid, that the LORDE had blessed the house of Obed Edō and all that he had because of the Arke of God. ¶Then wente he, and fetched vp the Arke of God out of §house of Obed Edom in to the cite of Dauid with ioye. And whā they were gone sixe steppes in with the Arke of the LORDE, they offered an ox and a fat shepe. And Dauid daunsed with all his mighte before the LORDE, and was girded with an ouerbody cote of lynnē. And Dauid with all Israel brought vp §Arke of the LORDE with tabrettes and trompettes.

And whan the Arke of the LORDE came in to the cite of Dauid, Michol the daughter of Saul lokd out at a window, and sawe kyng Dauid leapyng, sprynginge and daūsynge before the LORDE, and despyed him in hir hert. But whan they brought in §Arke of the LORDE, they set it in hir place in the myddes of the Tabernacle, which Dauid had pitched for it. And Dauid offred burnt offerynges and deed offerynges before §LORDE. And whan Dauid had made an ende of offerynge the burntofferynge and deedofferynge, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth, and dealte out vnto all the people, and to the multitude of Israel, both to man ¶and womā, vnto euery one a cake of bred, and a pece of flesh, and a meece of potage. Then wente all the people their waye, euery one vnto his house.

Whan Dauid came agayne to blesse his house, Michol the daughter of Saul wente forth to mete him, and sayde: How glorious hath the kyng of Israel bene to daye, which hath vncovered himselfe before the maydēs of his seruantes, like as the rascall people discover them selues. But Dauid saide vnto Michol: I wil playe before §LORDE, which hath chosen me afore thy father, and afore all his house, because he hath commaunded me to be the prynce ouer the people of the LORDE, euen ouer Israel, and yet wyl I be vyler then so, and wyl be lowe in myne owne sighte: and with the maydens wherof thou hast spoken, wyl I be honoured. As for Michol the daughter of Saul, she had no childe vnto the daye of hir death.

The viij. Chapter.

NOW whan the kyng sat in his house, ¶and the LORDE had geuen him rest from all his enemies on euery syde, he sayde vnto the prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedre, and the Arke of God dwelleth amonge the curtaynes. Nathan sayde vnto the kyng: Go thy waye, what so euer thou hast in thine hert, §do: for the LORDE is with the. But the same night came §worde of the LORDE vnto Nathan, ¶and sayde: Go ¶and speake to my seruaut Dauid:

Thus sayeth  $\text{ȝ}$  LORDE: Shalt thou buylde me an house to dwell in? I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte the children of Israel vnto this daye, but haue walked in the Tabernacle and Habitation, whither so euer I wente with the children of Israel. Dyd I euer speake to eny of the trybes of Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people of Israel)  $\tau$  sayde: Wherefore do ye not buylde me an house of Cedar wodd?

So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruauunt Dauid: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: \*I toke the from the pasture whan thou wentest behynde the shepe,  $\text{ȝ}$  thou shuldest be  $\text{ȝ}$  pryncce ouer my people of Israel,  $\tau$  haue bene with the whither so euer thou wentest,  $\tau$  haue roted out all thine enemies before the,  $\tau$  haue made the a greate name, acordinge to the name of the greate men vpon earth. And for my people of Israel I wyll appoynte a place, and wyll plante them, that they maye remayne there, nomore to be remoued, and  $\text{ȝ}$  the childre of wickednes oppresseth them nomore, like as afore, and sence the tyme that I ordeyned Iudges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyll geue the rest from all thine enemies. And the LORDE sheweth the, that the LORDE wyl make the a house.

† Now whan thy tyme is fulfilled  $\text{ȝ}$  thou shalt slepe with thy fathers, I wil after  $\text{ȝ}$  rayse vp thy sedde, which shal come of thy body: his kyngdome wyl I stablishe, he shal buylde an house for my name,  $\dagger$  and I wyll stablishe  $\text{ȝ}$  seate of his kyngdome for euer.  $\S$  I wyll be his father, and he shall be my sonne. ¶ Whan he doth a trespase, I wyll reprove him with the rodd of men and with the plagis of  $\text{ȝ}$  childre of men: But my mercy shal not be withdrawn fro him, as I haue withdrawē it fro Saul, whō I haue takē awaye before the. As for thy house  $\tau$  thy kyngdome, it shal be established for euer before the,  $\tau$  thy seate shal endure fast for euermore.

Whan Nathan had tolde all these wordes  $\tau$  all this vision vnto Dauid, kynge Dauid came and sat him downe before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house,  $\text{ȝ}$  thou hast broughte me thus fare? This O LORDE God hast thou thoughte to litle also, but hast spoken of the house of thy seruauunt yet lōge for to come. O LORDE God, is that the lawe of men?

And what shall Dauid speake vnto the? thou knowest thy seruauunt O LORDE God, for thy wordes sake and acordinge to thy hert hast thou done all these greate thinges,  $\text{ȝ}$  thou mightest shewe thē vnto thy seruauunt. Therefore art thou greatly magnified O LORDE God:  $\dagger$  for there is none like the,  $\tau$  there is no God but thou, acordinge vnto all that we haue herde with oure eares. \*\* For where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel? For whose sake God wente to delyuer him a people, and to make him selfe a name, and to do them soch greate and terrible thinges in thy lōde before thy people,  $\dagger$  whom thou hast delyuered vnto thy selfe fro Egipte, from the people, and from their goddes. And thy people of Israel hast thou prepared the to be a people vnto thyne owne selfe for euer, and thou O LORDE art become their God.

Stablishe now  $\text{ȝ}$  worde therfore for euer (O LORDE God) which thou hast spokē ouer thy seruauunt  $\tau$  ouer his house,  $\tau$  do acordinge as thou hast sayde. So shall thy name be greate for euer, so that it shal be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth is the God ouer Israel,  $\tau$  the house of thy seruauunt Dauid shal be made sure before the. For thou LORDE Zebaoth, thou God of Israel hast opened the eare of thy seruauunt, and sayde: I wil buylde the an house. Therefore hath thy seruauunt founde his hert, to praye this prayer vnto the. † Now LORDE God thou thy selfe art God,  $\tau$  thy wordes shal be the trueth. Thou hast spoken soch good ouer thy seruauunt. Begynne now therfore, and blesse thy seruantes house, that it maye be before the for euer, for thou LORDE God thine awne selfe hast spoken it: and with thy blessinge shal thy seruantes house be blessed for euer.

And of them toke Dauid a thousande & seven hundred horsmen, and twenty thousande fote men, and lamed all the charettes, saue an hundred which he keppe behynde. But the Siryans came from Damascon to helpe Hadad Eser kyng of Zoba. And Dauid smote two and twenty thousande men of the Siryans, and layed people vnto Damascus in Syria.

This was Syria subdued vnto Dauid, so that they brought him giftes: for þe LORDE helped Dauid whither so euer he wente. do mercy vpon him for Ionathas sake? There was a seruaunt of Sauls house, named Siba, whom they called vnto Dauid, & the kyng sayde vnto him: Art thou Siba? He sayde: Yee thy seruaunt. The kyng sayde: Is there yet eny man of Sauls house, & I maye do the mercy of God vpon him? Siba sayde vnto the kyng: ** There is yet a sonne of Ionathas, lame on his fete. The kyng sayde vnto him: Where is he? Siba sayde vnto þe kyng: Beholde, he is at Ladober in þe house of Machir þe sonne of Ammuel. Thē sent kyng Dauid thither, & caused for to fetch him from Ladober out of þe house of Machir the sonne of Ammuel.

B Now whan Mephiboseth the sonne of Ionathas the sonne of Saul came vnto Dauid, he fell vpon his face, & worshiped him. Dauid sayde: Mephiboseth. He sayde: Here am I thy seruaunt. Dauid sayde vnto him: Feare not, for I wyll do mercy vpon the for thy father Ionathas sake, and wil restore vnto the all the londe of thy father Saul: but thou shalt eate bred daylie at my table. He worshiped and sayde: Who am I thy seruaunt, that thou turnest the to a deed dogg as I am?

C Then the kyng called Siba þe seruaunt of Saul, and sayde vnto him: All þe hath belonged vnto Saul & to all his house, haue I geuen to thy lordes sonne. Tyll his londe for him therfore, thou & thy children & seruauntes, & brynge it in, & it maye be bred for thy lordes sonne, and þe he maye enioye it: but Mephiboseth thy lordes sonne shal eate bred daylie at my table. Siba had fyftene sonnes & twenty seruauntes. And Siba sayde vnto þe kyng: Acordinge vnto all as my lorde the kyng hath commaunded his seruaunt, so shal his seruaunt do. And let Mephiboseth (sayde Dauid) eate at my table, as one of the kynges owne children. And Mephiboseth had a yōge sonne, whose name was Micha. But all þe dwelt in the house of Siba, serued Mephiboseth. As for Mephiboseth him selfe, he dwelt at Ierusalem: for he ate daylie at the kynges table †: and was lame on both his fete.

A ND it fortuneth after this, that þe kyng of the children of Ammon dyed, & his sonne Hanun was kyng in his steade. Then sayde Dauid: I wyll do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, as his father dyd merey vpon me. And so he sent, and comforted him by his seruantes ouer his fathers death. Now whan Dauids seruantes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon, the mightie men of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun their lorde: Thykest thou it is for the honour of thy father in thy sighte, y David hath sent comforters vnto the? Hath he not sent his seruantes vnto y (thykest thou) to spye and search out the cite and to ouerthrowe it?

B Then toke Hanun the seruantes of Dauid, and shoue of the one halue of their beerdes, and cut of the halfe of their garmētes euen by the girdell, and so let them go. Whā this was tolde Dauid, he sent to mete them: for the men were put to greate shame. And the kynge caused to saye vnto them: Abyde at Iericho, tyll youre beerdes be growne, and then come agayne.

Whan the childrē of Ammon sawe that they stynked in the sighte of Dauid, they sent and hyred the Sirians of the house of Rehob, and the Sirians at Zoba euen twentie thousande fote men, and from the kynge of Maecha a thousande men, and from Istob twolue thousande men. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab with all the hoost of y men of warre. And the children of Ammon wente forth, and prepared them selues to y battayll before the inтраunce of the gate. But the Sirians of Soba, of Rehob, of Istob and of Maecha were alone in the felde.

C Now whan Ioab sawe that the battayll was set vpō him before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst the Syrians. And the resydue of the people put he vnder the hande of his brother Abisai, that he mighte prepare him agaynst the childrē of Ammon. And sayde: Yf y Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the children of Ammon be to mightie for the, I shal helpe the. Take a good corage vnto the, and let vs be stronge for oure people, and for y cite of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him.

And Ioab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst the Syrians: and they fled before him. And whan the children of Ammon sawe that the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai, and wente in to the cite. So Ioab turned agayne from the children of Ammon, and came to Ierusalem. And whan the Syrians sawe y they were smytten before Israel, they came together.

And Hadad Eser sent and broughte out y D Syrians beyonde the water, and conueyed their power in, and Sobath the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before thē. Whan this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane, and came to Helam, and the Syrians prepared them selues against Dauid to fighte with him, howbeit the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid slewe of the Syrians seuē hundreth charettes, and fortye thousande horsmē, and Sobath the chefe captayne smote he also, so that he dyed there. Whan the kynges which were vnder Adad Eser, sawe, that they were smytten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and were subdued vnto them. And the Syrians were afrayed to helpe the children of Ammon eny more.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan y yeare came aboute what A tyne as y kynges vse to go forth, Dauid sent Ioab and his seruantes with him, and all Israel, to destroye the children of Ammon, and to laye sege vnto Rabba: but Dauid abode at Ierusalem.

And aboute the enētyde it fortunēd that Dauid arose from his restinge place, and wente vp to y toppē of the kynges palace, and from y toppē he sawe a woman *waszshinge hir selfe, and the woman was of a very fayre bewtye. And Dauid sent, and caused to axe what woman it was, and sayde: Is not that Bethseba the daughter of Eliam the wife of Vrias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messengers, and caused for to fetch her. And whā she was come in vnto him, he laye with her. Neuertheles she halowed hir selfe from hir vncleennes, and turned agayne vnto hir house. And the womā was with childe, and sent, and caused to tell Dauid and to saye: I am with childe. Dauid sent vnto Ioab (saye: Sende me Vrias y Hethite. And Ioab sent Vrias vnto Dauid. And whan Vrias came to him, Dauid axed him yf it stode well with Ioab, and with the people and with the battayll.

* 1 Par. 21. a.

to thy house, and wash thy fete. And whan Vrias wente out of the kynges palace, the kynges gifte folowed him. And Vrias layed him downe to slepe before the kynges palace gate, where all his lordes seruantes laye, ⁊ wente not downe in to his house. Whan worde came to Dauid: Vrias is not gone downe in to his house, Dauid sayde vnto him: Canest thou not ouer the felde? Why wentest thou not downe in to thy house? Vrias sayde vnto Dauid: The Arke and Israel ⁊ Iuda abyde in the tentes: And Ioab my lorde and my lordes seruantes lye in ⁊ felde, and shal I go in to my house to eate and drynke, and to lye with my wife? As truly as thou lyst, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not do this thinge. Dauid sayde vnto Vria: Abyde here then to daye, to morow wil I let the go. So Vrias abode at Ierusalem the same daye, and the nexte also. And Dauid called him to eate ⁊ drynke before him, ⁊ made him drunken. And at euen he wente to lye him downe for to slepe vpon his couche with his lordes seruantes, and wente not downe in to his house.

¶ On the morow wrote Dauid a letter vnto Ioab, ⁊ sent it by Vrias. After this maner wrote he in the letter: Set Vrias in ⁊ sorest parte of ⁊ batayll, ⁊ turne you behynde him, ⁊ he maye be slayne. Now whā Ioab layed sege to the cite, he set Vrias in ⁊ place, where he knewe ⁊ the mightiest men of Armes were. And whan the men of the cite fell out and foughte agaynst Ioab, there fell certayne of ⁊ people of Dauids seruantes. And Vrias the Hethite dyed also.

Then sent Ioab, and caused to tell ⁊ kynge all the matter concernynge the batayll, and cōmaunded the messaunger, and sayde: Whan thou hast tolde ⁊ kynge all the matter concernynge the batayll, and seist that he is wroth, and yf the kynge saye vnto the: Wherefore came ye so nye the cite with the batayll? Knowe ye not how they vse to shute from the wall? * Who smote Abimelech the sonne of Ierubaal? Dyed not a womā cast a pece of a mylstone vpō him from the wall, so that he dyed at Thebez? Why came ye so nye the wall? Then shalt thou saye: Thy seruauit Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

¶ The messaunger wente his waye, and came and tolde Dauid all together, wherfore Ioab had sent him. And the messaunger sayde vnto Dauid: The men preuayled against vs, and fell out vnto vs in to ⁊ felde: and we were vpon them harde at the dore of ⁊ porte. And the archers shot from the wall vpon thy seruantes, and slewe certayne of the kynges seruantes: and thy seruauit Vrias the Hethite is deed also.

Dauid sayde vnto the messaunger: Thus shalt thou saye vnto Ioab: Let not ⁊ vex the, for the swerde consumeth now one now another. Go forth with the batayll against the cite, that thou mayest destroye it, and cōforte the men. And whan Vrias wife herde that Vrias was deed, she mourned for hir huszbande. But whā she had made an ende of mournyng, Dauid sent, and caused her be fetched vnto his palace, and she became his wyfe, and bare him a sonne. Neuertheles this dede ⁊ Dauid dyd, displeased the LORDE.

The xij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE sent Nathan vnto Dauid. Whan he came to him, he tolde him: There were two men in one cite, the one riche, the other poore. The riche man had very many shepe and oxen: but the poore man had nothinge saue one litle shepe, which he had boughte, and norished it, so that it grewe vp with him and his children together. It ate of his bred, and dranke of his cuppe, and slepte in his lappe, and he helde it as a daughter. But whan there came a straunger vnto the riche man, he spared to take of his awne shepe ⁊ oxen (to prepare oughte for the straunger that was come vnto him) and toke the poore mans shepe, and prepared it for the man that was come vnto him.

Thē was Dauid wroth with greate displeasure agaynst that man, and sayde vnto Nathan: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, the man that hath done this, is the childe of death. † The shepe also shal he make good foure folde, because he hath done soch a thinge, and not spared it.

Then sayde Nathan vnto Dauid: Thou art euen the man. Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: † I haue anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel, and deluyered the out of the bande of Saul, and haue geuen the thy lordes house, and his wyues in to thy lappe, and the house of Israel and Iuda haue I geuen the: and yf that be to litle, I wyl yet do this and that for the also. Wherefore hast thou then despyed the worde of the LORDE, to do soch euell in his sighte? Vrias the Hethite hast thou slayne with the swerde: His wife hast thou taken to be thy wyfe, but him hast thou slayne with y<sup>e</sup> swerde of the children of Ammon.

C Now therfore shal not y<sup>e</sup> swerde departe from thy house for euer, because thou hast despyed me, and taken the wife of Vrias the Hithite, to be thy wife. Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, * I wyl rayse vp euell of thyne awne house, and wyl take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and wyl geue them vnto thy neighboure, so that he shall lye with thy wyues by Sonne lighte. For thou hast done it secretly, but I wyl do this in the sighte of all Israel, and by Sonne lighte.

Then sayde Dauid vnto Nathan † I haue synned vnto the LORDE. Nathan sayde vnto Dauid: So hath the LORDE also taken awaye thy synne, thou shalt not dye. But for so much as thou thorow this dede hast caused the enemies of the LORDE to blasphemie, y<sup>e</sup> sonne that is borne vnto the, shall dye the death. And Nathan wente home. As for the childe which Vrias wife bare vnto Dauid, the LORDE smote it, so that it was deedeicke.

D And Dauid besoughte God for the childe, and fasted, and wente in, and laie all nighte vpon the earth. Then rose the Elders of his house, and wolde haue taken him vp frō the grounde: neuertheles he wolde not, nether ate he with them. Vpon the seuenth daye y<sup>e</sup> childe dyed. And Dauids seruantes durst not tell him that the childe was deed. For they thoughte: Beholde, whan the childe was yet alyue, we spake vnto him, and he herkened not vnto oure voyce, How moch more shall it greue him, yf we saye: The childe is deed? And Dauid sawe that his seruantes made a whisperinge together, and perceaued that the childe was deed, and sayde vnto his seruantes: Is the childe deed? They sayde: Yee. Then rose Dauid vp from the earth, and wasshed him selfe, and anoynted him, and put on other garmentes, ⁊ wente in to the house of the LORDE, and worshipped.

E And whan he came agayne, he commaunded to set bren before him, and ate. Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: What maner of thinge is this that thou doest? Whan the childe was alyue, thou fastedst and wepest: but now that it is deed, thou stodest vp and eatest? He sayde: I fasted and wepte for the childe whan it was yet a lyue, for I thoughte: Who knoweth, peraduenture the LORDE maye be gracious vnto me, that the childe maye lyue. ‡ But now that it is deed, wherfore shulde I fast? Can I fetch it agayne? I shal go vnto it, but it shall not come agayne vnto me. And whan Dauid had comforted Bethseba his wife, he wente in vnto her, and laye with her. § And she bare a sonne, whom he called Salomon. And the LORDE loued him. And he put him vnder the hāde of Nathan y<sup>e</sup> prophet, which called him ledidia because of the LORDE.

So Ioab foughte agaynst Rabba of y<sup>e</sup> children of Ammon, and wanne the kynges cite, ⁊ sent messāgers vnto Dauid, ⁊ caused to saye vnto him: ¶ I. haue foughte against Rabba, and haue wonne the water cite also. Gather thou therfore the residue of the people together, and laye sege to y<sup>e</sup> cite, and wyne it, that I wyne it not, and haue the name therof. So Dauid gathered all y<sup>e</sup> people together, and wente, ⁊ foughte agaynst Rabba, and wanne it, and toke their kynges crowne frō his heade (which in weight had a talente of golde, and precious stones) and was set vpon Dauids heade, and very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that was therein, he broughte thē forth, and layed them vnder yron sawes and hokes and wedges of yron, and burned thē in tyle ouens. Thus dyd he vnto all the cities of the children of Ammon. Then returned Dauid and all the people vnto Ierusalem agayne.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd after this, that Absalom y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Dauid had a fayre sister, whose name was Thamar, ⁊ Ammon the sonne of Dauid loued her. And Ammon was in greate combrance, in so moch that he was euen sicke, because of Thamar his sister. For she was a virgin, and Ammon thoughte it shulde be harde for him to do eny thinge vnto her. But Ammon had a frēde, whose name was Ionadab the sonne of Simea Dauids brother. And the same Ionadab was a very wyse man, which sayde vnto him: Why art thou so leane (thou kynges sonne) from daye to daye? Mayest thou not tell me? Then sayde Ammon vnto him: I loue Thamar my brother Absaloms sister exceedingly.

B Ionadab sayde vnto him: laye the downe vpon thy bedd, and make the sicke. And whan thy father cometh to loke how thou doest, saye vnto him: Oh let my sister Thamar come, that she maye fede me, and make a meece of meate before me, that I maye se it, & eate it of hir hande. So Ammon layed him downe, and made him sicke. Now whā the kyng came in to loke how he dyd, Ammon sayde vnto the kyng: Oh let my sister Thamar come, and make me a syppyng or two, and that I maye eate it of hir hande. Then sent Dauid for Thamar in to the house, and sayde vnto her: Go thy waye to thy brother Ammons house, & make him a meece of meate. Thamar wente vnto hir brother Ammons house, but he laye in his bed. And she toke floure, and mixte it, and dighte it before his eyes, and made him a syppyng. And she toke the meece of meate, and poured it out before him: but he wolde not eate.

C And Ammon saide: Put forth euery man fro me. And euery man wete forth from him. Then sayde Ammon vnto Thamar: Brynge me that meece of meate in to the chamber, that I maye eate it of thy hande. Then toke Thamar ſyppyng that she had made, and broughte it vnto Ammon hir brother in to the chamber.

And whan she broughte it vnto him ſhe mighte eate, he toke holde of her, & sayde vnto her: Come my sister, lye with me. Neuertheles she saide: Oh no my brother, force me not: for so do they not in Israel, do not thou soch foly. Whither shal I go with my shame? And thou shalt be as one of the vnweyse in Israel. But speake vnto the kyng, he shal not withholde me from the.

D Howbeit he wolde not herken vnto her, and ouercame her, *and forced her, and laye with her. Ammon hated her exceedingly, so that the hate was greater then the loue was before. And Ammon sayde vnto her: Vp, and get the hence.

She saide vnto him: This euell that thou thrustest me out, is greater then the other, that thou hast done vnto me. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, but called his boye that serued him, and sayde: Put awaye this woman fro me, and locke the dore after her. And she had a partye garment on: for soch garmentes wayre ſy kynges daughters whyle they were virgins.

And whā his seruauant had put hir forth, & lockte the dore after her, Thamar strowed aszshes vpon hir heade, and rente the partye garment which she had vpon her, and layed hir hande vpon hir heade, and wente on, and cryed. And hir brother Absalom sayde vnto her: Hath thy brother Ammon bene with the? Now holde thy peace my sister, it is thy brother, and take not the matter so to hert.

So Thamar remayned a wyddowe in her brother Absaloms house. And whan kyng Dauid herde of all this, he was very sory. As for Absalom, he spake nether euell ner good to Ammon: but Absalom hated Ammon, because he had forced his sister Thamar.

After two yeaes had Absalom shepe clyppers at Baal Hazor, which lyeth by Ephraim. And Absalom called all the kynges children, and came to the kyng, and sayde: Beholde, thy seruauant hath shepe clyppers, let it please ſy kyng with his seruantes to go with his seruante. But the kyng sayde vnto Absalom: No my sonne, let vs not all go, lest we be to chargeable vnto the.

And he wolde nedes haue had him to go, howbeit he wolde not, but blessed him. Absalom sayde: Shall my brother Ammon go with vs then? The kyng sayde vnto him: Wherefore shall he go with the? Then was Absalom so importune vpon him, that he let Ammon and all the kynges childre go with him.

F But Absalom commaunded his yonge men, and sayde: Take hede whan Ammon is mery with wyne (and I saye vnto you: Smyte Ammon, and slaye him) that ye be not afrayed: for I haue commaunded you, be stronge, and playe the men. So Absaloms yonge men dyd vnto Ammon, as Absalom had commaunded them. Then stode all the kynges children vp, and euery one gat him vp vpon his Mule, and fled. And whyle they were yet on their waye, the rumoure came to kyng Dauid, that Absalom had slayne all the kynges children, so that not one of them was left.

Then stode the kyng vp, and reute his clothes, & layed him downe vpon the earth, and all his seruantes that stode aboute him, rente their clothes. Then answered Ionadab § sonne of Simea Dauids brother. and sayde: Let not my lorde thynke that all the yonge men the kynges children are deed, but § Ammon is deed onely: for Absalom hath kepte it in him selfe sence the daie that he forced his sister Thamar. Therefore let not my lorde the kynge take it so to hert, that all the kynges children shulde be deed, but that Ammon is deed onely.

¶ As for Absalom, he fled. And the yonge man that kepte the watch, lifte vp his eyes, and loked, and beholde, A greate people came in the waye one after another by the hill syde. Then sayde Ionadab vnto the kynge: Beholde, the kynges children come. Euen as thy seruauant sayde, so is it happened. And whan he had ended his talkynge, the kynges children came, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte.

The kynge and all his seruauantes wepte also very sore. But Absalom fled, and wente vnto Thahnai the sonne of Ammihud kynge of Gesur. As for Dauid he mourned for his sonne euery daye. Whan Absalom was fled and gone vnto Gesur, he was there thre yere. And kynge Dauid ceased from goinge out agaynst Absalom, for he had comforted him selfe ouer Ammon that he was deed.

The xiiij. Chapter.

¶ IOAB the sonne of Ieru Ia perceaued § the kynges hert was agaynst Absalom, and sent vnto Thecoa, and caused to fetch from thence a prudent woman and saide vnto her: Make lamētacion, and weere mournynge garments, & anoynte the not with oyle: but fayue thy selfe as a woman which hath mourned longe ouer a deed, and thou shalt go in to the kynge, and speake so & so vnto him. And Ioab tolde her what she shulde saye.

And whan the woman of Thecoa wolde speake with the kynge, she fell vpon hir face to the grounde, and worshipped, and sayde: Helpe me O kynge. The kynge sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: I am a wedowe, a woman that mourneth, and my huszbaide is deed. And thy handmayde had two sonnes, which stroue together in the felde: and whyle there was noman to parte thē a sunder, the one smote the other, and slewe him.

And beholde, all the whole kynred ryseth vp agaynst thy handmayden, and saye: † Delyuer him which hath snytten his brother, that we maye kyll him, for the soule of his brother whom he hath slayne, and that we maye destroye the heyre also. And thus are they mynded to put out my sparke, which yet is lefte, that there shulde no name ner eny thinge els remayne ouer vnto my huszbaide vpon earth.

The kynge sayde vnto the woman: Go thy waye home, I wil geue a cōmaudemēt for §. And the woman of Thecoa saide vnto § kynge: The trespass be vpon me (my lorde § kynge) and vpon my fathers house: but the kynge and his seate be vngiltye. The kynge sayde: He that speaketh agaynst the, brynge him vnto me, so shall he touch the nomore. She sayde: Let the kynge thynke vpon the LORDE his God, that there be not to many auengers of bloude to destroye, and that they brynge not my sonne to naught. He sayde: † As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall not one heer of thy sonne fall vpon the earth. And the woman sayde: Let thy handmayde speake somewhat to my lorde the kynge. He sayde: speake on. The woman sayde: Wherefore hast thou deuised soch a thinge agaynst the people of God? And how happeneth it that the kynge speaketh soch, to make himselfe giltye, and causeth not his out lawe to be broughte agayne? For we all dye the death, and as the water that sinketh in to the earth, which is not taken vp. † And God will not take awaye the lyfe, but vnbethynketh himselfe, § euen the very outlawe be not cleane thrust out from him.

Thus am I come also to speake this to my lorde the kynge in the presence of the people, for thy handmayden thoughte: I wyll speake to the kynge, peraduenture he shall do that his handmayden sayeth, for he shall heare his handmayden, to delyuer me from the hande of all them, that wolde destroye me with my sonne from the enheritaunce of God. And thy handmayden thoughte, § worde of my lorde the kynge shall be as a meatofferynge, § for my lorde the kinge is as an angell of God, so that he can heare good and euell, therefore shall the LORDE thy God be with the.

The kynge answered and sayde vnto the woman: Kepe nothyng from me that I axe the. The woman sayde: Let my lorde the kynge speake on. The kynge sayde: Is not the hande of Ioab with the in all this? The woman answered and sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth (my lorde O kynge,) there is els nomau nether at the righte hande ner at y leve, but euen as my LORDE the kynge hath sayde, for thy seruauit Ioab hath commaunded me, and he himselte hath taughte thy handmayden all these wordes, that I shulde turne this matter of this faszshio, this hath Ioab thy seruauit done. But my lorde is wyse, as the wysdome of an angell of God, so that he knoweth all thynges vpon earth.

Then sayde the kynge vnto Ioab: Beholde, I haue done this: go thy waye therfore and brynge the childe Absalom agayne.

Then fell Ioab vpon his face vnto the grounde, and worshipped, and thanked the kynge, and sayde: This daye doth thy seruauit perceauce, that I haue founde grace in thy syghte my lorde the kynge, in that the kynge doth as his seruauit hath sayde. So Ioab gat him vp, and wente vnto Gesur, and broughte Absalom to Ierusalem. But the kynge sayde: Let him go agayne in to his house, and not se my face. Thus Absalom came agayne to his house, and sawe not y kynges face.

But in all Israel there was not so fayre, and so maruelous goodly a man, as Absalom. From the sole of his fote vnto the toppe of his heade there was not one blemysch in him. And whan his heade was rounded (that was comonly euery yeaere, for it was to heuy for him, so that it must nedes haue bene rounded) the heer of his heade weyed two hūdreth Sicles after y kynges weight. And vnto Absalom there were borne thre sonnes and one daughter, whose name was Thamar, and she was a woman of a fayre bewtye: So Absalom abode two yeaere at Ierusalem, and sawe not the kynges face.

And Absalom sent for Ioab, that he mighte sende him to the kynge. And he wolde not come to him. But he sent the seconde tyme, yet wolde he not come. Then sayde he vnto his seruauites: Ye knowe Ioabs pece of londe that lyeth by myne, and he hath barlye thereon: go youre waye therfore and set fyre vpon it. So Absaloms seruauites sett fyre vpon Ioabs pece of londe.

Then Ioab gat him vp, and came to Absalom in to the house, and sayde vnto him: Wherfore haue thy seruauites set fire vpon my pece of londe? Absalō sayde vnto Ioab: Beholde, I sent for the, and caused to saye vnto the: Come hither, that I maye sende the to the kynge, and to saye: Wherfore came I from Gesur? It were better for me that I were there yet. Let me therfore se the kynges face. But yf there be eny trespase in me, then put me to death. And Ioab wente in to the kynge, and tolde him. And he called Absalom, to come in to the kynge, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde before the kynge. And the kynge kyssed Absalom.

The xv. Chapter.

AND after this it fortuneth that Absalom caused to prepare himselfe chearettes and horses, and fyfye men, which were his fote mē. And Absalō gat him vp allwaye early in the mornyng, and stode in the waye by the porte: and whan eny man had a matter which shulde come to the kynge for iudgment, Absalom called vnto him and sayde: Of what cite art thou? Yf he sayde then: thy seruauit is of one of the trybes of Israel, then sayde Absalom vnto him: Beholde, thy matter is righte and plaine: but there is no man appoynted y of the kynge to heare the.

And Absalom sayde: O who setteth me to be iudge in y londe, that euery man which hath a plee or matter to do in y lawe, might come to me, that I might helpe him to right. And whan eny man came to him to do worshippe to do him obeisaunce, he put forth his hāde, and helde him and kyssed him. After this maner dyd Absalom vnto all Israel whan they came to the lawe vnto the kynge, and so dyd he steale awaye the hert of y men of Israel.

After fortye yeaeres sayde Absalom vnto the kynge: I wil go and perforce my vowe at Hebron, which I made vnto the LORDE. For thy seruauit made a vowe, * whan I dwelt at Gesur in Siria, and saide: Whan y LORDE bryngeth me agayne to Ierusalem, I shal do a Gods seruyce vnto the LORDE. The kynge sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Hebron.

* 2 Re. 13. g.

But Absalom had sent out spyes in all the trybes of Israel, sayenge: Whan ye heare the noyse of the trompe, saye: Absalom is made kyng at Hebron. There wente with Absalom two hundreth men called from Ierusalem, but they wente on symply, and knewe not of the matter. Absalom sent also for Achitophel (the Gilonyte) Dauids counceiler, out of his cite Gilo. Now whan he did the sacrifice, the conspiracion was mightie and the people ranne together, and multiplyed with Absalom.

Then came one which tolde Dauid, and sayde, that the hert of euery man in Israel folowed Absalom. Dauid sayde vnto all his seruantes that were with him at Ierusalem: Vp, let vs fle, for here shall be no escapyng for vs before Absalom.

Make haist that we maye be goyng, lest he ouertake vs and catch vs, and dryue some mysfortune vpon vs, and smyte the eyte with the edge of the swerde. Then sayde the kynges seruantes vnto him: Loke what my lorde & kyng choseth, beholde, here are thy seruantes. And the kyng wente forth on fote with all his housholde. *But ten concubynes lefte he to kepe the house.

And whan the kyng and all the people came forth on fote, they wete farre from home, and all his seruantes wente by him, and all the Chrethians and Plethians, and all the Gethites (euen sixe hundreth men) which were come on fote from Gath, wente before the kyng.

And the kyng sayde vnto †Ithai & Gethite: Why goest thou also with vs? Turne backe, and byde with the kyng, for thou art a straunger: get the hence agayne vnto thy place. Thou camest yesterdaye, and to daye thou iuperdest to go with vs: As for me, I wyl go whither I can: turne thou backe agayne, and mercy and faithfulness happen vnto thy brethren with the. Ithai answered, and sayde, †As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as my lorde the kyng lyueth, loke in what place my lorde the kyng shalbe, (whether it chaunce to life or death) there shal thy seruant be also.

Dauid sayde vnto Ithai: Then come, and go with vs. So wente Ithai the Gethite and all his men, and the whole multitude of the children that were with him. And all the lande wepte with loude voyce, and all the people with them. And the kyng wete ouer the broke Cedron, and all the people wente ouer by the waye that goeth to the wyldernes.

And beholde, Sadoc was there also, and all the Leuites that were with them, & they bare & Arke of the coudenait of God, and set it there. And Abiathar wente vp, tyll all the people came out of the cite. But the kyng sayde vnto Sadoc: Brynge the Arke of God in to the cite agayne. Yf I shal fynde grace before the LORDE, he shall fetch me agayne, and shall let me se it, and the house of it. But yf he saye thus: I haue no pleasure to &, beholde, here am I, let him do with me as it pleaseth him.

And the kyng sayde vnto Sadoc & prest: O thou & Seer, turne agayne to & cite with peace, and Ahimaas thy sonne with the and Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar: beholde, I wyl tary in the playne of the wyldernes, tyll the message come from you, and tell me. So Sadoc and Abiathar broughte the Arke of God agayne to Ierusalem, and remayned there.

But Dauid wente vp to mount Olyuete and wepte, & his heade was couered. And all the people that was with him, had euery man his heade couered and wente on and wepte. And whan it was tolde Dauid, that Achitophel was in the cōfederacy with Absalom, he sayde: LORDE turne thou Achitophels counsell to foolishnes.

And whan Dauid came vp to the toppes of the mount, where the vse was to worshippinge God, Chusai the Arachite met him with his cote rent, and earth vpon his heade. And Dauid sayde vnto him: Yf thou go with me, thou shalt be chargeable vnto me: but yf thou goest agayne in to the cite, and sayest vnto Absalom: I am thy seruant O kyng euen as I was thy fathers seruant, so wyl I now be thy seruant, ¶Then shalt thou brynge Achitophels counsell to naughte. So is Sadoc and Abiathar & prestes with the, and all that thou hearest out of the kynges house, tell it vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes. Beholde, their two sonnes are with the: Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc, and Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar, by them mayest thou sende me worde what thou hearest. So Chusai Dauids frende came in to the cite. And Absalom came to Ierusalem.

The xvi. Chapter.

AND whan Dauid was gone a lytle by from the toppe of the mount, beholde, Siba the seruaunt of Mephiboseth met him with a couple of asses saddled, wheron were two hundreth loaues of bred, and an hundreth quantities of rasyus and an hundreth quantities of fygges, and a bottell of wyne. Then sayde the kyng vnto Siba: What wilt thou do herewith? Siba sayde: The asses shalbe for the kynges housholde to ryde vpon, and the loaues and fygges for the yonge men to eate, and the wyne shallbe for them to drynke whan they are weery in the wyldernes. The kyng sayde: Where is thy lordes sonne? Siba sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, he abydeh at Ierusalē, for he saide: To daye shal ſ house of Israel restore my fathers kigdome vnto me. The kyng sayde vnto Siba: Beholde, *all that Mephiboseth hath, shalbe thine. Siba sayde with reuerence, Let me finde grace in thy sight my lord O kyng.

But whan kyng Dauid came to Bahurim, beholde, there wente out a man of the kynred of the house of Saul, †whose name was Semei the sonne of Gera, which wente forth and †cursed, and cast stones at Dauid, and at all kyng Dauids seruantes and all the people and all the mightie men were at his righte hande and at his lefte. Thus sayde Semei whan he cursed: Get the forth, get the forth thou bloody hounde, thou man of Belial. The LORDE hath rewarded the for all the bloude of the house of Saul, ‡thou becamest kyng in his steade. Now hath the LORDE geuen the kyngdome in to ‡ hande of Absalom thy sonne, and beholde, now stickest thou in thine owne myschefe, for thou art a bloody hounde.

But Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia sayde vnto the kyng: Shall this deed dogg curse my lord the kyng? I wyl go and take the heade awaye from him. The kyng saide: Ye children of Zeru Ia, what haue I to do with you? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: Curse Dauid. Who can saye now: Why doest thou so?

C And Dauid sayde vnto Abisai and to all his seruantes: Beholde, my sonne which came of my body, seeketh after my lyfe, how moch more now the sonne of Iemini? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: †peraduenture the LORDE shall consydre my aduersyte, and recompence me good for his cursynge this daye. So Dauid wente on his waye with his men. But Semei wente on by the mount besyde him, and cursed, and cast stones at him, ‡ threwe clottes of earth.

And the kyng came in and all the people that was with him, weery, and refreshed himselfe there. But Absalom and all the people of the men of Israel came to Ierusalem and Achitophel with him. Whan Chusai the Arachite Dauids frende came in to Absalom, he sayde vnto Absalom: God saue the kyng God saue the kyng.

D Absalom sayde vnto Chusai: Is this thy mercy vnto thy frende? Why art thou not gone with thy frende? Chusai sayde vnto Absalom: Not so, but loke whom the LORDE choseth, and this people, and all the men in Israel, his wyl I be, and byde with him. Secondly, whom shulde I serue? Shulde I not do seruyce before his sonne? Like as I haue serued in the presence of thy father, so wyl I do seruyce before the also.

And Absalom sayde vnto Achitophel: Geue vs youre counsell what we shal do? Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: ¶ Go lye with thy fathers concubynes, whom he hath lefte to kepe the house, so shall all Israel heare that thou hast made thy father to stynke, and the hande of all them that are with ‡, shal be the bolder. Then made they a tente vnto Absalom † vpon the house toppe. And Absalom laye with his fathers concubynes in the sighte of all Israel.

At that tyme whan Achitophel gaue a counsell, that was euen as yf a man axed counsell at God: So were all the counsels of Achitophel both with Dauid and with Absalom.

The xvij. Chapter.

AND Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: I wil chose out twolue thousande mē, and wyl get me vp, and persue Dauid by nighte, and fall vpo him whan he is feble and weery: When I vexe him the, so that all the people which is by him, flieth, I wil smite the kyng onely, and brynge all the people vnto the agayne. So whan euery man is brought vnto the as thou desyrest, then shal all the people be in peace. Absalom thought that good, and so dyd all the Elders in Israel. But Absalom sayde: I praye you call Chusai the Arachite also, and let vs heare what he sayeth therto. And whā Chusai came in to Absalom, Absalom saide vnto him: Thus hath Achitophel spoken, Saye thou now, shal we do it or not?

Then sayde Chusai vnto Absalom: It is no good counceill ꝑ Achitophel hath geuen at this tyme. And Chusai sayde moroner: Thou knowest thy father well and his men, that they are stronge and of a wrothfull stomack, euen *as a Beer that is robbed of hir yonge ones in the felde. Thy father also is a man of warre, and wyl not be negligēt with the people. Beholde, he hath now peraduenture hyd hymselfe in some caue or in some place. Yf it came to passe then that it chaunced euell at the first, ⁊ there shulde come a rumoure and saye: There is a slaughter done in the people that folowed Absalō: thē shulde euery man be discouraged, which els is valeaunt, ⁊ hath a hert like a lyō: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is stronge, and that all they which be with him, are mightie men.

But this is my counceill, that thou gather together all Israel from Dan vnto Berseba in nombre as the sonde of the See, and go thou thine owne person amonge them, then wil we fall vpon him in what place we finde him, and wyll ouerwhelme him euen as the dew falleth vpon the earth, so that we shal not leaue one of him and of all his men. But yf he resorte in to a cite, then shal all Israel cast roapes aboute the same cite, and drawe it in to the riuier, so that there shal not one stone of it be founde.

Then sayde Absalom and euery man in Israel: The counceill of Chusai the Arachite is better then Achitophels counceill.

+ But the LORDE broughte it so to passe, that ꝑ good counceill of Achitophel washyndred, that the LORDE mighte brynge euell vpon Absalom.

+ And Chusai sayde vnto Sadoc ⁊ Abiathar the prestes: Thus and thus hath Achitophel counceiled Absalom and the Elders in Israel: but so and so haue I counceiled. Sende now therfore in all the haist, and tell Dauid, and saye: Abyde not all nighte in the playne felde of the wyldernes, but get the ouer, that the kyng be not swallowed vp, and all the people that is with him. As for Ionathas and Ahimaaz, they stode by the well of Rogel, and a damsell wente thither and tolde them. They wente on their waye, and tolde kyng Dauid, for they durst not be sene to come in to the cite.

But a lad sawe them, and tolde Absalom. Neuertheles they wente on their waye, and came to a mans house at Bahurim, which had a well in his courte, and they wete downe in to it. And the woman toke and spred a couerynge ouer the welles mouth, ⁊ strowed firmentye corne thereon, that it was not perceaued. Now whan Absaloms seruantes came to the woman in to the house, they sayde: where is Ahimaaz and Ionathas? The womā sayde vnto them: They are gone ouer the litle water.

And whā they soughte and founde them not, they wente agayne to Ierusalem. And whan they were gone, they clynmed vp out of the well, and wente their waye, and tolde Dauid ꝑ kyng, and sayde vnto Dauid: Get you vp, and go soone ouer ꝑ water, for thus and thus hath Achitophel geuen counceill agaynst you.

Then Dauid gat him vp, and all the people that was with him, and passed ouer Iordane tyll it was cleare mornynge. And there was not one, but he wente ouer Iordane.

Whan Achitophel sawe that his counceill wente not forth, he saddled his asse, gat him vp, and wete home in to his cite and put his house to poynte, and hanged him selfe, and dyed, and was buried in his fathers graue.

And Dauid came to Mahanaim, and Absalom wente ouer Iordane, ⁊ all the men of Israel with him. And Absalom had set Amasa ouer the hoost in Iobas steade. Amasa was the sonne of a man, whose name was Iethra a Iesraelite, which laye with Abigail the daughter of Nahas the sister of Zeru Ia Iobas mother. But Israel and Absalom pitched in Gilead.

Whan Dauid was come to Mahanaim, ꝑ Nahas of Rabbath of the childrē of Ammon, and ꝑ Machir the sonne of Ammiel of Lodebar, and ꝑ Barsillai a Gileadite of Roglim broughte bedstiffe, tapestrie worke, basens, earthen vessell, whete, barley, meel, parched corne, beenes, otemeell, ryse, hony, butter, shepe and fat oxen vnto Dauid, and to ȝ people that was with him, for to eate: for they thought, The people shall be hongrie, weerye and thirstye in the wyldernes.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND Dauid mustred the people ȝ was with him, and set captaynes ouer the, ouer thousandes and ouer hundreds. And sent out of the people one thirde parte vnder Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia Ioaabs brother, and one thirde parte vnder * Ithai the Gethite. And the kyngye sayde vnto the people: I wyll go forth with you also. Neuertheles the people sayde: Thou shalt not go forth, for though we fle, or die halfe of vs they shal not regarde vs. For thou art as ten thousande of vs. Therefore is this better that thou mayest helpe vs out of the cite. The kyngye sayde: Loke what ye are content withall, that wyl I do. And the kyngye stode in the gate, and all the people wente forth by hundreds and by thousandes. And ȝ kyngye cōmaunded Ioab and Abisai, and Ithai, and sayde: Intreate me the yonge man Absalom gently. And all the people herde it, whā the kyngye cōmaunded all the captaynes concernynge Absalom. And whan the people were come forth in to the felde agaynst Israel, the battayll beganne in the wod of Ephraim. And the people of Israel were smitten there before Dauids seruantes, so that there was a greate slaughter the same daye, of twentye thousande men. And the battaill was scatred abrode there in the londe. And the wod consumed moche more people the same daye, then the swerde consumed.

And Absalom met Dauids seruantes, and rode vpon a Mule. And whan the Mule came vnder a greate thicke Oke tre, his heade toke holde on the Oke, and so hanged he betwene heauen and earth, but the Mule ranne awaye from vnder him. Whan a certayne man sawe that, he tolde Ioab, and saide: Beholde, I sawe Absalom hange vpo an Oke tre. And Ioab saide vnto the mā ȝ tolde it him: Beholde, sawest thou that, why smotest thou him not there to the grounde? so wolde I haue geuen the of myne awne behalfe ten syluerlynges and a gyrdell.

C The man sayde vnto Ioab: Yf thou haddest

weyed me a thousande syluerlynges in my handes, yet wolde I not haue layed my handes on the kynges sonne. For the kyngye cōmaunded the and Abisai and Ithai before oure eares, and sayde: Kepe me the yonge man Absalom. Or yf I had dyssembled vpon the ioperdy of myne owne soule (for so much as nothinge shulde be hyd from ȝ kyngye) thou thy selfe shuldest haue stōde against me. Ioab sayde: Not so, I wil vpon him before thy face.

Then toke Ioab thre speares in his hande, and thrust Absalom thorow ȝ hert, while he was yet alyue vpon the Oke. And ten yōge men Ioaabs weapenbearers, came aboute him, and smote him to death. Then blew Ioab the trompe, and broughte the people agayne, that they shulde folowe nomore vpon Israel. For Ioab wolde fauoure the people. And they toke Absalom, and cast him in the wod in to a greate pytt, and layed a greate heape of stones vpon him. And all Israel fled, euery one vnto his tente.

Absalom had set him vp a piler whyle he was yet alyue, which stode in the kynges valley, for he sayde: I haue no sonne, therefore shall this be a remembrance of my name: and he called the piler after his owne name. And vnto this daie it is yet called Absaloms place.

Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc sayde: Let me runne now, and brynge the kyngye worde, that the LORDE hath gotten him righte frō the hande of his enemies. But Ioab sayde: Thou shalt bringe no good tidinges to daie another daye shalt thou brynge him worde, and not to daye, for the kynges sonne is deed. But vnto Chusi sayde Ioab: Go thou thy waye, and tell the kyngye what thou hast sene. And Chusi did his obeysaūce vnto Ioab, and ranne. Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc saide agayne vnto Ioab: What and I ranne also? Ioab sayde: What wilt thou runne my sonne? Come hither, thou shalt brynge no good tydings. (He answered:) What and I ranne yet. He saide vnto him: Renne on thy waye then. So Ahimaas ranne the straight waye, and came before Chusi.

As for Dauid, he sat betwene the two gates. E And the watchman wente vp to ȝ toppe of the porte vpon the wall, and lifte vp his eyes, and sawe a man renninge alone, and cryed, and tolde the kyngye. The kyngye sayde: Yf he be alone, then is there good tydings in his mouth. And as the same wente and came forth, the watchman sawe another man rennyng, and cryed in the porte and sayde: Beholde, there renneth a man alone. The kinge sayde: The same is a good messaunger also. The watchman sayde: I se the rennyng of the first as it were the rennyng of Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc. And the kinge sayde: He is a good man, and bryngeth good tidings. Ahimaas cryed, and sayde vnto the kinge: Peace, and worshipped before the kinge vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Praised be the LORDE thy God, which hath geuen ouer the men that lifte vp their handes agaynst my lorde the kinge.

F The kinge sayde: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Ahimaas sayde: I sawe a greates vproure, whan Ioab the kynge's seruaunt sent me thy seruaunt, and I wote not what it was. The kinge sayde: Go aboute, and stonde here. And he wente aboute and stode there. Beholde, then came Chusi and sayde: I brynge good tydings my lorde the kinge: The LORDE hath executed righte for the this daye, from the hande of all them that rose vp agaynst the. But the kinge sayde vnto Chusi: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Chusi sayde: Euen so go it with all the enemies of my lorde the kinge, and with all them that ryse vp agaynst the to do euell, as it goeth with the yonge man. Then was the kinge soroufull, and wente vp in to the perler vpon the gate, and wepte, and as he wente, he sayde thus: O my sonne Absalom, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, wolde God that I shulde dye for the. O Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

The xii. Chapter.

AND it was tolde Ioab: beholde, the kinge wepeth and mourneth for Absalom. And so out of the victory of the daye there came a mourninge amonge all the people. For the people had herde the same daye, that the kinge toke on heuely because of his sonne. And the people stode awaye the same daye, so that they came not in to the cite: as a people that is put to shame, pycketh them selues awaye, whan they are fled in a battayll. As for the kinge, he had couered his face, and cryed loude, and sayde: Oh my sonne Absalom, Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

But Ioab came to the kinge in to the house, and sayde: This daye hast thou shamed all thy seruautes (which haue deliuered thy soule this daye, and the soules of thy sonnes, of thy daughters, of thy wyues, and of thy concubynes) in that thou louest them that hate the, and hatest those that loue the. For to daye thou shewest thyselfe, that thou carest not for the captaynes and seruautes: For I perceane this daye, that yf Absalom onely were aliue, and we all dead this daye, thou woldest thinke it were well.

B Get the vp now therefore, and go forth, and speake louyngly vnto thy seruautes. For I sweare vnto the by the LORDE, yf thou go not forth, there shall not be left the one man this night: this shalbe worse vnto the, then all the euell that happened the sence thy youth vp hither to. The kinge gat him vp, and sat in the gate. And it was sayde vnto the people: beholde, the kinge sytteth in the gate. Then came all the people before the kinge. But Israel was fled euery one vnto his tent.

And all the people stroue in all the trybes of Israel, and sayde: The kinge ryd vs from the hande of oure enemies, and deliuered vs from the hande of the Philistynes, and was fayne to fle out of the lode for Absalom. So Absalom whom we had anyouted ouer vs, is deed in the battayll. Why are ye so styll now, that ye fetch not the kinge agayne?

C The kinge sent vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes, and caused to saye vnto the: Speake to the Elders of Iuda, and saye: Why wyl ye be the last to fetch the kinge agayne vnto his house? (for the sayenge of all Israel was come before the kinge in to his house) ye are my brethren, my bone, and my flesh. Wherefore wyl ye then be the last to brynge the kinge agayne? And saye vnto Amasa: Art not thou my bone and my flesh? God do this that vnto me, yf thou shalt not be the chiefe captayne before me in Iobas steade, as longe as thou liuest.

And he bowed the hert of all the men of Iuda as of one man. And they sent vnto the kinge: Come agayne, thou and all thy seruautes: So the kinge came agayne. And whan he came vnto Iordane, the men of Iuda were come to Gilgal, for to go downe to mete the kinge, that they mighte brynge the kinge ouer Iordane. And Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini, which dwelt at Bahurim, made haist, and wente downe with ȝ men of Iuda to mete kyng David, and there were with him a thousande mē of Ben Iamin. * Siba also the seruaunt of the house of Saul with his tyfene sounes and twenty seruauntes, 7 gat them thorow Iordane and passed ouer ȝ fery, that they mighte bryng ouer the kynge's housholde, and to do him pleasure.

But Semei the sonne of Gera fell downe before the kyng, when he passed ouer Iordane, and sayde vnto the kyng: O my lorde, laye not the trespass vnto my charge, 7 thynke not vpon it that thy seruaunt vexed the, 7 in the daye when my lorde the kyng wente out of Ierusalem: and let not ȝ kyng take it to hert, for thy seruaunt knoweth that he hath synned. And beholde, this daye am I come the first amonge all the house of Ioseph, for to go downe to mete my lorde the kyng.

Neuertheles Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia answered and sayde: And shulde not Semei dye therfore, seynge he hath cursed ȝ aynoynted of ȝ LORDE? But David sayde: 7 What haue I to do with you ye children of Zeru Ia, that ye wyll become Sathan vnto me this daye? Shulde eny man dye this daye in Israel? Thykest thou that I knowe not, ȝ I am become kyng ouer Israel this daye? And ȝ kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou shalt not dye. And the kyng sware vnto him.

Mephiboseth the sonne of Saul came downe also to mete the kyng. And he had not made cleane his fete ner combed his beerde, nether had he washsed his clothes from the daye that the kyng was gone awaye, vntyll the daye that he came agayne in peace. Now whā he came to Ierusalem for to mete the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Mephiboseth, wherfore wentest thou not with me? And he sayde: My lorde O kyng, my seruaūt hath dealete vnrightheously with me: for thy seruaunt thoughte: I wil saddell an asse and ryde theron, and go vnto the kyng: for thy seruaunt is lame, and he hath accused thy seruaunt before my lorde ȝ kyng. 7 But my lorde ȝ kyng is an angel of God, and thou mayest do what pleaseth the. For all my fathers house was nothinge, but people of death before my lorde ȝ kyng. 7 And yet hast thou set thy seruaunt amonge them that eate at thy table. What other righteuouses haue I, that I shulde crye eny more vnto the kyng? The kyng sayde vnto him: What speakest thou yet more of thy matter? I haue sayde: Thou and Siba parte the londe betwene you. Mephiboseth sayde vnto the kyng: Let him take it all, in as moch as my lorde ȝ kyng is come home in peace.

And Barsillai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and broughte the kyng ouer Iordane, that he mighte cōueye him in Iordane. And Barsillai was very olde, so good as foure score yeare olde, 7 the same had prouyded ȝ kyng of fode whyle he was at Mahanaim, for he was a very noble man. And the kyng sayde vnto Barsillai: Thou shalt go ouer with me, I wyll take care for the with myne awne selfe at Ierusalem. But Barsillai sayde vnto the kyng: What haue I yet to lyue, that I shulde go vp to Ierusalem with the kyng? This daye am I foure score yeare olde. How shulde I knowe what is good or euell, or taist what I eate or drynke, or heare what the Musicians do synge? Why shulde thy seruaunt be chargeable first vnto my lorde the kyng? thy seruaunt shall go a litle with the kyng ouer Iordane. Why wil the kyng recompence me after this maner? Let thy seruaunt turne backe agayne, that I maye dye in my cite besyde my father and my mothers graue. Beholde, there is thy seruaunt Chimeam, let him go ouer with my lorde the kyng, and do vnto him what pleaseth the.

The kyng sayde: Chimeam shal go ouer with me, and I wyll do for him what liketh the: and what so euer thou desyrest of me, that wyll I do for the also. And whan all ȝ people was gone ouer Iordane and the kyng likewise, the kyng kyssed Barsillai and blessed him, and he turned vnto his place. And ȝ kyng passed ouer vnto Gilgal, and Chimeam wente with him. And all the people of Iuda broughte the kyng ouer, howbeit there was but halfe of the people of Israel there.

And beholde, thē came all the men of Israel vnto the kyng, 7 sayde vnto him: Why haue oure brethren the men of Iuda stollen the awaye, and haue conueyed ȝ kyng and his housholde ouer Iordane, and all Davids men with him? Then answered they of Iuda vnto them of Israel: The kyng is of oure nye kynred, why are ye angrie therfore? Thyneke ye that we haue receaued euy fode or giftes of the kyng? Then answered they of Israel vnto them of Iuda, & sayde: We haue ten tymes more with the kyng and with Dauid, thē thou, why hast thou regarded me then so lightly, that oures were not the first to fetch oure kyng agayne? But they of Iuda spake harder then they of Israel.

The rr. Chapter.

THERE was a famous man of Belial there, whose name was Seba ſonne of Bichri, a mā of Iemini, which blewe the trompe, and sayde: *We haue no porcion in Dauid, ner inheritaunce in ſonne of Iſai: let euery one get him to his tent, O Israel. Then fell euery man in Israel from Dauid, and folowed Seba the ſonne of Bichri. But the men of Iuda cleued vnto their kyng from Iordane vnto Ieruſalē. Whan Dauid came home to Ieruſalem, he toke the ten concubynes (*whom he had lefte to kepe the house) and put them in a holde to be kepte, and made prouyſion for them: but he laye not with them, and ſo were they shut vp vnto their death, and lyued wedowes.

And ſonne kyng sayde vnto Amasa: Call me all the men of Iuda together agaynst the thirde daye, & be thou here present also. And Amasa wēte to call Iuda together. And he was slacke to come at ſonne tyme which he had appoynted him. And Dauid sayde vnto Abiſai: Now shall Seba the ſonne of Bichri do vs more harme then Abſalom. Take thou thy lordes ſeruauntes, and folowe vpon him. ſonne he fynde not some strōge cities for him, and so escape out of oure sighte. Then wente Iobbs mē forth after him, and the Chrethians and Plethians, and all the mightie mē: and they wēte out of Ieruſalem to folowe vpon Seba the ſonne of Bichri.

But whan they were by the greate stone at Gibeon, Amasa came before them. As for Iobab, he was gyrded aboute his garment which he had on, and vpon it he had a swerde gyrded, which hanged by his thye in the sheeth, and wente eaſely out and in, and fell frō him. And Iobab sayde vnto Amasa: Peace be with the my brother. And Iobab toke Amasa by the beerde with his righte hāde, to kysse him. And Amasa toke no hede vnto ſonne swerde in Iobabs hande, and he thrust him therewith in to the bely, ſonne his bowels ranne out vpon the earth, and he thrust at him no more. And so he dyed.

Iobab & his brother Abiſai folowed vpon Seba ſonne of Bichri. And one of Iobabs ſeruauntes stode by him, and sayde: What is he this ſonne wolde he agaynst Iobab to please Dauid, and to be with Dauid in Iobabs steade? As for Amasa, he laye rolled in the bloude in ſonne myddes of the strete. But whā one sawe that all the people stode there still, he remoued Amasa from the strete vnto the felde, and cast a clothe vpon him, for so much as he sawe, that who so euer came by him, stode styll. Now whan he was put out of the waye, euery man wēte after Iobab, to folowe vpon Seba the ſonne of Bichri.

And he wente thorow all ſonne trybes of Israel vnto Abel Beth Maacha, and all the best chosen men gathered them selues together, & folowed after him, and came and beseged him at Abel Beth Maacha, and made a banke aboute the cite harde on ſonne wall. And all the people that was with Iobab, layed to their ordynauce, and wolde haue cast downe the wall.

Then cried there a wyse womā out of ſonne cite: Heare, heare, saye vnto Iobab that he come hither, I wyl speake with him. And whā he came to her, the woman sayde: Art thou Iobab? He sayde: Yee. She sayde vnto him: Heare the wordes of thy hand-mayden. He sayde: I heare. She sayde: The comon sayenge was somtyme: Who so wyll axe, let him axe at Abel, and so came it to a good ende. This is ſonne noble and faithfull cite in Israel, and wilt thou destroye the cite and the mother in Israel? Why wilt thou swalowe vp the enheritaunce of the LORDE?

Iobab answered and sayde: That be farre, that be farre fro me, that I shulde swalowe vp and destroye. The matter is not so, but a certayne man of mount Ephraim named Seba the ſonne of Bichri, hath liſte vp him selfe agaynst kyng Dauid, delyner him onely, and I wyl departe from the cite. The woman sayde vnto Iobab: Beholde, his heade shal be cast vnto the ouer the wall. And the woman came in to all the people with hir wysdome. And they smote of the heade of Seba the ſonne of Bichri, and cast it vnto Iobab. Then blewe he the trompe, and they departed from the cite, euery one vnto his tent. But Ioab came agayne to Ierusalem vnto the kyng.

\* Ioab was captayne ouer all the hoost of Israel: Benaia  $\bar{y}$  sonne of ioiada was ouer the Chrethians and Plethians: Adoram was rent gatherer: Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chaunceler: Seia was the scribe: Sadoc and Abiathar were the prestes: Ira also  $\bar{y}$  lairite was Dauids prest.

The xxi. Chapter.

THERE was a derth also in Dauids tyme three yeares together. And Dauid soughte the face of  $\bar{y}$  LORDE. And the LORDE sayde: Because of Saul and because of that bloody housholde  $\bar{y}$  he slewe the Gibeonites. Then the kyng caused for to call the Gibeonites, and spake vnto them. (As for the Gibeonites, they were not of  $\bar{y}$  children of Israel, but a remnaunt of the Amorites: howbeit the children of Israel had sworne vnto the, and Saul soughte for to smyte them in his gelousy, for the childre of Israel and Iuda.) Then sayde Dauid to the Gibeonites: What shal I do vnto you? And where withall shal I make the attonement, that ye maye blesse  $\bar{y}$  enheritaunce of  $\bar{y}$  LORDE? The Gibeonites sayde vnto him: It is not for golde and syluer that we haue to do with Saul and his house, nether haue we oughte to do for to slaye eny m $\bar{u}$  in Israel.

He sayde: What saye ye then, that I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto  $\bar{y}$  kyng: The man that hath destroyed vs and broughte vs to naughte, shulde we destroye, that nothinge be lefte him in all the coastes of Israel. Let there be geuen vs seuen men of his sonnes, that we maye hange them vp vnto the LORDE at Gibeā of Saul the chosen of the LORDE. The kyng sayde: I wyll gette them. Howbeit the kyng spared Mephiboseth  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Ionathas  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Saul, because of the ooth of the LORDE  $\bar{y}$  was betwene them:  $\bar{s}$  namely, betwene Dauid  $\bar{a}$  Ionathas the sonne of Saul. But the two sonnes of Rispa  $\bar{y}$  daughter of Aia, whom she had borne vnto Saul, Armoni  $\bar{a}$  Mephiboseth, And the fyue sonnes of Michol the daughter of Saul, whom she bare vnto Adriel the sonne of Barsillai the Mahalothite, dyd the kyng take, and gaue them in to the handes of  $\bar{y}$  Gibeonites, which hanged the vp vpō the mount before the LORDE.

So these seuen fell at one tyme, and dyed in the tyme of the first haruest, whan  $\bar{y}$  barly haruest begynneth. Then toke Rispa the daughter of Aia a sack cloth,  $\bar{a}$  spred it vpon the rock in the begynnyng of the haruest, tyll the water from the heauen dropped vpō them, and suffred not the foules of the heauen to rest on them on the daye tyme, nether the wyld beestes of the felde on the night season. And it was tolde Dauid what Rispa the daughter of Aia Sauls concubyne had done.

And Dauid wente and toke the bones of Saul and the bones of Ionathas his sonne from  $\bar{y}$  citesens at Iabes in Gilead (which they had stolen from  $\bar{y}$  strete at Bethsan, where  $\bar{y}$  Philistynes had hanged the, what tyme as the Philistynes had smytten Saul vpon mount Gilboa) and broughte them vp from thence, and gathered them together with the bones of them that were hanged. And the bones of Saul and of his sonne Ionathas buried they in  $\bar{y}$  londe of Ben Iamin, besyde  $\bar{y}$  graue of his father Cis. So after this was God at one with the londe.

But there arose warre agayne of  $\bar{y}$  Philistynes agaynst Israel. And Dauid wente downe  $\bar{a}$  his seruantes with him,  $\bar{a}$  foughte agaynst the Philistynes. And Dauid was weery,  $\bar{a}$  Ieszi of Nob (which was one of the children of Rapha, and the weight of his speare was thre C. weight of brasse, and had a new harnesse vpon him) thoughte to smyte Dauid. Neuertheles Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia helped him,  $\bar{a}$  smote the Philistyne to death. Then sware Dauids men vnto him,  $\bar{a}$  sayde: ¶ Thou shalt nomore go forth with vs vnto the warre, that the lanterne in Israel be not put out.

** Afterwarde there arose yet warre at Nob with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai the Husathite smote Saph, which also was one of the childre of Rapha.

And there arose yet warre at Gob with the Philistynes. Then Elhanan the sonne of Iaere Ōrgin a Bethleemite smote Goliath the Gethite, which had a speare, whose shaft was like a weeuers lome.

And there arose yet warre at Gath, where there was a cōtencious man, which had sixe fyngers on his handes, and sixe toes on his fete, that is foure and twēty in the nombre, and he was borne also of Rapha. And whan he spake despitely vnto Israel, Ionathas ſonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These foure were borne vnto Rapha at Gath, and fell thorow the hande of Dauid and of his seruauntes

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Dauid spake the wordes of this songe before the LORDE, what tyme as the LORDE had delyuered him frō the hande of all his enenies, and from the hande of Saul, and he sayde.

The LORDE is my stony rock, ⁊ my castell, and my delyuener.

God is my strength, in him wyl I put my trust: my shyld ⁊ the horne of my saluacion, my defence ⁊ my refuge, my Sauoure, thou shalt helpe me from violent wronge.

* I wil call vpon the LORDE with prayse, so shal I be delyuered from myne enemies.

For the sorowes of death cōpased me, and the brokes of Belial came me afayed.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, and the snares of death had ouertaken me.

B Whā I was in trouble, I called vpō the LORDE, yee euen my God called I vpon, ⁊ so he herde my voyce frō his holy temple, ⁊ my cōplaynte (came) in to his eares.

The earth trembled and quaked, the foundacions of the heauen shoke and moued, because he was wroth.

Smoke wente vp from his nose, and consuminge fyre out of his mouth, coles were kyndled therof.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, and it was darke vnder his fete.

He sat vpon Cherub and dyd flye, and appeared vpon the fethers of the wynde.

He made darknes his paulyon rounde aboute him, thicke water in the cloudes of ſayre.

At the brightnesse of him were the fyre coles kyndled.

The LORDE thundered from heauē, and the Hyest put forth his voyce.

He shot his arowes, and scattered them: he lightened, and discomfited them.

C The pourynges out of the See were sene,

* Psal. 17. a.

and the foundacions of the earth were discovered at the chydyinge of the LORDE, ⁊ at the breth of the sprete of his wrath.

He sent downe from aboue, and reccaued me, and drue me out of many waters.

He delyuered me fro my stronge enemye, from them that hated me, for they were to mightie for me.

They ouertoke me in the tyme of my trouble, but the LORDE was my succoure.

He broughte me forth in to liberty: he delyuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The LORDE shal rewarde me after my righteounes, and accordinge to the clenness of my handes shal he recompence me.

For I haue kepte ſay waye of the LORDE, ⁊ haue not bene vn godly agaynst my God.

For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and haue not put his ordinaunces fro me.

Therefore wil I be perfecte vnto him, and wyl cshue myne awne wickednes.

So shal ſay LORDE rewarde me after my righteounes, accordinge to the clenness of my handes in his eye sighte.

With the holy shalt thou be holy, and with the perfecte thou shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed people, and shalt set thine eyes agaynst the proude to brynge them downe.

For thou O LORDE art my lanterne. The LORDE shal lighte my darknesse.

For in ſay I shal discōfite an hoost of men, ⁊ in my God I shal leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is perfecte: ſay wordes of the LORDE are tryed in the fyre: he is a shyld for all thē that put their trust in him.

For where is there a God, excepte ſay LORDE? Or who hath eny strength without oure God?

God hath strēghed me with power, and made playne a perfecte waye for me.

He hath made my fete like hartes fete, ⁊ hath set me vp an hye.

He teacheth my handes to fighte, and bendeth the stele bowe with myne armes.

And thou hast geuen me the shyld of thy health, and with thy louynge correccion shalt thou multiplie me.

Thou hast enlarged my goynge vnder me, and myne ankles haue not slyded.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemies, and destroye the: and wyl not turne backe agayne, tyll I haue broughte them to naught.

Jf I wil cōsume them and thrust them thorow, that they come not vp: they shal fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast girded me with strength to  $\hat{y}$  battayll, and hast subdued them vnder me  $\hat{y}$  rose vp agaynst me.

Thou hast made myne enemies to turne their backes vpō me, that I might destroye them that hate me.

They shal crye, but there shalbe no Sauoure: yee euen vnto the LORDE, but he answereth them not.

I wil beate them as small as the dust of the earth: euen as  $\hat{y}$  claye of the stretes wil I make them thynne, and sprede them out abrode.

But me shalt thou delyuer from the stryunges of the people, and shalt kepe me to be  $\hat{y}$  heade of the Heythen: A people whom I haue not knowne, shal serue me.

G The straunge children haue denyed me: at the hearynge of the eare shal they herke vnto me.

The straunge children are waxen olde,  $\alpha$  are shut vp in their presons.

The LORDE lyueth, and blessed be my God, and magnified be the strength of my health.

God seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

He bryngeth me out fro myne enemies:  $\alpha$  from them  $\hat{y}$  ryse vp agaynst me, shalt thou exalte me, and from  $\hat{y}$  cruell man shalt thou delyuer me.

* For this cause wyl I geue thanks vnto the amonge the Heythen, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

Which doth greate health for his kynge,  $\alpha$  sheweth mercy vnto Dauid his anoynted, and to his sedle for euermore.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A THESE are the last wordes of Dauid: Dauid the sonne of Isai sayde. The man, that was set vp to be  $\hat{y}$  anoynted of the God of Iacob,  $\alpha$  a pleasaunt dyter of songes of Israel, sayde: The sprete of the LORDE hath spoken by me, and the vtteraunce therof is done thorow my tunge. He sayde: The God of Israel hath spokē vnto me, the strength of Israel, the gouernoure amonge men, the righteous gouernoure in the feare of God. As the lighte is in  $\hat{y}$  mornynge whan the Sonne aryseth, so that for the brightnesse therof no cloude remayneth: and as the grasse loketh vpon the earth thorow the rayne, euen so shal my house be with God. † For he hath made an euerlasting couenaunt with me, well appointed on euery syde and sure. For this is all my health  $\alpha$  pleasure, that it shal growe. But the Belial shal be vtterly  $\alpha$  cleane roted out as the thornes, which mē take not in their hādes. And they  $\hat{y}$  touch them, shal destroye them with yrons  $\alpha$  speares:  $\alpha$  in the fyre shal they be brent, that they maye be broughte to naught.

These are the names of Dauids Worthies: B Iasabeam  $\hat{y}$  sonne of Hachmoni, † the chefest amonge thre, which lifte vp his speare,  $\alpha$  slewe eight hundreth at one tyme.

After him was Eleasar the sonne of Dodi the sonne of Ahoi amonge the thre Worthies with Dauid, whan they spake despytfully to the Philistynes, and were gathered together to the battayll, and the men of Israel wente vp. Then stode he vp and smote the Philistynes, tyll his hande was so weery that it crompted with the swerde. And the LORDE gaue a greate victory at the same tyme, so that the people turned after him to spoyle. After him was Samma the sonne of Age  $\hat{y}$  Hararite. Whā the Philistynes had gathered them selues in a company, and in the same place there was a pece of lōde full of small corne, and the people fled before the Philistynes, the stode he in the myddes of  $\hat{y}$  pece of londe,  $\alpha$  delyuered it,  $\alpha$  smote  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes. And God gaue a greate victory.

And these thre pryncipall amonge thirte, C came downe in the haruest vnto Dauid, † in to the caue of Adullam,  $\alpha$  the hoost of  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes laye in  $\hat{y}$  valley of Rephaim. But Dauid was at the same tyme in the castell, and  $\hat{y}$  Philistynes people laye at Bethleem. And Dauid was desyrous, and sayde: Wolde God  $\hat{y}$  some man wolde fetch me a drynke of water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. The brake the thre Worthies in to the hoost of the Philistynes, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder  $\hat{y}$  gate,  $\alpha$  caried it  $\alpha$  broughte it vnto Dauid: neuertheles he wolde not drynke it, but offred it vnto the LORDE, ⁊ sayde: The LORDE let this be farre fro me, that I shulde do it. Is it not the bloude of the men that ioperded their lyues, and wente thither? And he wolde not drynke it. This dyd the thre Worthies.

D *Abisai ⁊ brother of Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia was one also chefe amōge thre. He lifte vp his speare ⁊ smote thre hundreth, ⁊ was an awncient man amōge thre, ⁊ the noblest amonge thre, ⁊ was their ruler. But he came not vnto the thre. † And Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, the sonne of Ishail (a man of greates of Cabzeell) smote two mightie giantes of ⁊ Moabites, ⁊ wete downe, ⁊ slewe a lyon at a well in the snowe tyme. He smote also a fayre goodly man of Egipte, which had a speare in his hande. But he wete downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of the Egipcians hande by violence, and slewe him with his owne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, and was a famous man amōge thre Worthies, and more honorable then the thirtie, but he came not vnto the thre. And Dauid made him of his secrete coicell.

Asahel the brother of Ioab is amonge ⁊ thirtie: Elham his vnclen sonne at Bethleem. Samma the Haradite, Elika the Haradite, Helez the Paltite, Ira the sonne of Ikes the Tekoite, Abiser the Anthothite, Mebunai the Husathite, Zalmon the Alohite, Maheraï the Netophatite, Ithai the sonne of Ribai of Gibeā of the childrē of Ben Iamin, Benaia the Pirgathonite, Hidai of the broke of Gaas, Abialbon the Arbathite, Asmaueh the Bahumite, Eliaheba the Baalbomite. The children of Iasen and Ionathas: Samma the Hararite, Eliphelet the sonne of Ahaszbai ⁊ sonne of Maechathi, Eliam the sonne of Achitophel ⁊ Gilonite, Hesrai of Carmel, Paerai the Arbite, Iegael the sonne of Nathan of Soba, Bani the Gadite, Zeleg the Ammonite, Naharai the Beerothite, the weapon bearer of Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia, Ira the Iethrite, Gareb the Iethrite, Vrias the Hethite. These are altogether seuen and thirtie.

The xiiiij. Chapter.

AND the LORDE was wrothfully displeased of ⁊ new agaynst Israel, ⁊ and moued Dauid amonge them, because he saide: Go, nombre Israel and Iuda. And the kyng sayde vnto Ioab ⁊ chefe captayne of his hoost:

Go aboute in all the trybes of Israel, from Dan vnto Berseba, and nombre the people, that I maye knowe how many they be. Ioab sayde vnto the kyng: The LORDE thy God adde vnto this people an hundreth tymes as moch as it is now, that my lorde the kyng maye se his eyes lust theron. But why hath my lorde the kyng a desyre to this thinge? Neuertheles the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Ioab and the captaynes of the hoost.

So Ioab and ⁊ captaynes of the hoost wente forth from the kyng, to nombre the people of Israel, and passed ouer Iordane, and pitched at Aroer, at the righte hande of the cite which lyeth in ⁊ ryuer of Gad, and at Iaseer, ⁊ came to Gilead, and in the lowe countre of Hadsî, and came vnto Dan Iaan, and aboute Sidon, and came to the stronge cite of Tyrus, and all the cities of the Henites and Cananites, and came forth to the south parte of Iuda vnto Berseba, and wete rounde aboute that countre, and after nyne monethes and twenty daies they came to Ierusalem. And Ioab deliuered vnto ⁊ kyng the summe of the people that was nombred. And in Israel there were eight C. thousande stronge men, that drue out the swerde: and in Iuda fyue hundreth thousande men. And after that the people was nombred, Dauids hert smote him selfe. And Dauid sayde vnto ⁊ LORDE: I haue synned sore, that I haue done this. And now LORDE take awaie the trespass of thy seruauit. For I haue done very vnwisely.

And whan Dauid rose vp in the mornynge, the worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet God, Dauids Seer, ⁊ sayde: Go ⁊ speake vnto Dauid. Thus sayeth the LORDE: I brynge the thre thinges, chose the one of them, that I maye do it vnto the. Gad came vnto Dauid, and tolde him, and sayde vnto him: Wilt thou that seuen yere derth shall come in to thy lond? Or that thou be fayne to flye before thine aduersaries thre monethes, and they to persecute the? Or that there be pestilence thre dayes in the loude? Take aduysement therfore and se, what answere I shal bringe agayne vnto him ⁊ sent me.

Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in extreme trouble. † Neuertheles (yf it maye be) let me rather fall in to ⁊ handes of the LORDE (for his mercy is grete) I wyll not fall in to the handes of men.

So the LORDE sent pestilēce in to Israel from the morow vnto the tyme appoynted, so that there dyed of the people from Dan vnto Berseba, thre score and ten thousande men. And whan the angel stretched his hande ouer Ierusalem to destroye it, the LORDE repented ouer the euell, and sayde vnto the angell: It is ynough, holde now thy hande. The angell of the LORDE was besyde the barne of Arafna the Iebusite. But whan Dauid sawe the angell that smote the people, he sayde vnto the LORDE: beholde, It is I that haue synned, I haue done the trespase: As for these shepe, what haue they done? Oh let thy hāde be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house.

And Gad came to Dauid at the same tyme, and saide vnto him: Go vp, and set vp an altare vnto the LORDE in ſ̄ barne of Arafna the Iebusite. So Dauid wēte vp as Gad sayde, and as the LORDE had commaunded. And whā Arafna loked aboute him, he sawe the kyng with his seruantes goinge vnto him, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Wherefore commeth my lorde ſ̄ kyng vnto his seruaunt? Dauid sayde: To bye the barne of the, and to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE, that the plage maye ceasee from the people.

But Arafna sayde vnto Dauid: Let my lorde the kyng take it, and offre what pleaseth him. Beholde, there is an ox for a burnt offerynge, and sleddes, and vessels of oxen to the wodd. All this gaue Arafna vnto the kyng. And Arafna sayde vnto ſ̄ kyng: The LORDE thy God make the accepted vnto him. Neuertheles ſ̄ kyng sayde vnto Arafna: Not so, but I wyll bye it of the for as moch as it is worth. For I wyl not offre burnt offerynges vnto ſ̄ LORDE, of ſ̄ which I haue for naughte. So Dauid boughte the barne and the ox for fiftye Sicles of syluer, and buylded an altare there vnto the LORDE, and offred burnt offerynges ⁊ deed offerynges. And the LORDE was mercifull vnto ſ̄ lorde, and ſ̄ plage ceased from the people of Israel.

The first Chapter.

A ND whā kinge Dauid was olde & well stryckē in age, he coulde not be warme, though he was couered with clothes. Then sayde his seruauentes vnto him: Let vs seke a yonge damsell a virgin for oure lorde the kyng, to stonde before the kyng, and to norish him, & to slepe in his armes, and to warme oure lorde the kyng. And they sought a fayre dāsell in all the coastes of Israel, and founde Abisag of Sunem, and brought her vnto & kyng. And she was a very fayre damsell, and noryshed & kyng, and serued him. Howbeit the kyng knewe her not.

Adonias & sonne of Hagith lifte vp himselfe, and sayde: I wyl be kyng. And he prepared him charettes and horsmen, and fyftie men to be renners on fote before him. And his father reproued hī not therefore, so much as to saye: Wherefore doest thou so? And he was a man of a very fayre bewtye *and he had begotten him nexte after Absalō. And his matter stode by Ioab & sonne of Zeru Ia and by Abiathar the prest, which helped Adonias. But Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and Nathan the prest and Semei and Rei, and Dauids Worthies were not with Adonias.

B And whā Adonias offred shepe and oxē, and fat catell besyde the stone of Soheleth, which lyeth by the well of Rogel, he called all his brethrē the kynges sonnes, and all the men of Iuda the kynges seruauentes. But the prophet Nathan and Benaia, and the Worthies, and his brother Salomon called he not. Then sayde Nathan vnto Bethseba Salomons mother: Hast thou not herde & Adonias is kyng, and oure lorde Dauid knoweth not therof? Come now therefore, I wyll geue the counsell, that thou mayest deluyner thy soule and the soule of thy sonne Salomon. Come now and go in to kinge Dauid and saye vnto him: Hast not thou my lorde the kyng sworne and sayde vnto thy handmayden: Salomon thy sonne shall be kyng after me, and he shall sytt vpon my seate? Why is then Adonias made kyng? Beholde, while thou art yet there, and talkest with the kyng, I wyll come in after the, and tell forth thy tale. And Bethseba wente in to the kyng to & chamber.

* 2 Reg. 3. a.

And the kyng was very olde. And Abisag of Sunem serued the kyng. And Bethseba bowed herselfe, and worshipped the kyng.

C The kyng sayde: What wilt thou? She sayde vnto him: My lorde, Thou hast sworne vnto thy handmayde by the LORDE thy God: Thy sonne Salomon shall be kyng after me and syt vpon my seate. But now lo, Adonias is kyng, and my lorde the kyng knoweth it not. He hath offred oxen and fat catell, and many shepe, and hath called all the kynges sonnes, and Abiathar the prest, and Ioab the chefe captayne. But thy seruauent Salomon hath he not bydden. Neuertheles thou my lorde art kyng, the eyes of all Israel loke vnto the, that thou shuldest shewe them who shall syt vpon the seate of my lorde the kyng after the. And whā my lorde the kyng slepeth with his fathers then shal I and my sonne Salomon be fayne to be synners.

But whyle she yet spake to the kyng, the prophet Nathan came, and she tolde & kyng: beholde, there is the prophet Nathan. And whan he came in before the kyng, he worshipped the kyng vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde My lorde O kyng, hast thou saide: Adonias shal be kyng after me, & syt vpo my seate? For he is gone downe this daye, and hath offred oxen, and fat catell, & hath called all the kynges sonnes, and the captaynes, and the prest Abiathar. And beholde, they eate and drynke before him, and saye: God saue the kyng Adonias. But me thy seruauent, and Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and thy seruauent Salomon hath he not called. Hath my lorde the kyng commaunded this, and not certified his seruauentes who shall sytt vpon the seate of my lorde the kyng after him?

D The kyng answered and saide: Call Bethseba vnto me. And she came in before the kyng. And whan she stode before the kyng, the kyng sware and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth (which hath deluyered my soule out of trouble,) I wyl do vnto the this daye, euen as I sware vnto the by the LORDE the God of Israel, so that Salomon thy sonne shalbe kyng after me, and he shal sit vpon my seate in my steade.

Then Bethseba bowed hir selfe with hir face to the grounde, and thanked the kyng and sayde: God saue my lorde kyng Dauid for euermore. And the kyng sayde: Call me the prest Sadoc & the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa.

¶ And whan they came in before the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto them: Take youre lordes seruantes with you, and set my sonne Salomon vpon my Mule, and cary him downe to Gihon: and let Sadoc & prest and the prophet Nathan, anoynte him there to be kyng ouer Israel, and blowe the trompe, and saye: God saue kyng Salomon, and go ye vp after him: and whan he commeth, he shal syt vpon my seate, and be kyng in my steade: for I haue ordeyned him to be pryncce ouer Israel and Iuda. Then answered Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa vnto the kyng, & sayde: Amen. The LORDE God of my lorde the kyng saye thus also. As the LORDE hath bene with my lorde the kyng, so be he with Salomon also, that his seate maye be greater then the seate of my lorde kyng David.

Then wente they downe, the prest Sadoc and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, and the Chrethians, & Plethians, & set Salomon vpon kyng Davids Mule, & broughte him to Gihon. And Sadoc the prest toke the oyle horn out of the Tabernacle, and anoynted Salomon. And they blew the trompe: And all & people sayde: God saue kyng Salomon.

¶ And all the people wente vp after him, and the people pyped with pypes, and was very ioyfull, so that the earth range at the noyse of them. And Adonias herde it, and all they whom he had called, which were with him, and they had new eaten. And whan Ioab herde the noyse of the trompe, he sayde: What meaneth this noyse of the cite and this busynes? But whyle he yet spake, beholde, Ionathas the sonne of Abiathar & prest came.

And Adonias sayde: Come in, for thou art a valeaunt man, and bryngest good tydings. Ionathas answered and sayde vnto Adonias: Alas, oure lorde kyng David hath made Salomon kyng, and hath sent with him Sadoc the prest, and the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Ioiaa, and the Chrethians and Plethians, and they haue set him vpon the kynges Mule: and Sadoc & prest with the prophet Nathan hath anoynted him kyng at Gihon, and from thence are they gone vp with ioye, that the cite range with all: that is the noyse that ye haue herde.

Salomon also sytteth vpon the kynges seate, and the kynges seruantes are gone in to wysch good lucke vnto oure lorde kyng David, and haue sayde: Thy God make Salomon a better name then thy name is, and make his seate greater then thy seate. And they haue wyszshed the kyng good lucke vpon the bed. Moroner & kyng hath sayde thus: Praysed be & LORDE God of Israel, which this daye hath made one to syt vpon my seate, that myne eyes haue sene it.

Then were they afraied, and gatt them vp all that were called by Adonias, and so they departed euery man his waye. But Adonias was afraied of Salomon, and gat him vp, and wote his waye, & toke holde of & hornes of & altare. And it was tolde Salomon: beholde, Adonias feareth kyng Salomō, & beholde, he taketh holde of the hornes of & altare, & sayeth: Let kige Salomō swear vnto me this daye, that he shall not slaye his seruaut with the swerde. Salomon sayde: Yf he wil be an honest man, there shall not one heer fall from him vpon the earth: but yf there be euell founde in him, he shall dye. And kinge Salomō sent, and caused him to be fetched * from the altare. And whan he came, he fell downe before kyng Salomon. But Salomon sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in to thy house.

The ij. Chapter.

NOW whan the tyme came that David shulde dye, he commaunded Salomon his sonne, and sayde: "I go the waye of all the worlde, Be thou strōge therfore, and shewe thyselfe a man, and kepe the watch of the LORDE thy God, that thou walke in his wayes, and holde his ordinaunces, his commaundementes, his lawes, and his testimonies, † as it is written in the lawe of Moses, that thou mayest be wyse in all that thou doest, and whither so euer thou turnest the: that the LORDE maye rayse vp his worde, which he hath spokē ouer me, and saide: Yf thy children kepe their waye and walke before me faithfully and truly and with all their hert and with all their soule, thē shal there neuer fayle the a man vpon the seate of Israel.

Thon knowest well also what Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia hath done vnto me, what he dyd vnto the two chefe captaynes of Israel, *Abner the sonne of Ner, and †Amasa the sonne of Iether, whom he slewe and shed the bloude of warre whā it was peace, & put the bloude of warre vpon his girdel ‡ was aboute his loynes, and in his shues that were vpon his fete: Do thou acordinge to thy wysdome, that thou brynge not his graye heer downe to the graue in peace.

And to the children of Barsyllai the Gileadite, thou shalt shewe mercy, that they maye eate at thy table. For so ioined they the selues vnto me, whan I fled before thy brother Absalom. And beholde, thou hast with the † Semei the sonne of Gera the sonne of Iemini of Bahurim, which cursed me with very bytter and shamefull cursynges, what tyme as I wente to Mahanaim. Yet ‡ came he downe to mete me at Iordan, where I sware vnto him by the LORDE, and sayde: I wyll not slaye the with the swerde. But suffre not thou him to be vngiltye, for thou art a wyse man, and shalt wel knowe what thou oughtest to do vnto him, that thou mayest brynge his graye heer downe to the graue with bloude.

¶ So Dauid slepte with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid. The tyme that Dauid was kyngye ouer Israel, is fortie yeare. †Seuen yeares was he kyngye at Hebrō and thre and thirtie yeare at Ierusalem. †And Salomon sat vpon the seate of Dauid his father, and his kyngdome was made very sure.

But Adonias the sonne of Hagith came in to Bethseba Salomons mother. And she sayde: Is thy commynge peaceable? He spake: Yee, and sayde: I haue somewhat to saye to the. She sayde: Saye on. He sayde: C Thou knowest that the kyngdome was myne, and that all Israel had sett them selues vpon me, that I shulde be kyngye, but now is the kyngdome turned, and become my brothers: for he hath it of the LORDE.

Now desyre I one peticion of the, Make not my face ashamed. She sayde vnto him: Saye on. He sayde: Speake vnto kyngye Salomon (for †he shall not shame thy face) that he maye geue me Abisag to wyfe. Bethseba sayde: Wel, I wil speake to the kyngye for the.

And Bethseba came in to kyngye Salomon to speake with him. And the kyngye stode vp, and wente to mete her, and worshipped her, and sat him downe vpon his seate. And there was a chayre set for the kynges mother, so that she sat at his righte hande. And she sayde: One peticion desyre I of the make not my face ashamed. The kyngye sayde: Axe O my mother, I wyl not shame thy face. She saide: Let Abisag of Sunem be geuen thy brother Adonias to wyfe.

Then answered kyngye Salomon, and saide vnto his mother: Why desyrest thou Abisag of Sunem for Adonias? Axe the kyngdome for him also, for he is my greater brother, ** and hath Abiathar the prest, and Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia. And the kyngye sware by the LORDE, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, Adonias shall haue spoken this agaynst his lyfe. And now as truly as the LORDE lyueth which hath ordeyned me, and made me to syt vpon the seate of my father Dauid, and hath made me a house (††acordinge as he sayde) this daye shal Adonias dye.

And kyngye Salomon sent thither by Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, which smote him that he dyed. And to the prest Abiathar sayde ‡ kyngye: Go thy waye vnto Anathot to thy londe, for thou art a man of deeth. Neuerthelesse I wyl not slaye the this daye for thou hast borne the Arke of the LORDE God before my father Dauid, and hast suffred also where my father suffred.

Thus Salomō put forth Abiathar, that he must nomore be the prest of the LORDE, that the worde of the LORDE mighte be fulfilled, †† which he spake ouer the house of Eli at Silo.

And this rumoure came before Ioab: for Ioab cleued vnto Adonias, and not vnto Salomon. Then fled Ioab in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and toke holde of the hornes of the altare. And it was tolde kyngye Salomon, that Ioab was fled in to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and beholde, he stondesth at the altare.

Then sent Salomon Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and sayde: Go slaye him. And whan Benaia came to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the kyngye: Come forth. He sayde: No, I wyl dye here. And Benaia tolde this vnto the kyngye agayne, and sayde: Thus hath Ioab spoken, and thus hath he answered me.

The kinge saide vnto him: Do as he hath spoken, and slaye him, and bury him, that thou mayest put fro me and my fathers house the bloude which Ioab hath shed with out a cause, and that the LORDE maye recompence him his bloude vpon his heade, because he smote two men, which were more righteous and better then he, and slewe them with  $\text{f}$  swerde that my father Dauid knewe not of: namely, \*Abner  $\text{f}$  sonne of Ner the chefe captaine ouer Israel,  $\text{t}$  Amasa the sonne of Iether  $\text{f}$  chefe captaine ouer Iuda  $\text{f}$  their bloude maye be recompensed vp  $\text{f}$  heade of Ioab and of his seide for euer: but Dauid and his seide, his house and his seate haue peace for euermore of the LORDE.

$\text{f}$  And Benaia the sonne of Ioiaida wente vp, and smote him, and slewe him:  $\text{t}$  he was buried in his house in the wyldernes. And  $\text{f}$  kyng set Benaia  $\text{f}$  sonne of Ioiaida in his steade ouer the hoost. And  $\text{t}$  Sadoc  $\text{f}$  prest dyd the kyng set in the steade of Abiathar.

And the kyng sent, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Buylde the an house at Ierusalem, and dwell there, and departe not from thence, nether hither ner thither. In what daye so euer thou departest forth, and goest ouer  $\text{f}$  broke Cedron, be thou sure, that thou shalt dye the deeth: thy bloude be vpon thy heade. Semei sayde vnto the kyng: This is a good meanynge, as my lorde the kyng hath sayde, so shal thy seruauit do. So Semei dwelt at Ierusalem a longe season. But after thre yere it fortuned that two seruauentes ranne awaye from Semei vnto Achis the sonne of Maecha kyng of Gath.

And it was tolde Semei: beholde, thy seruauentes are at Gath. Then Semei gat him vp, and saddled his asse, and wete vnto Gath to Achis, for to seke his seruauentes. And whā he came thither, he broughte his seruauentes from Gath.

$\text{b}$  And it was tolde Salomon, that Semei wente from Ierusalem vnto Gath, and was come agayne. Then sent the kyng, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Sware not I to the by the LORDE, and assured the, and sayde: Loke what daye so euer thou departest out and goest hither or thither, be sure that thou shalt dye the death? And thou saydest vnto me: I haue herde a good meanynge. Why hast thou not kepte the then accordinge to the oath of the LORDE, and commaundement that I commaunded the?

And the kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou remembrest all  $\text{f}$  wickednes, which thy hert knoweth  $\text{t}$  that thou dyddest vnto my father Dauid. The LORDE hath recompensed  $\text{f}$  thy wickednes vpon thy heade. And kyng Salomon is blessed, and the seate of Dauid shalbe established before  $\text{f}$  LORDE for euer. And the kyng commaunded Benaia  $\text{f}$  sonne of Ioiaida, which wente forth, and smote him that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablished by Salomons hande.

The iij. Chapter.

$\text{A}$ ND Salomon made mariage with Pharaos  $\text{a}$  the kyng of Egipte,  $\text{t}$  toke Pharaos daughter, and broughte her in to the cite of Dauid, tyll he had buylded his house, and the LORDES house, and the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem. But the people offred yet vpon the hye places: for as yet there was no house buylded vnto the name of the LORDE vnto that tyme. But Salomon loued the LORDE, and walked after the ordinaunces of Dauid his father: excepte onely that he offred and brent incense vpon the hye places.

$\text{f}$  And the kyng wente vnto Gibeon, to do sacrifice there: for that was a goodly hye place. And Salomon offred a thousande burntofferynge vpon the same altare.  $\text{¶}$  And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon at Gibeon in a dreame of the night, and God sayde: Axe what I shal geue  $\text{f}$ . Salomō saide: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid thy seruauit. Like as he walked before the in faithfulness and righteousness, and in a true hert with the,  $\text{t}$  this greate mercy hast thou layed vp for him, and geuen him a sonne to syt vpon his seate, as it is now come to passe.

$\text{¶}$  Now LORDE my God, thou hast made thy seruauit kyng in my father Dauids steade: As for me, I am but a small yonge man, knowynge nether my outgoynge ner ingoynge. And thy seruauit is amonge the people whom thou hast chosen: which is so greate, that no man can nombre them ner descrybe them for multitude. Geue thy seruauit therefore an obedient hert, that he maye iudge thy people,  $\text{t}$  vnderstonde what is good  $\text{t}$  bad: for who is able to iudge this thy mighty people?

This pleased the LORDE well, that Salomon axed soch a peticion. And God sayde vnto him: For so moch as thou axest this, and desyrest not longe lyfe, nether riches, nether  $\text{ȝ}$  soules of thiue enemies, but vnderstōdunge to heare iudgment, beholde, therefore haue I done acordynge to thy wordes. \* Beholde, I haue geuen the an hert of wysdome and vnderstōdunge, so that soch one as thou hath not bene before the, nether shall ryse vp after the.

Yee and that thou hast not prayed for, haue I geuen the also, namely, ryches, and honoure, so that amonge the kynges in thy tyme there is not soch one as thou. And yf thou wilt walke in my wayes, so that thou kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes,<sup>a</sup> as Dauid thy father hath walked, then wyl I geue the a longe lyfe.

And whan Salomon awaked, beholde, it was a dreame, and he came to Ierusalem, and stode before the Arke of the LORDES co-uenaunt, and offred burntofferynges, and healthofferings, and made a greate feast vnto his seruantes.

At the same tyme came there two harlottes vnto  $\text{ȝ}$  kyng, and stode before him. And the one woman sayde: Oh my lorde, I and this woman dwelt in one house, and I was delyuered of a childe in the house with her:  $\text{ȝ}$  on the thirde daye after that I was delyuered, she was delyuered of a childe also. And we were together, so  $\text{ȝ}$  there was no straunger in  $\text{ȝ}$  house, but we two:  $\text{ȝ}$  this womans sonne died in the nighte (for she smoored him in the slepe) and she rose vp in the nighte, and toke my sonne fro my syde (where thy handmayde slepte,) and layed it in hir arme, and hir deed sonne layed she in myne arme. And whan I rose vp in the mornynge to geue my sonne sucke, beholde, he was deed. But in the mornynge I lokyd well, and beholde, it was not my sonne, whom I had borne.

The other woman sayde: Not so, my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is deed. But she sayde: Not so, thy sonne is deed, and my sonne lyueth. And thus spake they before the kyng. And the kyng sayde: This womā saieþ: my sonne lyueth and thy sonne is deed: Yonder woman saieþ: Not so, thy sonne is deed,  $\text{ȝ}$  my sonne lyueth. And the kyng saide: Fetch me a swerde. And whan the swerde was brought before the kyng, the kyng sayde: Parte the lyuynge childe in two partes, and geue this woman the one halfe, and yonder woman the other halfe.

Then sayde the woman whose sonne lyued, vnto  $\text{ȝ}$  kinge: (for hir motherly hert was kyndled with pite ouer hir sonne) Oh my lorde, geue hir the childe alyue, and kyll it not. But the other sayde: Let it nether be myne ner thiue, but let it be parted. Then answered the kyng, and sayde: Geue this woman the lyuynge childe, and slaye it not, for she is his mother. And all Israel herde of this iudgment that the kyng had geuen: and they feared the kyng, for they sawe that  $\text{ȝ}$  wysdome of God was in him to kepe iudgmēt.

The iiii. Chapter.

THUS was Salomon kyng ouer all Israel. And these were his prynces: Asaria the sonne of Sadoc the prest: Elihoreph, and Ahi Ia the sonnes of Sisa, were prestes: Iosaphat the sonne of Ahilud was chaunceler: Benaia  $\text{ȝ}$  sonne of Ioiada was the chefe capayne: Sadoc and Abiathar were prestes: Asaria the sonne of Nathan was ouer the officers: Sabud the sonne of Nathan the prest was the kynges frende: Ahisar was stewarde: Adoniram the sonne of Abda was rent gatherer.

And Salomon had twolue officers ouer all Israel, which made prouysion of fode for the kyng and his house: One had a moneth longe in  $\text{ȝ}$  yere to make prouysion: The sonne of Hur vpon mount Ephraim. The sonne of Deber at Macaz and at Saalbaim,  $\text{ȝ}$  at Bethsames, and at Elon, and Beth Hanā. The sonne of Hased at Aruboth, and had therto Socho and all the londe of Hephher. The sonne of Abinadab all  $\text{ȝ}$  lordshippe at Dor:  $\text{ȝ}$  had Taphat Salomōs daughter to wife. Baena  $\text{ȝ}$  sonne of Ahilud at Thaanach  $\text{ȝ}$  at Magiddo,  $\text{ȝ}$  ouer all Beth Sean, which lyeth besyde Zarthana vnder Iesrael from Beth Sean vnto the playne of Melelo, tyll the other syde of Iakmeam. The sonne of Geber at Ramoth in Gilead: he had the townes of Iair the sonne of Manasse in Gilead, and had  $\text{ȝ}$  coastes of Argob which lyeth in Basan, euen thre score greate walled cities, and with brasen barres. Ahinadab  $\text{ȝ}$  sonne of Iddo at Mahanaim. Ahimaas in Nephtali: and he also toke Basmath Salomons daughter to wife. Baena the sonne of Husai in Asser and at Aloth. Iosaphat the sonne of Paruha in Isachar. Semei the sonne of Ela in Ben Iamin. Geber the sonne of Vri in the londe of Gilead, in the londe of Sihon kynge of the Amorites, and of Og the kynge in Basan. One officer was in the same londe. As for Iuda and Israel, they were in nombre as the sonde of the see, and ate and dronke, and were mery. \*Thus was Salomō lorde ouer all the kyngdomes (from the water of the londe of the Philistynes, vnto the border of Egipte) which broughte him giftes, and serued him as longe as he lyued.

And Salomon had daylie to his vytayles thirte quarters of fyne meel, thre score quarters of other meel, ten fat oxen, and twēty small catell, and an hundreth shepe, beside hartes and Roes, and wilde goates, and fat capons, and foules. For he had the lordshippe of all the londe on this syde the water, frō Tiphsa vnto Gasa, and ouer all ſ kynges on this syde ſ water: ⁊ had peace of all his subiectes rounde aboute, so that Iuda and Israel dwelt safe, euery one vnder his vyne, and vnder his figge tre, from Dan vnto Berseba, as longe as Salomon lyued.

¶ And Salomō had fortye thousande cart horses, and twelue thousande horsmen. And the officers prouyded the kynge Salomon with vytayles: and what soeuer belouged to the kynges table, that brought euery man in his moneth, and myssed not: Barlye also ⁊ strawe for the horses and coursers, ⁊ broughte them vnto the place where ſ kynge was, euery one after his charge.

† And God gaue Salomon maruelous greate wyszdome and vnderstondinge, and a large hert, as the sonde that lyeth vpon ſ See shore: so that the wyszdome of Salomon was greater then the wyszdome of all the children towarde the south and of all ſ Egiptians. And he was wyser then all men, yee wyser then Ethan the Esrahite, Heman, Chalcal, and Darda, the sonnes of Mahol: and had a greate name amonge all the Heythē on euery syde. And he spake thre thousande ⁊ proverbes, ⁊ his ſ songes were a thousande ⁊ fyue. And he spake of trees, from ſ Cedar of Libanus vnto the Isope ſ growth out of ſ wall: he talked also of catell, of foules, of wormes, of fiszshes. And there came of all nacions to heare ſ wyszdome of Salomon, and there came of all the kynges of ſ earth, which had herde of his wyszdome.

The v. Chapter.

AND Hiram ſ kynge of Tyre sent his seruauantes vnto Salomon, for he had herde, ſ they had anoynted him kynge in his fathers steade: for Hiram loued Dauid as lōge as he lyued. ¶ And Salomon sent vnto Hiram, sayenge: ** Thou knowest that my father might not buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE his God, because of the warre that was aboute him, vntyll the LORDE delyuered them vnder the soles of his fete: But now hath the LORDE my God geuen me rest on euery syde, so that there is no aduersary ner euell hynderaunce: Beholde, I am therefore aduysed to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, accordinge as the LORDE spake vnto Dauid my father, and sayde: † Thy sonne, whom I shal set vpon thy seate in thy steade, shal buylde an house vnto my name. Commaunde therefore that they heve me downe Ceders out of Libanus, and that thy seruauantes be with my seruauantes, ⁊ the rewarde of thy seruauantes wyl I geue the, what so euer thou shalt axe: for thou knowest, ſ with vs there is no mā which can hewe tymber as the Sidonians.

¶ Whan Hiram herde the wordes of Salomon, he was very glad, and sayde: Praysed be the LORDE this daye, which hath geuen Dauid a wyse sonne ouer this greate people. And Hiram sent vnto Salomon, sayenge: I haue herde what thou hast sent vnto me: I wyl do accordinge vnto all thy desyre with Ceders and Pyne trees. My seruauantes shall brynge them downe from Libanus vnto ſ See, and I wyl make them to flote vpō the See, vnto the place which thou shalt shewe me, and there wyl I cause them to aryue, ⁊ thou shalt make thē to be fetched. But thou shalt fultyll my desyre also, and geue fode vnto my housholde folkes. So Hirā gaue Salomon Ceders and Pyne trees accordinge to all his desyre. But Salomon gaue Hiram twentye thousande quarters of wheate to eate for his housholde, and twēty quarters of beaten oyle. This gaue Salomon yearly vnto Hiram.

C And the LORDE gaue Salomon wysdome, acordynge as he had sayde vnto him, & there was peace betwene Hiram and Salomon, and they made a couenaunt both together. And Salomon made an outchowsynge (of workmen) thorow out all Israel. And  $\hat{y}$  outchowsynge was thirtie thousande mē, and he sent the to mount Libanus euery two monethes ten thousande, so that they were one moneth vpon Libanus, and two monethes at home. And \* Adoniram was ouer the outchowsynge.

And Salomon had thre score thousande  $\pi$  ten that bare burthens,  $\pi$  foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpon the mount, besyde Salomons chefe officers, which were ordeyned ouer the worke: namely thre thousande and thre hundreth, which ruled  $\hat{y}$  people that laboured there in the worke. And  $\hat{y}$  kynge commaunded, that they shulde breake out greate and costly stones, namely fre stone, for the foundation of the house. And Salomons masons, and Hirams, and they that were in those coastes, hewed out  $\pi$  prepared tymbre and stones to the buyldinge of the house.

The vi. Chapter.

A IN the foure hundreth and foure score yeare after the "departinge of the children of Israel out of the londe of Egipte, in the fourth yeare of the raigne of Salomon ouer Israel, in the moneth Sif ( $\hat{y}$  is the seconde moneth) was the house buylded vnto the LORDE. This house that kynge Salomon buylded vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, was thre score cubytes lōge, twenty cubytes brode,  $\pi$  thirtie cubites hye. And he buylded a † Porche before the temple of twenty cubytes longe after the bredth of the house,  $\pi$  ten cubites brode before the house. And in  $\hat{y}$  house he made wyndowes, which might be opened and shut with lyddes.

And rounde aboute by the wall of  $\hat{y}$  house he buylded a compase, so  $\hat{y}$  it wente both aboute the temple and the quere, and made his outwarde wall roide aboute. The nether most stacion was fyue cubytes wyde, and  $\hat{y}$  myddest sixe cubites wyde, and the thirde seven cubites wyde. For he layed balkes rounde aboute the house, that they touched not  $\hat{y}$  wall of the house.

B And whan  $\hat{y}$  house was buylded, it was buylded of whole and outbroken stones, so  $\hat{y}$  there was herde nether hammer ner axe, ner eny other instrument of yron, whan the house was a buyldinge.

But on the righte syde of the myddes of the house there was a dore, so  $\hat{y}$  they might go vp to the myddest stacion by a turne grese,  $\pi$  from the myddest stacion vnto  $\hat{y}$  thirde. Thus buylded he the house,  $\pi$  fynished it,  $\pi$  syled  $\hat{y}$  house both aboue  $\pi$  by the walles with Cedar wodd. He buylded a galery also aboue vpon the whole house fyue cubytes hye, and couered the house with Cedar tymber.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Salomon,  $\pi$  sayde: Let this be the house  $\hat{y}$  thou buyldest. Yf thou shalt walke in myne ordinaunces,  $\pi$  do acordinge to my lawes,  $\pi$  kepe all my cōmaundementes, to walke therin, then wyl I stablyszshe my worde with  $\hat{y}$ , (\* as I sayde vnto Dauid thy father)  $\pi$  wyll dwell amonge the childrē of Israel, and wil not forsake my people of Israel.

Thus Salomon buylded the house,  $\pi$  fynished it,  $\pi$  buylded the walles on the insyde with Cedar tymber, from the grounde of  $\hat{y}$  house vnto the rofe, and syled it with tymbre on the ynsyde, and ouerlayed the floore of  $\hat{y}$  house with bordes of Pyne tre.

And behynde in the house he buylded a wall of Cedar tymber twenty cubytes longe, from the floore vnto the rofe. And there on the ynsyde buylded he the quere for the most holy. But the house of the temple before the quere was forty cubites longe: on the ynsyde was the whole house of Cedar with throwne knoppes and floures, so that there was no stone sene. As for the quere, he prepared it on the ynsyde of the house, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE might be set therin. And before the quere (which was twenty cubites longe, twenty cubytes brode, and twenty cubytes hye, and ouerlayed with pure golde) he syled the altare with Cedar.

And Salomon ouerlayed the house on  $\hat{y}$  ynsyde with pure golde,  $\pi$  shot barres of golde before the quere, which he had ouerlayed with golde, so that  $\hat{y}$  whole house was layed ouer with golde. And all the altare also before  $\hat{y}$  quere ouerlayed he with golde.

$\hat{y}$  He made also in the quere two Cherubins

ten cubites hye of Olyue tre. One wyng of ether of the Cherubs had fyue cubytes, so that from the edge of his one wyng to the edge of his other wyng there were ten cubytes. Euen so had the other Cherub ten cubites also, and both the Cherubs were of one measure and of one quantitie so y ether Cherub was ten cubites hye. And he put the Cherubins within in the house. And the Cherubins spred forth their wynges, so that the wyng of the one touched the one wall, and the other Cherubs wyng touched the other wall. But in the myddes of y house the one wyng touched another. And he ouerlayed the Cherubins with golde.

32 And on all the walles of the house rounde aboute, he caused to make carued worke, with carued Cherubins, palme trees, and floures. And the paument of the house ouerlayed he also with goldē plates. And at the inтраunce of the quere he made two dores of olyue tre with fyue squared postes, and caused carued worke to be made therof with Cherubins, palme trees and floures, & ouerlayed them with plates of golde. So made he also at the inтраunce of the temple, foure squared postes of Olyue tre, and two dores of Pyne tre (so that ether dore had two syde dores one hāginge to another) and made carued worke therof, palme trees and floures, right as it was appoynted.

And he buylded a courte also within with three rowes of fre stone, and with one rowe of playne Cedar tymber.

In the fourth yeare in the moneth Sif, was the foundacion of the LORDES house layed: and in the eleuenth yeare in the moneth Bul (that is the eight moneth) was the house fynished as it shulde be, so that they were seuen yeare a buyldinge of it.

The iij. Chapter.

2 BUT Salomon was a buyldinge his awne house thirtene yeare, & fynished it, namely, he buylded an house of the wodd of Libanus, an hundreth cubites longe, fifty cubites wyde, & thirtie cubites hye, foure-squared with rowes of pilers, and with carued Ceders. And the rose aboue syled he also with Cedar wodd vpon the fyue & fortie pilers, for one rowe had fyftene pilers, so y there stode euer three pilers one right ouer agaynst another: so that euery space betwixte the pilers was one ouer agaynst another foure squared with the pilers.

And he made a porche with pilers which was fifty cubites longe, and thirtie cubites brode, & yet a porche before it with pilers & with a greate poste. He made a porche also vnto y kynges seate (wherin y iudgment was kepte) and made it to be the porche of iudgment, and syled it with Cedar from the paument vnto the paument agayne, and his owne house wherin he dwelt, in y back courte made betwene y house and the porche like the other. And like vnto the porche made he a house for Pharaos daughter, *whom Salomon had taken to wife.

All these were costly stone hewen after y measure, cut with sawes on euery syde, from the grounde vnto the rose: and without the greate courte also. As for the foundations, they were costly and greate stones, ten and eighte cubites greate: and costly fre stones theron accordinge to y measure, and Ceders. But the greate courte rounde aboute had three rowes of fre stone, & one rowe of playne Ceders: Euen so also the courte by y house of the LORDE within, and the porch by the house.

And kynge Salomon sent to fetch one y Hiram of Tyre a wedowes sonne, of the trybe of Nephtali, and his father had bene a man of Tyre, y which was a connyng mā in metall, full of wysdome, vnderstandinge and knowlege to worke all maner of metall worke. When he came to kynge Salomon, he made all his worke, & made two brasen pilers, ether of them eightene cubites hye: and a threde of xij. cubites was the measure aboute both y pilers: and he made two knoppes of brasse molten, to set aboue vpon the pilers: and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and on euery knoppe aboue vpon y pilers seuē wrythen ropes like cheynes. And vpon euery knoppe he made two rowes of pomgranates rounde aboute on one rope, wherwith y knoppe was couered. And the knoppes were like roses before y porche foure cubites greate. And the pomgranates in the rowes rounde aboute were two hūdreth aboue and beneth vpon the rope, which wete rounde aboute the thicknes of the knoppe, on euery knoppe vpon both the pilers. And set vp the pilers before the porche of the temple. And that which he set on the right hande, called he Iachin: and that which he set on the lefte hande, called he Boos. And so stode it aboue vpon the pilers euen like roses. Thus was the worke of ƿ pilers fynished.

¶ And he made a molten lauer ten cubytes wyde from the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubites hye, and a threde of thirtie cubites lōge was ƿ measure rounde aboute: and aboute the same lauer that was ten cubites wyde, there wente knoppes on the edge therof rounde aboute the lauer. Two rowes were there of the knoppes molten with the lauer.

And it stode vpon twolue bullockes, wherof thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue theron, so that all their hynder partes were within vnder the lauer: wherof the thiknesse was an handbreth: and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose, and it conteyned two thousande *Battes.

And he made ten brasen seates, euery one foure cubites longe and brode, and thre cubites hye. The seate was made so, that it had sydes betwene the ledges. And on the sydes betwene the ledges there were lyons, bullockes and Cherubins. And on ƿ ledges which were aboue and beneth the lyons and bullockes, were the sydes made so, that they were set downwardes. And euery stole had foure brasen wheles with brasen axeltrees. And vpon the foure corners there were proppes molten, euery one ouer agaynst another, vnder set vnto the kettell.

¶ And the soket vpon the stole was a cubyte hye and rounde, a cubyte and an halfe wyde: and on the soket there were knoppes in folde, which were foure squared & not rounde. The foure wheles stode beneth by the sydes, & the axeltrees of the wheles were harde on ƿ seate. Euery whele was a cubite and a halfe hye, and they were wheles like cart wheles. And their axeltrees, spokes, nales, & shaftes were all molten. And the foure proppes vpon the foure corners of euery seate were harde on the seate.

And on the soket aboue vpon the seate a cubyte and an halfe rounde aboute, there were ledges and sydes harde on the seate. And on the plat of the same sydes and ledges, he caused to carue Cherubins, lyons and palme trees, one by another rounde aboute theron. After this maner made he ten moltē seates, one maner of measure & widenes was in all.

¶ And he made ten copper kettels, so that one kettell cōteyned fortye Battes, and was foure cubites greate, and vpon euery seate was a kettell. And fyue seates set he on the righte syde of the house, and the other fyue on the lefte syde. But the lauer set he before on the righte hande towarde the south.

¶ And Hiram made pottes also and shouels and basens, & so fynished he all the worke, that kynge Salomon caused to be made in the house of the LORDE: namely ƿ two pilers, and the rounde knoppes aboue vpon the two pilers, and the two wrythen ropes to couer the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the foure hūdreth pomgranates on the two wrythen ropes, euer two rowes of pomgranates vnto euery rope, to couer the two rounde knoppes vpon the pilers. And the ten seates, and ten kettels theron, and the lauer, and twolue bullockes vnder ƿ lauer. And the pottes, shouels and basens. And all the ornamentes which Hiram made vnto kynge Salomon for the house of the LORDE, were of pure metall. In the cōntre by Iordane, caused the kynge them to be molten in thicke earth, betwene Sūcoth and Zarthan. And Salomon let all the apparell be vnweyed, because the metall was so moch.

¶ Morouer Salomon made all the apperell that belonged vnto the house of the LORDE: namely a golden altare, a golden table that the shewbred laye on, fyue candelstickes on the righte hande, and fyue candelstickes on the lefte (before the quere) of pure golde, with floures, lampes and snoffers of golde therto, flat peeces, charges, basens, spones and censours of pure golde. And the hokes of ƿ dores on the insyde of the house in the most holy, and in the dores of the house of the tēple of the LORDE were of golde.

¶ Thus all the worke that kynge Salomon made in ƿ house of the LORDE, was fynished. † And Salomon brought in that his father Dauid had sanctified, of syluer and golde and ornamentes, and layed it amonge the treasures of the house of the LORDE.

The viij. Chapter.

A THEN gathered kynge Salomon all  $\hat{y}$  Elders in Israel together, all the rulers of the trybes and prynces of the fathers amonge the children of Israel, vnto Ierusalem, to brynge vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, \*out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto kynge Salomon all the men in Israel, at the feast in the moneth Ethanim, that is  $\hat{y}$  seuenth moneth. And when all  $\hat{y}$  Elders of Israel came, the prestes toke the Arke of the LORDE, and broughte it vp, and the Tabernacle of witnesse, and all the ornametes of the Sanctuary that were in the Tabernacle. This dyd the prestes and the Leuites. And kynge Salomon and all the congregacion of Israel  $\hat{y}$  were gathered vnto him, wente with him before the Arke, and offred shepe and bullockes, so many, that they coule not be nombred ner tolde.

So the prestes broughte the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt vnto hir place, euen in to  $\hat{y}$  Quere of the house in the most holy vnder  $\hat{y}$  wynges of the Cherubins. For  $\hat{y}$  Cherubins spred out their wynges in the place where the Arke stode, and couered the Arke and the staues therof from aboue. And the staues were so lōge, that  $\hat{y}$  knoppes of them were sene from the Sanctuary before  $\hat{y}$  quere, but on the out syde were they not sene, and they were there vnto this daye.

B And in the Arke there was nothinge, but onely the two tables of stone,  $\dagger$  which Moses had layed therin at Horeb, when  $\hat{y}$  LORDE made a couenaunt with the children of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of the londe of Egipte.

But when the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary, a cloude fylled the house of the LORDE, so  $\hat{y}$  the prestes coule not stonde  $\tau$  execute the office for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the LORDES house. Then sayde Salomon:  $\dagger$  The LORDE sayde, that he wolde dwell in a darke cloude. I haue buylded an house, to be an habitacion vnto the: a seate,  $\hat{y}$  thou mayest dwell there for euer. And  $\hat{y}$  kynge turned his face,  $\tau$  blessed all the congregacion of Israel. And all the cōgregacion of Israel stode,  $\tau$  he sayde:

Praysed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promised by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and by his hāde hath fulfilled it, and sayde:  $\S$  Sence the daye  $\hat{y}$  I broughte my people of Israel out of Egipte, haue I chosen no cite amōge all the trybes of Israel, to buylde me an house, that my name might be there.  $\parallel$  But Dauid haue I chosen, to be ouer my people of Israel.

And in dede my father Dauid was mynded  $\tau$  to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: neuertheles the LORDE sayde vnto my father Dauid: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well, that thou art so aduysed. Howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shal come out of thy loynes, he shal buylde an house vnto my name. And the LORDE hath perfourmed his worde that he spake: For I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, as the LORDE sayde: and haue buylded an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: and there haue I ordeyned a place for the Arke, wherin is the LORDES couenaunt, which he made with oure fathers, when he broughte them out of  $\hat{y}$  londe of Egipte.

And Salomon stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towardes heauen, and sayde:  $\circ$  LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether aboue in heauen, ner beneth vpō earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for all thy seruauantes that walke before  $\hat{y}$  with all their hert, thou that hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruauant: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel make good vnto my father Dauid thy seruauant, that which thou hast promysed him, and sayde:  $\ast\ast$  Thou shalt not wante a man before me to syt vpon the seate of Israel, yf thy childrē kepe their waye, so  $\hat{y}$  they walke before me like as thou hast walked before me. Now thou God of Israel, let thy worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto my father Dauid thy seruauant.

¶ And whan eny straunger, that is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre countre for thy names sake (for they shall heare of thy greate name, and of thy mightie hāde, and of thy outstretched arme) and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then in heauen, euen in the seate of thy dwellinge, and do all for the which that straunger calleth vpon the, that all the nacions vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and that they maye feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how that this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

in heauen, * from the seate of thy dwellynge, and execute iudgment for them, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the, and vnto all their trespasses, wherwith they haue transgressed agaynst the, † and graunte the mercy in the sighte of them which led them awaye presoners, that their enemyes maye be mercifull vnto them: for they are thy people, and thyne enheritaunce, whom thou broughtest out of Egipte, from the yron fornaice: that thine eyes maye be open vnto the peticion of thy seruauit, and of thy people of Israel, that thou maiest heare them in all thinges for the which they shall call vpon the: (for thou O LORDE LORDE) hast sundered them out to be an inheritaunce vnto thy selfe, from amonge all the nacions vpon earth, acordinge as thou saydest by Moses thy seruauit, when thou broughtest oure fathers out of Egipte.

§ And whā Salomon had ended all this prayer and petition before the LORDE, he rose vp from the altare of the LORDE, and lefte of from knelynge and holdyng out of handes toward heauen, and stode and blessed all the congregacion of Israel with loude voyce, and sayde: Prayed be the LORDE which hath geuen rest vnto his people, acordinge as he sayde. There hath not one fayled of all his good wordes, which he spake by his seruauit Moses. The LORDE oure God be with vs, as he hath bene with oure fathers, and forsake vs not, nether withdrawe his hande from vs, but bowe oure hertes vnto him, that we maye walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, ordinaunces and lawes, which he commaunded oure fathers. And these wordes wherwith I haue made my petition before the LORDE, come nye vnto the LORDE oure God daye and nighte, that he maye execute iudgment for his seruauit and for his people of Israel, euery one at his tyme: that all nacions vpon earth maye knowe, that the LORDE is God, ‡ that there is none other. And let youre hert be perfecte with the LORDE oure God, to walke in his statutes, and to kepe his commaundementes, as it is this daye.

And the kynge with all Israel his people offred sacrifice before the LORDE. And Salomon offred deed offerynges (which he offred vnto the LORDE) two and twenty thousande oxen, and an hundredth & twenty thousande shepe. So the kynge and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORDE. The same daye dyd the kynge dedicate the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE: that he mighte there performe the burnt offerynges, meat offerynges, and the fat of the deed offerynges: for the brasen altare that stode before § LORDE, was to litle for the burnt offerynges, meat offerynges, and for the fat of the deed offerynges.

And at the same tyme made Salomon a solempne feast, and all Israel a greate congregacion with him, from the border of Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, before the LORDE oure God, seuen dayes, and yet seuen dayes, that were fourtene daies. And on the eight daye he let the people go. And they blessed the kynge, and wente vnto their tentes reioysing and with a mery hert, because of all the good that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid his seruauit, & to his people of Israel.

AND whan Salomon had fynished § ¶ a buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and the knynges house, and all that his desyre and pleasure was to make, § LORDE appeared vnto him the seconde tyme, ¶ euen as he appeared vnto him at Gibeon. And yf thou walke before me (as thy father Dauid walked) with a perfecte and a true hert, so that thou do all that I haue commaunded the, and kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes, then wyll I stablish the seate of thy kyngdome ouer Israel for euer, acordinge as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde: ¶ Thou shalt not wante a man from the seate of Israel.

But yf ye turne back fro me, ye and youre childrē, and kepe not my commaundementes and ordinaunces which I haue layed before you, but go and serue other goddes, and worships them, then wyll I rote Israel out of the londe that I haue geuen them. ** And the house that I haue halowed vnto my name, wyll I put awaye fro my face. And Israel shall be come a byworde and labell amonge all nacions, and so shal this hye house: so that euery one y<sup>e</sup> goeth by, shall be astonied, and make an hyssynge, and saye: *Wherefore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe and to this house? Then shal it be answered: Because they forsoke y<sup>e</sup> LORDE their God, (which brought their fathers out of the londe of Egipte) and haue receaued other goddes, and worshipped them, and serued them. Therefore hath y<sup>e</sup> LORDE brought all this euell vpon them.

Now when the twentie yeares were ended, wherein Salomon buylded the two houses, the LORDES house and the kynges house, where vnto Hiram the kyng of Tyre brought Salomō Cedar trees & Pyne trees, and golde after all his desyre, then gaue kyng Salomon vnto Hiram twenty cities in the countre of Galile. And Hiram departed from Tyre to vyset the cities which Salomon had geuen him, & they pleased him not, and he sayde: What maner of cities are these (my brother) that thou hast geuē me? And he called them the londe of Cabul vnto this daye. And Hiram sent vnto the kyng, sixe score hundredth weight of Golde. And the same is the summe of the taxe, that kyng Salomon raysted to the buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and his awne house, & Millo, and the walles of Ierusalem, and Hasor, and Megiddo, and Gaser.

For Pharaō y<sup>e</sup> kyng of Egipte came vp, and wāne Gaser, & brent it with fyre, & slewe the Cananites y<sup>e</sup> dwelt in the cite, & gaue it for a gifte vnto his daughter Salomōs wife. So Salomon buylded Gaser, & the lower Bethoron, and Baelath and Thamar, in y<sup>e</sup> wyldernes, in the londe, & all the cities of the corne houses that Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes, & all the cities of the horsmen, and what it pleased him to buylde at Ierusalem, in Libanus, & in euery countre of his domynion.

And all the remnaunt of the people of the Amorytes, Hethites, Pherisites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, their children which they lefte behynde them in the londe (whom the children of Israel coulde not vtterly destroye) those dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye.

But of the children of Israel he made no bondmen, but let them be men of warre, and his seruauantes, and prynces, and knightes, and ouer his charettes and horsmē. And the officers which were ouer Salomons busnesse, were fyue hundredth and fyfitye, which ruled the people, and performed the worke.

And Pharaos doughter wente vp from the cite of Dauid, in to hir house which he had buylded for her. Then buylded he Millo likewise. And thre tymes in the yere dyd Salomon offre burnt offerynges and deed offerynges vpon the altare that he had buylded vnto the LORDE, and burnt incense vpon it before the LORDE, and so was the house ended and fynished.

And Salomon made shippes also at Ezeon Geber, which lyeth by Eloth besyde the Reed See shore in y<sup>e</sup> londe of the Edomites. And Hiram sent his seruauantes by shippe, which were shipmen, and had experience of the See, with Salomons seruauantes; and they came vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence one & twenty score hundredth weight of golde, and brought it vnto Salomon.

The r. Chapter.

AND whan kyng Salomons fame of the name of the LORDE came to the eares of the Quene of riche Arabia, she came to proue him with darke sentences. And she came to Ierusalem with a maruelous greate trayne, with camels which bare spices, and moch golde, and precious stones. And whan she came in to kyng Salomon, she spake vnto him all that was in hir hert. And Salomon tolde her euerythinge, and the kyng had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her. But whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe all the wysdome of Salomon, and the house that he had buylded, and the meates of his table, and the dwellinges of his seruauantes, & the offices of his ministers, and their garments, and his butlers and the burnt offerynges which he offred in the house of the LORDE, she wondred exceedingly, and coulde no longer refrayne, but sayde vnto the kyng: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaoure and of thy wysdome.

B And I wolde not beleue it, tyll I came and sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe hath not bene tolde me.

Thou hast more wysdome and good, the fame is that I haue herde. Happye are thy people and thy seruantes, that allwaie stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Praiseyd be the LORDE thy God, which had such a pleasure vnto the, that he set the vpon the seate of Israel: because he hath allwaie loued Israel, and hath set the to be kyng, that thou shuldest mantayne iustyce and equitye.

C And she gaue the kyng syxe score hundredre weichte of golde, and very moch spyce, and precious stones. There came neuer so moch spyce thither, as the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kyng Salomon. And Hiram shippes, *which caried golde out of Ophir, broughte maruelous moch costly tymber and precious stones from Ophir. And of that costly tymber the kyng caused to make pilers in the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and harpes and Psalteries for the Musicians. There came nomore such costly tymber, nether was it sene vnto this daye. And kyng Salomon gaue the quene of riche Arabia, all that she desired and axed, besydes that which he gaue her of a frye hande. And she returned, and departed in to hir lande with hir seruantes.

The golde that came to Salomon in one yeare, was nyne and thyrty score hundredre weichte, besydes that which came of chapmen, marchauntes and Apotecaries, and of the nexte kynges, and of the mightie men in the londe. And kyng Salomon caused to make two hundredre speares of beaten golde, sixe hundredre peces of golde put he to euery speare: and thre hundredre shyldes of the best golde, euen thre pounce of golde vpon euery shyld. And the kyng put them in the house of the wod of Libanus.

D And the kyng made a greate seate of Yuery, and overlayed it with the most precious golde. And the seate had sixe steppes, and the heade of the seate was roude behynde. And there were two postes to leane vpon on both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode vpon the leanyng postes, and twolue lyons stode vpon the sixe steppes on both the sydes. Soch one hath not bene made in eny kyngdome. All kyng Salomons drynkyng vessels were of golde, and all the vessels in the house of the wod of Libanus were of pure golde also: for syluer was not regarded in Salomons tyme. For the kynges Seeshippe the sayled vpon the See with the shippe of Hiram, came once in thre yeare, and broughte golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes, and Pecoakes.

E Thus was kyng Salomon greater in riches and wysdome, then all the kynges vpon earth: And all the worlde desired to se Salomon, that they mighte heare the wysdome which God gaue him in his hert. And they broughte him yearly euery man his present, vessels of syluer and golde, rayment and harnesse, spyces, horses and Mules. And Salomon broughte charettes and horsmen together, so that he had a thousande and foure hundredre charettes, and twolue thousande horsmen: and those he put in the charet cities, and with the kyng at Ierusalem.

And the kyng broughte it to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders as there were wyld figge trees in the valleys. And Salomons horses were broughte out of Egipte, and from Keua: for the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Keua for money. And a charet came vpon out of Egipte for sixe hundredre Syckles of Syluer, and an horse for an hundredre and fyfthe. Thus were they brought also vnto all the kynges of the Hethites and to the kynges of Siria by their handes.

The xi. Chapter.

BUT kyng Salomon loued many outlandish women, the Pharaos daughter, and women of Moab, of Ammon, of Edom, of Sidon, and of Heth, euen of those nacions, that the LORDE spake of vnto the children of Israel: "Go not ye vnto them, and let not them come vnto you: they shal surely bowe youre hertes after their goddes: Vnto these dyd Salomon encline with affeccion. And he had seven hundredre women to wyues, and thre hundredre concubynes, and his wyues turned his hert asyde. And whan he was now olde, his wyues bowed his hert after straunge goddes, so that his hert was not whole with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father.

So Salomon walked after Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, and after Malcom the abhominacion of the Ammonites. And Salomon dyd  $\bar{y}$  which displeased the LORDE, and folowed not  $\bar{y}$  LORDE to  $\bar{y}$  vttemost as dyd his father Dauid. The buylded Salomō an hie place vnto Chamos the abhominaciō of  $\bar{y}$  Moabites (vpon the mount that lyeth before Ierusalē) and vnto Moloch the abhominacion of the Ammonites.

3 Thus dyd Salomon for all his outlādish wyues, which brent incense, and offred vnto their goddes. But the LORDE was wroth at Salomon, because his hert was turned asyde from  $\bar{y}$  LORDE God of Israel, \* which had two tymes appeared vnto him, and cōmaunded him, that he shulde not walke after other goddes: and yet kepte he not that the LORDE commaunded him. Therefore sayde the LORDE vnto Salomon: For so much as this is done with the, and hast not kepte my couenaunt and myne ordinaunces, which I commaunded the, therefore wyll I also plucke thy kyngdome from the, and geue it vnto thy seruauit: Neuertheles in thy tyme wyll I not do it, for thy father Dauids sake, but from the hande of thy sonne wyll I plucke it. Howbeit I wyll not plucke  $\bar{y}$  kyngdome cleane awaye. One trybe wyll I geue vnto thy sonne, for Dauid my seruantes sake, and for Ierusalems sake which I haue chosen.

C And the LORDE raysed vp an aduersary vnto Salomon, euen Hadad the Edomite of the kynges sede, which was in Edom. For whan Dauid was in Edom, and Ioab the chefe captayne wente vp to bury the slayne, he smote all the males in Edom. (For Ioab remayned there sixe monethes and all Israel, tyll he had roted out all  $\bar{y}$  males that were in Edom.) Then fled Hadad, and certayne men of  $\bar{y}$  Moabites with him, of his fathers seruantes. As for Hadad, he was a yonge man.

And they gat them vp fro Madian, and came vnto Paran, and toke men with them out of Paran, and came in to Egipte vnto Pharaō the kyng of Egipte: which gaue him an house and certayne rytales appoynted,  $\tau$  gaue him a countre. And Adad founde greate fauoure in the sighte of Pharaō, so that he gaue him to wife euen the sister of his owne wife Thaphenes the Quene. And Thaphenes sister bare him Genubath his sonne, and Thaphenes norished him vp in Pharaos house, in so much that Genubath was in Pharaos house amonge Pharaos children.

D Now whā Hadad herde in Egipte, that Dauid was fallē on slepe with his fathers, and  $\bar{y}$  Ioab the chefe captayne was deed, he sayde vnto Pharaō: Let me go in to my countre. Pharaō sayde vnto him: What lackest thou with me, that thou wilt go in to thy countre? He sayde: Nothyng, but yet let me go.

God raysed him vp another aduersary also, one Reson the sonne of El Iada, which fled from his lorde Hadad Eser kyng of Zeba, and gathered men agaynst him, and was a captayne of the men of warre whan Dauid slewe them: and they wente vnto Damascus and dwelt there, and reigned at Damascus, and he was Israels aduersary as lōge as Salomon lyued. This is the harme  $\bar{y}$  Hadad suffred: therefore had he euell will at Israel, and was kyng euer Siria.

E Morouer Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat an Ephraite Salomons seruauit (and his mothers name was Zeruga, a wedowe) lifte vp his hande also agaynst the kyng. And this is the cause wherfore he lifte vp his hande agaynst the kyng: Whan Salomon buylded Millo, he shut vp a gappe in the cite of Dauid his father. And Ieroboam was a mā of armes. And whan Salomon sawe that it was a mete yonge man, he set him ouer all the burthens of the house of Ioseph.

But at the same tyme it fortunēd, that Ieroboam wente out from Ierusalem, and the prophet Ahias of Silo founde him by the waye, and he had a new cloke vpon him, and they two were alone in the felde. And Ahia toke holde of the new cloke  $\bar{y}$  he had on, and rente the same in to twolue peces, and sayde vnto Ieroboam: Take thou ten peces vnto the.

F For thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Beholde, euen thus wyll I rente the kyngdome from the hande of Salomō, and wyll geue the ten trybes. One trybe shall he haue for my seruauit Dauids sake, and because of the cyte of Ierusalem,  $\tau$  which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel: for they haue forsaken me, and worshipped Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, Chamos the god of the Moabites, and Malcō the god of the children of Ammon, and haue not walked in my wayes, to fulfill my pleasure, myne ordinaunces, and lawes, as dyd Dauid his father.

Notwithstandynge I wyll not take the whole kyngdome from out of his hande, but wil make him a prynce as longe as he lyueth for my seruauit Dauids sake, whom I dyd chose, which kepte my commaundementes ⁊ ordinaunces. * From out of the hande of his sonne wyl I take the kyngdome, and wyl geue ten trybes vnto the, and one vnto his sonne,† that Dauid my seruauit maye allwaye haue a lanterne before me in the cite of Ierusalem, which I haue chosen, that I maye set my name there. Therefore wyl I take the now, to raygne ouer all that thine hert desyreth, and thou shalt be kynge ouer Israel. Yf thou folowe now all that I shall commaunde the, and walke in my wayes, and fulfill my pleasure to kepe myne ordinaunces and commaundementes, as dyd my seruauit Dauid, then wyl I be with the, and buylde the a sure house, as I buylde vnto Dauid, and wyl geue Israel vnto the and therwith wyl I subdue the sede of Dauid, but not for euermore. But Salomon soughte to kyll Ieroboam. Then Ieroboam gat him vp, and fled iu to Egipte to Sisak the kynge of Egipte, and remayned in Egipte, tyll Salomon dyed.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, and all that he dyd, and his wysdome, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of Salomon. The tyme that Salomon was kynge at Ierusalem ouer all Israel, is fortye yere. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid his father, and Roboam his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xij. Chapter.

AND Roboam wete vnto Sichem, for all Israel * was come to Sichem to make him kynge. And whan Ieroboam ‡ sonne of Nebat herde that, while he was yet in Egipte († whither he was fled for Salomon) he came agayne out of Egipte. And they sent for him, and called him. And Ieroboam with all the congregacion of Israel came and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made oure yock to harde: therefore make thou now the harde bondage and the sore yock lighter, and we wyl submytte oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vnto the thirde daye, and then come to me agayne. And the people wete their waye.

And Roboam the kynge helde a counsell with the Elders that stode before Salomō his father whyle he lyued, ⁊ he sayde: What is youre counsell, that we maye geue this people an answer? They sayde vnto him: Yf thou do this people a pleasure to daye, and folowe their mynde, and heare them, and geue them good wordes, then shal they be obedient vnto the as longe as thou liuest. Neuertheles he forsoke the counsell that ‡ Elders had geuen him, and axed counsell at the yonge men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him.

And he sayde vnto them: What is youre counsell that we maye answer this people which haue sayde vnto me: Make the yock lighter, that thy father hath layed vpō vs. And the yonge men that were growne vp with him, sayde vnto him: Where as the people haue sayde vnto the: Thy father hath made oure yock to sore, make thou it easier for vs, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My litle fynger shall be thicker then my fathers loynes. Now, my father layed a sore yock vpon you, but I wyl yet laye more thereon: My father correcte you with scourges, but I wyl nourture you with scorpions.

So vpon the thyrd daye came Ieroboam with all the people vnto Roboam, as ‡ kynge had appoynted and saide, come to me agayne on the thyrd daye. And the kynge gaue the people an harde rough answer, and forsoke the counsell that the Elders had geuen him, and talked with them after the counsell of the yonge men, and sayde: My father made youre yock sore, but I wyl make it yet sorer vpon you. My father correcte you with scourges, but I wil nourture you with scorpions. Thus the kynge folowed not the peoples mynde, for he was turned so frō the LORDE, that he mighte stablish his worde § which he spake by Abias of Silo vnto Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat.

But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not heare them, the people gaue ‡ kynge an answer and sayde: ¶ What porcion haue we then in Dauid or inheritance in the sonne of Isai? Get the to thy tentes O Israel. Loke thou now to thy house thou Dauid. So Israel wente vnto their tentes. As for Roboam, he raigned but ouer ‡ children of Israel, which dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And whan kynge Roboam sent thither Adoram the rentgatherer, all Israel stoned him to death. But kyng Roboam strenghted himselfe, and gat him vp in to a charet, to fle vnto Ierusalem. Thus departed Israel from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

Now whan all Israel herde, that Ieroboam was come againe, they sent for to call him to the whole congregacion, and made him kyng ouer all Israel. And no man folowed the house of Dauid, saue onely the tribe of Iuda.

* And whan Roboam came to Ierusalem, all the house of Iuda and the trybe of Ben Iamin (euen an hundreth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) gathered themselves together to fight against ſ house of Israel, ⁊ to brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam ſ sonne of Salomō.

But the worde of God came to Semeia the man of God, and sayde: Speake thou to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kyng of Iuda, and to all ſ house of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and to the other people, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shall not go vp and fighte agaynst youre brethren the children of Israel. Let euery man go home agayne, for this is my dede. And they herkened vnto the worde of the LORDE, and turned back, to go their waye, as the LORDE sayde. But Roboam buylded Sichem vpon mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein, and departed thence, and buylded † Penuel.

Ieroboā thoughte in his hert: The kyngdome shall fall agayne now vnto the house of Dauid, yf this people go vp to offre in the LORDES house at Ierusalem, and so shall the hert of this people turne to their lorde Roboam kyng of Iuda, and thē shal they slaye me, and fall agayne to Roboam kyng of Iuda. And the kyng helde a counsell: and made two golden calues, and sayde vnto them: It is to moch for you to go to Ierusalē: beholde, ‡ there is thy God (O Israel) which broughte ſ out of Egipte. And the one set he at Bethel, ⁊ the other in Dan. And this dede turned to synne, for the people wente before the one vnto Dan.

He made an house also in the hye places, ¶ and made prestes of the smallest in the people, which were not of the childrē of Leui. And vpon the fiftene daye of the eighte moneth he made an holy daye, like as the solempne feast in Iuda, and offered vpon the altare. Thus dyd he at Bethel, in doyng sacrifice vnto the calues which he had made, and at Bethel he ordeyned the prestes of the hye places that he had made: and offred vpon the altar (which he had made) at Bethel, the fiftene daye of the eight moneth, which he inuented of his owne hert. And he made the children of Israel an holy daye, ⁊ wente vp to the altare to burne incense.

The iij. Chapter.

AND beholde, there came a mā of God ¶ from Iuda (thorow the worde of the LORDE) vnto Bethel, and Ieroboam stode by the altar to burne incense. And he cried agaynst the altare thorow the worde of the LORDE, and sayde: O altar, altar, thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, there shal be borne vnto ſ house of Dauid a sonne, Iosias by name ¶ which on the shal offer the prestes of the hye places, that burne incense vpon the, and mens bones shal he burne on the. And he gaue a wonder token the same daye, and sayde: This is the token, that the LORDE hath spoken it, beholde, the altar shall ryue, and the aszshes, that are theron, shall be poured out.

But whan the kyng herde the worde of the man of God, that cried agaynst the altare at Bethel, he stretched out his hande by ſ altare, and sayde: Laye hondes on him. And his hande that he stretched out, wythered, and he coulde not drawe it vnto him agayne. And ſ altare roue, and the aszshes were poured out from the altare, accordinge to the wonder token that the man of God had geuen by the worde of the LORDE.

And the kyng answered, and sayde vnto the man of God: ** O praye the face of the LORDE thy God, and make intercession for me, that my hande maie be restored vnto me agayne. eate bred, ner drynke water. For thus am I commaunded, and thus is it sayde vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt eate no bred, and drynke no water, nether returne the waye that thou wentest.

And he departed another waye, and returned not agayne the waye that he came to Bethel. But at Bethel there dwelt an olde prophet vnto whō his sonnes came, & tolde him all the workes y<sup>e</sup> the mā of God had done that daye at Bethel, & the wordes that he had spoken vnto the kyng. And their father sayde vnto them: Which waye is he gone? And his sonnes shewed him the waye that the man of God was gone: which came from Iuda. He sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddell me the asse. And whā they had saddled him the asse, he rode theron, and wente after the man of God, and founde him syttinge vnder an Oke tre, and sayde vnto him: Art thou the man of God that came from Iuda? He sayde: Yee.

He sayde vnto him: Come home with me, and eate bred. He sayde: I maye not turne backe with the, and come with the. Nether wyl I eate bred, ner drynke water with the in this place: for it is spoken vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt nether eate bred there, ner yet drynke water, nether shalt thou go agayne by the waye which thou wentest. He sayde vnto him: I myselfe am a prophet as well as thou, and an angell hath spoken with me by y<sup>e</sup> worde of the LORDE, and saide: Bringe him againe with the, that he maye eate bred, and drynke water. But he lyed vnto him, and broughte him agayne, so that he ate bred, and dranke water in his house.

And whan they sat at the table, the worde of the LORDE came to the prophet that had broughte him agayne, and cryed vnto the man which was come frō Iuda, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast bene dishobedient vnto the mouth of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, and hast not kepte the commaundement that the LORDE thy God commaunded the, but hast turned backe, and hast eaten bred, and dronke water in y<sup>e</sup> place, wherof he saide vnto the: Thou shalt nether eate bred ner drynke water, therefore shall not thy body come in to thy fathers graue.

And whan he had eaten bred and dronkē the asse was saddled vnto the prophet whom he had brought agayne. * And whā he was gone, a lyon founde him by the waye, & slewe him, and his body was east in y<sup>e</sup> waye. And the asse stode by him, and the lyon stode by the body. And whā men wente by, they sawe the body east in the waye, and the lyon stondynge besyde the body, and came and tolde it in the cite, where the olde prophet dwelt.

Whan the prophet which had broughte him agayne, herde that, he sayde: It is the man of God, that hath bene dishobediēt vnto the mouth of the LORDE, therefore hath y<sup>e</sup> LORDE delyuered him vnto the Lyon, which hath rente him, and slayne him, acordinge to the worde that the LORDE spake vnto him. And he sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddell me the asse. And whan they had saddled it, he wente, and founde his body east in the waie and the asse and the lyon stondynge beside y<sup>e</sup> body. The lyon had eatē nothinge of the body, nether had he torne the asse. Then toke the prophet the deed coarse of the man of God, and layed it vpō the asse, and broughte it agayne in to the cite of the olde prophet, to mourne, and to burye him.

And he layed the coarse in his awne graue, and they mourned for him: Alas my brother. And whan they had buried him, he saide vnto his sonnes: Whan I dye, burye me in the graue where the mā of God is buried, and laye my bones besyde his bones. † For it shal come to passe, that he cried (thorow the worde of the LORDE) against Bethel, and agaynst all y<sup>e</sup> houses of the hye places, which are in the cities of Samaria.

Howbeit after this acte dyd not Ieroboā turne from his euell waye, but was peruerted, and made prestes of the hye places, euē of the smallest of the people: Loke whom it pleased him, his handes he fylled, & he was prest of the hye places. And this turned to synne vnto the house of Ieroboā, to destroye him and to brynge him to naughte.

AT the same tyme was Abia the sonne of Ieroboam sieke, and Ieroboam saide vnto his wyfe: Get the vp, and disguise the, so that no man perceaue that thou art Ieroboams wyfe, and go vnto Silo: beholde, there is the prophet Ahias, † which promysed me y<sup>e</sup> I shulde be kyng ouer this people: and take with the ten loaves of bred and cakes, and a cuppe with hony, ⁊ go to him, that he maye tell the how it shal go with the childe. And Ieroboams wyfe did so, and gat hir vp, and wente vnto Silo, and came in to the house of Abias. But Abias coule not se, for his eyes were dymme for age. Neuerthelesse the LORDE sayde vnto Abias: Beholde, Ieroboams wyfe commeth, to axe a matter at the for hir sonne, for he is sycke. Speake thou therfore vnto her thus ⁊ thus. Now whan she came in, she shewed hirselfe straunge. But whan Abias herde the noyse of hir fete goyng in at the dore, he saide: Come in thou wyfe of Ieroboā. Why shewest thou thy selfe so straunge? I am sent vnto ⁊ an harde messaunger.

33 Go thy waye and tell Ieroboam: Thus sayeth ⁊ LORDE God of Israel: 'I haue exalted the from amonge the people, and set the to be prynce ouer my people of Israel, and haue reute the kyngdome from the house of Dauid, and geuen it the. But thou hast not bene as my seruauant Dauid, which kepthe my commaundemētes, and walked after me with all his hert, so that he did only ⁊ thinge that was righte in my sighte: and thou hast done worse then all they that haue bene before the: thou hast gone thy waye and made the other goddes, and molten ymages, to prouoke me vnto wrath, and hast cast me behynde thy backe.

Beholde therefore, I wil brynge mysfortune vpon the house of Ieroboam, and wyl rote out from Ieroboam euē him that maketh water agaynst the wall, the presoner and forsaken in Israel: and the posterite of ⁊ house of Ieroboam wyl I swepe out, as donge is swepte out, tyll he be cleane broughte to naught. * He that dieth (of Ieroboam) in the cite, the dogges shal eate him vp. But him ⁊ dyeth in the felde, shall the foules of the aire eat vp, for the LORDE hath spoken it.

C Get the vp therefore, and go home, ⁊ whan thy fete enter in to ⁊ cite, the childe shal dye. And all Israel shal bewaile him, and burye him. For he onely of Ieroboam shal come to the graue, because there is some good foule in him before the LORDE God of Israel, in Ieroboams house. † But the LORDE shall rayse him vp a kyng, which shal rote out ⁊ house of Ieroboam in that daie. And what is it, ⁊ is now in hande all ready? And the LORDE shal smyte Israel, like as a rede is moued in the water: ⁊ shal rote out Israel from this good londe, that he gaue vnto their fathers, ⁊ shal scatter them beyonde the water, because they haue made their groues to prouoke the LORDE vnto wrath. And Israel shall be geuen ouer because of the synne of Ieroboam, which hath synned him selfe, ⁊ made Israel to synne.

And Ieroboams wife gat her vp, wente hir waye, ⁊ came vnto Thirza. And whan she came vpō the thresholde of the house, ⁊ childe dyed, ⁊ they buried him, ⁊ all Israel made lamentacion for him, ⁊ accordinge to ⁊ worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruauant Ahia ⁊ prophet. § What more there is to saye of Ieroboam, how he foughte ⁊ raigned, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. The tyme that Ieroboam raigned, was two ⁊ twentye yere. And he slepte with his fathers. And Nadab his soune was kyng in his steade.

Roboam ⁊ sonne of Salomon was kyng in Iuda. ¶ One and forty yere olde was Roboam whā he was made kyng, ⁊ seuentene yere raigned he at Ierusalem, in the cite ⁊ the LORDE had chosen out of all ⁊ trybes of Israel, to set his name there. IN the eighteenth yere of kyng Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, <sup>a</sup>was Abia kyng in Iuda, and reigned three yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was †Maecha, the daughter of Abisalom, and he walked in all the synnes of his father, which he had done before him, and his hert was not perfecte with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father. ‡For because of Dauids sake dyd the LORDE his God geue him a lanterne at Ierusalem, so ¶he rayssed his sonne after him, & manteyned him at Ierusalem, because Dauid dyd the thinge ¶was righte in ¶the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all that he commaunded him as longe as he lyued (sauynge in the matter with §Vrias ¶the Hethite). But there was warre betwene Roboam and Ieroboam, as longe as he lyued.

What more there is to saye of Abia, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. There was warre also betwene Abia and Ieroboam. And Abia slepte with his fathers, and they buried him in the cite of Dauid. And Asa his sonne was kyng in his steade. In ¶the twentyeth yere of kyng Ieroboam ouer Israel, was Asa kyng in Iuda, and reigned one & fortye yere at Ierusalem. His graundmothers name was Maecha the daughter of Abisalom. And Asa dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as dyd his father Dauid. And he remoued ¶the whoremongers out of the londe, and put downe all the Idols that his fathers had made. **He put his mother from the mynistracion, that she had made vnto Miplezeth in ¶the groue. And Asa roted out hir Miplezeth, and brent it in the broke Cedron:

but the hye places put he not downe. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte with the LORDE as longe as he lyued. And the syluer and golde, and vessels that his father had halowed, & soch as was sanctified vnto ¶the house of the LORDE, that brought he in. And there was warre betwene Asa & Baesa the kyng of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

Baesa the kyng of Israel wente vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, ¶that no man shulde go out and in of Asas syde the kyng of Iuda. Then toke Asa all the syluer and golde that was lefte in the treasure of the house of the LORDE, and in the treasure of the kynges house, and delyuered it in to his seruantes handes, & sent it vnto ¶Benadab the sonne of Tabrimon the sonne of Hesion kyng of Siria, which dwelt at Damascos, and let saye vnto him: There is a couenaut betwene me and the, and betwene my father and thy father: therefore sende I the a present of syluer and golde, that thou shuldest breake the couenaut which thou hast with Baesa the kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadab agreed vnto kyng Asa, and sent his captaynes agaynst the cities of Israel, and smote Lion and Dan, & Abel Beth Maecha, and all Cineroth with the whole londe of Nephtali. Whā Baesa herde that, he left of from buyldinge Rama, and wente agayne vnto Thirza.

Kyng Asa caused it be proclaimed in all Iuda: Here be no man excepte. And they toke awaye the stones and tymber from Rama, wherwith Baesa had buylded. And kyng Asa buylded Geba Ben Iamin & Mispā therewith.

Howbeit Baesa the sonne of Ahia of the house of Isachar conspired agaynst him, ⁊ smote him at Gibbethon, which was the Philistynes: for Nadab and all Israel layed sege to Gibbethon. So Baesa slewe him in the thirde yeaere of Asa kynge of Iuda, ⁊ was kynge in his steade. * Now whan he was kynge, he smote all the house of Ieroboam, and let nothinge of Ieroboam remayne that had breth, tyll he had destroyed it, acordynge to ⁊ worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruauant Ahia of Silo, because of Ieroboams synnes which he dyd, ⁊ made Israel synne withall: euen with ⁊ prouokynge wherwith he displeased the LORDE God of Israel.

¶ What more there is to saye of Nadab, ⁊ all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel, and there was warre betwene Asa ⁊ Baesa the kynge of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

Neuertheles the worde of the LORDE came vnto Iehu the sonne of Hanani agaynst Baesa, and sayde: For so moch as I lifted the out of the dust, and made the prynce ouer my people of Israel, and thou walkest in the waye of Ieroboam, and makest my people ouer Israel for to synne, to prouoke me vnto wrath thorow their synnes, beholde, therefore wyll I take awaye the posterite of Baesa, and the posterite of his house, and wyll set thine house euen as the house of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat. † He that of Baesa dyeth in the cite, the dogges shal deuoure him: and who so beyuge of him dyeth in the felde, the foules of the ayre shall eate him vp.

What more there is to saye of Baesa, ⁊ what he dyd, ⁊ of his power, beholde, it is wrytten in ⁊ Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Baesa slepte with his fathers, ⁊ was buried at Thirza: ⁊ his sonne Ella was kynge in his steade. And the worde of ⁊ LORDE came by the prophet Iehu the sonne of Hanani, ouer Baesa, and ouer his house, and agaynst all the euell that he dyd in the sighte of ⁊ LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath thorow the workes of his handes: so that he became as the house of Ieroboam, and because he slewe † this man.

The xvi. Chapter.

IN the sixe ⁊ twentieth yeaere of Asa kynge of Iuda, was Ella the sonne of Baesa kynge ouer Israel at Thirza two yeaere. Neuertheles his seruauant Simri, ⁊ principall man ouer the halfe of ⁊ charettes cōspyréd agaynst him. As for Ella, he was at Thirza, dranke ⁊ was dronkē in ⁊ house of Arza the ruler of Thirza. And Simri came in, and slewe him in the seuen ⁊ twentieth yeaere of Asa kynge of Iuda, and was kynge in his steade. † And whan he was kynge, and sat vpon his seate, he smote all the house of Baesa, ⁊ lefte not so moch as one to make water agaynst ⁊ wall: his bloud auengers also ⁊ his frendes. ¶ Thus dyd Simri destroye all the house of Baesa, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake ouer Baesa by the prophet Iehu, because of all the synnes of Baesa and of Ella his sonne, which they dyd, and made Israel for to synne, to prouoke the LORDE God of Israel vnto wrath thorow their vanities. What more there is to saye of Ella, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

In the seuen and twentieth yeaere of Asa kynge of Iuda, was Simri kynge vij. dayes at Thirza, and the people laye before Gibbethon of the Philistynes. But whan the people in the hoost herde saye ⁊ Simri had conspired and slayne the kynge, then all Israel the same daye made Amri the chefe captayne kynge ouer all in the hoost. And Amri wente vp and all Israel with him from Gibbethon, and layed sege vnto Thirza. † But whan Simri sawe ⁊ the cite shulde be wonne, he wente in to the palace in the kynges house, ⁊ brent it with ⁊ kynges house, ⁊ dyed because of his synnes which he had committed, in that he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of Ieroboam, and in his synnes which he dyd, wherwith he made Israel to synne.

What more there is to saye of Simri, and how he conspired, beholde, it is wrytten in ⁊ Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. At the same tyme were ⁊ people deuyded in two partes:

In  $\hat{y}$  one and thirtieth yere of Asa kyng of Iuda, was Amri kyng ouer Israel twolue yeres,  $\tau$  reigned at Thirza sixe yeres. And he thoughte it but a small matter to walke in the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat:  $\tau$  and toke Iesabel the daughter of Eth Baal kyng of Sidon to wife, and wente and serued Baal, and worshiped him. And vnto Baal he set vp an altare in Baals house, which he buylded him in Samaria, and made a groue: so that Achab dyd more to prouoke the God of Israel vnto wrath, then all the kynges  $\hat{y}$  were before him in Israel.

At  $\hat{y}$  same tyme dyd Hiel of Bethel buylde Iericho:  $\dagger$  It cost him his first sonne Abiram,  $\hat{y}$  he layed  $\hat{y}$  foundation:  $\tau$  his yongest sonne Segub,  $\hat{y}$  he set vp the portes: Accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake by Iosua the sonne of Nun.

And the LORDE herde the voyce of Elias. And the soule of the childe came agayne vnto him, ȝ he reuyued. And Elias toke the childe, and broughte him downe from the chamber in to the house and delyuered him vnto his mother, and sayde: Beholde, thy sonne lyueth. And the woman sayde vnto Elias: Now knowe I, that thou art a man of God, ȝ that the worde of the LORDE is in thy mouth of a trueth.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND after a longe season came ȝ worde of the LORDE vnto Elias in the thirde yere, ȝ sayde: †Go thy waye, ȝ shewe thy selfe vnto Achab, ȝ I maye cause it for to rayne vpon earth. And Elias wente to shewe him selfe vnto Achab. But there was a greate derth ī Samaria. And Achab called Abdia his chefe officer: (As for Abdia, he feared ȝ LORDE greatly: for whā Iesabel roted out ȝ prophetes of ȝ LORDE, Abdia toke an C. prophetes, and hyd them in caues, here fiftye, ȝ there fiftye, ȝ prouyded for them with bred and water.) Achab now sayde vnto Abdia: Go thorow the londe vnto all the wellles of water ȝ ryuers, yf happily we maye finde hay, ȝ to saue ȝ horses ȝ mules, ȝ all the catell perishe not. And they parted thē selues in to the londe, to go thorow it. Achab departed the one waye alone, and Abdia ȝ other waye alone.

Now whan Abdia was on ȝ waye, Elias met him. And whan he knewe him, he fell downe vpon his face, ȝ sayde: Art not thou my lorde Elias? He sayde: yee, go thy waye, and tell thy lorde: beholde. Elias is here. But he sayde: What haue I offended, that thou wilt delyuer thy seruauant in to the handes of Achab, that he maye slaye me? As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, there is no people ner kingdome, but my lorde hath sent thither to seke the. And whan they sayde: He is not here, he toke an ooth of the same kyngdome and nacion, that they had not founde the. And now thou sayest: Go tell thy lorde: beholde, Elias is here. Now whan I were gone from the, the sprete of the LORDE shulde take ȝ awaye, I cannot tell whither: and yf I then came and tolde Achab, and founde the not, he shulde slaye me: But thy seruauant feareth the LORDE from his youth vp. Hath it not bene tolde my lorde what I dyd, whan Iesabel slewe the prophetes of the LORDE, how that I hyd an hundreth of the LORDES prophetes, here fiftye, and there fiftye in the caues, and prouyded for them with bred and water? And thou sayest now: Go thy waye, tell thy lorde: Elias is here, that he maye slaye me. Elias saide: As truly as ȝ LORDE Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stōde, I wil shewe my selfe vnto him this daye. Then wēte Abdia to mete Achab, ȝ tolde him. And Achab wēte for to mete Elias.

And whan Achab sawe Elias, Achab sayde vnto him: Art thou he that troublest Israel? He sayde: I trouble not Israel, †but it is thou and thy fathers house, because ye haue forsaken the commaundementes of the LORDE, and walke after Baal. Go to, sende forth now, and gather me all Israel together vnto mount Carmell, and the foure hundreth and fiftye prophetes of Baal, and the foure hundreth prophetes of ȝ groue, which eate of Iesabels table. So Achab sent vnto all the children of Israel, ȝ gathered the prophetes together vnto mount Carmell.

Then stepte Elias vnto all the people, ȝ sayde: How longe halte ye on both ȝ sydes? Yf the LORDE be God, thē walke after him: but yf Baal be he, thē folowe him. And the people gaue him no answer. Thē sayde Elias vnto the people: I onely am lefte a prophet of ȝ LORDE: but Baals prophetes are foure C. and fiftie mē. Geue vs now two bullockes, ȝ let them chose one bullocke, ȝ hewe him in peces, ȝ laye him vpō the wod, ȝ put no fyre thereon: so wil I take ȝ other bullock, ⁊ laye him vpō the wod, ⁊ put no fyre theron also: call ye then vpō the name of youre god, ⁊ I wil call vpō the name of the LORDE: loke which God now answereth with fyre, let the same be God. And all the people answered ⁊ sayde: That is righte. And Elias sayde vnto Baals prophetes: Chose ye one bullock, and do ye it first (for ye are many) and call ye vpon the name of youre god, ⁊ laye no fyre theron.

¶ And they toke the bullock which he gaue them, ⁊ prepared it, ⁊ called vpon the name of Baal from the mornynge vntyll the noone daye, and sayde: O Baal heare vs. But there was nether voyce ner answer. And they hopped aboute the altare, as their vse was to do. Now when it was noone daye, Elias mocked them, and sayde: Crye loude. For he is a god, peraduenture he is musynge, or hath somwhat to do, or is gone some iourneye, or happily he slepeth, so that he wolde be waked vp. And they cried loude, and prouoked the selues with knyues ⁊ botkens, (as their maner was) tyll ⁊ blonde folowed. But whan ⁊ noone daye was past, they prophecied vntyll the tyme that the meatofferynge shulde be offered, ⁊ there was nether voyce ner answer, ner one to regarde them.

Then sayde Elias vnto all the people: Come hither all ye people vnto me. And whan all ⁊ people came to him, he repayed ⁊ *altare of the LORDE ⁊ was broken, ⁊ toke twolue stones accordinge to the nombre of ⁊ trybes of the childrē of Iacob (vnto whom the worde of the LORDE spake, and sayde: †Thy name shal be Israel) and of ⁊ stones he buylded an altare in the name of the LORDE, ⁊ made a pytt rounde aboute the altare, like two forowes in the corne londe, ⁊ prepared the wod, ⁊ hewed ⁊ bullock in peces, and layed him vpon the wod, ⁊ sayde: Fetch foure pitchers full of water, and poured it vpō the burntofferynge, and vpon the wod. And he sayde: Do it yet once. And they dyd it once agayne. And he sayde: Do it ⁊ thirde tyme. And they dyd it the thirde tyme. And ⁊ water ranne aboute the altare, and ⁊ pytt was full of water also.

And whan the tyme was to offer ⁊ meat-offerynge, Elias stepte forth, and sayde: O LORDE God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Israel, let it be knowne this daye, that thou art God in Israel, and I thy seruauunt, and that I haue done all this accordinge vnto thy worde. Heare me O LORDE. O heare me, ⁊ this people maye knowe, how that thou art the LORDE God, that thou mayest afterwarde turne their hertes. ⁊ Then fell downe the fyre of the LORDE, and consumed the burntofferynge, the wodde, the stones and the earth, and licked vp the water that was in the pytt. Whan all the people sawe that, they fell vpon their faces, and sayde: The LORDE is God, ⁊ LORDE is God. Elias sayde vnto them: ¶ Laye handes vpon Baals prophetes, ⁊ none of them escape. And they toke them. And Elias broughte them downe vnto ⁊ broke Cyson, ⁊ slewe the there.

And Elias sayde vnto Achab: Go vp, eate ⁊ drynke, for it soundeth ⁊ as though it wolde rayne sore. And whan Achab wete vp to eate ⁊ drinke, Elias ascēded vp to the toppe of Carmel, ⁊ bowed him selfe downe to the earth, ⁊ put his heade betwene his knees, ⁊ sayde vnto his lad: Go vp, and loke towarde the See. He wente vp ⁊ loked, ⁊ sayde: There is nothinge. He sayde: Go agayne seuen tymes. And at the seūth tyme he sayde: Beholde, there goeth vp a litle cloude out of the see, like a mans hande. He sayde: Go vp, and saie vnto Achab: Bynde thy charet, ⁊ go downe, ⁊ the rayne ouertake the not. And or mā coulede turne him, the heauen was blacke with cloudes ⁊ wynde, ⁊ there came a greate rayne. But Achab rode his waie, ⁊ departed vnto Iesrael. And the hāde of ⁊ LORDE came vpō Elias, and he gyrded his loynes, ⁊ ranne before Achab, tyll he came vnto Iesrael.

The xii. Chapter.

¶ AND Achab tolde Iesabel all ⁊ Elias had done, ⁊ how he had slayne all Baals prophetes with the swerde. The sent Iesabel a messaunger vnto Elias, sayenge: The goddes do this ⁊ that vnto me, yf I tomorow aboute this tyme, make not thy soule as one of these. Then was he afayed, ⁊ gat him vp, ⁊ wente where he wolde, ⁊ came vnto Berseba in Iuda, and lefte his lad there. But he him selfe wente a daies iourney in to ⁊ wyldernes, ⁊ came in, ⁊ sat him downe vnder a Iuniper tre, ⁊ wysshed vnto his soule ⁊ he mighte dye, ⁊ sayde: It is now ynough LORDE, take my soule, for I am no better then my

And beholde the worde of the LORDE came to him, and sayde vnto him: What doest thou here Elias? He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaoth: for the children of Israel haue forsaken thy couenaunt, and broken downe thine altares, and slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, and I am lefte onely, & they seke to take awaye my life. He sayde: Go forth, and stonde vpon the mount before the LORDE. And beholde, the LORDE wete ouer: and a greате mightie wynde, which roue the mountaynes, and brake the harde stones, came before the LORDE, but the LORDE was not in the wynde. After the wynde came there an earthquake, but the LORDE was not in the earthquake.

$\text{\textcircled{C}}$  And after the earth quake there came a fyre, but the LORDE was not in the fyre. And after the fyre came there a styll softe hyssinge. Whan Elias herde that, he couered his face with his cloke, and wente forth, and stode in the dore of the caue. And beholde, there came a voyce vnto him, and sayde: What hast thou here to do Elias?

He sayde: I haue bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaoth: †for the children of Israel haue forsakē thy couenaunt, broken downe thine altares, slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, & I onely am lefte, and they seke to take awaye my life. And he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, & come agayne, for I haue some what to do with the. And he ranne agayne from him, and toke a yock of oxen, and offred it, and sod  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  flesh with the wod of the oxen plowes, and gaue it vnto the people to eate, and gat him vp, & folowed Elias, and mynistred vnto him.

$\text{\textcircled{A}}$  ND \*\*Benadab  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  kyng of Siria gathered all his power, & there were two & thirtie kynges with him, & horses & charettes, and he wente vp, and layed sege vnto Samaria, & foughte agaynst it. And the messaungers came agayne, & sayde: Thus sayeth Benadab: For so moch as I haue sent vnto the, sayenge: Thy syluer & thy golde, thy wyues & thy childrē shalt thou geue me, tomorew aboute this tyme wil I sende my seruantes vnto the,  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  they maye serch thynne house and the houses of thy subiectes: & loke what pleasaunt thinge thou hast,  $\text{\textcircled{f}}$  shal they take in their handes, and cary it awaye. cōsente ner agree vnto him. And he spake vnto Benadabs messaigers, Saye vnto my lordē ſy kynge: All ſy thynges wherfore thou dyddeſt ſende vnto me thy ſeruaunt at ſy firſt, wil I do, but this can I not do. And ſy meſſaungers wēte, and tolde this againe. Thē ſent Benadab vnto him ſayēge: The goddes do this and ſy vnto me, yf the duſt of Samaria ſhalbe ynough, for euery one of my people to brynge me an handfull therof. But ſy kynge of Iſrael answered, ⁊ ſayde: Tell him, Let not him ſy putteth on ſy harnes, make his boalt like him ſy hath put it of. Whā Benadab herde ſy (euē as he was drynkinge with the kyngeſ in ſy paulyon) he ſayde vnto his ſeruautes: Set youre ſelues in arayē. And they ſet thē ſelues in araiē againſt ſy cite.

And beholde, there came a prophet vnto Achab ſy kynge of Iſrael, ⁊ ſaide: Thus ſayeth the LORDE: Haſt thou ſene all this greate multitude? Beholde, this daie wil I delyuer thē in to thy hande, ſo ſy thou ſhalt knowe, how ſy I am ſy LORDE. Achab ſayde: By whom? He ſayde: Thus ſayeth the LORDE: Euen by the yonge men of the rulers of the londe. He ſayde: Who ſhal order the battayl? He ſayde: Thou. Then muſtered he the yonge men of the rulers of the londe, ⁊ there were two hundreth and two and thirtie of them: ⁊ after thē muſtered he of the whole people of all the childrē of Iſrael, ſeuē thouſande men, and they wente out in the noone daie. As for Benadab, he dranke and was dronken in the paulyon with the two ⁊ thirtie kyngeſ which were come to helpe him. And the yonge men of the rulers of the londe wente forth firſt.

Benadab ſent forth, ⁊ they brought him worde, ⁊ ſayde: There come men out of Samaria. He ſayde: Take them alyue, whether they be come forth for peace, or for warre. But whan the londe rulers yonge men were gone forth, and the hoost behynde them, euery one ſmote him ſy came in his waye. And the Sirians fled, and Iſrael folowed after them. And Benadab the kynge of Syria eſcaped with horſes and horſmē. And the kynge of Iſrael wente forth, and ſmote horſes and charettes, and dyd a greate ſlaughter on the Sirians.

Then came there a prophet vnto the kynge of Iſrael, and ſayde vnto him: Go thy waye and ſtrength the, and take hede, and loke well what thou doeſt: for whan the yeaere is aboute, the kynge of Syria ſhall come agaynſt the of the new. For the kynge of ſy Sirians ſeruautes ſayde vnto him: Their goddes are goddes of the mountaynes, therfore haue they gotten the victory.

But let vs fyghte with them on the playne, and thou ſhalt ſe that we ſhal ouercome them. Do thus, put awaye the kyngeſ euery one from his place, and ſet dukes in their ſteades, and appoynte the an hoost as was that which thou haſt loſt, ⁊ horſes ⁊ charettes as the other were, and let vs fight agaynſt thē in the plaine, and thou ſhalt ſe that we ſhal haue the victory. He cōſented vnto their voyce, and dyd ſo.

Now whan the yeaere was gone aboute, Benadab appoynted the Sirians, and wente vp towarde Aphek, to fyghte agaynſt Iſrael, and the childrē of Iſrael muſtered, and prouyd them ſelues with vytailles, and wēte to mete them, and pitched their tētes ouer againſt them, like two litle flockes of goates but the londe was full of the Sirians.

And there came a man of God, and ſayde vnto the kynge of Iſrael: Thus ſayeth the LORDE: Becauſe the Sirians haue ſayde, that the LORDE is a God of the moūtaynes and not a God of the valleys, therfore haue I geuen all this greate heape in to thy handes, that ye maye knowe how that I am ſy LORDE. And they pitched their tentes right ouer agaynſt them ſeuē dayes. But vpon ſy ſeuēth daie they wente together in to the battayll: and the children of Iſrael ſmote of the Sirians an hundreth thouſande fote men in one daie, and the remnaunt fled to Aphek in to the cite, and the wall fell vpon the other ſeuē and twenty thouſande men. And Benadab fled alſo vnto the cite in to a litle chamber.

Then ſayde his ſeruautes vnto him: Beholde, we haue herde that the kyngeſ of the houſe of Iſrael are mercifull kinges, Let vs therfore put ſack cloth aboute oure loynes, and halters aboute oure neckes, ⁊ go forth to the kynge of Iſrael, peraduenture he ſhal let thy ſoule lyue.

And they put ſack cloth aboute their loynes, and halters aboute their neckes, and came to the kynge of Iſrael, and ſayde: Benadab thy ſeruaunt ſayeth vnto the: O let my ſoule lyue. He ſayde: yf he be yet alyue, he is my brother. And the men toke him shortly at his worde, and expounded it for them selues and sayde: Yee Benadab is thy brother. He sayde: Come and brynge him. Thē wente Benadab forth vnto him, and he caused him to syt vpon the charet, and sayde vnto him: The cities that my father toke from thy father, wyl I geue the agayne. And make thou stretes for thyselfe at Damascō, as my father did at Samaria, so wyl I let the go with a bonde of peace. And he made a couenaunt with him, and let him go.

Then spake there a man amonge the children of the prophetes vnto his neyghboure by the worde of the LORDE: I praye the smite me. But he refused to smite him. Then saide he vnto him, because thou hast not hekened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, beholde, therefore shall there a lyon smyte the, whan thou goest fro me. *And whan he wente frō him, a lyon founde him, and slewe him.

And he founde another man, and sayde: I praye the smyte me. And the man smote him, and wounded him. Then wente the prophet, and stepte vnto the kyng by the waye syde, and altered his face with aszshes. And whan the kyng wente by, he cried vpon ſ kyng, and sayde: Thy seruauant wente forth in to the battayll, and beholde, there wente one asyde, and broughte a man vnto me, and sayde: Kepe this mā: yf he be myssed, thy soule shall be in steade of his soule, or els thou shalt weye downe an hundred weighte of syluer. And whyle thy seruauant had here ⁊ there to do, he was awaye. The kyng of Israel sayde vnto him: It is thine owne iudgment, thou hast geuen it thyselfe.

Then put he the aszshes from his face in all the haist. And the kyng of Israel kneue him, that he was one of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast let the damned man go, therefore shall thy soule be for his soule, and thy people for his people. And the kyng of Israel departed vnto his house, beinge troubled in his mynde and full indignacion, and came to Samaria.

The xxi. Chapter.

AFTER these actes it fortuneth, that Naboth the Iesraelite had a vynyarde at Iesreel besyde the palace of Achab kyng of Samaria. And Achab spake to Naboth, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde, I wyl make me an herbgarden therof, because it is so nye my house: I wyl geue the a better vynyarde for it: or yf it please the, I wyl geue the syluer for it, as moch as it is worth. But Naboth sayde vnto Achab: †The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde geue ſ my fathers heretage. Then came Achab home, beinge moued and full of indignacion, because of the worde that Naboth the Iesraelite had spoken vnto him, ⁊ sayde: I wyl not geue the my fathers inheritance. And he laied him downe vpon his bed, and turned his face asyde, and ate no bred. Then Iesabel his wyfe came in to him and sayde vnto him: What is ſ matter, that thy sprete is so cōbred, and that thou eatest no bred? He sayde vnto her: I haue spokē vnto Naboth the Iesraelite, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde for money: or yf it please ſ, I wyl geue the another for it. But he sayde: I wyl not geue the my vynyarde.

Then sayde Iesabel his wyfe vnto him: What kingdome were in Israel, yf thou diddest it? Stonde vp, and eate bred, I wyl get the the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And she wrote a letter vnder Achabs name, and sealed it with his signet, and sent it vnto ſ Elders and rulers in his cite, which dwelt aboute Naboth, and wrote thus in ſ letter: Proclame a fast, and set Naboth aboue in the people, and set two men of Belial before him, to testifye and saye: Thou hast blasphemed God and the kyng. And brynge him forth, and stone him to death.

And the Elders and rulers of his cyte, which dwelt in his cite, dyd as Iesabel had commaunded them, acordynge as she had wrytten in the letter that she sent vnto them and they proclaimed a fast, and caused Naboth to syt aboue amonge the people. Then came the two men of Belial, and stode before him, and testyfyed agaynst Naboth in ſ presence of the people, and sayde: Naboth hath blasphemed God and the kyng.

Then broughte they him out of the cite, and stoned him to death. And they sent Iesabel worde, sayenge: Naboth is stoned ⁊ put to death. Whā Iesabel herde that Naboth was stoned and deed, she sayde vnto Achab:

But the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Theszbite, and sayde: Get the vp, and go downe to mete Achab the kyng of Israel, which is at Samaria: beholde, he is in Naboths vynyarde, in to the which he is gone downe to take possession of it, and talke thou with him, and speake: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou hast slayne, and taken in possession. And thou shalt talke morouer vnto him, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: * Euen in the place where the dogges licked vp Naboths bloude, shall the dogges lick thy bloude also. And Achab sayde vnto Elias: Hast thou euer founde me thine enemye? He saide: Yee, I haue founde the, because thou art euen solde to do euell in the sighte of the LORDE. Beholde, † I wyll brynge mysfortune vpon the, and take awaye thy posterite, and wil rote out from Achab, euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and him that is shut vp and left behynde in Israel: and thy house wyll I make as the house of Ieroboam y sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, because of y prouocacion wherwith thou hast prouoked me vnto wrath, and made Israel to synne.

¶ And ouer Iesabel spake the LORDE also and sayde: ‡ The dogges shal deuoure Iesabel in y felde of Iesrael. § Who so of Achab dyeth in y cite, him shal the dogges eate vp: and who so dyeth in the felde, the foules vnder the heauen shal eate him vp. So cleane ¶ solde to do myschefe in y sighte of the LORDE hath no man bene, as Achab: for his Iesabel hath so disceaueid him, and he maketh him selfe a greate abhominacion, that he goeth after Idols, acordige vnto all as dyd the Amorites, ¶ whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel.

But whan Achab herde these wordes, he rete his clothes, ¶ put a sack cloth on his body, ¶ fasted, and slepte in sack cloth, and wente aboute hanginge downe his heade. And the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND there passed ouer thre yeaes, that ¶ there was no warre betwene the Sirians ¶ Israel. ¶ But in the thirde yeaere wente Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda downe to the kyng of Israel. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto his seruantes: Knowe ye not y Ramoth in Gilead is oures? and we syt styll, and take it not out of the hande of the kyng of Syria. And he sayde vnto Iosaphat: Wilt thou go with me to the battaill vnto Ramoth in Gilead? Iosaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: I wyll be as thou, my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And Iosaphat sayde vnto y kyng of Israel: ¶ Axe this daye at the worde of the LORDE. Then the kyng of Israel gathered the prophetes aboute a ¶ foure hundred men, and sayde vnto them: Shal I go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fighte, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp, y LORDE shal deluyr it in to y kynges hande. But Iosaphat sayde: Is there not one prophet here more of y LORDE, that we maye axe at him?

The kyng of Israel saide vnto Iosaphat: ¶ Here is yet a man, one Micheas the sonne of Iemla, at whom we maye axe of the LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecietieth me no good, but euell. Iosaphat sayde: Let not the kyng saye so. Then called the kyng of Israel a chamberlayne, and sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla. As for the kyng of Israel and Iosaphat y kyng of Iuda, they sat ether of them vpon his seate, arrayed in their garmentes in the place at y dore of the porte of Samaria, and all y prophetes prophecied before thē. And Sedechias the sonne of Cuaena had made him hornes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou puszhe at y Syrians, tyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophetes prophecied likewyse, and sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, thou shalt prosper right well, ¶ the LORDE shal delyuer it in to the kynges hande. And the messaunger that wente to call Micheas sayde vnto him: Beholde, The wordes of þy prophetes are with one acorde good before the kyng, let thy worde therfore be as their worde, and speake thou good also.

¶ Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE liueth, loke what the LORDE sayeth vnto me, þy wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Micheas, shal we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fight or shall we let it alone? He sayde vnto him: Yee, go vp, thou shalt prospere righte well, the LORDE shall geue it in to the kynges hande. But the kyng sayde vnto him agayne: I charge þy that thou saye no other thinge vnto me but the trueth, in the name of þy LORDE. He sayde: I sawe all Israel scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, as the shepe that haue no shepherd. And the LORDE saide: Hauē these no lorde? Let euery one turne home agayne in peace. Then sayde þy kyng of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Tolde not I þy that he wolde prophcey me no good, but euell?

¶ He sayde: Hearē now therfore the worde of the LORDE: * I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stōdīng by him at his righte hande ⁊ at his left. And the LORDE saide: Who wil disceauē Achab to go vp, ⁊ fall at Ramoth in Gilead. And one sayde this, another that. Then wēte there forth a sprete, ⁊ stode before the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceauē him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde vnto him: I wyll go forth, and be a false sprete in the mouth of all his prophetes. He saide: Thou shalt disceauē him, and shalt be able: go forth and do so. Beholde now, † the LORDE hath geuē a false sprete in þy mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spoken euell ouer the. Then stepte forth Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: What, is the sprete of the LORDE departed fro me, to speake with the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it in þy daye, whan thou shalt go frō one chamber to another to hyde the.

¶ The kyng of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amon the ruler of the cite, and with Iosias the kynges sonne, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyng: Put this man in preson, and fede him with bred and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas sayde: Yf thou comest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: herken to all ye people.

So the kyng of Israel and Iosaphat þy kyng of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Change thy clothes, and come in to þy battayll in thine arae. The kyng of Israel chaunged his clothes also, and wete in to the battayll. But the kyng of Siria commaunded the rulers of his charettes (of whom there were two and thirtie) and saide: Ye shal fight nether agaynst small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyng of Israel. And whan the rulers of the charettes sawe Iosaphat, they thought it had bene the kyng of Israel, and fell vpon him with fightinge. But Iosaphat cried. So whan the rulers of the charettes sawe that it was not þy kyng of Israel, they turned back frō him.

A certayne man bended his bowe harde, and shott the kyng of Israel betwene the mawe and þy longes. And he sayde vnto his charetman: Turne thine hāde, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And þy battayll was sore the same daie. And the kyng stode vpō his charet, agaynst the Syriās and dyed in the eueninge, and the bloude ranne from the wounde in to the myddes of the charet. And whan the Sonne wente downe there was a proclamacion made in the hoost, and sayde: Euery one gett him in to his cite, and to his cōunte. Thus the kyng dyed, and was broughte vnto Samaria, and they buryed him in Samaria. And whan they waszshed the charet in the pole of Samaria, ‡ þy dogges licked his bloude (but the harlottes waszshed him) acordinge to the worde of þy LORDE which he spake.

What more there is to saye of Achab, ⁊ all þy he dyd, and of the Yuary house which he buylded, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. So Achab slepte with his fathers, and his sonne Ahasia was kyng in his steade.

¶ And Iosaphat the sonne of Asa was kyng ouer Iuda in the fourth yeare of Achab kyng of Israel, and was fyue and thirtie yeare olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned fyue and twenty yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers

And he dyd that which was right in & sighte of the LORDE, yet put he not awaye & hie places, and & people offred and brent incense yet vpon the hye places, and he had peace with the kyng of Israel.

And Iosaphat had caused to make shippes vpon the See, which shulde go to fetch golde in Ophir, but they wente not: for they were broken at Ezeon Gaber. At that tyme sayde Ahasia the sonne of Achab vnto Iosaphat: Let my seruantes passe with thy seruantes in the shippes. But Iosaphat wolde not. And Iosaphat slepte with his fathers, and was buried in & cite of Dauid. And Ioram his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The fyrst Chapter.

And Ochosias fell thorow y<sup>e</sup> grate in his chāber at Samaria, and was deed sicke, and sent messaungers, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye, and axe counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, whether I shall recouer from this sicknesse. But the angell of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE sayde vnto Elias the Theszbite: Vp, & go mete the messaungers of the kyng of Samaria, and saie vnto them: Is there no God in Israel, that ye go to axe counsell at y<sup>e</sup> god of Ekron? Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not come from the bed wheron thou lvest, but shalt dye the death.

And Elias wente his waye. And whā y<sup>e</sup> messaungers came to Ochosias agayne, he sayde vnto thē: Why come ye agayne? They sayde vnto him: There came vp a man in oure waye, and sayde vnto vs: Go againe to the kinge that hath sent you, and saye vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Is there no God in Israel, y<sup>e</sup> thou sendest to axe couēl at Beelzebub y<sup>e</sup> god of Ekrō? Therfore shalt thou not come from þy bed wheron thou lyst, but shalt dye the death. He sayde vnto them: What maner of man was it that mett you, and sayde this vnto you? They sayde vnto him: He had a rough heer vpon him, and a letheren gyrdell aboute his loynes. He sayde: It is Elias the Thesbite.

And he sent vnto him a captayne ouer fyfye, with the same fyfye. And whan he came vnto him, beholde, he sat aboute vpon the moût. He sayde vnto him: Thou mā of God, the kynge sayeth: Thou shalt come downe. Elias answered the captayne ouer fyfye, and sayde vnto him: Yf I be a man of God, the fyre fall downe then from heauen, and cōsume the and thy fyfye. *Then fell there fire from heauen, and consumed him and his fyfye. And agayne he sent another captayne ouer fyfye vnto him, with his fyfye, which answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, thus sayeth the kynge: Come downe in all the haist. Elias answered, and saide: Yf I be a mā of God, þy fire fall downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fyfye. Then fell the fyre of God from heauen, and consumed him, and his fyfye. Agayne, he sent vnto him the thirde captayne ouer fyfye, with his fyfye.

Now whan he came to him, he kneeled to Elias, and besoughte him, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, let my soule and þy soules of thy seruantes these fyfye, be somewhat worth in thy syghte. Beholde, the fyre fell downe from heauen, and hath consumed the fyrst two captaynes ouer fyfye with their fyfyes. But now let my soule be somewhat worth in thy sighte. Then saide the angel of the LORDE vnto Elias: Go downe with him, and feare him not. And he gatt him vp, and wente downe with him vnto þy kynge.

And he sayde vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Because thou hast sent forth messengers, and caused to axe counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, as though there were no God in Israel to axe coucell at his worde, therefore shalt thou not come from the bed wheron thou hast layed the, but shalt dye þy death. So he dyed, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE which Elias sayde. And Ioram (his brother) was kynge in his steade in the seconde yere of Ioram the sonne of Iosaphat kynge of Iuda: for he had no sonne.

What more there is to saye of Ochosias, what he dyd, beholde, it is wrytē in the Cronicles of the kynyes of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

WHAN the LORDE was mynded to take vp Elias in the tempest, Elias and Eliseus wente from Gilgall. And Elias sayde to Eliseus: Tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Bethel. But Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the. And whan they came downe vnto Bethel, the prophetes children that were at Bethel, wēte forth to Eliseus, and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not, that the LORDE wyl take thy lorde awaye from thy heade this daye? He saide: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace.

And Elias sayde vnto him: Eliseus, tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Iericho. Neuerthelesse he sayde: as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the.

And whan they came vnto Iericho, the prophetes children which were at Iericho, stepte forth to Eliseus and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not that the LORDE wyll take thy lorde awaye from thy heade this daie? He sayde: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace. And Elias sayde vnto him: I praie the tary here, for þy LORDE hath sent me vnto Iordane. But he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the. And they wente both together. But fyfye men of þy prophetes children wēte forth, and stode ouer agaynst thē a farre of: but they both stode by Iordane. Then toke Elias his cloke, and wrapped it together, and smote the water, which deuyded it selfe on both the sydes, so that they wēte dry shod thorow it. And whan they were come ouer, Elias sayde vnto Eliseus: Axe what I shall do for the, afore I be taken awaye from the. Eliseus saide: That thy sprete maye be vpō me to speake twyse as moch.

He sayde: Thou hast desyred an harde thinge: neuertheles yf thou shalt se me whā I am taken awaye from the, it shal be so: Yf no, thē shal it not be. And as they were goinge together, and he talked, there came a fyrie charet with horses of fyre, and parted thē both asunder. †And so wente Elias vp to heauen in the storme. But Eliseus sawe it, & cryed: My father, my father, the charetman of Israel and his horsmē. And he sawe him nomore.

And he toke holde of his clothes, and rente them in two peces, and toke vp Elias cloke that was fallen from him, and turned backe, and stode by the shore of Iordane, and toke the same cloke of Elias which was fallen from him, and smote it in the water, and saide: Where is now the LORDE God of Elias? And he smote it in to the water, and then parted it asunder on both the sydes, and Eliseus wente throw.

¶ And whan the prophetes children which were at Iericho ouer agaynst him, sawe him, they sayde: The sprete of Elias resteth vpō Eliseus, and so they wēte forth to mete him, and worshipped him to the grounde, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, there are fyfte valeaunt mē amonge thy seruantes, let them go and seke thy lorde, peradventure the sprete of the LORDE hath taken him, and cast him vpon some mountaine or in some valley. But he saide: Sende them not. Neuertheles they constrayned him, tyll he was ashamed, and sayde: Let them go. And they sent fyfte men, which soughte him thre dayes: but they founde him not, and came agayne vnto him. And he abode at Iericho, and sayde vnto them: Tolde not I you, that ye shulde not go? And the men of the cite sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, there is good dwellynge in this cite, as my lorde seyth, but the water is euell, and the londe vnfrutefull.

¶ He sayde: Bring me hither a new vessell, & put salt in it. And they broughte it him. Then wēte he forth vnto the well of water, and cast the salt therin, & sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue healed this water: from hence forth shal there no deed ner vnfrutefulnes come of it. So the water was healed vnto this daye, accordinge to the worde of Eliseus which he spake.

And he wēte vp towarde Bethel. And as he was goynge vp by the waye, there came litle boyes out of the cite, and mocked him, & sayde: Come vp here thou balde heade, come vp here thou balde heade. And he turned him aboute. And whā he sawe them, he cursed them in the name of the LORDE. Then came there two Beeres out of the wod, and rente two and fortye of the children. From thence wēte he vp vnto mount Carmel, and from it turned he backe to Samaria.

Mesa y<sup>e</sup> kynge of the Moabites had many shepe, & payed tribute vnto the kynge of Israel with the woll of an hundreth thousande lābes, & of an hidreth thousande rāmes. * But whan Achab was deed, the kynge of y<sup>e</sup> Moabites fell awaye frō the kynge of Israel. At y<sup>e</sup> same tyme wēte kynge Ioram frō Samaria, & mustered all Israel, & sent vnto Iosaphat kynge of Iuda, sayenge: The kynge of the Moabites is fallen awaye fro me, come thou with me to fighte agaynst y<sup>e</sup> Moabites. He sayde: I wil come vp, † I am euen as thou, and my people as thy people, and my horses as thy horses. And sayde morouer: Which waye wil we go vp? He sayde: by the waye in the wylder-nesse of Edom.

So the kynge of Israel, the kynge of Iuda, & the kynge of Edom wente forth. And whan they had gone aboute seuē dayes iourney, y<sup>e</sup> hoost & the catell y<sup>e</sup> were amonge thē had no water. Then sayde the kynge of Israel: Alas, the LORDE hath called these thre kynges, to delyuer thē in to the hande of the Moabites. But Iosaphat sayde: † Is here no prophet of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, y<sup>e</sup> we maye axe coucell at y<sup>e</sup> LORDE by him? Then answered one of y<sup>e</sup> kynge of Israels seruantes, & saide: Here is Eliseus y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Saphat, which poured water vpon Elias handes. Iosaphat sayde: The worde of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE is with him. So the kynge of Israel & Iosaphat, and y<sup>e</sup> kynge of Edom wente downe vnto him.

But Eliseus sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: ¶ What hast thou to do with me? go to the prophetes of thy father & to thy mothers prophetes. The kinge of Israel saide vnto him: No, for y<sup>e</sup> LORDE hath called these thre kynges, to delyuer them in to the handes of the Moabites. Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stode, yf I regarded not Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda, I wolde not regarde the, ner set oughte by y. So bringe me now a mynstrell. And when the mynstrell played vpō the instrument, the hande of the LORDE came vpō him. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Make pittes by this broke. For thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal se nether wynde ner rayne, yet shall the broke be full of water, that ye and youre houtholdes ⁊ youre catell maie drynke. Yee and that is but a small thinge in the sighte of the LORDE. And the Moabites shal he delyner in to youre handes, so y ye shal smyte all the stronge cities, and all y chosen cities * ⁊ shal fell downe all the good trees, and stoppe all the welles of water and all the good felde shall ye make waist with stones.

On the morow, whan the meatofferynge is offered, beholde, there came water y waye from Edom, and fylled y londe with water. But whan the Moabites herde, y the kynges came vp to fighte agaynst thē, they called all y harnessed men, ⁊ their rulers, ⁊ stode on y border. And whan they rose early in y mornynge, ⁊ the Sonne wēte vp vpon y water, the Moabites thoughte the water ouer agaynst thē to be euē as reed as bloude, ⁊ they sayde: It is bloude, y kynges haue destroyed them selues with the swerde, ⁊ one hath smytten another. Now Moab get the vp to the spoyles. But whan they came to the tentes of Israel, the Israelites gat vp, ⁊ smote the Moabites, ⁊ they fled before them.

Neuertheles they came in, ⁊ smote Moab, ⁊ brake downe the cities, ⁊ euery one cast his stone vpon all the good felde, and made them full, and stopp'd all y welles of water, and felled downe all the good trees, tyll there remayned but the stones in the brickwall, and they compased them aboute with slynges, and smote them.

But whā the kyng of y Moabites sawe y the battayll was to strōge for him, he toke to him senen C. men, which drue y swerde, to fall vpon the kyng of Edom: neuertheles they were not able. Then toke he his first sonne, which shulde haue bene kyng in his steade, and offred him for a burntofferynge vpon the wall. Then came there a greate wrath ouer Israel, that they departed from him, and turned agayne in to their londe.

The iiii. Chapter.

AND there cried a woman amōge the wyues of the prophetes children vnto Eliseus, and sayde: Thy seruauant my husbāde is deed, and thou knowest that thy seruauant feared the LORDE. Now commeth the man that he was detter vnto, and wyll take awaye both my children to be bonde seruantes. Eliseus sayde vnto her: What shal I do for the? Tell me, what hast thou in the house? She sayde: Thy handmayden hath nothinge in the house but a pitcher with oyle. He sayde: Go thy waye, borowe without of all thy neighbours emptye vessels, ⁊ that not a fewe, and go in, and shut y dore behynde the with thy sonnes, and poure of it in to all y vessels: ⁊ whan thou hast fylled them, delyuer them forth.

She wente, and shut the dore vnto her with hir sonnes, which broughte her the vessels, and so she poured in. And whan the vessels were full, she sayde vnto hir sonne: Brynge me yet one vessell. He sayde vnto her: There is not one vessell more here. Then stode y oyle styll. And she sent, and tolde the man of God. He sayde: Go thy waye, sell the oyle, and paye the creditour: but lyue thou and thy sonnes of the resydue.

And it fortun'd at y same tyme, that Eliseus wente vnto Sunem. And there was a riche woman, which helde him to eate with her: ⁊ as he passed off thorow y waye, he wēte in vnto her: ⁊ ate with her. And she sayde vnto hir huszbande: Beholde, I perceauē that this is an holy man of God, which goeth euē thorow this waye, let vs make hī a litle chamber of boordes, ⁊ set a bed, a table, a stole ⁊ a candelsticke therin, that whan he commeth vnto vs, he maye resorte thither.

And it fortun'd vpon a tyme, that he came in, ⁊ layed him downe in the chamber, ⁊ slepte therin. And he saide vnto Gehasi his childe: Call this womā of Sunem. And whā he had called her, she stode before him. He sayde vnto him: Speake thou vnto her, beholde, thou hast mynistred vnto vs in all these thinges, what shal I do for the? Hast thou eny matter to be spoken for to the kyng, or to the chefe captayne of the hoost? She sayde: I dwell amonge my people. He sayde: What hast thou then to do? Gehasi sayde: Alas, she hath no sonne, and hir huszbāde is olde. He sayde: Call her. And whā he had called her, she stode at the dore. And he sayde: *Aboute this tyme yf ſ̄ frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace a sonne. She sayde: Alas, no my lorde, thou man of God, lye not vnto thy handmayden. And the woman conceaued, and bare a sonne aboute the same tyme, whā the frute coulede lyue, acordynge as Eliseus had sayde vnto her.

¶ But whā ſ̄ childe was growne, it fortunēd, ſ̄ he wente forth to his father vnto the reapers, & sayde vnto his father: Oh my heade, my heade. He saide vnto his seruānt: Brynge him to his mother. And he toke him, and broughte him to his mother: and she set him vpon hir lappe vntyll ſ̄ noone daye, & thē he dyed. And she wente vp, and layed him vpō the bed of the man of God, & shut the dore, and wōte forth, & called hir huszbande, & sayde vnto him: Sende me one of the seruāntes, and an Asse, I wyl go quickly vnto the man of God, and come agayne. He sayde: Why wilt thou go vnto him? To daye is it nether new moone ner Sabbath. She sayde: Well. And she saddled the asse, & sayde to the yongman: dryue forth, and kepe me not bak with rydinge, and do as I byd the.

So she wente, and came to the man of God vnto mount Carmell. Whā the man of God sawe her ouer agaynst him, he sayde vnto his childe Gehasi: Beholde, the Sunamitisse is there, runne now & mete her, and axe her yf it go well with her, and hir huszbande & hir sonne. She sayde: Well. But whā she came to the man of God vpon ſ̄ mount, she helde him by his fete. And Gehasi stepte to her, to put her awaye. But ſ̄ man of God sayde: Let her alone, for hir soule is in heuynes, and the LORDE hath hyd it fro me, and not shewed it me. She sayde: Whā desyred I a sonne of my lorde? Sayde I not, ſ̄ thou shuldest not mocke me?

¶ He sayde vnto Gehasi: Girde vp thy loynes, and take my staffe in thy hande, and go thy waye. †Yf eny man mete the, salute him not: and yf eny man salute the, thanke him not, and laye thou my staffe vpon ſ̄ childes face. But the childes mother sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not leaue the. Then gat he vp, and wente after her. As for Gehasi, he wente before them, and layed the staffe vpon the childes face, but there was nether voyce ner felynge. And he wente agayne to mete him, and shewed him, and sayde: The childe is not rysen vp.

And whā Eliseus came in to the house, beholde, ſ̄ childe laye deed vpō his bed. And he wōte in, & shut the dore on thē both, & made his prayer vnto the LORDE, & wente vp. & layed him selfe vpon the childe, & layed his mouth vpon the childes mouth, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and his handes vpon his handes, & so stretched him selfe forth vpon him, so ſ̄ the childes body was warme. And he rose vp, & wente in to the house once lither and thither. & wente vp, & layed him selfe a longe vpon him. Then neded the childe seūc tymes, and afterwarde the childe opened his eyes. And he cried vpon Gehasi, and sayde: Call the Sunamitisse. And whā he had called her, she came in vnto him. He sayde: Take there thy sonne. Then came she, and fell at his fete, and worshipped vnto the grounde, and toke hir sonne, and wente forth.

But whā Eliseus came againe vnto Gilgal, there was a deth in the londe, & the prophetes children dwelt before him, & he sayde vnto his seruānt: Set on a greate pot, and make potage for the children of the prophetes. Then wente there one in to the felde, to gather herbes, and founde a Cucumbers stalke, & gathered wyld Cucumbers therof his cotefull. And whā he came, he chopped it small for potage to the pott, for they knewe it not. And whā they poured it forth for the mē to eate, & they ate of ſ̄ potage, they cried and sayde: O thou man of God, death is in the pot: for they mighte not eate it. Neuertheles he sayde: Brynge meel hither. And he put it in the pot, & sayde: Poure it out for the people, that they maye eate. And then was it not bytter in the pot.

There came a man from Baal Salisa, & broughte the man of God bred of the first frutes, namely twentye barlye loaues, & new corne in his garnent. But he sayde: Geue it vnto ſ̄ people, that they maye eate. His mynister sayde: †How shall I geue an hūdreth men of this? He sayde: Geue it vnto the people, that they maye eate. For thus sayeth the LORDE : They shal eate, and there shall be lefte ouer. And he set it before them, so that they ate, and there lefte ouer, acordinge to  $\hat{y}$  worde of the LORDE.

The v. Chapter.

NAAMAN the chefe captayne of the kyng of Syria, was an excellēt mā in the sighte of his lorde, and moeh set by (for thorow him the LORDE gaue health vnto Syria) and he was a mightie man, but a leper. And there had men of warre fallen out of Syria, and caried awaye a litle damsel out of the londe of Israel : the same was in seruyce with Naamās wife, and sayde vnto hir mas-tresse : O that my master were with the prophet at Samaria, he wolde heale him from his leprosy.

Then wente he in to his lorde, and tolde him, and sayde : Thus and thus hath the damsel of the londe of Israel spoken. The kyng of Syria sayde : Go thy waye then,  $\tau$  I wyl wrytte a letter vnto the kyng of Israel.

B And he wente, and toke with him ten hundredre weichte of syluer, and sixe thousande gulden,  $\tau$  ten chaunge of rayment,  $\tau$  broughte the letter vnto the kyng of Israel, with these wordes :

Whan this letter cometh vnto the, beholde, thou shalt vnderstonde  $\hat{y}$  I haue sent my seruauant Naaman vnto the, that thou mayest heale him of his leprosy.

And whan the kyng of Israel red the letter, he rente his clothes,  $\tau$  sayde : Am I God then, that I can kyll and quykē agayne,  $\hat{y}$  he sendeth vnto me, to heale the man frō his leprosy ? Considre and se, how he seketh an occasion vnto me.

Whan Eliseus the man of God herde,  $\hat{y}$  the kyng of Israel had rente his clothes, he sent vnto him, sayenge : Why hast thou rente thy clothes ? Let him come to me, that he maye knowe,  $\hat{y}$  there is a prophet in Israel.

C So Naaman came with horses and charettes, and helde still at the dore of Eliseus house. Then sent Eliseus a messaunger vnto him, sayenge : Go thy waye, and waszshe the seven tymes in Iordane, so shal thy flesh be restored the agayne,  $\tau$  be censed. Then was Naaman wroth,  $\tau$  wente his waye,  $\tau$  sayde : I thoughte he shulde haue come forth vnto me,  $\tau$  to haue stōde here  $\tau$  to haue called vpō the name of the LORDE his God,  $\tau$  to haue touched the place with his haunde,  $\tau$  so to haue put awaye the leprosy. Are not  $\hat{y}$  waters of Amana and Pharphar at Damaseon better then all the waters in Israel,  $\hat{y}$  I might waszshe me therin  $\tau$  be censed ? and he turned him, and wēte his waye in displeasure. Then his seruauentes gat thē to him, and sayde : Father,  $\hat{y}$  the prophet had cōmaunded the eny greate thinge, shuldest thou not haue done it ? moeh more thē  $\hat{y}$  he saye vnto the : Waszshe the,  $\tau$  thou shalt be cleane. Then wēte he downe,  $\tau$  waszsched him selfe in Iordane seūc tymes (as the man of God sayde)  $\tau$  his flesh was restored him agayne, euen as the flesh of a yonge childe \* and he was censed.

And he turned agayne to  $\hat{y}$  man of God with all his arnye. And whan he came in, he stode before him, and sayde : Beholde, I knowe that in all londes there is no God, but in Israel. Take now therfore this blessinge I praye the of thy seruauant. Neuertheles he sayde : \*As truly as the LORDE lyueth, before whom I stonde, I wil not take it. And he wolde nedes haue him to take it, but he wolde not. Then sayde Naaman : Mighte there not a burthē of this earth be geuē vnto thy seruauant, as moch as two Mules maye beare ? For thy seruauant wyl nomore do sacrifice and offer burntofferynges vnto other goddes, but vnto the LORDE, That the LORDE maye be gracious vnto thy seruauant,  $\hat{y}$  I worshippe in the house of Rimmon, whā my lorde goeth there in to  $\hat{y}$  house to worshippe,  $\tau$  leaneth vpon my hande. He sayde vnto him : Go thy waye in peace.

And as he was gone from him a felde bredth in the londe, Gehasi the seruauant of Eliseus  $\hat{y}$  man of God thoughte : beholde, my lorde hath spared Naamā this Syrian, so that he hath not taken from him  $\hat{y}$  which he broughte : As truly as  $\hat{y}$  LORDE lyueth, I wil rūne after him,  $\tau$  take somthinge of him.

E So Gehasi folowed Naaman. And whā Naaman sawe  $\hat{y}$  he ranne after him, he lighte downe from the charet to mete him,  $\tau$  sayde : Are all thinges well ? He sayde : Yee. But my lorde hath sent me,  $\tau$  caused to saye vnto the : Beholde, there are now come to me from mount Ephraim two yonge men of the prophetes childrē, geue them a talcē of syluer (I praye the)  $\tau$  two chaunge of rayment. Naamā saide: Go to, take two talētes. And he cōpelled him, ⁊ bande two talentes in two bagges, and two chaunge of rayment, and deliuered it vnto two of his seruauantes, which bare it before him. And whan he came in ſ̄ darcke, he toke it from their handes, ⁊ layed it a syde in the house, ⁊ let the men go.

And whan they were gone their waye, he stode before his lorde. And Eliseus sayde vnto him: Whence comest thou Gehasi? He sayde: Thy seruauant wente nether hither ner thither. But he sayde vnto him: Wente not my hert with the, whan the man turned backe from his charet to mete the? Now thou hast takē the syluer ⁊ the rayment, olyue trees, vynyardes, shepe, oxen, seruauantes ⁊ maydens. But the leprosy of Naaman shal cleue vnto the ⁊ to thy sede for euer. *Then wēte he forth from him leporous as snowe.

The vi. Chapter.

THE children of ſ̄ prophetes sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, the place where we dwell before ſ̄, is to narrow for vs, let vs go vnto Iordane, ⁊ euery one fetch tymbre there, ſ̄ we maye there buylde vs a place to dwell in. He saide: Go youre waye. And one sayde: Go to then, ⁊ come with thy seruauantes. He sayde: I wil go with you. And he wēte with them. And whan they came to Iordane, they hewed downe tymbre. And as one was fellynge downe a tre, the yron fell in to the water, and he cried and sayde: Alas my lorde, ⁊ it is burowed. But the man of God sayde: Where fell it in? And whan he had shewed him the place, he cut downe a sticke, and thrust it in there. Then swāme the yron. And he sayde: Take it vp. So he put forth his hande, and toke it.

B And the kynge of Syria warred agaynst Israel, and toke counsell at his seruauantes, and sayde: There ⁊ there will we lye. But the man of God sent to ſ̄ kynge of Israel, sayenge: Bewarre ſ̄ thou go not vnto that place, for the Syrians rest there. So the kynge of Israel sent vnto ſ̄ place wherof ſ̄ man of God tolde him, ⁊ kepte it, ⁊ helde watch there, ⁊ dyd that not once or twyse onely.

C Thē was ſ̄ kynge of Syrias herte vexed therefore, and called his seruauantes, and sayde vnto them: Wyll ye not tell me, which of oure men is fled vnto the kynge of Israel?

Then sayde one of his seruauantes: Not so my lorde O kynge, but Eliseus the prophet in Israel telleth the kynge of Israel all that thou speakest in thy chamber where thou lyest. He sayde: Go youre waye thē and loke where he is, that I maye sende, and cause him be fetched. And they shewed him and sayde: Beholde, he is at Dothan. Thē sent he thither horses ⁊ charettes, ⁊ a greate power. And whā they came thither by nighte, they compased the cite aboute. And the mynster of the mā of God arose early to get him vp. And as he wēte forth, beholde, there laye an hoost of men aboute ſ̄ cite with horses and charettes.

Then saide his childe vnto him: Alas syr, how wyll we now do? He sayde: †Fear not, for there are mo of them ſ̄ are with vs, then of those that are with them. And Eliseus prayed ⁊ sayde: LORDE open his eyes, ſ̄ he maye se. Then the LORDE opened ſ̄ childes eyes, ſ̄ he sawe, ⁊ beholde, ſ̄ mount was full of fyrie horses ⁊ charettes rōude aboute Eliseus. And whā they came downe vnto him, Eliseus made his prayer, ⁊ sayde: LORDE smyte this people with byndnes. †And he smote thē with byndnes accordinge to the worde of Eliseus. And Eliseus saide vnto them: This is not ſ̄ waye nor the cite, folowe me, I wil brynge you to the man whom ye seke. And he broughte them vnto Samaria.

And whan they came to Samaria, Eliseus sayde: LORDE open these mens eyes, ſ̄ they maye se. And the LORDE opened their eyes, ſ̄ they sawe, ⁊ beholde, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And whan the kynge of Israel sawe them, he saide vnto Eliseus: My father, shal I smyte thē? He saide: Thou shalt not smyte thē: loke whom thou takest with thy swerde and bowe, smyte those. Set bred and water before them, that they maye eate and drynke, and let them departe vnto their lorde. Thē was there a greate dyner prepared. And whan they had eaten and drunken, he let them go to departe vnto their lorde. From that tyme forth came the men of warre of the Syrians nomore in to the londe of Israel.

After this it fortunēd, that Benadab the kynge of Syria gathered all his hoost, and wēte vp, ⁊ layed sege vnto Samaria: ⁊ there was a greate derth at Samaria. But they layed sege to the cite so longe, tyll an Asses heade was worth foure score syluer pcs, and the fourth parte of a *Cab of doues donge worth fyue syluer pens. And whan the kynge of Israel wente vnto the wall, a woman cried vnto him and sayde: Helpe me my lorde O kynge. He sayde: Yf the LORDE helpe the not, wherwith shal I helpe the? with fy barne or with the wyne presse? And the kynge sayde vnto her: What ayleth y? She sayde: This woman sayde vnto me: Geue vs thy sonne, that we maye eate him, tomorow wyll we eate my sonne. So we sod my sonne, ⁊ haue eaten him, and I sayde vnto her on fy thirde daye: Geue vs thy sonne and let vs eate him, but she hath hyd him awaye.

¶ Whan the kynge herde the womans wordes, he rente his clothes, whyle he was goynge to the wall. Thē sawe all the people, that he had a sack cloth vnder vpon his body. And he sayde: † God do this and that vnto me, yf the heade of Eliseus the sonne of Saphat shal this daye stonde vpon him. As for Eliseus, he sat in his house, ⁊ the Elders sat by him. And he sent a man before him, but or euer the messaunger came to him, he sayde vnto fy Elders: Haue ye not sene how this childe of murthure hath sent hither, to take awaye my heade? Take hede, whan the messaunger cōmeth, y ye holde him at the dore. Beholde, fy noyse of his lordes fete foloweth him. Whyle he was thus talkynge with them, beholde, fy messaunger came to him, ⁊ sayde: Beholde, this euell cōmeth of fy LORDE, and what more shal I loke for of the LORDE?

The vij. Chapter.

¶ ELISEUS sayde: Heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: † Tomorow aboute this tyme shal a buszshel of fyne meel be solde for one Sycele, and two buszshels of barley for one Sycele vnder the porte of Samaria. Then a knyghte (vpon whose hande the kynge leaned) answered the mā of God, and sayde: And though the LORDE made wyndowes in heauē, how coulde soch a thinge come to passe? He saide: Beholde, thou shalt se it with thine eyes, ⁊ shalt not eate therof.

And there were foure leporous men at fy dore before the porte, and one sayde vnto another: Why tary we here whyle we dye? Though we thoughte to come in to the cite, yet is there derth in fy cite, and there shulde we be fayne to dye. And yf we tary here, we must dye also. Let vs go now, and flye vnto the hoost of the Syrians. Yf they let vs lyue, we shall lyue: yf they slaye vs, then are we deed. And so they gat them vp early, to come vnto the hoost of the Syrians. And whan they came to the vttemost ende of fy tentes, beholde, there was no body.

¶ For the LORDE had made the Syrians to heare a noyse of horses, charettes, and of a mightie greate hoost, so that they sayde one to another amonge thē selues: Beholde, the kynge of Israel hath hyred the kynge of the Hethites, and the kynge of the Egipcians agaynst vs, to come vpō vs. And they gat them vp, and fled early in the twylight, and lefte their bothes, and horses and Asses in the tentes as they stode, ⁊ fled euery man where he mighte saue his life.

Now whan the lepers came to the place of the tentes, they wente in to the tentes, ate and dronke, and toke syluer, golde and rayment, and wente and hyd it: ⁊ came agayne ⁊ entred in to another tent, and toke therout, and wente and hyd it. But one of them saide vnto another: Let vs not do thus, this daye is a daye of good tidynge. Yf we kepe this secrete and byde tyll the lighte mornynge, oure trespase wyl be founde out. Let vs go now therfore, that we maye come, ⁊ tell the kynges house.

And whan they came, they cried at the porte of the cite, and tolde them, and sayde: We came to the tentes of the Sirians, and beholde, there is no mā there, neither yet eny mans voyce, but horses and asses bounde, and the bothes as they stonde. Then cried fy porters and tolde it within in fy kynges house. And the kynge arose in the nighte, ⁊ sayde vnto his seruantes: I will tell you how fy Syrians deale with vs: they knowe fy we suffer hunger, and are gone out of the tētes, to hyde them selues in the felde, and thynke thus: whan they go out of the cite, we wyll take them alyue, ⁊ come in to the cite. Then answered one of his seruantes, and sayde: Let vs take the fyue horses that remayne, which yet are lefte in the cite (beholde, these are left therin for all fy multitude in Israel, which is destroyed) let vs sende these and se. Thē toke they two charettes with ȝ horses. And the kynge sent them vnto the tentes of the Syrians, and sayde: Go your waye and se.

D And when they wente after thē vnto Iordane, beholde, the waye laye full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast from thē, whyle they made haist. And when the messaugers came agayne, and tolde the kynge, the people wente forth, and spoyled the tentes of the Syrians. And a buszshel of fyne meell was solde for a Sytle, and two buszshels of barley for a Sytle also, *acordinge to the worde of the LORDE. But the kynge appoynted the knyghte (vpon whose hande he leened) to be at the gate, & the people trode vpon him, so that he dyed, euen as the man of God sayde, when the kynge came downe vnto him. And it came to passe euen as ȝ man of God tolde the kynge, whā he sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme shall two buszshels of barley be solde for one Sytle, and a buszshel of fyne meel for one Sytle vnder the gate at Samaria. And the knyghte answered the man of God, and sayde: Beholde, though ȝ LORDE made wyndowes in heauen, how coulde soch a thinge come to passe? Neuertheles he sayde: Beholde, with thine eyes shalt thou se it, and shalt not eate therof. And euen so fortunēd it vnto him, for the people trode vpon him in the gate, ȝ he dyed.

The viij. Chapter.

A ELISEUS spake vnto the womā, † whose sonne he had restored vnto life agayne, and saide: Get the vp, & go with thine housholde, and be a straunger where thou canst: for the LORDE shall call for a derth, which shal come in to the londe seven yere lōge. The woman gat her vp, and dyd as the man of God sayde, & wente with hir housholde, and was a straunger in the londe of the Philistynes seven yere. But when the seven yeres were ended, the woman came agayne out of the Philistynes lōde, and wente forth to crye vpon the kynge for hir house and londe. The kynge spake vnto Gehasi the seruaunt of the man of God, & sayde: Tell me all the greates actes that Eliseus hath done. And whyle he was tellynge the kynge how he had made one that was deed, to lyue agayne, beholde, the woman whose sonne he had caused to reuyue, came euen in the meane season, and cried vnto the kynge for hir house and londe. Then sayde Gehasi: My lorde O kynge, this same is the womā, and this is hir sonne, whom Eliseus restored vnto life agayne. And the kynge axed ȝ woman, and she tolde him. Then the kynge delyuered her a chamberlayne, & saide: Restore her agayne all that is hers, and all the increase of the londe, sence the tyme that she lefte the londe vntyll now.

‡ And Eliseus came to Damascon, & Benadab the kynge of Syria laye sicke. And it was tolde him, and sayde: The man of God is come hither. Then sayde the kynge vnto Hasael: Take giftes with the, & go mete the man of God, and axe counsell at ȝ LORDE by him, and saye: Maye I recouer from this sicknesse? Hasael wente for to mete him, and toke rewardes with him, and of all the goodes at Damascon, as moch as fortye Camels mighte beare. And when he came, he stode before him, and sayde: Thy sonne Benadab the kynge of Syria hath sent me vnto the, sayenge: Maye I recouer from this sicknes?

Eliseus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye and tell him: Thou shalt recouer. But the LORDE hath shewed me, ȝ he shal dye ȝ death. And the man of God looked earnestly, & made a troublous countenance, & wepte. Thē sayde Hasael: Wherefore wepest my lorde? He sayde: I knowe what euell thou shalt do vnto the children of Israel. Thou shalt burne their stronge cities with fyre, and slaye their yonge men with the swerde, and kyll their yonge children, and ryppē vp their women with childe.

¶ Hasael sayde: How so, is thy seruaunt a dogg, that he shulde do soch a greates thyng? Eliseus saide: ȝ The LORDE hath shewed me, ȝ thou shalt be kynge of Syria. And he wēte his waye from Eliseus, & came to his lorde, which saide vnto him: What saith Eliseus vnto the? He sayde: He tolde me, Thou shalt recouer. But on the nexte daye he toke ȝ bed couerynge, and dypte it in water, and spred it ouer him, and he dyed, & Hasael was kynge in his steade.

In the fyth yere of Ioram the sonne of Achab kynge of Israel, was Ioram ȝ sonne of Iosaphat kynge of Iuda. ¶ Two & thirtie yeare olde was he whā he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned eighte yeare at Ierusalem. ⁊ walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, as the house of Achab dyd (for Achabs daughter was his wife) ⁊ he dyd y<sup>e</sup> which was euell in y<sup>e</sup> sighte of the LORDE. Neuertheles the LORDE wolde not destroye Iuda for his seruau<sup>t</sup> Dauids sake, *as he promysed him, to geue him euer a lanterne amōge his childrē.

D At y<sup>e</sup> same tyme fell y<sup>e</sup> Edomites awaye from Iuda, ⁊ made a kyngye ouer them selues: y<sup>e</sup> cause was this, Ioram had gone thorow Seira, and all the charettes with him, ⁊ had gotten him vp by nighte, and smytten the Edomites that were aboute him, and y<sup>e</sup> rulers ouer the charettes, so that the people fled vnto their tentes: therfore fell the Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At the same tyme fell Libna awaye also.

What more there is to saye of Ioram, ⁊ all y<sup>e</sup> he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Ioram fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ was buried with his fathers in y<sup>e</sup> cite of Dauid, ⁊ † Ochosias his sonne was kyngye in his steade.

In the twolueth yeare of Ioram the sonne of Achab kyngye of Israel, was Ochosias y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Ioram kyngye in Iuda. Two and twentye yeare olde was Ochosias whan he was made kyngye, and reigned one yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Atalia the daughter of Amri kyngye of Israel, ⁊ he walked in the waye of the house of Achab, ⁊ dyd that which was euell in the syght of y<sup>e</sup> LORDE, euen as dyd the house of Achab: for he was sonne in lawe in the house of Achab. And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab in to the battayll agaynst Hasael y<sup>e</sup> kinge of Syria vnto Ramoth in Gilead, but y<sup>e</sup> Syrians smote Ioram. ¶ Then Ioram the kinge turned backe, to be healed at Iesreel of y<sup>e</sup> woundes, wherwith the Syrians had wounded him at Ramoth, whā he foughte with Hasael kinge of Syria. And Ochosias y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Iorā kinge of Iuda, came downe to viset Ioram the sonne of Achab at Iesreel, for he laye sicke.

The ii. Chapter.

oyle with the, and go vnto Ramoth in Gilead: and whā thou comest thither, thou shalt se there one Iehu, y<sup>e</sup> sonne of Iosaphat the sonne of Ninsi, and go in, and byd him stonde vp amonge his brethren, and bryngye him in to the ynnmost chamber, ⁊ take thou y<sup>e</sup> cruse of oyle, and poure it vpon his beade, ⁊ saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anointed the to be kyngye ouer Israel: ⁊ thou shalt open the dore, and flye, and not tary. And the prophetes yonge man, the childe wente his waye vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And whan he came in, beholde, the captaynes of the hoost sat there, and he sayde: I haue somewhat to saye vnto the O captayne. Iehu saide: Vnto whom amonge vs all? He sayde: Euen vnto the o captayne.

Then stode he vp, and wente in. So he poured the oyle vpon his beade, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue anoynted y<sup>e</sup> to be kyngye ouer the LORDES people of Israel, ¶ and thou shalt smyte thy lorde Achabs house, that I maye auenge the bloude of my seruau<sup>t</sup>es the prophetes, and the bloude of all the LORDES seruau<sup>t</sup>es, from the hande of Iesabel, that all the house of Achab maye periszhe. And I wyl rote out from Achab, ¶ euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and the closed vp and the desolate in Israel: and the house of Achab wyl I make euen as the house of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Abia, and y<sup>e</sup> dogges shall eate vp Iesabel vpon the felde at Iesrael, and noman shall burye her. And he opened the dore, and fled.

And whā Iehu came forth to his lordes seruau<sup>t</sup>es, they saide vnto him: Are all thynges well? Wherefore came this madd felowe vnto the? He saide vnto them: Ye knowe the man well, ⁊ what he hath spoken. They sayde: That is not true, but tell thou vs. He sayde: Thus and thus hath he spoken vntome, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anoynted the to be kyngye ouer Israel. Then made they haist, and euery one toke his garment and laied them vnder him in maner of a iudges seate, and blew the trompet, and sayde: Iehu is made kyngye. So Iehu the sonne of Iosaphat the sonne of Ninsi, made a confederacion agaynst Ioram. As for Iorā he laye before Ramoth in Gilead with all Israel agaynst Hasael the kynge of Syria. *But Ioram the kynge was turned backe, y he might be healed of the woundes wherwith the Syrians had wounded him, whi he foughte with Hasael the kynge of the Syrians.

D And Iehu sayde: Yf it be youre mynde, there shall noman escape out of the cite, to go and tell it at Iesreel. And he rode, and departed vnto Iesrael: for Ioram laye there, and Ochosias the kinge of Iuda was come downe to vyset Ioram. But the watchman that stode vpon the tower at Iesrael, sawe the company of Iehu comynge, and sayde: I see a company. Then sayde Ioram: Take a charet, and sende to mete the, and saye: Is it peace? And the charetman rode to mete them, and sayde: Thus sayeth the kynge: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne the behynde me. The watchman tolde it, and sayde: The messenger is come vnto them, and cometh not agayne. Then sent he another charetman, which whan he came to them, saide: Thus sayeth the kynge: Is it peace? Iehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne y behynde me.

3E And the watchman tolde it, and sayde: He is come to them: and cometh not agayne, and the goynge is as it were the goynge of Iehu the sonne of Ninsi: for he dryueth on as he were mad. Then sayde Ioram: Binde the charet fast. And they bounde the charet, and so they wente forth, Ioram the kynge of Israel, and Ochosias the kynge of Iuda, euery one vpon his charet, to mete Iehu. And they founde him vpon the felde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And whan Ioram sawe Iehu, he sayde: Iehu, is it peace? But he sayde: What peace? The whordome and witchcraft of thy mother Iesabel is not yet come to an ende.

Then turned Ioram his hande and fled, and sayde vnto Ochosias: There is treason Ochosias. But Iehu toke his bowe, and shot Ioram betwene the armes, that the arowe wente thorow his hert, and he fell downe in his charet. And Iehu sayde vnto Bidekar the knyghte: Take and cast him in the pece of londe of Naboth the Iesraelite: for I remember sence thou rodest with me in a charet after Achab his father, that the LORDE wolde laye this heuy burthen vpon him. I holde (sayde the LORDE) I wyl recompence the y bloude of Naboth and of his childre, euen in this pece of londe. Take him now and cast him in to that pece of londe, †acordynge to the worde of the LORDE.

Whan Ochosias the kinge of Iuda sawe this, he fled by the waie vnto y garden house. But Iehu folowed after him, and commaunded to smyte him also vpon his charet in the goynge vp towarde Gur, which lieth by Ieblaam: and he fled vnto Megiddo, and dyed there. And his seruantes caused him to be caried vnto Ierusalem, and there they buried him in his awne graue with his fathers in the cite of Daud. Ochosias reigned ouer Iuda in y eleuenth yere of Iora y sonne of Achab. And whan Iehu came to Iesrael, and Iesabel herde therof, she coloured hir face, and decked hir heade, and loked out at the wyndowe. And whan Iehu came vnder the gate, she sayde: ‡Prospered Symri well that slewe his lorde?

And he lifte vp his face to the wyndow, and sayde: Who is with me? Then resorted there two or thre chamberlaynes vnto him. He sayde: Cast her downe headlynges. And they cast her downe headlynges, so that y wall and the horses were sprenkled with hir bloude, and she was troddē vnder fete. And whan he came in, and had eaten and drunken, he sayde: Loke vpon yonder cursd woman, and burye her, for she is a kynges daughter. Neuertheles whan they wente in to burye her, they founde nothinge of her, but the szkull and the fete, and the palmes of her handes. And they came agayne and broughte him worde. He saide: This is euen it that the LORDE spake by his seruaunt Elias the Theszbite, and sayde: "In the felde of Iesrael shal the dogges eate Iesabels flesh. So the deed carcase of Iesabel became euen as donge in the felde of Iesrael, so y a man coulde not saye: This is Iesabel.

The x. Chapter.

A CHAB had thre score and ten sonnes at Samaria. <sup>a</sup>And Iehu wrote a letter, and sent it to Samaria, vnto the rulers of the cite Iesrael, euen vnto the Elders, and to Achabs tutors, sayenge these wordes: Whan this letter cometh vnto you with whom are youre lordes sonnes, charettes, horses, stronge cities, & ordynaunce, loke which is the best and most righteous amonge youre lordes sonnes, & set him vpon his fathers seate, and fyghte for youre lordes house.

Neuertheles they were sore afraied, and sayde: Beholde, two kynges were not able to stonde before him, how wyl we then endure? And they that were ouer the house and ouer the cite, and the Elders and tuters sent vnto Iehu, sayēge: We are thy seruantes, we wyl do all that thou sayest vnto vs: We wil make no man kynge, do thou what pleaseth the. Then wrote he the seconde letter vnto them with these wordes: Yfye be myne, and herken vnto my voyce, then take the heades of the men youre lordes sonnes, and brynge me them tomorrow by this tyme vnto Iesrael.

B The kynges sonnes were thre score men and ten, and y chefe men of the cite broughte thē vp. Now when this letter came they toke the kynges sonnes, and slewe them euen thre score men and ten, and layed their heades in basckettes, and sent them to him vnto Iesrael. And whan the messaunger came, & tolde him, and sayde: They haue broughte the heades of the kynges children, he sayde: Laye them vpon two heapes at the dore of the porte tyll tomorrow.

And on the morow whan he wente forth, he stode, and sayde vnto all the people: Are ye righteous? Beholde, I haue made an apoyntmēt against my lorde, and slayne him, who hath slayne all these then? Vnderstonde ye now therefore, that there is not fallen vpon the earth one worde of the LORDE, which he spake agaynst the house of Achab: and the LORDE hath done, euen * as he sayde by his seruaut Elias. So Iehu smote all the remnaunt of the house of Achab at Iesrael, all his greate men, his kynsfolkes, and his prestes, tyll there was not one lefte ouer. And he gat him vp, wente his waye, and came to Samaria.

C By the waye there was a shepherdes house, where Iehu founde the brethern of Ochosias kynge of Iuda, and sayde: Whence are ye? They sayde: We are Ochosias brethren, and are goynge downe to salute the kynges children, and the quenes children. He sayde: Take them alyue. And they toke them alyue, and slewe them by the welles syde at the shepherdes house, euen two and fortye men, and let not one of them remayne.

* 3 Re. 21. c. + Ier. 35. a.

And whan he wente from thence, he founde Ionadab y sonne of Rechab, which met him, & saluted him. And he sayde vnto him: Is thyne hert righte, as myne hert is with thyne hert? Ionadab sayde: Yee. Yf it be so (sayde he) then geue me thy hande. And he gaue him his hande. And so he caused him to syt besyde him in the charet, and saide: Come with me, and se my zele for the LORDE. And they caryed him with him vpon his charet. And whan he came to Samaria, he smote all that remayned of Achab at Samaria, tyll he had destroyed him, acordynge to the worde of the LORDE, + which he spake vnto Elias.

And Iehu gathered all the people together, and saide vnto them: Achab did Baal but litle seruyce, Iehu wyl serue him better. Call vnto me now therefore all Baals prophetes, all his seruantes and all his prestes, that there be none wantynge, for I haue a greate sacrifice to do vnto Baal. Who so euer is myssed, shal not lyue. But Iehu dyd it craftely, that he mighte destroye all the mynisters of Baal. And Iehu sayde: Sanctifie y feast vnto Baal, and proclame it. And Iehu sent in to all Iesrael, and caused all Baals miunisters to come, so that there was nomā lefte behynde, which came not. And they came in to Baals house, so that the house of Baal was full from one corner to another.

Then sayde he vnto him that had the rule of the vestrye: Brynge forth rayment for all Baals mynisters. And he broughte forth the rayment. And Iehu wente in to Baals house with Ionadab the sonne of Rechab, and sayde vnto Baals mynisters: Search and se that there be not here amōge you eny mynyster of the LORDE, but onely Baals mynisters.

And whan they came in to offer sacrifices and burntofferynges, Iehu apoynted him foure score men without, & sayde: Yf eny of these men escape whom I deliyuer vnder youre handes, then shal the same mans soule be for his soule. Now whā he had made an ende of the burntofferynge, Iehu sayde vnto the fote-men and knyghtes: Go in, & smyte euery man, let noman go forth. And they smote thē with the edge of the swerde. And the fote men and knyghtes threw thē awaie and wēte vnto the cite of Baals house, and brought forth the piler in y house of Baal, and brent it, and brake downe Baals pyler with the house of Baal, and made a preny house therof vnto this daie. Thus Iehu destroyed Baal out of Israel. But Iehu lefte not of from the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) namely, from the golden calues at Bethel and at Dan. And the LORDE sayde vnto Iehu: Because thou hast bene wyllinge to do that which was righte in my sighte, ⁊ hast done vnto Achabs house all that was in my hert, *therfore shall thy children syt vpon y<sup>e</sup> seate of Israel vnto the fourth generacion.

f Neuerthelesse Iehu was not diligent to walke in the lawe of the LORDE God of Israel with all his hert: for he lefte not of fro the synnes of Ieroboam which made Israel to synne. At the same time beganne the LORDE to be greued at Israel. †For Hasael smote them in all the borders of Israel from Iordane Eastwarde, and all the londe Gilead of the Gaddites, Rubenites and Manassytes, from Aroer that lyeth on the ryuer by Arnon, and Gilead and Basan.

What more there is to saye of Iehu, and all that he dyd, and all his power, beholde, it is wryten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Iehu fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ they buried him in Samaria. And Ioahs his sonne was kynge in his steade. The tyme that Iehu reigned ouer Israel, is eight and twente yeares at Samaria.

The xi. Chapter.

a ATHALIA the mother of Ochosias, whā she sawe that hir sonne was deed, <sup>a</sup>gat her vp, and destroyed all the kynges sede. But Ioseba kynge Iorams doughter the syster of Ochosias, toke Ioas the sonne of Ochosias and stalle him away with his nurse in the chamber from amonge the kynges children which were slayne, and she hyd him from Athalia, so that he was not slayne. And he was hyd with her in the house of the LORDE sixe yeares. But Athalia was quene in the londe.

<sup>a</sup>Neuertheles in the seuenth yeare sent Ioiada, and toke the rulers ouer hūdreds with the captaynes and fote men, and caused the to come to him in to the house of the LORDE and made a couenaunt with them, and toke an oath of them in the house of the LORDE, and shewed them the kynges sonne, and comāunded them, and sayde: This is it that ye shall do: One thirde parte of you which enter on the Sabbath, shall kepe the watch in the kynges house, and one thyrd part shall be at the porte of Sur, and one thirde parte shall be at y<sup>e</sup> porte which is behynde the fote men, and ye shal kepe the watch at the house of Massa. But two partes of you all that go of on the Sabbath, shal kepe the watch in the house of the LORDE aboute the kinge and ye shall get you rounde aboute y<sup>e</sup> kynge and euery one with his weapen in his hande: and who so euer cometh within y<sup>e</sup> wall, let him die, so that ye be with the kinge, whā he goeth out and in.

⁊ And the rulers ouer the hundreds dyd all as Ioiada the prest had comāunded them, and toke vnto them their men which entred vpon the Sabbath, with those that wente of on the Sabbath, and came to Ioiada y<sup>e</sup> prest. And the prest gaue the captaynes speares and shyldes which had bene kynge Daulds, and were in the house of the LORDE. And the fote men stode aboute the kynge, euery one with his weapen in his hande, fro the corner on the righte syde of the house vnto the corner of the lefte syde, euen vnto the altare and to the house. And he broughte forth the kynges sonne, and set a crowne vpon his heade, and toke the † witnes, and made him kynge, and they were glad, and clapped their handes together, and sayde: God saue the kynge.

⁊ And whan Athalia herde the noyse of the people that ranne together, she came to the people in to the house of the LORDE, and loked, and beholde, the kynge stode by the piler, as the vse was, and the syngers and trōpettes by the kynge: and all the people of y<sup>e</sup> lōde were glad, and blew with trompettes. But Athalia reinte hir clothes, ⁊ sayde: Vproure, vproure. Neuertheles Ioiada y<sup>e</sup> prest comāunded y<sup>e</sup> rulers ouer hundreds, which were appointed ouer the hoost, and saide vnto them: Brynge her without the wall, and whosoever foloweth hir, let him dye of the swerde (for the prest had sayde, that she shulde not dye in the house of the LORDE.) And they layde handes vpō her, and she wente in by the waye where the horses go in to y<sup>e</sup> kynges house, and there was she slayne.

Then made Ioiada <sup>a</sup>a couenaunt betwene the LORDE and the kynge, and the people, y<sup>e</sup> they shulde be the people of the LORDE. Likewyse also betwixte the kyng and þe people. Then wente all the people of the londe in to the house of Baal, and brake downe his altares, and destroyed his ymages right well. And Mathan the prest of Baal slewe they before the altare: And the prest appoynted the officers in the house of the LORDE, and toke the rulers our hundreds, and the captaynes, and the fote men, and all þe people of the londe, and broughte the kyng downe from the house of the LORDE, and came the waye from the porte of the fote men vnto the kynges house, and he sat vpon the kynges seate. And all the people of the lode were glad, and the cite was at rest. As for Athalia, they slewe her with the swerde in þe kynges house. And Ioas was seuen yere olde, whan he was made kyng.

The xij. Chapter.

IN the seuēth yere of Iehu, was Ioas made kyng,* and reigned fortye yere at Ierusalem. His mothers nanie was Zibea of Bersaba. And Ioas dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada þe prest taught him. But they put not downe þe hye places: for the people offred and brent incense yet vpon the hye places.

And Ioas sayde vnto the prestes: All the money that is sanctified to be bestowed vpon þe house of the LORDE, namely the money þe euery man geueth vnto the treasury, and þe money that euery man geueth for his soule, and all the money that euery man geueth of a fre hert, to be bestowed on the house of the LORDE, let the prestes take it vnto them, euery one his porcion: with that shall they repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE, where they fynde that there is eny decaye.

But whan þe prestes repayred not the decaye in the house vnto the thre and twētieth yere of kyng Ioas, Ioas the kyng called Ioiada the prest with the other prestes, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye not repayre the decaye in the house?

33 Therefore shall ye not take the money vnto you now euery one his porcion, but shall geue it to the decaye of the house. And the prestes agreed to take no money of the people, and to repayre the decaye of the house.

Then Ioiada the prest toke a chest, and bored an hole aboue therin, and set it on the righte hande besyde the altare, at the entrynge in to the house of the LORDE. And the prestes that kepte the threshold, put all the money therin that was broughte vnto the house of the LORDE. Whan they sawe then that there was much money in the chest, þe kynges serybe came vp with the hye prest, and bounde the money together, and tolde it as much as was founde in the house of the LORDE. And so the ready money was geuen vnto them that wrought and were appoynted to the house of the LORDE, and they gaue it forth to the carpenters and to the that buylded and wroughte in the house of the LORDE, namely, to the dawbers and masons, and to them that boughte tymbre and fre stone, to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE and all that they founde to haue nede of repayinge in the house.

Howbeit there were no syluer chargers, flat peces, basens, trompettes, ner eny other vessell of golde and syluer made on the house of the LORDE, of the money that was brought vnto the LORDES house: but it was geuen vnto the workmen to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE therewith. The men also that the money was deliuered vnto, for to geue the workmen, neded not to make eny acomptes, but did their busynes vpon credence. But the money of trespass offeringes and synneofferynges was not broughte vnto the house of the LORDE: for it was the prestes.

At the same tyme wente Hasael the kyng 33 of Syria vp, and foughte agaynst Gath, and wanne it. And whan Hasael set his face to go vp to Ierusalem, kyng Ioas toke all that was sanctified, which his fathers Iosaphat, Ioram and Ochosias the kynges of Iuda had halowed, and what he himselfe had sanctified, and all the golde that was founde in the treasures of the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Hasael the kyng of Syria. And so he departed from Ierusalem.

What more there is to saye of Ioas, and all that he dyd, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And his seruantes made insurreccion and conspyred, and smote him in the house of Millo, at the goynge downe vnto Silla. For Iosebar the sonne of Simeath, and Iosabad the sonne of Somer his seruantes smote him to death: and he was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid. And Amasias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The iij. Chapter.

A IN  $\hat{\text{y}}$  XXXIII. yere of Ioas the sonne of Ochosias kyng of Iuda, was Ioahas the sonne of Iehu kyng ouer Israel at Samaria, senentene yere:  $\text{t}$  dyd  $\hat{\text{y}}$  which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked after the synnes of Ieroboam  $\hat{\text{y}}$  sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) and lefte not of from them. And  $\hat{\text{y}}$  wrath of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel,  $\text{t}$  he delyuered them ouer vnder the hande of Hasael kyng of Syria, and vnder the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael, as longe as they lyued.

And Ioahas besoughte the face of the LORDE. And the LORDE herde him, for he considered the myserie of Israel, how the kyng of Syria oppressed them. And  $\hat{\text{y}}$  LORDE gaue Israel a sauoure, which broughte them out of the power of the Syrians, so  $\hat{\text{y}}$  the children of Israel dwelt in their tentes, like as afore tyme.

B Yet lefte they not from the synnes of the house of Ieroboam, which caused Israel to synne, but walked in them. The groue at Samaria stode styll also. For of the people of Ioahas there were no mo lefte, but fyfye horsmen, ten charettes, and ten thousande fote men: * for the kyng of Syria had destroyed them, and made them as the dust in the barne.

What more there is to saye of Ioahas, and all that he dyd, and his power, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioahas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria,  $\text{t}$  Ioas his sonne was kyng in his steade.

C In the seuen and thirtieth yere of Ioas kyng of Iuda, was Ioas the sonne of Ioahas kyng ouer Israel at Samaria sixtene yere. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, but walked in them. What more there is to saye of Ioas, and what he dyd,  $\text{t}$  his power, how he foughte with Amasias kyng of Iuda, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Ioas fell on slepe with his fathers, and Ieroboam sat vpō his seate. And Ioas was buried in Samaria with the kynges of Israel.

As for Eliseus, he fell in to a sicknes, wherof he dyed. And Ioas the kyng of Israel came downe vnto him, and wepte for him, and saide: † My father, my father, the charet man of Israel, and his horsmen. Eliseus sayde vnto him: Take the bowe and the arrowes. And whan he had taken the bowe and the arrowes, he sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Bende the bowe with thine hande. And he bent it with his hāde. And Eliseus layed his hande vpon the kynges hande, and sayde: Open that wyndowe toward the East. And he opened it. And Eliseus saide: Shute. And he shot. He sayde: one arrowe of the saluacion of the LORDE, one arrowe of saluaciō agaynst the Syrians: and thou shalt smyte the Syrians at Aphek, tyll they be brought to naughte.

And he sayde: Take  $\hat{\text{y}}$  arrowes. And whā he had taken them, he sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Smyte the earth. And he smote thre tymes and stode still. Then was the mā of God wroth at him, and sayde: Yf thou haddest smytten fyue or sixe times, thou shuldest haue smytten  $\hat{\text{y}}$  Syrians, tyll thou haddest vtterly brought them to naughte. But now shalt thou smyte them thre tymes.

Whan Eliseus was deed and buried, the men of warre of the Moabites fell in to the lond the same yere. And it fortunēd  $\hat{\text{y}}$  they buryed a certaine man. But whā they sawe the men of warre, they cast the man in to Eliseus graue. † And whan he was therin, and touched Elisens bones, he reuyued, and stode vpon his fete.

So Hasael the kyng of Syria oppressed Israel, as longe as Ioahas lyued. But the LORDE was gracious vnto them, and had mercy vpon them, and turned him to them for his couenauntes sake, with Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and wolde not destroye thē  $\hat{\text{y}}$  nether dyd he cast them out from his presence vnto this houre.

And Hasael the kinge of Syria dyed, and Benadad his sonne was kyng in his steade. But Ioas turned backe, and toke out of the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael the cyties which he had takē in battaill out of the hande of his father Ioahas: Thre tymes dyd Ioas smyte him, and broughte the cities of Israel agayne.

The xiiij. Chapter.

IN the seconde yere of Ioas  $\S$  sonne of Ioahas kyng of Israel, was Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda made kyng:  $\S$  fyue and twenty yere olde was he, whan he was made kyng,  $\tau$  reigned nyne and twenty yere at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalem. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: yet not as his father Dauid, but euen as his father Ioas did so dyd he also: for  $\S$  hye places were not put downe, but the people offred and brent incēse yet vpon the hye places. Now whan he had gotten the power of the kyngdome, he smote his seruantes  $\dagger$  which had smyttē the kyng his father: but the children of  $\S$  deed slayers slewe he not, acordinge to  $\S$  which is wryttē in the boke of the lawe of Moses, where the LORDE hath cōmaunded  $\tau$  sayde:  $\dagger$  The fathers shal not dye for the children.  $\tau$  the children shal not dye for the fathers: but euery one shal dye for his awne synne.

Ten thousande of the Edomites smote he also in the Salt valley, and wanne Sela in battayll, and called it Iatheel vnto this daye.  $\S$  Then sent Amasias messengers vnto Ioas the sonne of Ioahas the sonne of Iehu kyng of Israel, sayenge: Come hither, let vs se one another. But Ioas  $\S$  kyng of Israel sent vnto Amasias the kyng of Iuda, sayenge: The hawthorne that is in Libanus, sent to the Cedar tre in Libanus, sayenge: Geue thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest of the felde ranne ouer  $\S$  hawthorne, and trode it downe. Thou hast smyttē the Edomites, therefore is thine hert waxen proude: Take the prayse, and byde at home: why stryuest thou for mysfortune,  $\S$  thou mayest fall, and Iuda with the? Howbeit Amasias consented not.

Then wēte Ioas the kyng of Israel vp, and they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kyng of Iuda at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smytten before Israel, so that euery one fled in to his tente. And Ioas the kyng of Israel toke Amasias the kyng of Iuda, the sonne of Ioas the sonne of Ochosis at Beth Semes, and came to Ierusalem, and brake downe  $\S$  wall of Ierusalem from  $\S$  porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, euen foure hundreth cubites lōge: and toke all the golde and syluer, and ornaments that were founde in the house of the LORDE, and in  $\S$  treasures of the kynges house,  $\tau$  the children also to pledge,  $\tau$  departed agayne to Samaria.

In the fyfteenth yere of Amasias the sonne of Ioas kyng of Iuda, was Ieroboam the sonne of Ioas kyng ouer Israel at Samaria, one and forty yere. And Ieroboam fell on slepe with his fathers, with the kynges of Israel. And Zacharias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xv. Chapter.

IN the senen ⁊ twentieth yere of Ieroboam kyng of Israel, reigned Asarias the sonne of Amasias kyng of Iuda: and * was sixtene yere olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned two and fyfthe yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Iechalia of Ierusalē. And he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE, accordinge to all as dyd Amasias his father, sauynge that they put not downe the hye places. For the people dyd sacryfice and brent incense yet vpon the hye places. Howbeit the LORDE smote the kyng, so that he was leper vnto his death, ⁊ and dwelt in a frye house. But Iotham the kynges sonne ruled the house, and iudged the people in the londe.

What more there is to saye of Asarias, ⁊ all ⁊ he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Asarias fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid, ⁊ Iotham his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the eight and thirtieth yere of Asarias kyng of Iuda, was Zacharias the sonne of Ieroboam kyng ouer Israel at Samaria sixe monethes. And he dyd ⁊ which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, euen as his fathers dyd. He departed not from ⁊ synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Sellum the sonne of Iabes conspyred agaynst him, and smote him in the presence of ⁊ people, and slewe him, ⁊ was kyng in his steade. What more there is to saie of Zacharias, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. ⁊ And this is it, ⁊ the LORDE sayde vnto Iehu: Thy children shall syt vpo the seate of Israel vntyll the fourth generacion. And euen so came it to passe.

Sellum the sonne of Iabes reigned in ⁊ nyne ⁊ thirtieth yere of ⁊ Asarias kyng of Iuda, ⁊ reigned one moneth at Samaria. For Menahem the sonne of Gadi wete vp from Thirza, ⁊ came to Samaria, and smote Sellum the sonne of Iabes at Samaria, ⁊ slewe him, and was kyng in his steade.

What more there is to saye of Sellum, ⁊ of his sedicion which he stered vp, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. At the same tyme dyd Manahem smyte Tiphsa, ⁊ all ⁊ were therin, ⁊ the coastes therof from Thirza, because they wolde not let him in, and smote all their women with childe, and ryppe them vp.

In the nyne ⁊ thirtieth yere of Asarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Manahem the sonne of Gad to reigne ouer Israel ten yeres at Samaria, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE. As longe as he lyued, departed he not from ⁊ synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Phul the kyng of Assiria came in to the lōde. And Manahem gaue vnto Phul a thousande talentes of syluer to holde with him, and to cōfirme him in the kyngdome. And Manahem raysed vp a taxe in Israel vpon the richest, fyfte Sycles of syluer vpon euery man, to geue vnto ⁊ kyng of Assiria. So the kyng of Assiria wete home agayne, and taried not in the londe.

What more there is to saye of Manahem, ⁊ all ⁊ he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Manahem fell on slepe with his fathers. And Pecahia his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the fiftieth yere of Asarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Pecahia the sonne of Manahem to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria two yere, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE: for he departed not fro the synnes of Ieroboam ⁊ sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne. And Pecah the sonne of Romelia his knyghte conspyred agaynst him, ⁊ smote him at Samaria in ⁊ palace of the kynges house with Argob and Aariah, and fyfte men with him of ⁊ childrē of Gilead, ⁊ slewe him, ⁊ was kyng in his steade. What more there is to saye of Pecahia, ⁊ all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

In the two and fiftieth yere of Asarias kyng of Iuda, beganne Pecah the sonne of Romelia to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria, twentye yere, & dyd that which was euell in the sighte of ȝ LORDE: for he departed not from the synnes of Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which caused Israel for to synne.

¶ In the tyme of Pecah the kynge of Israel, came Teglatphalasser the kynge of Assiria, & toke Eion, Abel Beth Maccha, Ianoha, Kedes, Hasor, Gilead, Galile, and all the londe of Nephtali, & caried the awaye in to Assiria.

And Osea the sonne of Ela conspyred agaynst Pecah the sonne of Romelia, & slue him, and was kynge in his steade in the twētieth yere of Iotham the sonne of *Osias. What more there is to saye of Pecah, & all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

¶ In the seconde yere of Pecah the sonne of Romelia kynge of Israel, was Iotham the sonne of Osias kynge of Iuda, & was fyue and twentye yere olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the doughter of Sadok. And he dyd ȝ which was righte in ȝ sighte of the LORDE, accordinge vnto all as dyd Osias his father, sauynge that he put not downe the hye places: for the people offred & brent incense yet vpon the hye places. He buylded the hye porte of the house of the LORDE. What more there is to saye of Iotham, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wryttē in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda.

At ȝ same tyme beganne ȝ LORDE to sende Rezin ȝ kynge of Syria. & Pecah ȝ sonne of Romelia in to Iuda. And Iotham fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid his father. And Achas his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xvi. Chapter.

¶ IN the seuententh yere of Pecah ȝ sonne of Romelia, was* Achas the sonne of Iotham kynge of Iuda. Twētye yere olde was Achas whā he was made kynge, & reigned sixtene yere at Ierusalem, & dyd not ȝ which was righte in the sighte of ȝ LORDE his God, as dyd Dauid his father: for he walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, † Yee and caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, after the maner of the abominacions of the Heythen, whom the LORDE droue awaye before the childrē of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice, and brent incense vpon the hye places, & vpon all hilles, and amonge all grene trees. ‡ Then wente Rezin the kynge of Syria, and Pecah the sonne of Romelia kynge of Israel vp to Ierusalem to fighte agaynst it, and layed sege to Achas: but they coulde not wyne it. At the same tyme dyd Rezin the kynge of Syria, brynge § Eloth agayne vnto Syria, and thrust ȝ Iewes out of Eloth. But the Syriaus came & dwelt therin vnto this daye.

Neuertheles Achas sent messaungers vnto Teglatphalasser ȝ kynge of Assiria, saycge: I am thy seruauit & thy sonne, come vp & helpe me out of ȝ hande of the kynge of Syria, & of the kynge of Israel, which are rysen vp agaynst me. And Achas toke the syluer & golde ȝ was founde in ȝ house of ȝ LORDE, & in the treasures of ȝ kynges house, & sent a present to ȝ kynge of Assiria. ¶ And ȝ kynge of Assiria cōsented vnto him, & weate vp to Damascon, & wanne it, & caried them awaye vnto Cira, & slewe Rezin. And kynge Achas wēte to Damascon for to mete Teglatphalasser ȝ kynge of Assiria. And whā he sawe an altare ȝ was at Damascon, kynge Achas sent a patrone & symilitude of ȝ same altare vnto the prest Vrias, euen as it was made. And Vrias the prest buylded an altare, and made it accordinge as kynge Achas had sent vnto him from Damascon, tyll Achas ȝ kynge came from Damascon.

And whā ȝ kynge came from Damascon, and sawe the altare, he offred theron, & kyndled his burntofferynge and meatofferynge vpon it, and poured his drynkofferings theron, & caused the bloude of ȝ deedofferynge which he offred, to be sprenkled vpon the altare. But the brasen altare that stode before the LORDE, put he awaye, so that it stode not betwene the altare and the house of the LORDE, but set it in the corner on the north syde of the altare.

And Achas the kynge cōmaunded Vrias ȝ prest, & sayde: Vpō the greate altare shalt thou kynde ȝ burntoffrynge in the mornynge, & the meatoffrynge in the euenynge, & the kynge's burntoffrynge & his meatoffrynge, & the burntoffrynge of all the people in the londe, with their meatoffrynge & drynkoffrynge. And kynge Achas brake downe the seates, and put awaye the *ketell from aboue, and toke the lauer from the brasen bullockes that were there vnder, and set it vpon § pauement of stone. And the pulpit for the Sabbath which they had buylded in the house, and § entrie of the kynges house turned he vnto the house of the LORDE, for the kynge of Assirias sake.

What more there is to saye of Achas, what he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in § Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Achas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid. And Ezechias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xviij. Chapter.

IN the twolueth yere of Achas the kynge of Iuda, begāne Oseas § sonne of Ela to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria nyne yere, and dyd § which was euell in § sighte of the LORDE, but not as § kynges of Israel § were before him. Agaynst him dyd Salmanasar § kynge of Assiria come vp. And Oseas was subiecte vnto him, and gaue him trybutes. But whā § kynge of Assiria perceaued § Oseas had conspyred and sent messangers to Sua § kynge of Egipte, and payed not trybute yearly to § kynge of § Assirians, he beseged him and put him in preson. + And the kynge of Assiria wente vp in to all the londe and to Samaria, and layed sege vnto it thre yere. † And in the nyenth yere of Oseas dyd § kynge of Assiria wynne Samaria, § and caried Israel awaye in to Assiria, and set them at Halah and at Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes.

B For when the childre of Israel synned agaynst § LORDE their God (§ broughte thē out of § londe of Egipte, from the hāde of Pharaō kynge of Egipte) and serued other goddes: and walked after the customes of the Heythē, whom the LORDE had dryuen out before the children of Israel, and dyd as the kynges of Israel, and prouoked § LORDE their God, and dyd secretly the thynges that were not righte in the sighte of § LORDE their God: namely in that they buylded them hye places in all cities, both in castels and stronge cities, and set vp pilers and groues, vpon all hye hilles, and amonge all grene trees, and brent incense there in all § hye places, euen as dyd the Heythen, whom the LORDE had cast out before them, and wroughte wicked thynges, wherewith they prouoked the LORDE vnto wrath, and serued the Idols, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto them: || Ye shal not do such a thyng.

And when the LORDE testified in Israel and Iuda by all the prophetes and Seers, sayenge: ¶ Turne agayne from youre euell wayes, and kepe my commaundemētes and ordynaunces, accordinge to all § lawe which I gaue vnto youre fathers, and that I sent vnto you by my seruantes the prophetes: they wolde not herken, ** but hardened their neckes, accordinge to the hardneck of their fathers, which beleued not on the LORDE their God. Yee they despysed his ordynaunces and his couenaunt which he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he witnessed amonge them, and walked in their awne vanities, and became vayne folowinge the Heythen, which dwelt rounde aboute them, concerninge whom the LORDE had commaunded them, that they shulde not do as they dyd. Neuertheles they forsoke all the commaundementes of the LORDE their God †† and made them two molten calues and groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued Baal, and †† caused their sonnes and daughters to go thorow the fyre, and medled with soythsayers and witches, and gaue them selues ouer to do that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath.

D Then was the LORDE very wroth at Israel, and put them awaye frō his presence, so § there remayned nomo §§ but onely § trybe of Iuda. Nether dyd Iuda kepe the commaundemētes of the LORDE their God, but walked after the customes of Israel, which they dyd. Therefore dyd § LORDE cast awaye all § sede of Israel, and troubled them, and deliuered them in to the handes of the spoylers, tyll he had cast them out of his presence: for Israel was deuyled from the house of Dauid. And they made thē a kynge, one Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat, which turned Israel back from  $\text{y}$  LORDE,  $\tau$  caused the to synne so sore. Thus walked the childre of Israel in all  $\text{y}$  synnes of Ieroboam, which he had done,  $\tau$  departed not fro them, vntyll  $\text{y}$  LORDE put Israel out of his presence, accordinge as he had spokē by all his seruantes  $\text{y}$  prophetes. \*So Israel was caried awaye out of their awne londe to Assiria vnto this daye.

The kynge of Assiria caused men to come fro Babilon, from Cutha, fro Aua, from Hemath  $\tau$  Sepharuaim,  $\tau$  caused the to inhabite  $\text{y}$  cities in Samaria in steade of the children of Israel. And they toke possession of Samaria,  $\tau$  dwelt in  $\text{y}$  same cities. But whā they begane to dwell there,  $\tau$  feared not  $\text{y}$  LORDE, the LORDE sent Lyons amōge the, which slewe them. And they caused it be sayde vnto  $\text{y}$  kynge of Assiria: The Heythē whom thou hast broughte hither,  $\tau$  caused them to inhabite the cities of Samaria, knowe not the lawe of  $\text{y}$  God of the londe. Therefore hath he sent Lyons amōge them,  $\tau$  beholde, they slaye the, because they knowe not the ordinance of the God of the londe.

The kynge of Assiria commaunded  $\text{y}$  saide: Bringe thither one of  $\text{y}$  prestes  $\text{y}$  were caried awaye fro thence  $\tau$  let him go thither,  $\tau$  dwell there,  $\tau$  teach the the ordinance of the God of  $\text{y}$  londe. Then came one of  $\text{y}$  prestes which were caried awaye from Samaria,  $\tau$  dwelt at Bethel,  $\tau$  taughte them how they shulde feare  $\text{y}$  LORDE. But euery people made the goddes,  $\tau$  put the in the houses vpon  $\text{y}$  hye places, which the Samaritanes had made, euery people i their cities wherin they dwelt. They of Babilō made Sochoth Benoth. They of Chut made Nergel. They of Hemath made Asima. They of Aua made Nibehas  $\tau$  Tharthak. They of Sepharuaim burnt their sonnes vnto Adramelech and Anamelech  $\text{y}$  goddes of the of Sepharuaim.

And whyle they feared  $\text{y}$  LORDE, they made prestes in  $\text{y}$  hye places of  $\text{y}$  lowest amonge them,  $\tau$  put them in  $\text{y}$  houses of  $\text{y}$  hye places: thus they feared  $\text{y}$  LORDE,  $\tau$  serued  $\text{y}$  goddes also, accordinge to  $\text{y}$  custome of euery nacion, from whence they were broughte. And vnto this daye do they after  $\text{y}$  olde fashion, so  $\text{y}$  they nether feare  $\text{y}$  LORDE, ner yet kepe their awne ordinaunces and lawes, after the lawe and commaundement that the LORDE cōmaunded the childre of Iacob,  $\dagger$  vnto whom he gaue  $\text{y}$  name of Israel, and made a couenaunt with them, and commaunded them, and sayde:  $\dagger$  Feare none other goddes, and worshipec them not, and serue them not, and offer not vnto them: but the LORDE which broughte you out of the lode of Egipte, with greate power and outstretched arme, Him feare, him worshipec,  $\tau$  vnto him do sacrifice: and the statutes, ordinaunces, lawe  $\tau$  cōmaundement which he hath caused to be written vnto you, those se that ye kepe, that ye allwaye do thereafter, and feare none other goddes. And forget not the couenaunt which he hath made with you, lest ye feare other goddes. But feare  $\text{y}$  LORDE youre God, he shall deliyuer you from all youre enemies. Neuertheless they wolde not herken, but dyd after their olde custome.

Thus these Heythen feared the LORDE, and serued their Idols also, and so dyd their children and childers childre likewise. Euē as their fathers haue done before them, so do they vnto this daye.

The xviij. Chapter.

IN the thirdre yere of Oseas  $\text{y}$  sonne of Ela kynge of Israel,  $\dagger$ reigned Ezechias  $\text{y}$  sonne of Achaz kynge of Iuda. And he was fyue and twentie yere olde whan he was made kynge,  $\tau$  reigned nyne  $\tau$  twentye yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Abi the doughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, accordinge vnto all as dyd Dauid his father. || He put awaye the hye places, and brake downe the pilers,  $\tau$  rote out the grones, and brake the brasen serpente  $\dagger$  which Moses had made. For vnto that tyme had the children of Israel brent incēse vnto it. And it was called Nehusthan. He put his trust in the LORDE God of Israel, so that after him there was not his like amōge all the kynges of Iuda nether had bene before him. He cleued vnto the LORDE, and departed not backe from him, and kepte his commaundementes, which the LORDE had cōmaunded Moses. And the LORDE was with him. And whither so euer he wete forth, he behaued him selfe wysely. He resisted the kynge of Assiria, and was not subdued vnto him.

* He smote the Philistynes also vnto Gasa, and their borders, from the castels vnto the stronge cities.

In the fourth yere of Ezechias kyng of Iuda<sup>a</sup> (ȝ was the seuenth yere of Oseas the sonne of Ela kyng of Israel) came Salmanasar the kyng of Assiria vp agaynst Samaria, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it after three yeres in the sixte yere of Ezechias, that is in the nyenth yere of Oseas kyng of Israel, thē was Samaria wonne. And the kyng of Assiria caried Israel awaye vnto Assiria, and set them at Halah and Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes. And all because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE their God, and had transgressed his couenaut: And as for all that Moses the seruaut of the LORDE had commaunded thē, they had nether herkened vnto eny of those, ner done them.

C In the fourthē yere of kyng Ezechias dyd Sennacherib ȝ kyng of Assiria<sup>b</sup> come vp agaynst all the stronge cities of Iuda, & cōquered thē. Then sent Ezechias the kyng of Iuda to ȝ kyng of Assiria vnto Lachis, sayenge: I haue offended, turne back fro me: loke what thou layest vnto me, I wil beare it. Thē the kyng of Assiria layed vnto Ezechias the kyng of Iuda, thre hundredth talentes of syluer, & thirtie talentes of golde. †So Ezechias gaue all ȝ syluer ȝ was fōnde in ȝ house of the LORDE, & in the treasures of ȝ kynges house. At ȝ same tyme brake Ezechias the kyng of Iuda the dores of the tēple of ȝ LORDE, & the plates of golde which he him selfe had caused to laye ouer thē, & gaue thē vnto the kyng of Assiria.

<sup>c</sup>And the kyng of Assiria sent Thartan, and the chefe chamberlayne, & the chefe butler from Lachis to kyng Ezechias with a greate power vnto Ierusalem. And they wēte vp: and whan they came there, they stode styll at the condyte by the ouer pole, which lyeth in the waye vpō the fullers londe, and called vnto the kyng. Thē came there forth vnto them Eliachim the sonne of Helchias the stewarde, and Sobna the scribe, & Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary.

D And the chefe butler sayde vnto thē: Tell kyng Ezechias: Thus sayeth ȝ greate kyng, euē the kyng of Assiria: What presumption is this ȝ thou trustest vnto? Thinkest thou, ȝ thou hast yet counsell and power to fighte? Where vnto trustest thou then, that thou art fallen of fro me? Beholde, putttest thou thy trust in this broken staffe of rede, in Egipte? which who leaneth vpon, it shall go in to his hande, & pearse it thorow. Euen so is Pharao the kyng of Egipte vnto all them that put their trust in him. But yf ye wolde saye vnto me: We put oure trust in ȝ LORDE oure God. Is not that he, whose hye places and altares Ezechias hath takē downe, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalē: Before this altare which is at Ierusalē, shal ye worshippinge?

Make a multitude now therfore vnto my lorde the kyng of Assiria, and I wil geue ȝ two thousande horses, let se yf thou be able to man them: how wilt thou then endure before the smallest pryncce of my lordes subiectes? And trustest thou vnto Egipte because of the charettes and horsmen? But thinkest thou that I came vp hither without ȝ LORDE to destroye these cities? The LORDE hath commaunded me: Go vp in to that londe and destroye it.

Then sayde Eliachim the sonne of Helchia E & Sobna and Ioah vnto the chefe butler: Speake to thy seruantes in the Syriās language, for we vnderstode it, and speake not vnto vs in the Iewes speche before the eares of the people that are vpon the wall. Neuertheles ȝ chefe butler sayde vnto thē: Hath my lorde then sent me vnto thy lorde, or to the, to speake these wordes? Yee euen vnto the men, which syt vpon the wall, that they maye eate their owne donge and drynke their owne stale with you. So the chefe butler stode and cried with loude voyce in the Iewes language, and spake and sayde: Heare the worde of the greate kyng the kyng of Assiria. Thus sayeth the kyng: Let not Ezechias disceaue you, for he is not able to delyuer you fro my hāde: & let not Ezechias make you to trust in the LORDE, sayenge: The LORDE shall delyuer vs, and this cite shal not be geuen in to the handes of ȝ kyng of Assiria. wyne, bred, vynyardes, oyle trees, oyle and hony, ſo ſhal ye lyue, and not dye. Folowe not ye Ezechias, for he diſceaueth you, when he ſayeth: The LORDE ſhal delyuer vs. * Hauē the goddeſſe of the Heythen delyuered euery one his londe from the hande of the kynge of Aſſiria? Where are the goddeſſe of Hemath and Arphad? Where are the goddeſſe of Sepharuaim Hena and Iua? Hauē they delyuered Samaria from my hande? Where is there one god amonge the goddeſſe of all londes, which hath delyuered his londe from my hande? that the LORDE ſhulde delyuer Ieruſalem from my hande.

As for the people, they helde their peace, and gaue him no anſwere: for the kynge had commaunded and ſayde: Anſwere him nothinge. Then came Eliachim the ſonne of Helechia ſteuarde, and Sobna the ſeribe, and Ioah the ſonne of Aſaph the Secretary vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, and tolde him the wordes of the chefe butler.

The xix. Chapter.

WHAN Ezechias ſe the kynge herde this, <sup>a</sup>he rente his clothes, and put on a ſackcloth, and wente in to ſe the houſe of the LORDE, and ſent Eliachim the ſteuarde and Sobna the ſeribe with the Eldeſt preſtes, clothed in ſack cloth, vnto the prophet Eſay ſonne of Amos, and they ſaide vnto him: Thus ſayeth Ezechias: This is a daye of trouble, and of defiance and blaſphemy. The childre are come to the byrth, and there is no ſtrength to be delyuered of them. Yf happily the LORDE thy God wil heare all the wordes of ſe chefe butler, whom his lorde the kynge of Aſſiria hath ſent, to blaſphemie ſe luyunge God, and to deſye him with ſuch wordes as the LORDE thy God hath herde, therefore liſte thou vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, which are yet leſte behynde.

<sup>b</sup> And whā kynge Ezechias ſeruauntes came to Eſay, Eſay ſaide vnto them: Speake thus vnto youre lorde: Thus ſayeth the LORDE: Feare not thou the wordes ſe thou haſt herde, wherewith the kynge of Aſſiria ſeruauntes haue blaſphemed me. Beholde, I wil put him in another mynde, ſo ſe he ſhall heare tydinges, and go agayne in to his awne cowntre, and in his awne londe wil I cauſe him to fall thorow the ſwerde.

And whā ſe chefe butler came agayne, he founde the kynge of Aſſiria fightinge agaynſt Libna: for he had herde that he was departed from Lachiſ. And he herde of Taracha the kynge of the Morians: Beholde, he is gone forth to fighte with the. Then turned he back, and ſent meſſaungers to Ezechias, and cauſed to ſaye vnto him: Let not thy God diſceau the, on whom thou truſteſt and ſayeſt: Ieruſalem ſhal not be geuē in to the hāde of the kynge of Aſſiria. Beholde, thou haſt herde what the kyngeſ of Aſſiria haue done vnto all londes, and how they dāued them, and ſhalt thou be delyuered? Hauē ſe goddeſſe of ſe Heithen delyuered the, whom my father deſtroyed, as Goſan, Haran, Reſeph, and the childre of Eden which were at Thalaſſar? Where is ſe kynge of Hemath, ſe kynge of Arphad, and ſe kinge of ſe cite Sepharuaim, Hena and Iua?

And whā Ezechias had receaued the letters of the meſſaungers and had red them, he wente vp vnto the houſe of the LORDE, and layed them abrode before the LORDE, and made his prayer before the LORDE, and ſayde: O LORDE God of Iſrael, thou that ſyttſt vpon the Cherubims, thou onely art God amonge all ſe kyngdomes of the earth, thou haſt made heauen and earth. Enelyne thine eare O LORDE, and heare: open thine eyes, and beholde, and heare the wordes of Sennacherib, which hath ſent hither to blaſphemie the luyunge God. It is true (O LORDE) that the kyngeſ of Aſſiria haue deſtroyed the Heythen and their londe with the ſwerde, and haue caſt their goddeſſe in the fyre: for they were not Goddeſſe, but ſe worke of mēſ hondes, wodd and ſtone, therefore haue they deſtroyed them. But now O LORDE helpe thou vs out of his hande, that all the kyngdomes vpon earth maye knowe, that thou LORDE art God alone.

<sup>d</sup> Then ſent Eſay the ſonne of Amos vnto Ezechias, ſayenge: Thus ſayeth the LORDE God of Iſrael: Where as thou haſt made thy prayer vnto me concernynge Sennacherib ſe kynge of Aſſiria, I haue herde it. This is it that the LORDE hath ſpoken agaynſt him: He hath deſpyſed ſe and mocked the O virgin thou daughter Sion: he hath ſhakē his heade at the O daughter Ieruſalem. Whom haſt thou deſpyſed and blaſphemed? Ouer whom haſt thou liſte vp thy voyce? Euē agaynſt ſe holy one in Israel hast thou liſte vp thine eyes: thou haſt blaſphemed ꝑ LORDE by thy meſſaungers, and ſayde: Throw the multitude of my charettes haue I gone vp to the toppes of the mountaynes, vpon the ſydes of Libanus. I haue hewen downe his hye Ceders and his choſen Pyne trees, and am come to the vttemoſt habitation of the wod of Carmel that belongeth vnto it. I haue dygged and dronke vp the ſtraunge waters, and with ꝑ ſoles of my fete haue I dreyed vp the See.

But haſt thou not herde how that I haue done this longe agoo, and haue prepared it from the begynnynge? Now haue I cauſed it for to come, that contencious ſtronger cities mighte fall in to a waite heape of ſtones, ꝛ they that dwell therein, ſhal be faynte, and fearfull and a ſhamed, * and ſhal be as the graſſe vpon the felde, and as ꝑ grene herbe and hay vpon the houſe toppes, that wythereth afore it be growne vp. I knowe thy habitation, thy out and ingoynge, and that thou rageſt agaynſt me. For ſo moch then as thou rageſt agaynſt me, and ſeynge thy preſumpcion is come vp to myne eares, therefore wyll I put a ryng in thy noſe, and a byrdle bytt in thy lippes, and wyll brynge the agayne, euen the ſame waye thou cameſt.

And let this be a token vnto the O Ezechias. In this yere eate ꝑ which is fallen, in the ſeconde yere ſuche as groweth of it ſelfe: In ꝑ thirde yere ſowe and reape, and plante vynyardes, and eate the frute therof. And the daughter Iuda which is eſcaped ꝛ remayneth, ſhall from hence forth take rote beneth, and beare frute aboue. For the remnaunt ſhal go forth from Ieruſalem, ꝛ they ꝑ are eſcaped, ſhall go out fro mount Sion. The gelouſy of the LORDE Zebaoth ſhall brynge this to paſſe.

Therefore thus ſayeth the LORDE concerninge ꝑ kynge of the Assyrians: He ſhall not come in to this cite, and ſhall ſhute no arowe therein, nether ſhal there come eny ſhyld before it, nether ſhal he dygge eny bakke aboute it, but ſhal go agayne the waye that he came, and ſhall not come in to this cite, ſayeth the LORDE: and I wyll defende this cite, to helpe it for myne awne ſake, and for my ſeruaunt Dauids ſake.

And in the ſame nighte wente the angell of the LORDE, and ſmote in the hoost of the Assyrians, an hundreth and fyue and foure ſcore thouſande men. And when they gatt them vp in the mornyng, beholde, all laye full of deed coarſes. † So Sennacherib the kinge of Assyria brake vp, and departed, and returned, and abode at Ninieue. And as he worſhipped in ꝑ houſe of Neſrach his god, his awne ſonnes Adramalech and Sarazer ſmote him with the ſwerde, and fled in to ꝑ londe of Ararat. And Aſarhadon his ſonne was kynge in his ſteade.

The xx. Chapter.

At that tyme was Ezechias deediſicke. And the prophet Eſay ꝑ ſonne of Amos, came to him, ꝛ ſayde vnto him: Thus ſayeth ꝑ LORDE: Set thine houſe in ordre for thou ſhalt dye ꝛ not lyue. And he turned, his face to the wall, and prayed vnto ꝑ LORDE, and ſayde: Remembre (O LORDE) that I haue walked faithfully before the, ꝛ with a perfecte hert, and haue done ꝑ which is good in thy ſyghte. And Ezechias wepte ſore. But when Eſay was not gone out of halfe the cite, ꝑ worde of ꝑ LORDE came to him, ꝛ ſayde: Turne back, ꝛ tell Ezechias ꝑ pryncer of my people: Thus ſayeth ꝑ LORDE God of thy father Dauid: I haue herde thy praier, ꝛ conſidered thy teares. Beholde, I wil heale ꝑ: on the thirde daye ſhalt thou go in to ꝑ houſe of the LORDE, ꝛ fiftene yeres wil I adde vnto thy life, ꝛ wyll delyuer the ꝛ this cite from the kynge of Assyria, ꝛ this cite wil I defende for myne awne ſake, and for my ſeruaunt Dauids ſake. And Eſay ſayde: Bringe hither a quantite of fygges. And when they broughte them, they layed them vpon the ſore, and it was healed.

Ezechias ſayde vnto Eſay: Which is ꝑ token, that the LORDE wyll heale me, and that I ſhal go vp in to the houſe of ꝑ LORDE on the thirde daye? Eſay ſayde: This token ſhalt thou haue of the LORDE, that the LORDE ſhal do accordynge as he hath ſayde. Shall the ſadowe go ten degrees forwarde, or ſhal it turne ten degrees backwarde? Ezechias ſayde: It is an eaſy thinge for the ſadowe to go ten degrees downewarde, ꝑ is not my mynde: but that it go ten degrees backwarde. Then cryed the prophet Eſay vnto the LORDE, ꝛ the ſadowe wente bakke ten degrees in Achaſ Dyall, which he was deſcended afore.

At the ſame tyme Merodach Baladan the sonne of Baladan kynge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes vnto Ezechias, for he had herde that Ezechias had bene sicke. And Ezechias reioysed with them, & shewed them all the house of rotes, the syluer, golde, spyes, and the best oyle, and the house of ordinaunce, and all that was founde in his treasures. There was nothinge in his house and in all his domynion, but Ezechias shewed it them.

Then came Esay the prophet vnto kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue these men sayde? and whence came they vnto the? Ezechias sayde: They came to me out of a farre countre, euen from Babilon. He sayde: What haue they sene in thyne house? Ezechias sayde: They haue sene all that is in my house, and there is nothinge in my treasures but I haue shewed it them. Then sayde Esay vnto Ezechias: Heare the worde of the LORDE: Beholde, *the tyme commeth, that it shall all be carryed awaye vnto Babilon, and whatsoever thy fathers haue layed vp vnto this daye, and there shall nothinge be lefte, sayeth the LORDE. †Yee and the children which come of the, whom thou shalt beget, shalbe taken awaye, to be chamberlaynes in the kynge of Babilons palace. Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: It is good that the LORDE hath spoken. And he sayde morouer: Let there be peace yet and faithfulness in my tyme.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and all his power, and what he dyd, and of the pole and water condyte, wher by he conueyed water in to the cite, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. † And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and Manasses his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxi. Chapter.

MANASSES was twolue yeare olde, when he was made kinge, and reigned fyue and fyfte yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Hephziba. And he dyd that which was euell in y sight of the LORDE (euen after the abhominaciōs of the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and waxed frowarde, and builded vp the hye places which his father Ezechias had destroyed,<sup>a</sup> and sett vp Baals altares, and made groues (as Achab the kynge of Israel dyd) and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. And buylded altares in the LORDES house, wherof the LORDE sayde: I wyll set my name at Ierusalem. And in both the courtes of the house of the LORDE buylded he altares vnto all the hoost of heauē. And ‡caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, and regarded byrdescreyenge and tokens, and maynteyned soysayers, and expounders of tokens, and so moch dyd he of this which was euell in the sight of the LORDE, that he prouoked him vnto wrath.

A groue Idol also which he had made, set he in the house, wherof the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house, and at Ierusalem (¶which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel) wil I set my name for euer, and wyl not cause y fote of Israel to be remoued eny more from the londe, which I gaue vnto their fathers, yee so that they obserue and do acordynge vnto all that I haue charged them, and after all the lawe that my seruauent Moses comaunded them. Neuertheles they wolde not herken, but Manasses disceaused them, so y they dyd worse then the Heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before y children of Israel.

Then spake the LORDE by his seruauents the prophetes, and saide: Because that Manasse the kynge of Iuda hath gone these abhominacions, which are worse then all y abhominacions that the Amorites haue done which were before them, and hath caused Iuda also to synne agaynst their God, therefore thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: ¶ Beholde, I wyll brynge such a plage vpon Ierusalem and Iuda, that who so euer heareth it, both his eares shal glowe, and ouer Ierusalem wyll I stretch forth the lyne of Samaria, and the weighte of the house of Achab, and wyll wype out Ierusalem, euen as one wypeth a platter, and I wyl ouerthrowe it. And y remnaunt of myne inheritaunce wil I cast out, & scatter them abrode, & wil deliuer them in to the hādes of their enemies, to be spoyled and rent of all their enemies: because they haue done y which is euell in my sighte, & haue prouoked me vnto wrath, sence the daye that I broughte their fathers out of Egipte, vnto this daye. Manasses also shed exceddinge moch innocēt bloude, so longe tyll Ierusalem was full on euery syde, without the synnes wherwith he caused Iuda for to synne, so ſ they dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.

What more there is to saie of Manasses, and all that he dyd, and his synnes which he comyttyed, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in the garden besyde his house, namely, in the garden of Vsa, and Amon his sonne was kynge in his steade.

Two and twentye yeare olde was Amon when he was made kynge, ⁊ he reigned two yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Mesumleth, ⁊ doughter of Harus of Iatha, and he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done, and walked in all the waye which his father walked, and serued the Idols which his father had serued, and worshipped them, and forsoke the LORDE the God of his father, and walked not in the waye of the LORDE.

And his seruantes conspyred agaynst Amon, ⁊ slewe the kynge in his house. But the people of the londe slewe all them ſ had cōspyred agaynst kynge Amon. And the people of the londe made Iosias his sonne kynge in his steade. As for other thinges that Amon dyd, beholde, they are written in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And he was buried in his graue in Vsas gardē. And Iosias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxij. Chapter.

IOSIAS <sup>a</sup>was eight yeare olde whā he was made kynge, ⁊ reigned one and thirtie yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Iedida the doughter of Adaia of Bascath, and he dyd that which was righte in ſ sighte of the LORDE, and walked in all ſ waye of David his father, ⁊ turned not asyde, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte.

And in the eighteenth yeare of kynge Iosias, the kynge sent Saphan ſ sonne of Asalia the sonne of Mesulam the scribe, in to ſ house of the LORDE, and sayde: *Go vp to Helchias the hye prest, that the money that is brought vnto ſ house of ſ LORDE (which the tresholde keepers haue gathered of ſ people) maye be delyuered vnto them, that they maye geue it to the workmen which are appoynted in the house of the LORDE, ⁊ to geue it vnto the labourers in the house (ſ they maye repayre the decaye of the house) namely, vnto the carpenters, and buylders, ⁊ masons, and to them ſ bie timber ⁊ fre stone for the repaireinge of the house: but so ſ theye be no accomptes taken of them concernynge the money, that is vnder their hande, but ſ they deale withall vpon credence.

And Helchias ſ prest sayde vnto Saphā the scribe: †I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the LORDE. And Helchias gaue the boke vnto Saphan, that he might reade it. And Saphan the scribe bare it vnto the kynge, and brought him worde agayne, ⁊ sayde: Thy seruantes haue gathered together ſ money ſ was founde in the house, ⁊ haue delyuered it vnto the workmē, which are appoynted in ſ house of the LORDE. And Saphan the scribe tolde the kynge and sayde: Helchias the prest hath delyuered me a boke, and Saphan red it before the kynge.

But whan the kinge herde the wordes of the boke of lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kynge cōmaunded Helchias the prest, ⁊ Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, ⁊ Achbor the sonne of Michaia, and Saphan the scribe, ⁊ Asaia ſ kynges seruauant, and sayde: †Go youre waye and axe counsell at the LORDE for me, for the people, and for all Iuda, concernynge the wordes of this boke that is founde: for greate is the wrath of the LORDE that is kyndled ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not herkened vnto the wordes of this boke, to do all that is written vnto vs therin.

Then wente Helchias the prest, and Ahicam, Achbor, Saphan ⁊ Asaia vnto Hulda the prophetisse ſ wife of Sellū the sonne of Thecua the sonne of Harhan the keeper of ſ clothes, and she dwelt at Ierusalem in the seconde porte, and they spake vnto her. And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth ſ LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you vnto me, Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge euell vpon this place, and the inhabitors therof, euen all the wordes of ſ lawe which the kynge hath caused to be red, because they haue forsaken me, and brent incense vnto other goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath with all the workes of their handes. Therefore is my wrath kindled agaynst this cite, and shall not be quenched.

The xliij. Chapter.

AND the kynge sent forth, and *all the Elders in Iuda and Ierusalem resorted vnto him, and the kynge wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda, and all the inhabitors of Ierusalem with him, the prestes and prophetes and all the people both small and greates, ⁊ and all the wordes of the boke of the couenaunt that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And the kinge stode vpon a piler, ⁊ made a couenaunt before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, and to kepe his commaundementes, witnesses, and ordinaunces with all their hert and with all their soule, y they shulde set vp the wordes of this couenaunt, which are wrytten in this boke. And all the people entred in to the couenaunt.

And the kynge cōmaunded Helchias the hye prest, and the prestes of the secōde course, and the keepers of the thresholde, y they shulde put out of the temple all the vessels which were made for Baal, and for the groue, and for all the hoost of heauen, ⁊ he brent them without Ierusalem in the valley of Cedron, and the dust of them was caryed vnto Bethel.

B And he put downe the †Kemurims, whō the kynges of Iuda had founded, to burne incense vpon the hye places, in the cities of Iuda, and aboute Ierusalem. He put downe also them that brent incense vnto Baal, to the Sonne, and the Mone, and the twolue tokens, and to all y hoost of heauen. And the groue caused he to be caryed from the house of the LORDE out of Ierusalem in to y valley of Cedron, and brent it in the valley of Cedron, and made it to dust, and cast the dust vpon the graues of y comen people. And he brake downe the whorekeepers houses which were by the house of the LORDE, wherin the women made mansions for the groue.

And he caused all the prestes for to come out of the cities of Iuda, and suspended y hye places, where the prestes brent incense, from Geba vnto Berseba. And brake downe the hye places in the portes, that were at y dore of the gate of Iosua y shreue of the cite, at the left hande as one goeth to the cite porte. Yet had not the prestes of the hye places offred vpon the altare of the LORDE at Ierusalem, but ate vnuenuded bred amonge their brethren.

He suspended †Tophet also in the valley of the children of Emmon, that noman shulde cause his sonne or his daughter to go thorow y fyre vnto Moloch. And he put downe the horses, which y kynges of Iuda had set vnto the Sonne, at the intringe in to the house of the LORDE, besyde the chest of Netham Melech the chamberlayne which was at Paruarim, and the charettes of the Sonne brent he with fyre, and the altares vpon the rofe of Achabs perler, which the kynges of Iuda had made. And the altares ¶ which Manasses had made in the two courtes of the house of the LORDE, dyd the kynge breake downe. And ranne from thence, and cast the dust of them in to the broke Cedron.

And the hye places that were before Ierusalem on the righte hande of Mount Mashith ¶ which Salomon the kynge of Israel had buylded vnto Astaroth the abhominacion of Sidon, and to Camos the abhominacion of Moab, and to Malcom the abhominacion of the children of Ammon, those did the kynge suspende, and brake the pilers, and rote out the groues, and fylled their places with mens bones.

And **the altare at Bethel, and the hye place that Ieroboam the sonne of Nebat made, which caused Israel to synne, the same altare brake he downe, and the hye place, ⁊ brent the hye place, and made it to dust, and brent vp the groue. And he sayde: What titell is this, that I se here? And the men of the cite sayde vnto him: It is the graue of the man of God, which came from Iuda, and cryed out this that thou hast done agaynst þy altare of Bethel. And he sayde: Let him lye, no man touche his bones. Thus were his bones delyuered with the bones of the prophet that came from Samaria.

¶ He put awaye also all the houses of the hye places in the cities of Samaria (which the kynge of Israel had made to prouoke þy LORDE vnto wrath) and dyd with them accordinge to all as he had done at Bethel. And all þy prestes of the hye places that were there, offred he vp vpon the altares, and † so brent he mens bones thereon, and came agayne to Ierusalem.

¶ And the kynge commaunded the people, and sayde: Kepe Easter vnto the LORDE youre God, ‡ as it is written in the boke of this couenaunt. For there was no Easter so kepte as this, sence the tyme of the Iudges which iudged Israel, and in all the tymes of the kynge of Israel, and of the kynge of Iuda: but in the eighteenth yere of kynge Iosias, was this Easter kepte vnto the LORDE, at Ierusalem.

And Iosias expelled all soysayers, expounders of tokēs, ymagēs and Idols, and all the abhominacions which were sene in the londe of Iuda and at Ierusalem, that he mighte set vp the wordes of the lawe, which were written in the boke, that Helchias þy prest foude in the house of þy LORDE.

¶ His like was no kynge before him, which so couerted vnto þy LORDE with all his hert, with all his soule, and with all his strength, accordinge to all the lawe of Moses. And after him came there not vp soch another. Yet turned not the LORDE from the indignacion of his greate wrath, wherwith he was displeased ouer Iuda, because of all the prouocacion wherwith Manasses had prouoked him. And þy LORDE sayde: § I wil put Iuda out of my presence also, euen as I haue put awaye Israel: and this cite which I haue chosen, wyl I cast out, namely, Ierusalem, and the house wherof I sayde: My name shalbe there. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is written in the Cronicles of the kynge of Iuda.

¶ In his tyme wēte Pharaο Necho þy kynge of Egipte vp agaynst the kynge of Assyria by the water Euphrates. But kynge Iosias wente agaynst him, and dyed at Megiddo, whā he had sene him. And his seruantes caried him deed frō Megiddo, and brought him to Ierusalē, and buried him in his graue. And the people of the londe toke ¶ Ioahas the sonne of Iosias, and anoynted him, and made him kynge in his fathers steade.

¶ Thre and twenty yere olde was Ioahas whā he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Hamutal þy daughter of Ieremia of Libna. And he dyd þy which was euell in þy sight of þy LORDE, euen as his fathers had done. But Pharaο Necho toke him presoner of Reblatha in the londe of Hemath, þy he shulde not reigne at Ierusalem: and raysed a taxe vpō the londe, an hundreth talētes of siluer, and one talente of golde. And Pharaο Necho made Eliachim þy sonne of Iosias kynge in his father Iosias steade, and turned his name Ioachim. ¶ But Ioahas toke he, and brought him in to Egipte where he dyed. And Ioachim gauē the siluer and golde vnto Pharaο, yet taxed he the londe, þy he might geue þy syluer acordinge to Pharaοs cōmaundement. Euery one amonge the people in þy londe taxed he after his abilitie in siluer and golde, to geue it vnto Pharaο. Fyue and twenty yere olde was Ioachim whan he was made kynge, and reigned eleuen yeres at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Sebida þy daughter of Pedaia of Ruma, and he dyd euell in the sight of the LORDE, euen as his fathers had done.

The xxiij. Chapter.

¶ IN his tyme came vp Nabuchodonosor þy kynge of Babilon, and Ioachim was in subieccion vnto him iiij. yere. And he turned back, and rebelled agaynst him. And þy LORDE sent men of warre vpon him out of Chaldea, out of Syria, out of Moab, and frō amonge the childrē of Ammon, and caused thē for to come in to Iuda, to destroe it acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruantes the prophetes. It fortunēd euē so vnto Iuda, *acordynge to ⁊ worde of the LORDE, that he wolde put them awaye from his presence, because of ⁊ synnes of Manasses which he dyd, ⁊ because of the innocent bloude that he shed. And he fylled Ierusalem with innocent bloude, therefore wolde not the LORDE be reconcyled.

What more there is to saye of Ioachim, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And Ioachim fell on slepe with his fathers. And † Ioachim his sonne was kynge in his steade. And the kynge of Egipte came nomore out of his londe: for the kynge of Babilon had conquered all that was the kynge of Egiptes, from the ryuer of Egipte vnto ⁊ water Euphrates. Eightene yere olde was Ioachim whan he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Nebushta the daughter of Elnathan of Ierusalem. And he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, euen as his father had done.

At the same tyme wente the seruantes of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon vp to Ierusalem, and came vpon the cyte with ordinaunce of warre. And whan Nabuchodonosor and his seruantes came to the cite they layed sege vnto it. But Ioachim ⁊ kynge of Iuda wente forth to the kynge of Babilon with his mother, with his seruantes, with his rulers and chamberlaynes. And the kynge of Babilon receaued him in the eight yere of his reigne.

‡ And he toke forth frō thence all the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and in ⁊ kynges house, and brake all the golden vessell ⁊ Salomon the kynge of Israel had made in the house of the LORDE (acordynge as the LORDE had sayde) and caryed awaye all Ierusalem, all the rulers, all the mightie men, euen ten thousande presoners, and all the carpenters, and all the smythes, and lefte none behynde but the poore people of the londe.

§ And he caryed Ioachim awaye vnto Babilon, and the kynges mother, the kynges wyues, and his chamberlaynes: and ⁊ mightie men of the londe led he awaye presoners also from Ierusalem vnto Babilon, and seuen thousande of the best men, and a thousande carpenters and smythes, and all the stronge men of warre. ¶ And the kynge of Babilon made Matania his vncle kynge in his steade, and turned his name Sedechias.

¶ One and twenty yere olde was Sedechias, whan he was made kynge, and reigned eleuen yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Amithal the daughter of Ieremia of Libna. And he dyd euell in the sight of the LORDE, euē as Ioachim dyd: for thus fortunēd it vnto Ierusalē thorow the wrath of the LORDE, tyll he had cast them out frō his presence. And Sedechias fell awaye frō the kynge of Babilon.

The xrb. Chapter.

AND it fortunēd, that in ⁊ nyenth yere ¶ of his reigne, vpon the tenth daye of the tenth moneth, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon came with all his power agaynst Ierusalem. And they laied sege vnto it, and buylded stronge holdes rounde aboute it. Thus was the cite beseged vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge Sedechias. But on ⁊ nyenth daye of the fourth moneth ¶ was the honger so stronge in the cite, that the people of the londe had nothinge to eate. And the cite was broken vp, ⁊ all the men of warre fled in the night by the waye of the porte betwene the two walles, which goeth to the kynges gardē. But the Caldees laye aboute the cite. And he fled by the waye to the playne felde. Neuertheles the power of the Caldees folowed after the kynge, and toke him in the plaine felde of Iericho: and all the men of warre that were with him, were scatered abroad from him. And they toke the kynge, and led him vp to the kynge of Babilon vnto Reblatha. ¶ And he gaue iudgmēt vpon him. And they slewe Sedechias children before his eyes, and put out Sedechias eies, and bounde him with cheynes, and caryed him vnto Babilon.

Vpon the seventh daye of the fyfth moneth, ¶ that is the nineteenth yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, came Nabusaradan the chefe captayne the kynge of Babylons seruaut, vnto Ierusalem, and brent ⁊ house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, ⁊ all the houses at Ierusalem, and all the greates houses brent he with fyre. And all the power of the Caldees which was with the chefe captayne, brake downe the walles rounde aboute Ierusalem. As for the other people that yet were lefte in the cite, and were fallē vnto the kinge of Babilon, and the other comen people, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne caried them awaye. And of the poorest people dyd the chefe captaine leaue in ſ̄ londe to be wynegardeners and plowmen.

But the brasen pilers in the house of the LORDE, and the seates, and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the LORDE, dyd ſ̄ Caldees breake downe, and caried the metall vnto Babilon. And the pottes, shouels, fleshokes, spones, & all ſ̄ brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruyce, caried they awaye. And ſ̄ chefe captayne toke awaye ſ̄ censors and basens ſ̄ were of golde and syluer, two pilers, one lauer, and the seates ſ̄ Salomon had made for ſ̄ house of the LORDE. The metall of all these ornamentes coulde not be weved. *Eightene cubytes hye was one piler, and ſ̄ knoppe thereon was of brasse also, & thre cubytes hye: & the rope and the pomgranates vpon the knoppe rounde aboute, were all of brasse. After the same maner was the other piler also with the rope.

And the chefe captayne toke Seraia the prest of the first course, & Sophony the prest of the seconde course, and thre dorekeepers, and one chamberlayne out of the cite, which was appoynted ouer ſ̄ men of warre: and fyue men that were euer before the kyng, which were founde in the cite: and Sophar the captayne, which taught the people of ſ̄ londe to fight: and thre score men of ſ̄ people of the londe, that were founde in the cite: these dyd Nabusaradan ſ̄ chefe captayne take, and broughte them to the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblatha. And the kyng of Babilon slewe them at Reblatha in ſ̄ londe of Hemath. Thus was Iuda caried awaye out of his awne londe. † But ouer the remnaunt of the people in the londe of Iuda, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon lefte behynde, he set Godolias ſ̄ sonne of Ahicam ſ̄ sonne of Saphan. Now whā all the captaynes of the soudyers, & the men herde, that the kyng of Babilon had made Godolias gouernoure, they came to Godolias vnto † Mispa, namely, Ismael ſ̄ sonne of Nathania, & Iohanna ſ̄ sonne Carea, & Seraia ſ̄ sonne of Tanhometh the Netophatite, & Iesania ſ̄ sonne of Maechati with their men. And Godolias sware vnto them & to their men, & sayde vnto them: ‡ Feare not ye ſ̄ officers of the Caldees, tary in the londe, & submytte youre selues vnto the kyng of Babilon, & ye shal prospere. ¶ But in the seuēth moneth came Ismael the sonne of Nathania the sonne of Elisama (of the kynges kynred) and ten men with him, and slewe Godolias, and the Iewes and Caldees that were with him at Mispa. Then all the people gat them vp, both small and greate, and the captaynes of the hoost, and came in to Egipte, for they were afrayed of ſ̄ Caldees.

Howbeit in the seuen and thirtieth yeare after that Ioachim the kyng of Iuda was caried awaye on the seuen and twenty daye of the twolueth moneth, Euilmerodach the kyng of Babilon in the first yeare of his reigne, lifte vp the heade of Ioachim ſ̄ kyng of Iuda out of preson, and spake loungly vnto him, and set his trone aboue ſ̄ trones of ſ̄ kynges that were with him at Babilon, and chaunged the clothes of his captiuyte. And he ate allwaye before him as longe as he lyued. And he appoynted him his porcion, which was euer geuē him daylie of the kyng, as longe as he lyued.

A THE children of Simeon were Nemuel, Iamin, Iarib, Serah, Saul: whose sonne was Sallum, whose sonne was Mipsam, whose sone was Misma. The childre of Misma were, Hamuel, whose sonne was Sachur, whose sonne was Simeï. Simeï had sixtene sonnes and sixe daughters, and his brethren had not many childre. And all their kynred multiplied not as the children of Iuda. But they dwelt at Berseba, Molada, Hazar Sual, Bilha, Ezem, Tholad, Bethuel, Harna, Zielag, Beth Marchaboth, Hazarsussim, Beth Birei, and Saraim: these were their cities vntyll yf tyme of kyng Daudi. And their townes, Etam, Ain, Rimmon, Tochen, Asan, these fyue cities, & all the vyllages that were aboute these cities, vntyll Baal, this is their habitacion and their kynred amonge them.

And Mesobab, Iamlech, Iosa the sonne of Amasia, Ioel, Iehu the sonne of Ieschibia, the sonne of Seraia, the sonne of Asiel, Eliocnai, Iacoba, Iesohaia, Asaia, Adiel, Ismael and Benaia. Sisa the sonne of Siphei, yf sonne of Alon, the sonne of Iedaia, the sonne of Simri, the sonne of Semaia. These were famous prynces in their kynreds of the house of their fathers, and multiplied in nombre.

And they wente forth, that they might come vnto Gedor to the east syde of the valley, to seke pasture for their shepe. And founde far and good pasture, and a londe large on both the sydes, quyet and riche: for they of Ham dwelt there afore tyme.

And these that are now descrybed by name, came in the tyme of Ezechias the kyngde of Iuda, and smote the tentes and dwellings of those that were founde there, and damned them vnto this daye, and dwelt in their steade. for there had they pasture for their shepe.

There wente of them also (of the children of Simeon) fyue hundreth men vnto mount Seir, with their rulers: Platia, Nearia, Rephaia and Vsiel, the children of Iesei, and smote the remnant of the Amalechites (which were escaped) and dwelt there vnto this daye.

now of Ruben the first sonne of Israel are these: Hanoch, Pallu, Hesron and Charmi.

The children of Iohel were, Semaia, whose sonne was Gog, whose sonne was Semei, whose sonne was Micha, whose sonne was Reaia, whose sonne was Baal, whose sonne was Beera, *whom Teglathphalasser the kynge of Assiria caried awaye presoner. He was a pryncce amouge the Rubenites. But his brethren amouge his kynreds (whā they were rekened amouge their generacion) had Ieiel and Sacharia to their heades.

And Bela the sonne of Asan the sonne of Sema, the sonne of Iael, †dwelt at Aroer, and vntyll Nebo † Baal Meon. And dwelt towarde † East, as one cometh to the wyldernes by † water Euphrates: † for their cattell were many in the londe of Gilead.

B And in † tyme of Saul they foughte agaynst † Agarites, which fell thorow their hande, and they dwelt in their tentes towarde all the East parte of Gilead.

But the children of Gad dwelt ouer agaynst them in † countre of Basan, vntyll Salcha. Iael the chefest, and Saphan the secōde, Iaenai and Saphat at Basan. And their brethren of the house of their fathers were, Michael, Mesullam, Seba, Iorai, Iaecan, Sia and Eber, these seuen.

These are the children of Abihail the sonne of Huri, the sonne of Iaroh, the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Michael, the sonne of Iesai, † sonne of Iahdo, the sonne of Bus. Ahi the sonne of Abdiel, the sonne of Guni was a ruler in † house of their fathers, and they dwelt at Gilead in Basan, and in † vyllages therof, and in all the suburbes of Saron, vnto the vttemost partes therof. All these were rekened in the tyme of Iotham the kynge of Iuda, and of Ieroboam the kynge of Israel.

C The children of Ruben, the Gaddites † the halfe trybe of Manasses (of soch as were fightinge men, which wayre shyldes † swerde, and coulde bende the bowe, and were men of armes) were foure and fortye thousande and seuen hundredth and thre score, that wente forth to † warre. And whan they foughte agaynst † Agarites, Ietur, Naphes and Nodab helped them, and delyuered † Agarites in to their handes, and all that was with them: for they cried vnto God in † batayll. And he herde them, because they put their trust in him. And they caried awaie their cattell, fyue thousande Camels, two hundredth † fyftie thousande shepe, two thousande Asses, and an hūdreth thousande soules of men. For there were many wounded, for why? the battayll was of God. And they dwelt in their steade, vntyll the tyme that they were caried awaye presoners.

The childrē of the halfe trybe of Manasses dwelt in † londe † from Basan forth vntyll Baal Hermon † Seuir, and mount Hermon: for they were many. And these were † heades of the house of their fathers, Ephraim, Iesei, Eliel, Asriel, Ieremia, Hodaneia, Iahdiel, mightie valeant men, † awncient heades in the house of their fathers.

¶ And whā they synned agaynst † God of their fathers, and wente awhorynge after the goddes of the people of the londe, (whom God had destroyed before them) the God of Israel stered vp the sprete of Phul the kynge of Assiria, and the sprete of Teglathphalassar the kynge of Assiria, and led awaye the Rubenites, Gaddites, and † halfe trybe of Manasses, and broughte thē vnto Halah, and Habor, and Hara, and to the water of Gosan vnto this daye.

The children of Leui are these: Gerson, Kahath and Merari. These are the names of the children of Gerson: Libni and Semei. The names of the childrē of Kahat are these: Amram, Iezohar, Hebron and Vsiel. The names of the children of Merari are: Maheli and Musi. These are the kynreds of the Leuites amonge their householdes.

B Gersons sonne was Libni, whose sonne was Iahath, whose sonne was Sima, whose sonne was Ioah, whose sonne was Iddo, whose sonne was Serah, whose sonne was Ieathrai. Kahats sonne was Aminadab, whose sonne was Corah, whose sonne was Assir, whose sonne was Elcana, whose sonne was Abiasaph, whose sonne was Assir, whose sonne was Thahath, whose sonne was Vriel, whose sonne was Vsia, whose sonne was Saul.

The childrē of Elkana were, Amasai ⁊ Ahimoth, whose sonne was Elkana, whose sonne was Elkana of Zuph, whose sonne was Nahath, whose sonne was Eliab, whose sonne was Ieroham, whose sonne was Elkana, whose sonne was Samuel. Whose first borne sonnes were Seni and Abija.

Meraris sonne was Maheli, whose sonne was Libni, whose sonne was Simei, whose sonne was Vsa, whose sōne was Simea, whose sōne was Haggia, whose sōne was Assia.

These are they whom Dauld apoynted to syng in the house of the LORDE, where the Arke rested, ⁊ they mynistrd before the habitacion of the Tabernacl of witnes with synginge, vntyll Salomon had buylded the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, and they stode after their maner in their office. And these are they ⁊ stode ⁊ their children. Of ⁊ children of Kahath was Heman ⁊ synger, the sonne of Ioel, the sonne of Samuel, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Ieroham, ⁊ sonne of Eliel, the sonne of Thoah, the sonne of Zuph, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Mahath, the sonne of Amasai, the sonne of Elkana, the sonne of Iohel, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Sophonias, the sonne of Thahath, the sonne of Assir, the sonne of Abijasaph, the sonne of Corah, the sonne of Iezehar, the sonne of Kahath, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel.

C And his brother Assaph stode at his righte hande, and Assaph was the sonne of Barachia, the sonne of Simea, the sonne of Michael, ⁊ sonne of Maeseia, the sonne of Malchija, the sonne of Athin, ⁊ sonne of Serah, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Ethan, the sonne of Sima, the sonne of Simei, the sonne of Iahath, the sonne of Gerson, the sonne of Leui.

Their brethren the childrē of Merari, stode on the left hande, namely, Ethan the sonne of Kusi, the sonne of Abdi, the sonne of Malluch, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Amazia, the sonne of Helchia, ⁊ sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Samer, the sonne of Maheli, the sonne of Musi, the sonne of Merari, the sonne of Leui.

As for their brethrē the Leuites, they were geuen to all the offices in the habitacion of the house of the LORDE: but the office of Aaron and his sonnes was to kyndle the fyre vpon the altare of burntofferyuges, and vpon the altare of incense, and to all the busynes in the most holy, and to make attonement for the people, acoording as Moses ⁊ seruauent of God commaunded.

These are the children of Aaron: Eleasar his sonne, whose sonne was Phineas, whose sonne was Abisua, whose sonne was Buki, whose sonne was Vsi, whose sonne was Serahia, whose sonne was Meraioth, whose sonne was Amaria, whose sonne was Achitob, whose sonne was Sadoc, whose sonne was Ahimaas.

And this is their habitacion and rowme in their borders, namely of Aarons children of the kynred of ⁊ Kahathites: for this lot fell vnto them. * And they gaue thē Hebron in the londe of Iuda, ⁊ the suburbes of the same rounde aboute. But the felde of ⁊ cite ⁊ the villages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune. Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron these fre cities, Hebron ⁊ Libna with their suburbes, Iather, ⁊ Esthemoa, Hilen, Debir, Asan and Bethemes, with their suburbes. And out of the trybe of Ben Iamin, Geba, Alemeth and Anathot with their suburbes, so ⁊ all the cities in their kined were thirtene. The other childrē of Kahath of their kynred, had out of ⁊ halfe trybe of Manasses, ten cities by lot. The children of Gerson of their kynred, had out of ⁊ trybe of Isachar, ⁊ out of the trybe of Asser, ⁊ out of the trybe of Nephtali, ⁊ out of the trybe of Manasses in Basan, thirtene cities. The childrē of Merari of their kynred, had by lot out of the trybe of Ruben, ⁊ out of the trybe of Gad, and out of the trybe of Zabulon, twolue cities.

* Iosu. 14. d. and 21. b.

And vnto ʒ Leuites gaue the childre of Israel cities with their suburbes, namely by lot, out the trybe of the children of Iuda, ʒ out of the trybe of the childre of Simeon, ʒ out of the trybe of the children of Ben Iamin, even those cities, which they appoynted by name. * But the kynreds of the children of Kahath had the cities of their borders out of the trybe of Ephraim.

So gaue they now vnto the (namely vnto the kynred of the children of Kahath) ʒ fre cities, Sichem vpon mount Ephraim, Geser, Iakmeam, Bethoron, Aialon, and Gath Rimon with their suburbes. And out of ʒ halfe trybe of Manasses, Aner and Bileam with their suburbes. But vnto the children of Gerson they gaue out of the kynred of the halfe trybe of Manasses, Golā in Basan and Astharoth with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Isachar, Kedes, Dabraph Ramoth, and Anem with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Asser, Masal, Abdō, Hukoh and Sehoḅ, with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Nephtali, Kedes in Galile, Hāmon and Kiriathaim with their suburbes. Vnto the other children of Merari gaue they out of the trybe of Zabulon, Rimano and Thabor with their suburbes. And beyōde Iordane ouer agaynst Iericho eastwarde besyde Iordane out of the trybe of Ruben, Bezer in the wilderness, Iahza, Kedemoth and Mepaath with their suburbes. Out of the trybe of Gad, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaim, Heszbōn and laeser with their suburbes.

The viij. Chapter.

THE children of Isachar were, Thola, Pua, Iasub and Simrom, these foure. The children of Thola were, Vsi, Rephaia, Ieriel, Iahemai and Iebsam and Samuel, heades in the house of their fathers of Thola, ʒ mightie men in their kynred, 'in nombre in the tyme of Dauid, two and twenty thousande and sixe hundredeth. Then sayde Saul vnto his weaponbearer: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vncircumcysed come not, and deale shamefully with me. Neuertheles his weaponbearer wolde not, for he was sore afrayed. Then toke Saul his swerde, and fell therin. When his weaponbearer sawe that Saul was deed, he fell vpon his swerde also, and dyed.

Thus died Saul and his three sonnes, and all his housholde together. And when the men of Israel which were in ʒ valley, sawe, that Saul and his sonnes were deed, they lefte their cities and fled: and the Philistynes came and dwelt therin.

On the morowe came the Philistynes to spoyle the slayne, and founde Saul, and his sonnes lyenge vpon mount Gelboa, and stryded him out, and toke his heade, and his harness, and sent it aboute in to ʒ lond of the Philistynes, and caused it to be shewed before their Idoles and the people. And his weapens layed they in the house of their god, and styckte vp his heade vpon the house of Dagon.

But whan all they of Iabes in Gilead herde of euery thinge, that the Philistynes had done vnto Saul, they gat them vp (as many as were men of armes) and toke the body of Saul and of his sonnes, and broughte them vnto Iabes, and buryed their bones vnder the Oke at Iabes, and fasted seuen dayes.

Thus dyed Saul in his trespace which he commytted agaynst the LORDE, because he keppe not the worde of the LORDE: ⁊ ⁊ because he axed counsell at the soythsayers, and axed not at the LORDE, therefore slawe he him, ⁊ turned the kyngdome vnto Dauid.

The xij. Chapter.

AND all Israel resorted to Dauid vnto Hebron, ⁊ sayde: Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And afore tyme whan Saul reigned, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and thou shalt be the prynce ouer my people of Israel. And all the Elders of Israel came to the kyng vnto Hebron. And Dauid made a couenaunt with them at Hebron before the LORDE. And they anoynted Dauid to be kyng ouer Israel ʒ acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Samuel.

And Dauid and all Israel wete vnto Ierusalem, that is Iebus: for the Iebusites dwelt in the lode. And the citesyns of Iebus saide vnto Dauid: Thou shalt not come in hither. Howbeit Dauid wane ʒ castell of Siō, which is ʒ cite of Dauid. And Dauid sayde: ¶ who so euer smytheth ʒ Iebusites first, shal be a prynce ⁊ captayne. Thē Ioaab ʒ sonne of Zeruia clymmed vp first, ⁊ was made captayne. So Dauid dwelt in ʒ castell, therefore was it called ʒ cite of Dauid. And he buylded ʒ cite roide aboute, fro Millo forth on euery syde. As for ʒ remnaunt of ʒ cite, Ioaab buylded it, ⁊ repayed it. And Dauid wete forth ⁊ grewe, ⁊ the LORDE Zebaoth was with him.

These are ʒ chefe amōge ʒ mightie mē of Dauid, which dealt valeauntly with him in his kyngdome with all Israel, to make him kyng, acordinge to the worde of ʒ LORDE ouer Israel. And this is ʒ nombre of Dauids mightie men: Iesabeam the sonne of Hachmoni the chefast amonge thirtie. He lifte vp his speare, & smote thre C. at one tyme.

After him was Eleasar the sonne of Dodo the Ahohite, and he was amonge the thre mightie. This man was with Dauid whā they blasphemed, & the Philistynes gathered thē selues there to ſ̄ batayll. And euē ther was there a peece of loude full of barly, & the people fled before the Philistynes. And they stode in the myddes of the loude, and rescued it, and smote the Philistynes. And the LORDE gaue a greate health.

And thre of the chefast thirtie wēte downe to the rocke vnto Dauid in to the caue of Adullam. But the Philistynes hoost laye in the valley of Rephaim. As for Dauid, he was in the castell. And the Philistynes people were then at Bethleem. And Dauid was desyrous, and sayde: O that some wolde geue me to drynke of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate. Thē brake those thre in to the Philistynes hoost, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder the gate, and caried it, and broughte it vnto Dauid. Neuertheles he wolde not drynke it, but poured it vnto the LORDE, and sayde: God let this be farre fro me, & I shulde do it, and drynke the bloude of these men in ſ̄ parell of their life: for with the parell of their life haue they broughte it: therefore wolde he not drynke it. This dyd the thre Worthies.

Abisai the brother of Ioab, he was the chefast amonge thre. And he lifte vp his speare, and smote thre hundred. And he was famous amonge thre, and before the thirtie, more honorable then the two, yet came he not vnto the thre.

Benaia the sonne of Ioiada the sonne of Ishail of Cabzeel, was a man of greate actes. He smote two lyons of the Moabites. And he wente downe, and smote a lyon in the myddes of a well in the tyme of snowe. He smote a man of Egipte also, which was fye cubites greate of stature, and had in his hande a speare like a weuers lome. Yet wente he downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of his hande, and slewe him with his awne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Ioiada, and was a famous man amonge thre Worthies, and most awncient amonge thirtie. But vnto the thre came he not. Howbeit Dauid made him of his secrete counceill.

The valeaunt Worthies are these: Asahel the brother of Ioab. Elhanan his Vncles sonne of Bethleem, Samoth the Harodite, Helez the Pelonite, Ira the sonne of Ekes the Thecoite, Abraser the Anathothite, Sibechai the Husathite, Ilai the Ahohite, Matherai the Netophatite, Heled ſ̄ sonne of Baena ſ̄ Netophatite, Ithai ſ̄ sonne of Ribai of Gibeath of the childre of Ben Iamin, Benaia the Pirgathonite, Hura of the broke of Gaas. Abiel the arbatlithite, Asmaueth the Baherunite, Eliahba the Saalbonite. The children of Hasem ſ̄ Gisonite, Ionathas the sonne of Sage the Hararite, Ahiam the sonne of Sachar the Hararite, Eliphal the sonne of Vr, Hephher the Macherathite, Abia the Pelonite, Hezro of Carmel, Naerai the sonne of Aszbai, Ioel the brother of Nathan. Mibehar the sonne of Hagri, Zeleg the Ammonite, Naherai the Berothite the wapenbearer of Ioab the sonne of Zeruia, Ira the Iethrite, Gareb the Iethrite, Vrias the Hethite, Sabad the sonne of Ahalai, Adina the sonne of Sisa the Rubenite, a cap-tayne of the Rubenites, and there were thirtie vnder him: Hanan ſ̄ sonne of Maecha, Iosaphat the Mathonite, Vsia ſ̄ Asharathite, Sama and Iaiel, the sonnes of Hotham the Aroerite, Iedaiel the sonne of Simri, Ioha his brother the Thirzite, Eliel the Mahenite, Ieribai and Iosua the sonnes of Elnaan, Iethma the Moabite, Eliel, Obed, Iaesiell of Mizobaia.

The xiiij. Chapter.

THESE also came to Dauid vnto Siclag whan he was yet kepte asyde because of Saul the sonne of Cis: And they were like wyse amonge the worthies & helped in the battayll, and coulde handle bowes with both their handes, & coulde cast stones, and shute arowes with the bowe.

Of Sauls brethren which were of Ben Iamin: The chefast Ahieser and Ioas ſ̄ children of Samaa the Gibeathite. Iesiel and Pelet the children of Asmaueth. Baracha & Iehu the Anthothite. Iesmaia the Gibeonite, valeaunt amonge thirtie and ouer thirtie. Ieremia, Iahasiel, Iohanam, Iosabab the Gederathite. Eleusai, Ierimoth, Bealia, Samaria, Saphatia the Harophite, Elkana, Iesia, Asareel, Isabeam & Korahyte, Ioela and Sabadia the children of Ieroham of Gedor.

Of the Gaddites resorted there vnto Dauid to the castell in the wyldernesse, mightie Worthies and men of armes, which hadled speares and swerdes, and had faces like lions, & were as swifte as the Roes vpon & mountaynes. The fyrst Eser, the seconde Obadia, the thyrde Eliab, the fourth Masmanna, & fyfth Ieremia, the sixte Athai, the seuēth Eliel, the eight Iohanna, the nyenth Elsabad, the tenth Ieremia, & eleuenth Machbanai. These were of the children of Gad, heades in the hoost, the leest ouer an hundreth, and & greatest ouer a thousande. These are they which in the fyrst moneth wente ouer Iordane, whan it was full on both the shores, so that all the valleys were eauen both towarde the East and towarde the West.

There came of the children of Ben Iamin also and of Iuda vnto the castell of Dauid. But Dauid wente forth vnto them, and answered and sayde vnto them: Yf ye come to me in peace, and to helpe me, my hert shal be with you. But yf ye come vpō disceate, and to be mine aduersaries (where as there is yet no vrighte in me) the God of oure fathers loke vpon it, and rebuke it. Neuertheles the sprete endued Anasai the captayne amonge thirtie, and he sayde: We are thine O Dauid, and holde with the thou sonne of Isai. Peace, peace be with the, peace be with thy helpers, for thy God helpeth the. Then Dauid receaued them, and made them captaynes ouer the men of warre.

And of Manasses there fell certaine vnto Dauid, whan he came to the battayll with the Philistynes agaynst Saul, and helped them not, *for the prynces of & Philistynes counceled to let him go from them, and sayde: Yf he fell vnto his lorde Saul, it mighte cost vs oure neckes. Now whā he departed vnto Sielag, there fell vnto him of Manasses, Adna, Iosabad, Iediael, Michael, Iosabad, Elihu, Zilthai, heades ouer thousandes in Manasses. And they helped Dauid against the men of warre: for they were all valeaunt Worthies, and were captaynes ouer the hoost. And euery daye came there some to Dauid, to helpe him, till there was a greate hoost as a hoost of God.

And this is the nombre of the heades harnessed vnto the warre, which came to Dauid vnto Hebron, for to turne the kyngdome of Saul vnto him, acordyng to the worde of the LORDE.

The childrē of Iuda, which handled speares and swerdes, were sixe thousande, & eight hundreth ready harnessed vnto & warre. Of the children of Simeon noble men of armes for the battayll, seuen thousande and an hūdreth. Of the children of Leui foure thousande and sixe hundreth. And Ioiada the prynce amonge them of Aaron with thre thousande and seuen hundreth. Sadoc the yonge valeaunt man of armes with his fathers house, two and twentye rulers. Of the children of Ben Iamin Sauls brother, thre thousande: for vnto that tyme helde many of thē yet with the house of Saul.

Of & children of Ephraim, twentye thousande and eighte hundreth valeaunt men of armes, and famous in the house of their fathers. Of the halfe trybe of Manasses, eightene thousande, named by name, to come and make Dauid kyng. Of the children of Isachar (which were men of vnderstandyng, whan nede requyred to knowe what Israel shulde do) two hundreth captaynes. and all their brethren folowed their worde. Of Zabulon, soch as wente forth in the hoost to & warre, ready with all maner of weapens for the battayll, fyfthe thousande, beyng of one mynde to kepe them selues in ordre.

Of Nephtali, a thousande captaynes, & with them soch as handled shyld and speare, seuen and thyrty thousande. Of Dan, ready harnessed to the battayll, eight and twentye thousande, and sixe hundreth. Of Asser, soch as wente forth in & hoost, ready harnessed to the battayll, fortye thousande. From beyonde Iordane, of the Rubenites, Gaddites and the halfe trybe of Manasses, with all maner of weapens to the battayll, an hūdreth and twentye thousande.

All these men of warre, ready harnessed to the battayll,* came with a whole hert vnto Hebron, to make Dauid kyng ouer all Israel. And all Israel besyde were of one hert, that Dauid shulde be made kyng. And there were they with Dauid thre dayes, eatyng and drynkyng: for their brethren had prepared for them. And soch neighbours as were aboute them vntyll Isachar, Zabulon and Nephtali, brought bred vpon Asses, Camels,

The xliii. Chapter.

AND Dauid helde a counsell<sup>a</sup> with the captaynes ouer thousands and ouer hundreds, and with all the prynces, and sayde vnto all the congregacion of Israel: Yf it lyke you, and yf it be of the LORDE oure God, let vs sende forth on euery syde to oure other brethren in all the countrees of Israel, and to the prestes and Leuites in the cities where they haue suburbs, & they maye be gathered together vnto vs, and let vs fetch the Arke of oure God agayne vnto vs: for by Sauls tyme we axed after it. Thē sayde the whole cōgregacion, that the same shulde be done, for it pleased all the people well.

So Dauid gathered all Israel together from Sihor of Egipte, tyll a man come vnto Hemath, to fetch the Arke of God from Kiriath Iearim. And Dauid wente vp with all Israel to Kiriath Iearim, which lieth in Iuda, to brynge from thence the Arke of God the LORDE, that sytteth vpō the Cherubins, where the name is named: and they caused the Arke of God to be caried vpō a new cart from the house of Abinadab.

Vsa and his brethren droue the cart. As for Dauid and all Israel, they played with all their strength before God, with songes, with harpes, with psalteries, with tabrettes, with Cymbales and trompes.

But whan they came to the barne floore of Chidon, Vsa stretched out his hande to holde the Arke: for the oxen wente out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE fearece ouer Vsa, & smote him, because he stretched out his hāde to the Arke, so & he dyed there before God. Thē was Dauid sory, because & LORDE had made such a rente vpō Vsa, and called the place Perez Vsa, vnto this daye. And Dauid stode in feare of God the same daye, & sayde: How shal I brynge & Arke of God vnto me? Therefore wolde he not let & Arke of God be broughte vnto him in to & cite of Dauid, but caried it in to & house of Obed Edom the Gathite. So the Arke of God abode with Obed Edom in his house three monethes. And & LORDE blessed Obed Edoms house and all that he had.

AND Hiram & kynge of Tyre<sup>a</sup> sent messangers vnto Dauid and Cedre tymber, and masons and carpenters, to buylde him an house. And Dauid perceaued, that the LORDE had confirmed him kynge ouer Israel: for his kyngdome increased for his people of Israels sake. And Dauid toke yet mo wyues at Ierusalem, & begat yet mo sonnes & daughters. And the names of them & were borne vnto him at Ierusalem, are these: Sammua, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Iebehar, Elisua, Elipalet, Noga, Nepheg, Iaphia, Elisamma, Baal Iada, Eliphalet.

And whan the Philistynes herde that Dauid was anoynted kynge ouer all Israel, they wente vp all to seke Dauid. Whan Dauid herde that, he wente forth agaynst them. And the Philistynes came, and scattered the selues beeth in & valley of Rephaim. And Dauid axed counsell at God, & sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wilt thou deluyr them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go vp, and I wil deluyr them in to thy hande. And whan they were gone vp to Baal Prasim, Dauid smote them there. And Dauid sayde: God hath deuyded myne enemies thorow my hande, euen as the water parteth asunder: therfore called they the place Baal Prasim. And there leftte they their goddes. Then * commaunded Dauid to burne them with fyre.

But the Philistynes gat them thither agayne, & scattered them selues beeth in & valley. And Dauid axed counsell at God agayne. And God sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not go vp behynde them, but turne the from them, that thou mayest come vpon thē ouer agaynst the Peertrees. So whan thou hearest aboue vpon the Peertrees the noyse of the goynge, go thou forth then to the batayll: for God is gone forth then before the to smyte the hoost of the Philistynes. And Dauid dyd as God commaunded him. And they smote the hoost of the Philistynes from Gibeon forth vnto Gaser. And Dauids name was noysed out in all londes. And the LORDE caused & feare of him to come vpō all the Heythen.

Arke of God, & pitched a Tabernacle for it. At that tyme sayde Dauid: The Arke of God is not to be borne, but onely of  $\hat{y}$  Leuites: \* for them hath the LORDE chosen to beare the Arke of the LORDE, and to mynister vnto him for euer. Therefore gathered Dauid all Israel together vnto Ierusalem, to brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE vnto the place which he had prepared for it.

And Dauid broughte the children of Aaron & the Leuites together. Of the children of Kahath: Vriel the chefe with his brethren, an C. and twentie. Of the children of Merari: Asaia the chefe with his brethrē, two C. and twentie. Of the childrē of Gerson: Iael the chefe with his brethren, an C. and thirtie. Of  $\hat{y}$  childrē of Elizaphan: Semaia the chefe with his brethren, two hundredth. Of the childrē of Hebron: Eliel the chefe, with his brethrē, foure score. Of the children of Vsiel: Amminadab the chefe, with his brethren, an hūdreth and twolue.

33 And Dauid called Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes, and the Leuites, namely Vriel, Asaia, Ioeli, Semaia, Eliel, Aminadab, and sayde vnto them: Ye are the heades of  $\hat{y}$  fathers amonge the Leuites: sanctifye youre selues therefore & youre brethrē,  $\hat{y}$  ye maye brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel, to the place  $\hat{y}$  I haue prepared for it. † For afore whan ye were not there, the LORDE oure God made a rent amonge vs, because we soughte him not, as we shulde haue done. So  $\hat{y}$  prestes & the Leuites halowed thē selues,  $\hat{y}$  they mighte brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel. And the children of Leui bare the Arke of God the LORDE vpon their shulders with the staues theron, ‡ as Moses comaunded accordinge to  $\hat{y}$  worde of the LORDE.

And Dauid spake vnto  $\hat{y}$  rulers of  $\hat{y}$  Leuites, that they shulde ordeyne some of their brethren to be syngers with psalteries, harpes and loude instrumentes, and Cimbales, to synge loude with ioie.

Ⓒ Then the Leuites appoynted Heman & sonne of Iael: and of his brethren Assaph the sonne of Barachias: and of the children of Merari their brethren, Ethan the sonne of Cusaia: and with them their brethren of the seconde course, namely Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramoth, Iehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Benaia, Maeseia, Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel, the dore keepers. For Heman, Assaph and Ethan were syngers, with brasen belles makynge a loude noyse: but Zacharias, Iaesiell, Semiramoth, Iehiel, Vnni, Eliab, Maeseia & Benaia with Phalteries to Alamoth: Mathithia, Elipheleia, Mikneia, Obed Edom, Ieiel & Asasia with harpes to synge aboute them on ioye. Chenania the ruler of the Leuites was the master of Musiek to teach them for to synge, for he was a man of vnderstandinge.

And Barachias and Eleana were the dorekeepers of the Arke. But Sachania, Iosaphat, Nathanceel, Amasai, Zacharias, Benaia, Elieser the prestes, blew the trompettes before  $\hat{y}$  Arke of God. And Obed Edom and Iehia were dorekeepers of the Arke.

So Dauid and the Elders of Israel, and the captaynes ouer thousands wente vp to fetch the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the house of Obed Edom with ioie. And whan God had helped the Leuites  $\hat{y}$  bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, there were offered seuen bullockes & seuen rāmes. And Dauid had a lynnē garment vpō him, and so had all the Leuites  $\hat{y}$  bare the Arke, and  $\hat{y}$  syngers, and Chenania the master of Musiek with the syngers. Dauid had an ouerboddy cote of linnen vpon him also.

Thus all Israel brought vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE with myrth, with trompettes, tabrettes, & loude Cymbales, with psalteries and harpes. Now whan the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the cite of Dauid, Michol  $\hat{y}$  daughter of Saul looked out at a wyndowe: & whā she sawe kynge Dauid daunsynge & playenge, she despyed him in hir hert.

The xviij. Chapter.

Ⓐ ND whā they brought in the Arke of God, they set it in  $\hat{y}$  Tabernacle, that Dauid had pitched for it, and offered burnt-offerynges & thankofferynges before God. And whā Dauid had ended the burnt-offerynges and thankofferynges, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE, & distributed vnto euery man in Israel (both vnto man and woman) a cake of bred, and a peece of flesh and a meece of potage.

And he appoynted before the Arke of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE certayne Leuites to mynister, that

But Assaph with loude Cymbales. Benaia and Iehasiel the prestes with tabrettes, allway before the Arke of y couenaunt of God.

B At the same tyme ordeyned Dauid first of all to geue thakes vnto the LORDE by Assaph and his brethren.

"O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, call vpon his name, tell the people what thinges he hath done.

O let youre songes be of him: prayse him, and let youre talkyng be of all his wonderous workes.

Geue his holy name a good reporte: let y hert of them reioyce, that seke the LORDE.

O seke the LORDE and his strength, seke his face euermore.

Remembre his maruelous workes that he hath done, his wonders, and the iudgmētes of his mouth.

Ye sede of Israel his seruauit, ye children of Iacob his chosen.

And they wente from one nacion to another, ⁊ from one realme to another people.

He suffred no man to hurte them, and re-roued euen kynges for their sakes.

For the LORDE is grate, and can not worthily be praysed, and more to be had in awe then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythē, they are but Idols: ¶ but it is the LORDE that made the heauens.

Thanksgeuyng and worshipe are before him, strength and ioye is in his place.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE ye kynreds of nacions: ascrybe vnto the LORDE worshipe and strength.

Ascrybe vnto the LORDE the honoure of his name: brynge presentes, and come before him, and worshipe y LORDE in y bewtye of holynes.

Let the whole earth stōde in awe of him: he hath made the compase of the worlde so fast, that it can not be moued.

Let the heauens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: and let it be tolde amōge the Heythen, that the LORDE reigneth.

Let the See make a noyse, and the fulnesse therof: let the felde be ioyfull, and all that therein is.

Let all the trees in the wod leape for ioye before the LORDE, for he commeth to iudge the earth.

O geue thankes vnto the LORDE, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for euer.

And saye: Helpe vs O God oure Sauioure, and gather vs together, and deluyr vs from the Heythen, that we maye geue thanks vnto thy holy name, and synge prayses vnto the in thy Psalmes.

IT fortuned whā Dauid dwelt in his house, he sayde vnto ⁊ prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedar, and the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE is amonge the curtaynes.

Nathan saide vnto Dauid: What so euer is in thine hert, that do: for God is with ⁊. But the same night came ⁊ worde of God vnto Nathan, and sayde: Go and speake to Dauid my seruauant: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Thou shalt not buylde me an house to be an habitaciō: for I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte forth the children of Israel, vnto this daye: But where the Tabernacle and habitation hath bene, there haue I bene where so euer I haue walked in all Israel. Spake I euer to any of the Iudges in Israel (whom I commaunded to kepe my people) and sayde: Wherfore do ye not buylde me an house of Cedre tymber?

So shalt thou speake now vnto my seruauant Dauid: Thus sayeth the LORDE Zebaoth: I toke the from the pasture behynde the shepe, that thou shuldest be the prynce ouer my people, and haue bene with the whither so euer thou wctest, and haue roted out all thine enemies before the, and haue made the a name, accordinge to the name of the greате men that are vpō earth. And for my people of Israel, I wyl appoynte them a place, and wyl plante them, that they maye dwell there, and nomore to be remoued. And the childrē of wickednes shal oppresse them nomore, like as afore tyme, when I cōmaunded the Iudges ouer my people of Israel. And I wyl subdue all thine enemies, and do declare vnto the, that the LORDE wyl buylde the an house.

* But when thy dayes are fulfilled, that thou departest hence with thy fathers, I wyl after the rayse vp thy sede, which shall be euē one of thy sonnes: his kyngdome wyl I stabliszhe, he shal buylde me an house, ⁊ I wyl make his seate sure for euer. I wyl be his father, and he shal be my sonne. And I wyl not withdrawe my mercy from him, as I haue withdrawn it frō him that was before the: But I wyl set him in my house and in my kyngdome for euer, so that his seate shalbe sure for euernore.

And whā Nathan had spoken vnto Dauid accordinge to all these wordes ⁊ all this vision, kynge Dauid came and sat him downe before the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE God, who am I? and what is my house, ⁊ thou hast broughte me thus farre? And this (O God) hast thou thoughte yet to litle, but hast spoken of thy seruantes house yet longe for to come. And thou LORDE God hast loked downe vpon me from aboue, euen as one man loketh vpon another. What more shal Dauid saye vnto the, ⁊ thou bryngest thy seruauant to soch honoure? Thou knowest thy seruauant O LORDE, for thy seruantes sake and accordinge to thy hert hast thou done all these greате thinges, that thou mightest shewe all greате thinges vnto thy seruauant. LORDE † there is none lyke the, and there is no God but thou, of whom we haue herde with oure eares. And † where is there a people vpon earth as thy people of Israel, where God wente to delyuer him a people, and to make him selfe a name thorow greате ⁊ terrible thinges, to cast out the Heythen before thy people, whom thou hast delyuered out of Égipte? and ⁊ people of Israel hast thou made thy people for euer, and thou LORDE art become their God.

Now LORDE, let the worde be verified for euer, that thou hast spoken ouer thy seruauant and ouer his house, ⁊ do as thou hast spoken: and let thy name endure and be magnified for euer, that it maye be sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth, the God of Israel is the God in Israel, and that the house of thy seruauant Dauid maye be stablyszhed before the: for thou LORDE hast opened the eare of thy seruauant, that thou wilt buylde him an house. Therefore hath thy seruauant founde (confydence) to make his prayer before the. Now LORDE, thou art God, and hast promysed soch good vnto thy seruauant. Begynne now to blesse the house of thy seruauant, that it maye be euermore before the: for loke what thou blessst (O LORDE) the same is blessed for euer.

The xix. Chapter.

AFTER this smote Dauid the Philistynes, and subdued them, "and toke Gath & the villages therof out of the hande of the Philistynes. He smote the Moabites likewise, so that the Moabites were subdued vnto Dauid, and gaue him trybute. He smote Hadad Eser also & kyng of Zoba in Hemath, whan he toke to set vp his power by the water Euphrates.

And Dauid toke from him a thousande charettes, seven thousande horsmen, and twēty thousande fote men. And Dauid lamed all the charettes, and kepte an hundreth charettes ouer. And the Syriās came from Damascon, to helpe Hadad Eser the kyng of Zoba. Howbeit Dauid smote two & twentie thousande of the same Syrians, and layed men of warre at Damascon in Syria, so that the Syrians were subdued vnto Dauid, and broughte him trybute. For the LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euer he wente.

B And Dauid toke the shyldes of golde, & Hadad Esers seruantes had, & broughte thē to Ierusalem. And out of Tibeath & Chun the cities of Hadad Eser, toke Dauid very moch brasse, *wherof Salomon made the brasen lauer, and pilers, and brasen vessels.

And whā Thogu the kyng of Hemath herde, & Dauid had smytten all & power of Hadad Eser, he sent his sonne Hadorā vnto kyng Dauid, to salute him & to blesse him, because he had foughte with Hadad Eser, & smyttē hī (for Thogu had warre with Hadad Eser) and all the same vessels of golde, syluer and of brasse, dyd kyng Dauid consecrate vnto the LORDE, with the syluer and golde that he had taken from the Heythō, namely, from the Edomites, Moabites, Ammonites, Philistynes, and Amalechites.

C And Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ia smote eightene thousande of the Edomites in the Salt valley, and layed mē of warre in Edomea, so that all the Edomites were subdued vnto Dauid: for & LORDE helped Dauid, whither so euer he wente.

Thus Dauid reigned ouer all Israel, and executed iudgment and righteousnes vnto all the people. Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia was captayne ouer the hoost. Josaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chaunceler. Sadoc the sonne of Achitob, and Ahimelech & sonne of Abiathar, were prestes. Sauesa was Scribe. Benaiā the sonne of Ioiada was ouer the Chrethians & Plethians. And Dauids sonnes were chefe at & kynges hande.

The xx. Chapter.

AND after this dyed Nahas & kyng of the childrē of Ammon, "and his sonne was kyng in his steade. Then sayde Dauid: I wil do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, for his father dyd mercy vpon me: and so he sent messaungers to comforte him ouer his father. And whā Dauids seruantes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon vnto Hanun to comforte him, the prynces of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun: Thinkest thou that Dauid honoureth thy father in thy sighte, that he hath sent cōforters vnto the? Yee his seruantes are come vnto the, to search and to ouerthrowe, and to spye out the londe. Then toke Hanun the seruantes of Dauid, and shoue them, & cut the halfe of their garmentes of, euē by the loynes, & so let thē go. And they wente their waye, & sent men to tell Dauid. Neuertheles he sent to mete them (for & men were put to greate shame) and the kyng sayde: Abyde at Iericho, tyll youre beerdes be growne, and then come agayne.

Whan the childrē of Ammon sawe, that they stynked in & sighte of Dauid, both Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousande talētes of syluer, to hyre charettes and horsmen out of Mesopotamia, out of Maecha and out of Zoba: and hyred two and thirtie thousande charettes, & & kyng of Maecha with his people, which came & pitched their tentes before Medba. And the children of Ammon gathered them selues together out of their cities, and came to the battayll. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Ioab thither with all the hoost of the men of armes. And the childrē of Ammon were gone forth, and prepared them selues to the battayll before the gate of the cite. But the kynges & were come, kepte them asyde in the felde.

Now whā Ioab sawe that the battayll was agaynst him both before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst y Syrians. As for y residue of the people, he put them vnder the hande of Abisai his brother, that they shulde prepare them selues agaynst the children of Ammon, and he sayde: Yf y Syriās be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the childrē of Ammon be to strōge for y, I shall helpe the: take a good corage vnto the, and let vs quyte oure selues manly for oure people and for the cities of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him. And Ioab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst y Syrians: ⁊ they fled before him. And whan the children of Ammon sawe y the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai his brother, and wente in to the cite. And Ioab came to Ierusalem.

D But whan the Syrians sawe that they were smyttē before Israel, they sent messaungers, and broughte forth y Syrians which were beyonde the water. And Sophach the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before them. Whā this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane. And whan he came at them, he set y battayll in aray agaynst them. And Dauid prepared him selfe to y battayll agaynst y Syrians, ⁊ they foughte with him: but y Syriās fled before Israel. And Dauid slewe of the Syrians seuē thousande charettes, ⁊ fortye thousande fote men. And Sophach the chefe captayne slewe he also. And whan Hadad Esers seruantes sawe that they were smyttē before Israel, they made peace with Dauid ⁊ his seruantes. And the Syrians wolde helpe the childrē of Ammon no more.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND whan y yeare came aboute, ⁊ what tyme as y kynges vse to go forth, Ioab broughte the power of the hoost, ⁊ destroyed the londe of the children of Ammon, and came and layed sege vnto Rabba. But Dauid abode at Ierusalem. * And Ioab smote Rabba, and brake it downe. And Dauid toke their kynges crowne from his heade, and founde the weighte of a talent of golde theron, ⁊ precious stones. And it was set vpō Dauids heade. And very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that were therin, he broughte thē forth, ⁊ parted them in sunder with sawes, ⁊ hokes ⁊ betels of yron. Thus dyd Dauid vnto all y cities of the childrē of Ammon. And Dauid departed againe, with the people vnto Ierusalem.

Afterwarde arose there warre at Gasar with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai y Husathite smote Sibai, which was one of the children of Rephaim, and he subdued him. And there arose warre agayne with the Philistynes. Thē Elhamah y sonne of Iair smote Lahemi y brother of Goliath y Gathite, whose speares staff was like a weeuers lome. Afterwarde was there a battayll at Gath, where there was a man of a greate stature, y had sixe fyngers and sixe toes, which make foure and twentye. And he was borne also of Rapha, and spake despytfully vnto Israel. But Ionathas the sonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These were the childrē of Rapha at Gath, ⁊ fell thorow y hande of Dauid, and of his seruantes.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Sathan stode agaynst Israel, ⁊ entysed Dauid to nombre Israel, ⁊ Dauid sayde vnto Ioab ⁊ to y rulers of the people: Go youre waye, nombre Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, and brynge me the nombre of thē, that I maye knowe it. Ioab sayde: The LORDE make his people an hundredth tymes mo then they are now. But my lorde ō kyng, are they not all my lordes seruantes? Why doth my lorde then axe therafter? Wherefore shal there a trespase come vpon Israel?

Neuertheles the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Ioab. And Ioab wente forth, and walked thorow all Israel, and came to Ierusalem, and deliuered vnto Dauid y nombre of the people that was tolde. And of all Israel there were a thousande tymes a thousande, and an hundredth thousande men, that drue out the swerde: and of Iuda foure hundredth thousande and seuētye thousande men, which drue out the swerde. As for Leui and Ben Iamin, he nombred them not amonge these: for the kynges worde was abhominable vnto Ioab.

But this displeased God righte sore: for he smote Israel. And Dauid sayde vnto God: I haue synned greuously, that I haue done this. But now take awaye the trespase of thy seruaunt: for I haue done very vnwisely. And the LORDE spake vnto Gad Dauids Seer, ⁊ sayde: Go speake to Dauid, ⁊ saye: Thus saith the LORDE: Thre thinges laye I before the, chose ⁊ one of them, ⁊ I maye do it vnto the. And whā Gad came to Dauid, he spake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Chose ⁊ ether thre yeare derth, or thre monethes to flye before thine aduersaries, ⁊ before the swerde of thine enemies, ⁊ it maye ouertake the: or thre dayes ⁊ swerde of the LORDE. ⁊ pestilence in the londe, ⁊ the angell of the LORDE maye destroye in all ⁊ coastes of Israel. Loke now what answere I shal geue vnto him ⁊ sent me. Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in greate trouble: yet wyl I rather fall in to ⁊ hande of the LORDE, for his mercy is exceedynge greate, ⁊ I wil not fall in to the handes of men.

Then dyd the LORDE cause pestilence to come in to Israel, so that there fell of Israel thre score ⁊ ten thousande mē. And God sent the angell to Ierusalē for to destroye it. And euen in the destruccion the LORDE considered, and he repēdeth of the euell, and sayde vnto the angell ⁊ destroyer: It is ynough, holde now thy hande.

The angell of the LORDE stode besyde ⁊ barne of Arnan ⁊ Iebusite. And Dauid lifte vp his eyes, and sawe the angell of ⁊ LORDE stoundinge betwene heauē and earth, and a naked swerde in his hande stretched out ouer Ierusalem. Then Dauid and ⁊ Elders beyng clothed with sack cloth, fell vpō their faces. And Dauid sayde vnto God: Am not I he that caused the people to be nombred? I am he that hath synned and done euell: as for these shepe, what haue they done? LORDE my God, let thine hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house, and not agaynst thy people to plague them.

And the angell sayde vnto Gad, that he shulde speake vnto Dauid, that Dauid shulde go vp, ⁊ set vp an altare in the barne of Arnan the Iebusite. So Dauid wente vp acordinge to ⁊ worde of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORDE. But whan Arnan turned him, and sawe the angell (and his foure sonnes with him) they hyd thē selues: for Arnan throszshed wheate.

Now whan Dauid came to Arnan, Arnan looked, and was aware of Dauid, and wete forth out of the barne, and worshipped Dauid with his face to the grounde. And Dauid sayde vnto Arnan: Geue me rowme in the barne, to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE therein: for ⁊ full money shalt thou geue it me, that the plage maye cease from the people.

But Arnan sayde vnto Dauid: Take it vnto the, and let my lorde the kynge do as pleaseth him. Beholde, that oxen geue I for a burnt-offerynge, and those vessels to the oxen, and wheate for the meatofferynge, I geue it all. Neuertheles the kynge sayde vnto Arnan: Not so: but for ⁊ full money wyl I bye it: for that which is thine wyl not I take for the LORDE, and offre a burntofferynge for naughte.

So Dauid gaue Arnan for ⁊ rowme, sixe hundred Sycles of golde in weight. And there buylded Dauid an altare vnto ⁊ LORDE, ⁊ offred burntofferynges ⁊ slayn-offerynges. And whan he called vpō the LORDE, he herde him thorow the fyre from heauē vpon ⁊ altare of the burntofferynge. And ⁊ LORDE sayde vnto the angell, that he shulde put his swerde in to his sheeth.

At the same tyme whā Dauid sawe, that the LORDE had herde him vpon the come floore of Arnan ⁊ Iebusite, he dyd sacrifice there. For ⁊ habitacion of ⁊ LORDE which Moses had made in the wyldernes, and the altare of burntofferynges, was at that tyme in the hye place at Gibeon. But Dauid coulde not go thither to seke God before it, for he feared the swerde of the LORDES angell. And Dauid sayde: * Here shal be ⁊ house of God ⁊ LORDE, and this the altare of burnt-offerynges for Israel.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND Dauid cōmaunded to gather together the straungers that were in ⁊ londe of Israel, and appoynted masons to hewe stone for the buyldinge of the house of God. And Dauid prepared moch yron for nales in the dores of the portes, and for soch thinges as were to be naled together, and so moch brasse, that it was not to be weyed: and Cedre trees innumerable: for they of Zidon ⁊ Tyre brought Dauid moch Cedre tymbre: for Dauid thoughte, Salomō my sonne is but a childe and tender: But the house that shal be buylded vnto the LORDE, shal be greate, that his name ⁊ prayse maye he exalted in all londes, therefore wyl I prouyde for him. So Dauid made greate prouysion before his death.

13 And he called Salomon his sonne, & commaunded him to buylde the house of the LORDE God of Israel, and sayde vnto him: My sonne, *I was minded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, but the worde of y LORDE came vnto me, and sayde: Thou hast shed moeh bloude, and strycken many battayls, therefore shalt thou not buylde an house vnto my name, for as moeh as thou hast shed so moeh bloude vpon the earth before me. Beholde, the sonne which shal be borne vnto the, shal be a quyetee man: and I wyl cause him to be in rest from al his enemies on euery syde, for his name shalbe Salomon: for I wyl geue peace and rest vpon Israel as longe as he lyueth. He shal buylde an house vnto my name. He shal be my sonne, and I wyl be his father. And I wyl stablyshe y seate of his kyngdome vp Israel for euer.

C Now my sonne, the LORDE shal be wyth the, and thou shalt prospere, that thou mayest buylde an house vnto the LORDE thy God, acordynge as he hath spoken of the. The LORDE also shal geue the wysdome & vnderstandynge, and shal commytte Israel vnto the, that thou mayest kepe the lawe of the LORDE thy God. But then shal thou prospere, yf thou take hede to do after the ordynaunces and lawes which the LORDE commaunded Moses vnto Israel. Be stronge, and take a good corage vnto the, feare not, and be not faynt harted. Beholde, I haue in my pouerte prouyded for the house of the LORDE, an hundreth thousande talentes of golde, and a thousande tymes a thousande talentes of syluer, and brasse and yron without nombre: for there is so moeh of it.

And tymbre and stone haue I prepared, thou mayest get more therof. Thou hast many workmen also, mesons and carpenters in stone and tymber, and all maner of men that haue vnderstandynge in all worke off golde, syluer, brasse, and yron without nombre. Yet get the vp, and be doynge, and the LORDE shal be wyth the.

13 And Dauid commaunded all the rulers of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sonne, and sayde: Is not the LORDE youre God with you, and hath geuen you rest on euery syde? for he hath deluyered the inhabiteurs of the londe in to youre handes, and the londe is subdued before the LORDE and before his people. Geue ouer youre hert now therfore and youre soule, to seke the LORDE youre God, and get you vp, and buylde a Sanetuary vnto the LORDE God, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE and the holy vessels of God, maye be brought in to the house, which shalbe buylde vnto the name of the LORDE. So Dauid made Salomon his sonne kynge ouer Israel, whan he himselfe was olde, and had lyued yngough.

The xxiij. Chapter.

A ND Dauid gathered all the rulers in Israel together, and the prestes & Leuites, to nombre y Leuites from thirtie yeare olde & aboue. And y nombre of the (which were ströge men) frö heade to heade, was eight and thirtie thousande: of whom there were foure & twentie thousande, which dyd their diligence in the worke ouer y house of the LORDE, and sixe thousande officers and Iudges, and foure thousande porters, & foure thousande that songe prayes vnto y LORDE with instrumentes, which he had made to synge prayse with all.

And Dauid made the ordinaunce amonge the children of Leui, namely amöge Gerson, Kahath & Merari. The Gersonites were: Laedan and Simeï. The children of Laedan: the first, Iehiel, Sethan, and Ioel, these thre.

The children of Simeï were: Salomith, Hasiel and Haran, these thre. These were the chefe amonge the fathers of Laedan. These also were the children of Simeï: Iahath, Sina, Ieus and Bria, these foure were Simeïs children also. Iahath was the first, Sina the seconde. As for Ieus and Bria, they had not many childrē, therfore were they couüted but for one fathers house.

† The children of Kahath were: Amram, Iezehar, Hebron and Vsiel, these foure. The childrē of Amram were: Aaron and Moses. † As for Aaron, he was separated, to be sanctified for the Most holy, he & his sonnes for euer, to burne incense before the LORDE, & to mynister and blesse in y name of the LORDE for euermore. And the children of

Ⓒ The children of Merari were: Maheli &
 Musi. The children of Maheli were: Eleasar and Cis. And Eleasar dyed, and had no sonnes but daughters. And the children of Cis their brethren toke them. The children of Musi were: Maheli, Eder and Ieremoth, these thre. These are the children of Leui

 Sabbathes, Newmones and feastes to offre all the burntofferings vnto the LORDE, acordinge to the nombre and ordre, allwaye before the LORDE: to wayte vpon the Tabernacle of witness and of the Sactuary, and vpon their brethrē the children of Aaron, to mynister in the house of the LORDE.

The xvij. Chapter.

Ⓐ THIS was § ordinaunce of the childrē of Aaron. § The children of Aaron were, Nadab, Abihu, Eleasar and Ithamar. But
 Nadab and Abihu dyed before their fathers, and had no children. And Eleasar and Ithamar were prestes. And Dauid ordred them after his maner: Sadoc out of the children of Eleasar, and Ahimelech out of the children of Ithamar, accordinge to their nombre and office. And there were mo chefe stronge men founde amonge the children of Eleasar, then the children of Ithamar. And he ordeyned them after this maner: namely, sixtene out of § childrē of Eleasar to be rulers thorow out their fathers house: & eight of the children of Ithamar thorow out their fathers house. Neuertheles he ordeyned them by lot, because that both the pryncypall of the children of Eleasar and of Ithamar were in §

The children of Merari were: Maheli ⁊ Musi, whose sonne was Iaesia. The childrē of Merari of his sonne Iaesia were: Soham, Sacur ⁊ Ibri. Maheli had Eleasar: for he had no sonnes. Of Cis, the children of Cis were: Ierahmeel and Musi. The children of Musi were, Maheli, Eder and Ieremoth. These are the childrē of ſ Leuites throw out ſ house of their fathers. And the lot was cast for them also besyde their brethren the children of Aaron, in the presence of kynge Dauid and Sadoc and Ahimelech, and before the chefe fathers amonge the prestes ⁊ Leuites, as well for the leest brother as for the chefest amonge the fathers.

The xxvi. Chapter.

AND Dauid with the chefe captaynes sundered to the offices amonge ſ childrē of Assaph, Heman ⁊ Iedithun ſ prophetes with harpes, psalteries ⁊ Cymbales, and they were nombred vnto the worke acordynge to their office. Amonge the childrē of Assaph was Sakur, Ioseph, Nethania, Asarela, childrē of Assaph vnder Assaph which prophecyed besyde ſ kynge. Of Iedithun: The children of Iedithun were, Gedalia, Zori, Iesia, Hasabia, Mathithia (Simei) these sixe vnder their father Iedithun with harpes, whose prophecie was to geue thanks and to praise the LORDE. Of Heman: The children of Heman were Bukia, Mathania, Vsiel, Sebucl, Ierimoth, Hanania, Hanani, Eliatha, Gilthi, Romamthieser, Iaszbaksa, Mallothi, Hothir and Mehesioth. All these were the children of Hemā the kynges Seer in the wordes of God to lyfte vp the horne: for God gaue Heman fourtene sonnes ⁊ thre daughters.

All these were vnder their fathers Assaph Iedithun and Heman, to synge in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries ⁊ harpes, acordynge to the office in the house of God besyde the kynge. And their nombre with their brethren, which were taughte in the songe of the LORDE (euery one hauynge vnderstondynge) was two hundred ⁊ eight and foure score. And they cast the * lottes ouer their office, for the leest as for the greatest, for the master as for the scolar.

And the first Lot fell vpō Ioseph which was of Assaph: the seconde vpō Gedolia with his brethrē and sonnes, of whom there were twolue. The thirde vpō Sacur with his sonnes ⁊ brethrē, of whō there were twolue. The fourth vpon Iezri with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The fyfth vpō Nethania with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The syxte vpon Bukia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The seuenth vpon Iesreela with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The eighte vpon Iesia with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The nyenth vpon Mathania with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The tenth vpon Simei with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eleuenth vpon Asracl with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The twolueth vpon Hasabia with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The thirteenth vpon Subael with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The fourteenth vpon Mathithia with his sonnes ⁊ brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The fyfteenth vpō Ieremoth with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The sixtenth vpon Anania with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue. The seuentēth vpon Iaszbekasa with his sonnes ⁊ brethren, of whom there were twolue. The eighteenth vpon Hanani with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The nyententh vpon Mallothi with his sonnes ⁊ brethren, of whom there were twolue. The twentieth vpon Eliatha with his sonnes and brethrē, of whom there were twolue. The one ⁊ twētieth vpon Hothir with his sonnes ⁊ brethrē of whom there were twolue. The two and twentieth vpon Gidalthi with his sonnes ⁊ brethren, of whom there were twolue. The thre and twentieth vpon Mehesioth with his sonnes and brethren of whom there were twolue. The foure and twētyeth vpon Romamthieser with his sonnes and brethren, of whom there were twolue.

The xxvij. Chapter.

OF the ordinaūces of the dorekeepers. Amonge the Korahytes was Meselema of the children of Assaph. The children of Meselechia were these: the fyrstborne Zacharias, the seconde Iediael, ⁊ thirde Sebadia, the fourth Iathniel, ⁊ fyfth Elaan, the sixte Iohanan, the seuenth Elieonai. The children of Obed Edom were these: the firstborne Semaia, the seconde Iosabad the thirde Ioah, the fourth Sachur, ⁊ fyfth Nethaneel, the sixte Ammiel, the seuenth Isachar, the eight Pegulthai: for God had blessed him. And vnto Semaia his sonne there were sonnes borne also, which bare rule in the house of their fathers: for they were mightie valeaunt men. The children of Semaia were, Athni, Rephael, Obed and Elsabad, whose brethren were valeaunt men, Elihu and Semachia: all these were of the children of Obed Edom. Meselechia had children and brethren which were stronge men, euen eightene.

B Hossa of the children of Merari had children, Simri the chefest: for ⁊ fyrstborne was not there, therfore dyd his father appoynte him to be chefest, the secōde Helchias, ⁊ thirde Tebalia, ⁊ fourth Zacharias. All the children and brethren of Hossa were thirtene.

This is the ordinaunce of the dorekeepers amonge the heades of the valeaunt men in the offyce besyde their brethren, to mynister in the house of the LORDE. And the lot was cast for the small as for ⁊ greate throw out the house of their fathers at euery dore. The lot towarde the East fell vpon Meselechia. And the lot was cast for Zacharias his sonne, which was a man of prudent counsell, ⁊ vnto him it fell towarde the North: But vnto Obed Edom towarde the South, and to his sonnes besyde the house of Esupim. And vnto Supim and Hossa towarde the West by the gate of Salechet in the strete of the burntofferings, where the tabernacles stonde together.

C Towarde the East were there sixe of the Leuites. Towarde the north foure on ⁊ daie tyne. Towarde the south foure on the daye season likewyse. Besyde Esupim two ⁊ two. By Parbar westwarde were there foure in the strete, and two besyde Parbar. These are the ordinaunces of the dorekeepers amonge the children of the Korabites, and the children of Merari. Of the Leuites, was Ahia ouer the treasures of the house of God, and ouer the treasures that were sanctified.

Of the children of Laedan, the childrē of the Gersonites. Of Laedan were these the heades of the fathers, namely ⁊ Iehielites. The children of the Iehielites were, Sethā and his brother Ioel ouer the treasures of the house of the LORDE. Amonge the Amramites, Iezeharites, Hebronites and Vsielites, was Sebul the sonne of Gerson the sonne of Moses, prynce ouer the treasures. His brother Elieser had a sonne Rehabia, whose sonne was Iesaia, whose sonne was Iorā, whose sonne was Sichri, whose sonne was Selomith: the same Selomith and his brethren were ouer all the treasures of the thinges that were halowed, which kinge Dauid halowed, and the pryncipall of the fathers amonge the rulers ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundredes, and rulers in the hoost (of warres and spoyles had they halowed it, to repayre the house of the LORDE) and ouer all ⁊ Samuel the Seer, and Saul the sonne of Cis, ⁊ Abner the sonne of Ner, and Ioab the sonne of Zeru Ia had halowed: what soeuer was sanctified, it was vnder the hande of Selomith and his brethren. Amonge the Iezeharites was Chenaia with his sonnes for the worke without ouer Israel, offycers ⁊ Iudges. Amonge the Hebronites was Hasabia ⁊ his brethren, valeaunt men, a thousande and seuen hundred, ouer the offyces of Israel on this syde Iordane westwarde for all maner worke of the LORDE, and to serue the kinge.

But amonge the Hebronites was Ieria the chefest amonge the Hebronites of his kined amōge the fathers. And search was made amonge them, and in the fortieth yeare of kynge Dauid there were founde valeaūt men at laeser in Gilead, and their brethren mightie men, two thousande and seuen hundred pryncipall fathers, and Dauid set thē ouer the Rubenites, Gaddites, and ouer the halfe trybe of Manasses, for all soch busynes as belonged vnto God and the kynge.

The xxvij. Chapter.

THE children of Israel accordinge to their nombre, were heades of the fathers, and ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, ⁊ officers waytinge vpon the kynge, to go of ⁊ on after their course euery moneth one, in all ⁊ monethes of ⁊ yeare. Euery course had foure ⁊ twentye thousande.

Ouer the first course of the first moneth, was Iasebeam ⁊ sonne of Sabdiel, and vnder his course were foure and twentye thousande. Of the children of Phares was the pryncipall amonge all the chefe captaynes in the first moneth.

Ouer the course of the seconde moneth was Dodai the Ahohite, and Mikloth was the prynce ouer his course. And vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The thirde principall captayne of the thirde moneth, was Benaia the sonne of Ioiada † prest, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande. *This is † Benaia the Worthie amonge thirtie and aboue thirtie, And his course was vnder his sonne Ammi Sabad.

The fourth in † fourth moneth was Asahel the brother of Ioab, and Sabadia his sonne after him, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

B The fifth in the fifth moneth was Samehuth the Iesrahite, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The sixte in the sixte moneth, was Ira † sonne of Ickes the Thecoite, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The seuenth in the seuenth moneth, was Helez the Pelonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twety thousande.

The eight in the eight moneth, was Sibechai the Husathite of † Sarehites, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The nyenth in the nyenth moneth, was Abieser the Anthothite of the childre of Iemini, † vnder his course were foure and twety thousande.

The tenth in the tenth moneth, was Maheraï the Netophatite of the Serahites, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The eleuenth in the eleueth moneth, was Benaia the Pirgathonite of the children of Ephraim, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

The twolueth in the twolueth moneth was Heldai † Netophatite of Athniel, and vnder his course were foure and twenty thousande.

C Ouer the trybes of Israel were these: Amonge the Rubenites was Prynce Elieser the sonne of Sichri. Amonge the Simeonites was Sephatia the sonne of Maecha. Amonge the Leuites was Hasabia the sonne of Kemuel. Amonge the Aaronites was Sadoc. Amōge Iuda was Elihu one of Dauids brethren. Amonge Isachar was Amri the sonne of Michael. Amonge Zabulō was Iesnaia the sonne of Obadia. Amonge Nephtali was Ieremoth the sonne of Asriel. Amonge the children of Ephraim was Hosea the sonne of Asasia. Amonge the halfe trybe of Manasses was Ieol the sonne of Pedaia. Amonge the halfe trybe of Manasses in Gilead was Ieddo the sonne of Zacharias. Amonge Ben Iamin was Iaciel the sonne of Abner. Amonge Dan was Asareel the sonne of Ieroham. These are the princes of the trybes of Israel.

But Dauid toke not the nombre of them that were twenty yeare olde and there vnder: for the LORDE had promysed to multiplye Israel as the starres of the szkie. † Howbeit Ioab the sonne of Zeruia had begonne to nombre them, and performed it not: for there came wrath vpon Israel for the same cause, therefore came not the nombre in to † Cronicles of kynge Dauid.

Ouer the kynges treasures was Asmaueth D the sonne of Adiel. And ouer the treasures in the lōde, in the cities, vyllages and castels was Ionathan the sonne of Vsia. Ouer the huszbandmen to tyll the londe was Esri the sonne of Chelub. Ouer the vynyardes was Sinnei the Ramathite. Ouer the wyne Cellers and treasures of wyne was Sabdi the Siphinite. Ouer the oyle gardens and Molbery trees in the lowe felde, was Baal Hanan the Gaderite. Ouer the treasure of the oyle was Ioas. Ouer † oxen of the pasture at Saron was Sitari the Saronite. Ouer the oxen in the valleyes was Saphath the sonne of Adlai.

Ouer the Canelas was Obil the Ismaelite. Ouer the asses was Iehethia the Meronothite. Ouer the shepe was Iasis the Hagarite. All these were rulers ouer kynge Dauids goodes. Jonathan Dauids vnle was of the counsell a wyse man and a scribe. And Iehiel the sonne of Hachmoni was with the kynges children. † Achitophel also was of the kynges counsell. Husai the Arachite was the kynges frende. After Achitophel was Ioiada † sonne of Benaia and Abiathar. As for Ioab, he was the kynges chefe captayne of warre.

The xxij. Chapter.

AND Dauid gathered vnto Ierusalem all A the rulers of Israel, namely † prynces of the trybes, the rulers ouer the courses, which wayted vpon the kynge, the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, the rulers ouer the goodes and catell of the kyngde and of his sonnes, with the chāberlaines, warryers and valeaunt men. And Dauid the kyngde stode vp vpon his fete, and saide: Heare me my brethren and my people: *I was mynded to buylde an house, where the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE shulde rest, and a fote stole for the fete of oure God, and prepared my selfe for to buylde, But God sayde vnto me: "Thou shalt not buylde an house vnto my name, for thou art a man of warre, and hast shed bloude.

33 †Now hath the LORDE God of Israel chosen me out of all my fathers house, †I shulde be kyngde ouer Israel: for †Iuda hath he chosen to be the Prynce, and in the house of Iuda amonge my fathers children hath he had pleasure vnto me, to make me kyngde ouer all Israel: and amōge all my sonnes (for the LORDE hath geuen me many sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to syt vpon the seate of the kyngdome of the LORDE ouer Israel, and hath sayde vnto me: †Salomon thy sonne shall buylde me an house and my courtes: for I haue chosen him to be my sonne, †I wil be his father, †I wyll stablishe his kyngdome for euer, yf he be constant to do after my commaundementes and lawes, as it is this daye. Now in the sight of all Israel the congregacion of the LORDE, and in the eares of oure God, se that ye obserue and seke all the commaundmētes of the LORDE youre God, that ye maye possesse this good londe and that ye and youre children maie haue †inheritaunce therof for euer.

C And thou my sonne Salomō, knowe thou the God of thy father, and serue him with all thy hert, and with the desyre of thy soule: for the LORDE searcheth all hertes, and vnderstandeth all thoughtes †ymaginacions. Yf thou seke him, thou shalt fynde him: but yf thou forsake him, he shall refuse the for euer. Take hede now, for the LORDE hath chosen the, to buylde an house to be the Sāctuary: be stronge, and make it.

And Dauid gaue Salomon his sonne a patrone of the Porche, and of his house, and of the celles and perlers and ynnerner chābers, and of the house of the Mercyseate, †of all that he had in his mynde, namely of the courte of the LORDES house, and of all the oratories rounde aboute the treasures in †house of God, and of the treasures of such thinges as were halowed, of the ordinaunces of the prestes, and Leuites, and of all †busynesse of the offyces in the house of the LORDE.

D Golde (gaue he him) after †golde weight for all maner of vessels of euery offyce, and all siluer ornaments after the weight for all maner of vessell of euery offyce: and weight for the golden candilstickes and golden lampes, for euery candilstycke and his lampes his weight: likewise for the siluer candilstickes gaue he the weight to the candilstickes †his lampes, acordinge as was required for euery candilstycke. He gaue golde also for †tables of the shewbred, for euery table his weight: and syluer lykwise for the syluer tables. And pure golde for the fleshokes, basens and censors: and for the golden cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the siluer cuppes, vnto euery cuppe his weight: and for the altare of incense his weight, of the most pure golde.

E And a patrone of the charett of the golden Cherubins, that they mighte sprede out them selues, and couer the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE. All this is geuen me in wrytinge of the hande of the LORDE, to make me vnderstonde all the workes of the patrone.

And Dauid sayde vnto Salomō his sonne: Be thou manly and stronge, and make it, feare not, and be not fayntharted, the LORDE God my God shal be with the, and shall not withdrawe his hande, ner fayle the, tyll thou haue fynished euery worke for the seruyce in the house of the LORDE. Beholde, the courses of the prestes and Leuites to all the offyces in the house of God are with the in euery worke, and are willinge, and haue wisdom to all the offyces: and so haue the prynces and all the people for euery thinge that thou hast to do.

The xxx. Chapter.

A ND kyngde Dauid sayde vnto all the congregacion: God hath chosen Salomon one of my sonnes, which yet is yonge and tender. But the worke is greate: for it is not a mans palace, but the LORDE Gods. Yet haue I after all my abilitie prepared vnto the house of God, golde for the vessels of golde, syluer for them of syluer, brasse for them of brasse, yron for thē of yron, wod for them of wod, Onix stones, set Rubyes, †stones of dyuerse coloures, †all precious stones, †

Marble stoues in multitude. Besydes this, for the good wyll  $\hat{y}$  I haue to the house of God, I haue of myne awne proper good thre M. talētes of golde of Ophir,  $\tau$  seuen M. talētes of pure syluer, which I geue vnto the holy house of God, besyde all  $\hat{y}$  I haue prepared, to ouerlaye  $\hat{y}$  walles of the house,  $\hat{y}$  the same which ought to be of golde, maye be of golde:  $\tau$  that it which ought to be of syluer, maye be of syluer: and for all maner of worke by the hande of the craftesmen. And who is now fre wyllinge, to fyll his hande this daye vnto the LORDE?

33 Then were the prynces of the fathers,  $\hat{y}$  prynces of the trybes of Israel, the captaynes ouer thousandes  $\tau$  ouer hundredes, the rulers ouer the kynges busynes, fre wyllinge,  $\tau$  gaue to  $\hat{y}$  mynistracion in the house of God fyue M. talentes of golde, and ten M. guldens, and ten M. talentes of syluer, eightene M. talētes of brasse, and an hundred M. talētes of yron. And by whom so euer were foude stoues, they gaue them to the treasure of the house of the LORDE, vnder the hāde of Iehiel the Gersonite.

And  $\hat{y}$  people were glad that they were fre wyllinge: for they gaue it with a good wyll (euen with all their hert) vnto the LORDE. And Dauid also  $\hat{y}$  kyng reioysed greatly, and prayed God, and sayde before the whole congregacion: Praised be thou O LORDE God of Israel oure father, vnto the belongeth worshippe and power, glory, victory  $\tau$  thanks: for all that is in heauen and earth, is thine: thine is  $\hat{y}$  kyngdome, and thou art exalted aboue all prynces. Thine are riches and honoure before  $\hat{y}$ , thou reignest ouer all, in thy hande consisteth power and might, in thy hāde is it to make euery man greate and stronge.

C Now thāke we the oure God, and prayse  $\hat{y}$  name of thy glory: For who am I? What is my people? that we shulde be able with a fre wyll to offre, as this is done? For of the commeth all, and of thy hande haue we geuen it the: \*For we are but pilgrims  $\tau$  straigers before the, as were all oure fathers. Oure life vpon earth is as a shadowe, and here is no abydinge. O LORDE oure God, all this abundaunce that we haue prepared to buylde the an house vnto thy name, came of thy hande, and is thine altogether. I knowe my God, that thou tryest the hert, and that vnfaynednes is acceptable vnto the: therfore haue I geuē all this with an vnfayned hert, euē with a good wyll, and now haue I had ioye to se thy people (which here are present) offre with a fre wyll vnto the. O LORDE God of oure fathers Abraham, Isaac,  $\tau$  Israel, kepe thou euermore soch purposes and thoughtes in  $\hat{y}$  hertes of thy people,  $\tau$  prepare thou their hertes vnto the. And graunte my sonne Salomon a perfecte hert, that he maye kepe thy cōmaundementes, thy testimonies,  $\tau$  thy statutes, that he maye do all,  $\tau$  buylde this palace, which I haue prepared.

And Dauid sayde vnto the whole cōgregacion: O prayse the LORDE yourre God. And all the cōgregacion prayed  $\hat{y}$  LORDE God of their fathers,  $\tau$  bowed them selues,  $\tau$  worshipped the LORDE  $\tau$  then the kyng, and offred sacrifices vnto the LORDE. And on  $\hat{y}$  nexte morow offred they burntofferynge, a M. bullockes, a M. rāmes, a M. lābes with their drynkofferynge,  $\tau$  plenteously offred they amonge all Israel. And they ate and dranke  $\hat{y}$  same daie before the LORDE with greate ioye, and made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng  $\hat{y}$  seconde tyme, and anoynted him to be  $\hat{y}$  pryncie for the LORDE,  $\tau$  Sadoc to be the prest.

32 Thus sat Salomon vpon the seate of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, kyng in his fathers steade,  $\tau$  prospered. And all Israel obeyed him,  $\tau$  all  $\hat{y}$  rulers  $\tau$  mightie men,  $\tau$  all kyngs Dauids children submytted themselues vnto kyng Salomon. And  $\hat{y}$  LORDE made Salomon excellent  $\tau$  greate in  $\hat{y}$  sighte of all Israel,  $\hat{y}$  and gaue him soch a glorious kyngdome, as none had before him ouer Israel.

So had Dauid now bene kyng ouer all Israel. And  $\hat{y}$  tyme that he was kyng ouer Israel, is fortye yeares: At Hebron reigned he seuen yeare, and at Ierusalem thre  $\tau$  thirtie yeare,  $\tau$  dyed in a good age, full of dayes, riches and honoure. And Salomon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

These actes of kyng Dauid (both  $\hat{y}$  first and last) beholde, they are wyrtten amonge the actes of Samuel the Seer, and amonge the actes of the prophet Nathan, and amōge the actes of Gad the Seer, with all his kyngdome, power and tymes which passed vnder him, both vpon Israel  $\tau$  vpon all the kyngdomes of the earth.

The first Chapter.

AND Salomon the sonne of Dauid was established in his kyngdome, and the LORDE his God was with him, & made him exceedinge greate. And Salomon spake vnto all Israel. to the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, to the Iudges, and to all þy prynces in Israel, and to the chefest fathers, so that they wente (Salomon and the whole congregation with him) vnto the hye place which was at Gibe: * for there was þy Tabernacle of þy witnessse of God, † which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE had made in þy wyldernes. ‡ For Dauid had brought vp the Arke of God from Kiriath Iarim, whan he had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Ierusalem. As for þy brasen altare § which Bezaleel the sonne of Uri the sonne of Hur had made, it was there before the habitation of the LORDE: and Salomon and the congregation soughte God. And Salomon offred a thousande burnt offerynges vpon the brasen altare that stode before the Tabernacle of witnessse.

In the same night appeared God vnto Salomon, and sayde vnto him: Axe, what shal I geue the? And Salomon sayde vnto God: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid, and hast made me kynge in his steade. Now LORDE God, let thy worde that thou hast promysed vnto my father Dauid, be verified, *for thou hast made me kynge ouer a people, which is as many in nōbre as the dust vpon the earth. Graunte me wyszdome therfore and knowlege, † I maye go out and in before this people: for who is able to iudge this greате people of thine?

Then sayde God vnto Salomon: For so moch as thou art so mynded, and hast not desyred riches ner good, ner honoure, ner the soules of thine enemies, ner longe life, but hast requyred wyszdome and knowlege, to iudge my people, ouer whom I haue made the kynge, wyszdome therfore and knowlege be geuen the. Morouer, riches & good and honoure wyll I geue the, so that soch one as thou hath not bene before the amōge the kynges, nether shal be after the.

So came Salomon from the hye place (which was at Gibeon) † vnto Ierusalē from † Tabernacle of witnessse, and reigned ouer Israel. And Salomon gathered him charettes and horsmen, so that he had a thousande and foure hundreth charettes, & twolue thousande horsmen: and those appoynted he to be in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Ierusalem. And the kynge broughte it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer & golde at Ierusalē as stones: and as many Ceders, as the Molberyes trees, that are in the valleyes. And there were horses broughte vnto Salomon out of Egipte, & the kynges marchautes fetched them from Kena for moneye. And they came vp, and broughte out of Egipte a charet for sixe hūdreth syluer pēs, and an horse for an hundreth and fitye. Thus broughte they also vnto all the kynges of the Hethites, and to the kynges of † Syrians.

The ij. Chapter.

AND Salomon thoughte to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE, † an house for his kyngdome: and tolde out thre score and ten thousande men to beare burthenes, and foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpo the mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth officers ouer them. † And Salomon sent vnto Hiram the kynge of Tyre, sayenge: As † thou dydest with my father, & sendest him Cedar trees, to builde an house for to dwell in (euen so do thou with me also.) Beholde, I wyl buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, to sanctifie it, for to burne good incense before him, and allwaye to prepare † shewbred, and burntofferings in the mornyng and in the euenyng, on the Sabbathes & New moues, and solempne feastes of † LORDE oure God euermore for Israel.

And the house that I wyl buylde, shal be greате: for oure God is greater then all goddes. But who is able to buylde him an house? For heauen & the heauens of all heauens maye not cōprehende him. Who am I then, that I shulde buylde him an house? But onely for this intent to burne incense before him?

Sēde me now therfore a wyse mā to worke with golde, syluer, brasse, yron, scarlet, purple, yalow sylke and soch one as can graue carued worke with the wyse men that are with me in Iewry and Ierusalem, whom my father Dauid ordeyned. And sende me tymber of Ceder, pyne tre and costly wodd from Libanus: for I knowe that thy seruauantes can hewe tymber vpon Libanus. And beholde, my seruauantes shalbe with thy seruauantes, to prepare me moch tymber: for the house that I wyl buylde, shalbe greате & maruelous goodly.

And beholde, I wyl geue vnto the carpenters thy seruauantes which hewe the tymber, twētye thousande quarters, of beaten wheate, and twentye thousande quarters of barlye, and twentye thousande Batthes of wyne, and twentye thousande Batthes of oyle.

Then sayde Hiram the kynge of Tyre by wrytinge, and sent it vnto Salomon: Because the LORDE loueth his people, therfore hath he made † to be kynge ouer them. And Hiram sayde morouer: Prayed be † LORDE God of Israel, which made heauen & earth, that he hath geuē kynge Dauid a wyse and prudent sonne, and soch one as hath vnderstondinge to buylde an house vnto the LORDE, † an house for his realme. Therfore sende I now a wyse man that hath vnderstondyng, † euen Hiram Abi (which is the sonne of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was of Tyre) which can worke in golde, syluer, brasse, yron, stone, tymber, scarlet, yalow sylke, lynnē, purple and to carue all maner of thinges, and to make what cōnyng thinge so euer is geuen him, with thy wyse men, and with the wyse men of my lorde kynge Dauid thy father. And Salomon nombred all the straungers in the loude of Israel, accordinge to the nombre whan Dauid his father nombred them: and there were founde an hundreth ʒ fifty thousande, thre thousande and sixe hundreth. And of the same he made thre score and ten thousande bearers of burthens, and foure score thousande hewers vpō ʒ mount, and thre thousande and sixe hundreth ouerseers, which helde ʒ people at their worke.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Salomon beganne to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem vpon the mount Moria, * that was shewed vnto Dauid his father, which Dauid had prepared for the rowme, vpon the corne floore of Arnan the Iebusite. In the seconde daye of the seconde moneth in the fourth yeare of his reigne begane he to buylde. And so layed Salomon the foundacion to buylde the house of God: first the length thre score cubytes, the bredth twente cubites: and the Porche before the wydenes of the house, was twente cubites longe, but the height was an hundreth and twente, and he ouerlayed it on the ynsyde with pure golde.

But the greате house syled he with Pyne tre, and ouerlayed it with the best golde, and made palme trees and throwne worke thereon, and ouerlayed the house with precious stones to beutifye it. As for the golde, it was golde of Paruaim. And the balkes and postes aboue, and the walles, and the dores of it ouerlayed he with golde, and caused Cherubins to be carued on the walles.

He made also the house of the Most holy, whose length was twente cubites accordinge to the wydenesse of the house: and the bredth of it was twente cubites likewyse, and he ouerlayed it with the best golde by sixe hundreth talentes. And for nales he gaue fiftye Sicles of golde in weight, and ouerlayed the chambers with golde. He made also in the house of the most holy, two Cherubins of carued worke, and ouerlayed them with golde: and the length on the wynges of the Cherubins, so that one wyng had fyue cubytes, and touched the wall of the house: and the other wyng had fyue cubytes also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub.

Euen so had one wyng of the other Cherub fyue cubites likewyse, and touched the wall of the house: and his other wyng had fyue cubites also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub: so that these wynges of the Cherubins were spred out twente cubites wyde. And they stode vpō their fete, and their face was turned to the house warde.

He made a vayle also of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and linnenworke, and made Cherubins thereon. And before the house he made two pilers fyue and thirtie cubites longe, and the knoppes aboue thereon, fyue cubytes. And he made throwne worke for the quere, and put it aboue vpon the pilers: and made an hundreth pomgranates, and put them on the wrythren worke. And he set vp the pilers before the temple, the one on the righte honde, and the other on the lefte: and that on the righte honde called he Iachin, and it on the lefte honde called he Boos.

The iiii. Chapter.

HE made a brasen altare also, twente cubytes longe, and twente cubytes brode, and ten cubites hye. † And he made a molten lauer ten cubites wyde frō the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubytes hye. And a metelyne of thirtie cubites mighte comprehend it aboute. And ymages of Bullockes were vnder it. And aboute the lauer (which was ten cubites wyde) there were two rowes of knoppes, ʒ were molten withall.

It stode so vpon the bullockes, that thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue vpon them, and all their hynder partes were on the ynsyde. The thiknesse of it was an hand bredth, and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose. And it conteyned thre thousande Bathes.

And he made ten kettels, wherof he set fyue on the righte hande and fyue on the lefte, to waszshe in them soch thinges as belonged to the burntofferynge, that they might thrust them therin: but ʒ lauer (made he) for the prestes to wash in.

* 1 Par. 22. d.

† 3 Reg. 7. d.

B Ten golden candelstickes made he also as they ought to be, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made ten tables, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made an hundreth basens of golde. He made a court likewise for the prestes, and a greate court, and dores in the court, and ouerlayed  $\frac{1}{2}$  dores with brasse. And the lauer set he on the righte syde towardes the south east. And Hiram made cauldrons, shouels and basens.

So Hiram fynished the worke which he made for kynge Salomon in the house of God: namely the two pilers with the roundels and knoppes aboue vpon both the pilers, and both the wythen ropes to couer both the roundels of  $\frac{1}{2}$  knoppes aboue vpon the pilers, and the foure hundreth pomgranates on both the wythē ropes, two rowes of pomgranates on euery rope, to couer the roundels of the knoppes that were aboue vpon the pilers.

C He made the stoles also and  $\frac{1}{2}$  kettels vpon the stoles, and a lauer, and twolue bullockes there vnder. And pottes, shouels, fleshokes, and all their vessels made Hiram Abif of pure metall for kynge Salomon vnto the house of the LORDE. In the coaste of Iordane dyd the kynge cause them to be molten in thicke earth betwene Suchoth and Zaredatha.

And Salomon made all these vessels which were so many, that the weight of  $\frac{1}{2}$  metall was not to be soughte out. And Salomon made all the ornamentes for the house of God: namely, the golden altare, the tables and the shewbreds thereon, the candelstickes with their lampes of pure golde, to burne before the Quere accordinge to the maner: and the floures and the lampes and the snuffers were of golde, all these were of pure golde.

And the knyues, basens, spones and pottes, were of pure golde. And the intrance and his dores within vnto the Most holy, and the dores of the house of the temple were of golde. Thus was all  $\frac{1}{2}$  worke fynished, which Salomon made in the house of the LORDE.

The v. Chapter

AND Salomon broughte in all  $\frac{1}{2}$  his father Dauid had sanctified,<sup>a</sup> namely, syluer and golde, and all maner of ornamentes, and layed them in the treasures of the house of God. \*The gathered Salomon all the Elders in Israel together, all  $\frac{1}{2}$  heades of the trybes, prynces of the fathers amonge the childre of Israel vnto Ierusalem, to bringe vp the Arke of the couenant of the LORDE out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto the kynge all the men in Israel at the feast, that is in the seuenth moneth, and all  $\frac{1}{2}$  Elders in Israel came.

And  $\frac{1}{2}$  Leuites toke the Arke, and broughte it vp with the Tabernacle of witness, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle: and  $\frac{1}{2}$  prestes and Leuites broughte them vp. As for kynge Salomon and all the cōgregation of Israel that was gathered vnto him before the Arke, they offered shepe and oxen, so many, that no man coule nombre ner reken them.

Thus the prestes broughte the Arke of  $\frac{1}{2}$  couenant of the LORDE vnto hir place in to the quere of the house, euen in to  $\frac{1}{2}$  Most holy vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, so that the Cherubins spred out their wynges ouer the place of the Arke: and the Cherubins couered the Arke and the stauies thereof from aboue. And the stauies were so longe,  $\frac{1}{2}$  the knoppes of them were sene from the Arke before the quere, but on the outsyde were they not sene. And it was there vnto this daye. And there was nothinge in the Arke, saue the two tables, which Moses put therein at Horeb, whan the LORDE made a couenant with the childre of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of Egypte.

And whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary (for all  $\frac{1}{2}$  prestes that were founde, sanctified them selues, because the courses were not kepte) the Leuites with all those that were vnder Asaph, Heman, Iedithun and their children and brethren, beyng clothed in linnen, songe with Cymbales, psalteries and harpes, and stode towardes the east parte of the altare, and an hundreth and twenty prestes with them, which blew with trompettes. And it was, as yf one dyd trumpet and syng, as though a voyce had bene herde of prayeing and geuyng thanks vnto the LORDE.

And whan the voyce arose from  $\frac{1}{2}$  trompettes, cymbales and other instrumentes of musick, and from prayeing the LORDE (because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer) the house of the LORDE was fylled on the ynsyde with a cloude, so  $\text{y}$  the prestes coule not stonde to mynister for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the house of God.

The vi. Chapter.

THEN sayde Salomon: The LORDE sayde,  $\text{y}$  that he wolde dwell in a darek cloude: I haue buylded an house to be an habitacion vnto the:  $\text{t}$  a seate,  $\text{y}$  thou mayest dwell there for euer. And the kyng turned his face, and blessed all the congregacion of Israel: for the whole cōgregacion of Israel stode,  $\text{t}$  he sayde: Praise be the LORDE God of Israel, which promysed by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and with his hande hath fulfilled it, whā he sayde: \* Sēce the tyme that I broughte my people out of the londe of Egipte, I haue chosen no cite in all  $\text{y}$  trybes of Israel, to buylde an house for my name to be there, nether haue I chosen eny man to be pryncce ouer my people of Israel.  $\dagger$  But Ierusalem haue I chosen, for my name to be there:  $\text{t}$  Dauid haue I electe, to be pryncce ouer my people of Israel.

33 And whan my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel, the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid my father: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well: howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shall come out of thy loynes, shal buylde the house vnto my name.

Thus hath  $\text{y}$  LORDE now performed his worde, that he spake: for I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, euen as the LORDE sayde,  $\text{t}$  haue buylded an house vnto the name of  $\text{y}$  LORDE God of Israel,  $\text{t}$  in it haue I put  $\text{y}$  Arke, wherin is the couenaunt of  $\text{y}$  LORDE, which he made with the childrē of Israel.

C And he stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregacion of Israel, and spred out his handes: for Salomon had made a brasen pulpit, and set it in the myddes of the courte, fyue cubites longe, and fyue cubites brode, and thre cubites hye: vpon the same stode he, and fell downe vpon his knees in the presence of the whole cōgregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towarde heauē and sayde:  $\text{O}$  LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether in heauen ner vpon earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for thy seruantes, that walke before the with all their hert. Thou hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruaut: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel, make good vnto my father Dauid thy seruaut, that which thou hast promysed him,  $\text{t}$  sayde: Thou shalt not want a man before me, to syt vpon the seate of Israel:  $\text{y}$  if thy children kepe their waye, so  $\text{y}$  they walke in my lawe, like as thou hast walked before me: Now LORDE God of Israel, let thy worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto Dauid thy seruaut.

34 For thinkest thou that God in very dede dwelleth amonge men vpon earth?  $\text{y}$  Beholde, the heauen and  $\text{y}$  heauens of all heauens maye not cōteyne the: how shulde then this house do it, which I haue buylded? But turne the vnto the prayer of thy seruaut, and to his supplicaciō ( $\text{O}$  LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thankesgeuyng and prayer, which thy seruaut maketh before the, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house daye and night, euen ouer this place (wherin thou saydest thou woldest set thy name) that thou mayest heare the prayer, which thy seruaut shall make in this place. Heare now therefore the intercession of thy seruaut and of thy people of Israel, what so euer they shall desyre in this place: heare thou it from the place of thy habitacion, euē from heauen: and whan thou hearest it, be mercifull.

$\text{y}$  Whan eny mā synneth agaynst his neghboure, and an ooth be put vpon him which he ought to swear, and the ooth commeth before thine altare in this house, then heare thou from heauen, and se  $\text{y}$  thy seruaut haue righte, so that thou rewarde the vngodly, and recōpence him his waye vpon his awne heade, and to iustifye the righteous, and to geue him accordinge to his righteousness.

35 Whan thy people of Israel is smyttē before their enemies (whyle they haue synned agaynst the) and  $\text{y}$  they turne vnto the, and knowlege thy name, and make their prayer and intercession before the in this house, then heare

* When the heauen is shut vp, so that it rayne not (for so moch as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes (whan thou hast brought them lowe) heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy seruantes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest teach them the good waye wherein they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon thy londe which thou hast geuen thy people to possesse.

¶ When a derth, or pestilence, or drouth, or blastinge, or greshopper or catirpiller, is in the londe: Or whan their enemye layeth sege to their portes in the lode, or whan eny other plage or disease happeneth, who so euer thē maketh his prayer or petition amonge eny maner of men, or amonge all thy people of Israel, yf eny man fele his plage and disease, and spredeth out his handes vnto this house, heare thou then from heauen, euen from y<sup>e</sup> seate of thy habitacion, and be mercifull: and geue euery man accordinge to all his wayes, in so moch as thou knowest his hert (for thou onely knowest the hert of the children of men) that they maye feare the, and allwaye walke in thy wayes, as longe as they lyue in the londe, which thou hast geuen vnto oure fathers.

And whan eny straunger which is not of thy people of Israel, commeth out of a farre countrie because of thy greate name, and mightie hande, and out stretched arme, and commeth to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then from heauē, euen from the seate of thy habitacion: and do all for y<sup>e</sup> which that straunger calleth vpo the, that all the nacions vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how y<sup>e</sup> this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Whan thy people go forth to y<sup>e</sup> battayll agaynst their enemies, the waye that thou shalt sende them, and shall praye vnto the: toward the waye of this cite which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou thē their prayer and petition from heauen, and helpe them to their righte.

¶ Whan they synne agaynst the (for there is no man that synneth not) and thou be wroth at them, and geue them ouer before their enemyes, so that they cary them awaye captiue in to a countrie farre or nye, and yf they turne within their hertes in the londe where they are presoners, and so conuerte, and make their intercession vnto the in the londe of their captiuyte, and saye: We haue synned, and done anysse, and haue bene vngodly: and so turne them selues vnto y<sup>e</sup> with all their hert and with all their soule in the londe of their captiuyte, wherein they are presoners: and make their prayer toward the waye of their owne londe, which thou gauest vnto their fathers, and toward the cite which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name: then heare thou their prayer and supplicacion from heauen, euen from the seate of thy dwellynge, and helpe them to their righte, and be mercifull vnto thy people that haue synned agaynst the. My God, let thine eyes now be open, and let thine eares geue hede vnto prayer in this place. ¶ Arise now O LORDE God vnto thy restinge place, thou and the Arke of thy strength. Let thy prestes O LORDE God be clothed with health, and let thy sayentes reioyse ouer this good. LORDE God, turne not awaye the face of thine aoynted: thinke vpon the mercies of thy seruauent Dauid.

The vij. Chapter.

AND whā Salomō had ended his praier, there fell a fyre from heauen, and consumed the burnt offeringe and the other offerings. And the glory of the LORDE fylled the house, so that y<sup>e</sup> prestes coule not go in to the house of the LORDE, while y<sup>e</sup> glory of the LORDE filled y<sup>e</sup> LORDES house. And all the children of Israel sawe the fyre fall downe, and the glory of the LORDE ouer the house: and they fell on their knees with their faces to the ground vpon the pavement, and worshipped, and gaue thanks vnto the LORDE, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer. As for the kyng and all the people, they offred before the LORDE.

|| Psal. 131. a.

For kynge Salomon offred two and twetye thousande bullockes, and an hundreth thousande and twentye thousande shepe, ⁊ so both the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of God.

B But the prestes stode in their watches, ⁊ the Leuites with the muscicall instrumentes of the LORDE, which kynge Dauid had caused to make for to geue thanks vnto the LORDE, (because his mercy endureth for euer) with psalmes of Dauid thorow their hande. And the prestes blew trumpettes ouer agaynst them, and all Israel stode.

And Salomon halowed the myddelmost courte, which was before the house of the LORDE, for there prepared he the burnt-offerynges and the fat of the slayne offeringes: for the brasen altare that Salomon made, might not conteyne all the burntofferings, meatofferings, and the fat.

* And at the same tyme helde Salomon a feast seuen daies longe, and all Israel with him a very greate congregacion, from Hemath vnto the ryuer of Egipte, and on the eight daye helde he a conuocacion. For the dedication of the altare helde they seuen daies, and the feast seuen dayes also.

But on the thre and twentyeth daye of the seuenth moneth he let the people go vnto their tentes ioyfull and with mery hertes because of all the good, that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid, vnto Salomō, and to his people of Israel.

C Thus fynished Salomō the house of § LORDE, and the kinges house, and all § came in his hert to make in the house of the LORDE, and in his awne house, prosperously. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon in the nighte season, and sayde vnto him: I haue herde thy prayer ⁊ and chosen this place vnto my selfe for an house of sacrificee.

Beholde, whan I shut the heauē so § it raine not, or commaunde the greshopper to cōsume the londe, or cause a pestilence to come amonge my people, to humble my people, which is named after my name: and yf they praye, and seke my face, and turne from their euell wayes, thē wyl I heare them from heauen, and wyl forgeue their sinne, and heale their londe. So shal myne eyes now be open, and myne eares shal be attente vnto prayer in this place. Thus haue I now chosen this house, and sanctified it, that my name maye be there for euer: and myne eyes and my hert shal allwaye be there.

And yf thou walke before me, as thy father Dauid walked, so that thou do all that I commaunde the, and kepe myne ordinaūces and lawes, then wyl I stablishe the seate of thy kyngdome, acordyng as I promysed thy father Dauid, and sayde: Thou shalt not wante a man to be lorde ouer Israel. But yf ye turne backe, and forsake myne ordynaunces and commaundemētes which I haue layed before you, and so go youre waye, and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, thē wyl I rote ⁊ you out of my londe that I haue geuen you: and this house which I haue sanctified vnto my name, wil I cast awaye out of my presence, and geue it ouer to be a byworde and fabell amonge all nacions. And euery one that goeth by, shall be astonnyed at this hye house, and shall hyse at it, and saye: § Wherefore hath the LORDE dealte thus with this londe and with this house? Then shall it be sayde: Euen because they haue forsaken the LORDE God of their fathers (which brought them out of the londe of Egipte) ⁊ haue cleued vnto other goddes, ⁊ worshipped them, and serued thē: therefore hath he brought all this euell vpon thē.

The viij. Chapter.

AND after twentye yeares (wherin Salomon buylded the house of the LORDE and his awne house) he buylded the cyties also which Hiran gaue vnto Salomon, and caused the children of Israel to dwell therein. And Salomon wente vnto Hemath Zoba, and made it stronge, and buylded Thadmor in the wyldernes, and all the cornecities which he buylded in Hemath. He buylded the vpper and lower Bethoron likewise, so that they were stronge cities with walles, portes and barres. And Baelath, and all the cornecities which Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes and of the horse men, and all that Salomon had lust to buylde, both at Ierusalem and vpon Libanus, and in all the londe of his domynion.

All the remnaunt of the people of the Hethites, Amorites, Pheresites, Heuites and Iebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, and their children which they had lefte behynde them in the londe, (whom the children of Israel had not vtterly destroyed) those dyd Salomon make trybutaries vnto this daye. As for the children of Israel, Salomon made no bondmen of them vnto his worke, but they were men of warre, and chefe captaynes, and ouer his charettes & horsmen. And the chefe of kynge Salomons officers were two hundreth and fytie, which ruled the people.

And Salomon caused Pharaos daughter to be fetcht vp out of the cite of Dauid, in to the house that he had buylded for her: for he sayde: My wyfe shall not dwell in the house of Dauid the kynge of Israel, for it is sanctified. in as moch as y<sup>e</sup> Arke of the LORDE is come in to it.

Then offred Salomon burntofferings vnto the LORDE vpon the LORDES altare, which he had buylded before the porehe, euery one vpon his daye to offre after the comaundemente of Moses, on the Sabbathes, Newmones & at the appoynted seasons of the yeaere, euen thre tymes, namely in y<sup>e</sup> feast of vneleued bred, in the feast of wekes, & in the feast of Tabernacles.

And he set the prestes in ordre to their ministracion *acordynge as Dauid his father had appoynted, and the Leuites in their offcees, to geue thanks and to mynister in the presence of the prestes, euery one vpon his daye. And the dorekeepers in their courses, euery one at his dore, for so had Dauid the mā of God commaunded.

And they departed not from the kynges commaundement ouer the prestes and Leuites in euery matter and in the treasures. Thus was all Salomons busynesse made ready, from the daye that the foundation of the LORDES house was layed, tyll it was fynished, so that the house of the LORDE was all prepared.

Then wente Salomon vnto Ezeon Geber, and vnto Eloth by the See syde in the londe of Edomea. And Hiram sent him shippes by his seruauantes which had knowlege of the See, and they wente with Salomōs seruauantes vnto Ophir, and fetcht from thence foure hundreth and fytie talentes of golde, and broughte it vnto kynge Salomon.

The ix. Chaptr.

AND whan the quene of rich Arabia herde the fame of Salomon, she came with a very greate tryne to Ierusalem (with Camels that bare spyes and golde, and precious stones) to proue Salomon with darke sentences. And whan she came vnto Salomon, she spake vnto him all that she had deuysed in hir mynde. And the kynge tolde her all hir matters, & Salomon had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her.

And whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe the wysdome of Salomon, and y<sup>e</sup> house that he had buylded, the meates of his table, the dwellinges of his seruauantes, y<sup>e</sup> offices of his mynisters and their garmentes, & his butlers and their apparell, and his parler where he wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, she coulde no longer refrayne. And she sayde vnto the kynge: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaueoure and of thy wysdome: howbeit I wolde not beleue their wordes, tyll I came my selfe, & sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe of thy greate wysdome hath not bene tolde me: there is more in y<sup>e</sup> then the fame that I haue herde. Hapyc are thy men, and happie are these thy seruauantes, y<sup>e</sup> allwaye stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Prayed be the LORDE thy God, which had soch pleasure vnto the, that he hath set the vpon his seate to be kynge vnto the LORDE thy God. Because thy God loueth Israel, to set them vp for euer, therefore hath he ordeyned y<sup>e</sup> to be kynge ouer them, that thou shuldest mayntayne iustice and equyte.

And she gaue y<sup>e</sup> kynge an hundreth and twentye talentes of golde, & very moch spyce & precious stones. There were no mo soch spyes as these that the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomō. And Hirans seruauantes and the seruauantes of Salomon, which broughte golde from Ophir, broughte costly tymber also & precious stones.

And of the same costly tymber dyd Salomon cause to make staires in the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. There was no soch tymber sene before in the londe of Iuda. But kynge Salomon gaue the Quene of riche Arabia all that she desyred and axed, & moch more then she had broughte vnto the kynge. And she returned, and departed in to hir londe with hir seruauantes.

The golde that was broughte vnto Salomon

* 1 Par. 10. d. + 3 Reg. 9. e.

* 3 Re. 10. a. Matt. 12. a.

in one yere, was sixe hundreth and sixe and thre score talentes, besydes that y chapmen and marchauntes broughte. And all the kynges of the Arabians, and the lordes in y londe broughte golde and syluer vnto Salomon. Of the which kyngye Salomon made two hundreth speares of beaten golde, so y sixe hundreth peces of beaten golde came vpo one speare: ⁊ thre hundreth shildes of beaten golde, so that thre hundreth peces of beaten golde came to one shyld: and the kyngye put the in the house of the wod of Libanus.

D And the kyngye made a greate seate of Yuery, and ouerlaied it with pure golde: and the seate had sixe steppes, and a folestole of golde festened vnto the seate, and it had two leanyngye postes vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode beside the leanyngye postes, and there stode twolue Lions vpo the syxe steppes on both the sides. In all realmes hath not soch one bene made.

And all kyngye Salomons drynkyngye vessels were of golde, and all the vessels of the house of the wod of Libanus, were of pure golde: for syluer was rekened nothinge in Salomons tyme. For the kynges shippes wente vpon the See with the seruauantes of Hira, ⁊ came once in thre yere, and brought golde, syluer, Yuery, Apes and Pecoakes.

Thus was kyngye Salomon greater then all the kynges vpon earth, in riches and wysdome. And all the kynges of y earth desired (to se) Salomons face, and to heare his wysdome, which God had geuen him in his hert. And they brought him yearly euery mā his present: Iewels of siluer and golde, raynēt, harnesse, spyces, horses and Mules.

E And Salomon had foure thousande charet-horses, ⁊ and twolue thousande horsmen, and put them in the charet cities, and with the kyngye at Ierusalem. And he was lorde ouer all the kynges from the water vnto the londe of the Philistynes, and to the coaste of Egipte. And the kyngye brought it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Ierusalem as stones: and as many Ceders, as there were Molbery trees in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto him out of Egipte, and out of all countres.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, both of his first and of his last, beholde, it is writte in the Cronicles of the prophet Nathan, and in the prophecies of Abia of Silo, ⁊ in y actes of Ieddi the Seer against Ieroboā y sonne of Nebat. And Salomō reigned at Ierusalē ouer all Israel fortie yeres. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, ⁊ was buried in the cyte of Dauid his father. And Roboā his sonne was kige i his steade.

The x. Chapter.

ROBOAM wente vnto Sichem: for all Israel was come vnto Sichem: to make him kinge. And whan Ieroboā the sonne of Nebat herde that, which was in Egipte (*whither he was fled for kyngye Salomon) he came agayne out of Egipte. And they sent for him and called him. And Ieroboam came with all Israel, and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made oure yocke greuouus: make thou lighter now y harde bondage of thy father, and y heuy yocke that he layed vpon vs, and we wyl submytte oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Come to me agayne ouer thre dayes. And y people wente their waye.

And Roboam the kyngye axed coucell at the Elders, which had stonde before Salomon his father whyle he lyued, and he sayde: What is youre counsell, that I maye geue this people answere? They spake vnto him, and sayde: Yf thou be louyngye vnto this people, and deale gently with them, and geue them good wordes, then shal they allwaye be obedient vnto the. Neuerthelesse he forsoke the counsell of the Elders that they had geuen him, and toke counsell at y yonge men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him. And he sayde vnto the: What is youre counsell, that we maye answere this people, which haue spoken vnto me, and saide: Make oure yock lighter, y thy father layed vpon vs? The yongemen y were growne vp with him, spake vnto him, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the people, that haue talked with the ⁊ spoken: Thy father made oure yock to heuy, make thou oure yock lighter, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My litle finger shalbe thicker then my fathers loynes. Yf my father hath layed an heuy yock vpon you, I wyl make youre yock the more. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpions.

Now whan Ieroboam and all the people came to Roboam on the thirde daye (accordynge as  $\hat{y}$  kinge sayde: Come to me agayne on the thirde daie) the kynge gaue the an harde answer. And Roboam the kynge forsoke  $\hat{y}$  counsell of the Elders,  $\tau$  spake vnto the after  $\hat{y}$  yonge mens counsell,  $\tau$  sayde: Yf my father haue made youre yock to heuy, I wil make it yet heuyer. My father chastened you with scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpions. Thus the kynge folowed not  $\hat{y}$  peoples minde: for so was it determyned of God,  $\hat{y}$   $\hat{y}$  LORDE might stablishe his worde,  $\tau$  which he spake by Ahia of Silo, vnto Ieroboam  $\hat{y}$  sonne of Nebat. But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not consent vnto them,  $\hat{y}$  people answered the kynge, and sayde: What porcion haue we then in Dauid, or inheritance in the sonne of Isai? Let every man of Israel get him to his tent. Loke thou now to thy house Dauid. And all Israel wente vnto their tentes, so that Roboam reigned but ouer the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And Roboam sent forth Adoram the rentgatherer, but the children of Israel stoned him to death. And kynge Roboam strengthened himselfe vpon his charet, to flye vnto Ierusalem. Thus fell Israel awaie fro the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

The xi. Chapter.

AND whan Roboam came to Ierusalem, he gathered together the house of Iuda and Ben Iamin (euen an hūdreth and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) to fyghte agaynst Israel, that they mighte brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam. But  $\hat{y}$  worde of the LORDE came to Semaia the man of God, and sayde: Speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Iuda, and to all Israel  $\hat{y}$  are in Iuda and Ben Iamin, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal not go vp. ner fyght agaynst youre brethren: let every man go home agayne, for this is my dede. They herkened vnto the wordes of  $\hat{y}$  LORDE, and wete not forth agaynst Ieroboam. As for Roboam, he dwelt at Ierusalem, and buylded vp the stronge cities in Iuda, namely Bethleē, Etan, Tekoa, Bethzur, Socho, Adullā, Gath, Maresa, Siph, Adoraim, Laches, Aseka, Zarega, Aialon, and Hebron (which were the fensed cities in Iuda and Ben Iamin)  $\tau$  he made them stronge, and set prynces therin,  $\tau$ prouyded them of vytayles, oyle and wyne, and in all cities prepared he shildes and speares, and made them very stronge. And Iuda and Ben Iamin were vnder him.

The Prestes and Leuites also came vnto him out of Israel and from all the borders therof, And lefte their suburbs  $\tau$  possession, and came to Iuda vnto Ierusalem: for Ieroboam and his sonnes expelled them, that they shulde not execute the offyce of  $\hat{y}$  presthode vnto  $\hat{y}$  LORDE. But for himselfe he fōūded prestes to  $\hat{y}$  hye places,  $\tau$  to feldedeuels  $\tau$  calues, which he caused to make. And after them came there men out of all the trybes of Israel, which gaue ouer their herthes to seke  $\hat{y}$  LORDE God of Israel,  $\tau$  came to Ierusalem for to offre vnto the LORDE God of their fathers. And so strengthened they  $\hat{y}$  kingdome of Iuda, and matayned Roboam the sonne of Salomon thre yere longe: for they walked in  $\hat{y}$  waye of Dauid  $\tau$  Salomon thre yeres.

And Roboam toke Mahelath  $\hat{y}$  daughter of Ieremoth  $\hat{y}$  sonne of Dauid to wife,  $\tau$  Abihail the daughter of Eliab  $\hat{y}$  sonne of Isai, which bare him these sonnes: Ieus, Semaria  $\tau$  Saham. After her toke he Maechā the daughter of Absalom, which bare him Abia, Athai Sisa and Selomith. But Roboam loued Maechā the daughter of Absalom better then all his wyues  $\tau$  concubynes: for he had eightene wyues and thre score cōcubynes, and begat eight  $\tau$  twentye sonnes, and thre score doughters. And Roboam set Abia the sonne of Maechā to be heade and prynce amonge his brethren: for he thoughte to make him kynge: for he was wyse,  $\tau$  more mightie then all his sonnes in all the countrees of Iuda  $\tau$  Ben Iamin, and in all the stronge cities. And he gaue them plenteousnes of fode, and desyred many wyues.

The xij. Chapter.

BUT whā the kyngdome of Roboam was confirmed and stablyshed, he forsoke the lawe of the LORDE  $\tau$  all Israel with him. And in the fyfth yere of Roboam wete Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp agaynst Ierusalem (for they had transgressed agaynst the LORDE) with a thousande and two hundreth charrettes, and with thre score thousande horsmen, and the people were innumerable that came with him out of Egipte, Libya, Suchim  $\tau$  out of Ethiopia, and he wanne the strōge cities that were in Iuda, and came to Ierusalem.

Then came Semaia & prophet vnto Roboam and to & rulers of Iuda (which were gathered together at Ierusalem for Sisack) & sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth & LORDE: Ye haue lefte me, therefore haue I lefte you also in Sisacks haude. Thē the rulers in Israel with the kynge submytted them selues, and sayde: The LORDE is righteous.

B But whā the LORDE sawe & they hūbled them selues, & worde of the LORDE came to Semaia, & sayde: They haue humbled them selues, therefore wyl I not destroye them, but I wyl geue them a litle delyueraunce, that my indignacion fall not vpon Ierusalem by Sisack: for they shalbe subdued vnto him, & they maye knowe what it is to serue me, & to serue the kyngdomes of the worlde.

Thus wōte Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp to Ierusalem, & toke the treasures in the house of the LORDE, & the treasures in the kynges house, and caried all awaye, and toke the shyldes of golde, *that Salomon caused to make: in steade wherof kynge Roboā made shyldes of stele, and commytted thē vnto the chiefe fotemen, which kepte the dore of the kynges house. And as oft as the kynge wente in to the house of the LORDE, & fote men came & bare them, & brought them againe in to & fote mens chāber. And for so much as he submytted himselfe, & wrath of & LORDE turned frō him, so that all was not destroyed: for there was yet some good in Iuda.

C Thus was Roboam the kynge established in Ierusalem, and reigned. One and fortye yeare olde was Roboam whā he was made kynge, and reigned seuentene yeare at Ierusalem in the cite, †which the LORDE had chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, to set his name there. His mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse: and he did euell, and prepared not his hert to seke the LORDE.

These actes of Roboam, both fyrst and last, are written in the actes of Semaia the prophet, & of Iddo the Seer, and are noted, & so are the warres that Roboam and Ieroboam had together as longe as they lyued. And Roboam fell on slepe with his fathers and was buryed in the cite of Dauid, & Abia his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xiiij. Chapter.

A IN the eighteenth yeare of kynge Ieroboam, was Abia kynge in Iuda, & reigned thre yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Michaia the daughter of Vriēl of Gibeā. And there was warre betwene Abia and Ieroboam. And Abia prepared himselfe to the battayll with foure hūdreth thousande stronge chosen men of warre. But Ieroboam made himselfe ready to fight agaynst him with eight hundreth thousande chosen men of strength.

And Abia gatt him vp vpon the byll Zemaraim, which lyeth vpon mount Ephraim and sayde: Herken vnto me thou Ieroboam and all Israel: Knowe ye not that the LORDE God of Israel hath geuen Dauid & kyngdome of Israel for euer, vnto him and his sonnes with a Salt couenant? But Ieroboā the sonne of Nebat, the seruauit of Salomon Dauids sonne, gat him vp & fell awaye from his lorde. And there resorted vnto him vagaboundes and children of Belial, and haue strengthened them selues against Roboā the sonne of Salomō: for Roboam was but yonge and of a fearfull hert, and coulde not resiste them.

Now thinke ye to set youre selues against B the kyngdome of the LORDE amonge the sonnes of Dauid, for so much as there is so greate a multitude of you, & haue & golden calues †& Ieroboam made you for goddes. †Haue ye not expelled the prestes of the LORDE the children of Aaron and the Leuites? and haue made you prestes of youre awne, euen as the people of the londes? Who so euer commeth to fyll his hande with a yonge bullocke and seuen rammes, shal be preste vnto them that are not goddes.

But with vs is & LORDE oure God, whō we forsake not: and the prestes that minister vnto the LORDE, the children of Aaron and the Leuites in their busines, and euery mornynge and euery euenynge kyndle they the burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, and the swete incense, and prepare the shewbred vpō the pure table, and the golden candilsticke with his lampes, to be kyndled euery euenynge: for we wayte vpō the LORDE oure God.

As for you, ye haue forsaken him. Beholde, C God is the captayne of oure hoost. and with vs are his prestes, and the blowynge trompettes, to trompe agaynst you. Ye children of Israel, fight not agaynst the LORDE God of youre fathers: for ye shal not prospere.

Neuertheles Ieroboam made a preuy watch on euery syde, to come vpon them behynde, so that they were before Iuda, and  $\text{f}$  preuy watch behynde. Now whā Iuda turned them, beholde, there was battayll before thē  $\text{t}$  behynde. Then cryed they vnto  $\text{f}$  LORDE,  $\text{t}$  the prestes tromped with the trompettes,  $\text{t}$  whā euery man in Iuda gaue a shoute, God plagued Ieroboam and Israel before Abia and Iuda. And the children of Israel fled before Iuda, and God gaue them in to their handes, so that Abia  $\text{t}$  his people dyd a greate slaughter vpon them, and there fell wounded of Israel fyue hundreth thousande chosen men.

D Thus were the children of Israel subdued at that tyme, but the children of Iuda were comforted, for they put their trust in  $\text{f}$  LORDE God of their fathers. And Abia folowed vpon Ieroboam, and wanne cities frō him, Bethel with the vyllages therof, Iesana with hir vyllages, and Ephron with the vyllages therof, so that Ieroboam came nomore to strength, as longe as Abia lyued. And the LORDE smote him that he dyed.

Now whan Abia was strengthened, he toke fourtene wyues, and begat two and twente sonnes and sixtene daughters. What more there is to saye of Abia, and of his wayes and his doynge, it is wysiten in the storye of the prophet Iddo. And Abia fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buryed him in  $\text{f}$  cite of Dauid: and Asa his sonne was kynge in his steade. In his tyme was the londe in rest ten yeares.

The xiiij. Chapter.

AND  $\text{a}$  Asa dyd that which was good  $\text{t}$  right in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and put awaye the straunge altares, and the hye places, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and sayde vnto Iuda, that they shulde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, and to do after  $\text{f}$  lawe and commaundementes. And the hye places and ymages put he awaye out of all the cities of Iuda: and the kyngdome had rest before him. And he builded strōge cities in Iuda, whyle the londe was in quietnes,  $\text{t}$  whyle there was no warre agaynst him in the same yeares: for  $\text{f}$  LORDE gaue him rest.

33 And he sayde vnto Iuda: Let vs buylde vp these cities, and fense them rounde aboute with walles and towres, with portes and barres, while the londe is yet with vs: for we haue soughte the LORDE oure God, and he hath geuen vs rest on euery syde. So they buylde, and it wente prosperously with thē. And Asa had an hoost of mē which bare shildes  $\text{t}$  speares, out of Iuda thre C. thousande, and out of Ben Iamin two hūdreth and foure score thousande, that bare shyldes  $\text{t}$  coulede shute with bowes, and all these were mightie stronge men.

But Serah the Moryan came out against C thē with an hoost of a thousande times a thousande, and with thre hundreth charettes, and came vnto Maresa. And Asa wente forth agaynst him. And they prepared them selues to the battayll in the valley Zephata beside Maresa. And Asa called vpon  $\text{f}$  LORDE his God and sayde: \*LORDE, it is no differēce with  $\text{f}$ , to helpe by fewe or by many. Helpe vs O LORDE oure God: for oure trust is in the,  $\text{t}$  in thy name are we come forth against this multitude. LORDE oure God, let no man preuayle agaynst the.

And the LORDE smote the Moriās before Asa and before Iuda, so that they fled. And Asa with  $\text{f}$  people that was by him, folowed vpon them vnto Gerar. And the Moriās fell, so that none of them remained alyue, but were smytten before the LORDE and before his hoost. And they caried excedeinge moch spoyle from thence. And he smote all the cyties aboute Gerar, for a fearfulnessse of the LORDE came vpon them. And they spoyled all the cities, for there was moch spoyle in them. They smote the tentes of the catell also, and toke many shepe and Camels, and came agayne to Ierusalem.

The xv. Chapter.

AND the sprete of God came vpō Asarias A the sonne of Obed, which wente forth to Asa, and sayde vnto him: Heare me Asa and all Iuda  $\text{t}$  Ben Iamin: The LORDE is with you, whyle ye are with him: and yf ye seke him, he wylbe founde of you. But yf ye forsake him, he shal forsake you also. Neuertheles there shal be many dayes in Israel, that there shalbe no true God, no prest to teach,  $\text{t}$  no lawe. And whan they turne in their trouble vnto the LORDE God of Israel, and seke him, he shalbe founde.

$\text{t}$  Ose. 3. b.

At that tyme shall it not be well with him that goeth out and in: for there shal be greave ypproures vpon all them y dwell on the earth. For one people shall all to smyte another, & one cite another: for God shal vex them with all maner of trouble. But be ye stronge, and let not youre handes be feble: for youre worke hath his reward.

¶ Whan Asa herde these wordes, and the propheciege (of Asarias the sonne) of Obed the prophet, he toke a corage vnto him, and put awaye the abhominacions out of all y londe of Iuda and Ben Iamin, and out of the cities that he had wonne vpon mount Ephraim: and renued the LORDES altare, which stode before the porche of the LORDE. And all Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasses and Simeon: for there fell many vnto him out of Israel, whan they sawe that the LORDE his God was with him. And they resorted vnto Ierusalem in the thirde moneth of the fyfteenth yere of the reigne of Asa, and the same daye offred they vnto the LORDE of the spoyle that they had broughte, seuen hūdreth oxen, and seuen thousande shepe.

¶ And they entred in to y couenaunt, that they wolde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, with all their hert and with all their soule. And who so euer wolde not seke y LORDE God of Israel, shulde dye, both small & greate, both man and woman: and they sware vnto the LORDE with loude voyce, with shoutinge, with trompettes and with shawmes. And all Iuda were glad ouer the ooth: for they had sworne with all their hert, and they soughte him with a whole wyll: and he was founde of them, and the LORDE gaue them rest on euery syde.

¶ And Asa y kyng put downe his mother from the mynistracion, that she had founded in the groue vnto Miplezeth. And Asa rote out hir Miplezeth, and beate it in sunder, and brent it by the broke Cedron. But the hye places were not put downe out of Israel. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte as longe as he lyued. And loke what his father had halowed, and that he him selfe had halowed, he broughte it in to y house of God, syluer, golde and ornamētes. And there was no warre vnto the fyue and thirtieth yere of the reigne of Asa.

The xvi. Chapter.

IN the sixe and thirtieth yere of y reigne of Asa, "wente Baesa the kyng of Israel vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, to let Asa the kyng of Iuda, y he shulde not go out and in: But Asa toke forth the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and the syluer and golde in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Benadad y kyng of Syria, which dwelt at Damascon, and caused to saye vnto him: There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, betwene my father and thy father, therefore haue I sent y syluer and golde, that thou mayest breake y couenaunt with Baesa the kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadad herkened vnto kyng Asa, and sent his hoost agaynst the cities of Israel, which smote Eion, Dan and Abel Maimi, and all the corne cities of Nephtali. Whan Baesa herde that, he lefte of from buyldinge Rama, and ceased from his worke. But kyng Asa toke all Iuda vnto him, and caried awaye y stones and tymber (wherwith Baesa buylded) and he buylded Geba & Mizpa withall.

At the same tyme came Hanani the Seer vnto Asa the kyng of Iuda, and sayde vnto him: Because thou hast trusted vnto the kyng of Syria, and not put thy trust in the LORDE thy God, therefore is the power of the kyng of Syria escaped thy hāde. *Were not the Moryans and Lybians a greate multitude with exceedinge many charettes and horsmen? Yet gaue the LORDE them in to thy hande, whan thou dyddest put thy trust in him: for the eyes of the LORDE loke rounde aboute all londes, to strength them y are in him with all their hert. Thou hast done vn-wysely, therefore shalt thou haue warre from hence forth. But Asa was wroth at y Seer, and put him in preson: for he murmured with him ouer this thinge. And Asa oppressed certayne of the people at y same tyme.

These actes of Asa both first and last, behold, they are wrytten in the boke of y kynges of Iuda & Israel. And Asa was diseased in his fete in the nyne and thirtieth yere of his reigne, and endured ther ouer. †Nether soughte he the LORDE in his sicknesse, but trusted vnto Phisicians. Thus fell Asa on slepe with his fathers, & dyed in the one and fortieth yere of his reigne, & was buried in his awne sepulchre which he had caused to be grauen for him selfe in the cite of Dauid. And they layed him vpon his bed, which was fylled with swete odoures & all maner of spices (made after  $\text{f}$  Apotecaries craft) and made a very great burnynge.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat his sonne was kynge in his steade, & waxed mightie against Israel. And he put men of warre in all the stronge cities of Iuda, and set officers in the londe of Iuda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had wonne. And the LORDE was with Iosaphat: for he walked in the olde wayes of his father Dauid, & soughte not Baalim, but the God of his father, & walked in his commaundementes, & not after the workes of Israel: therfore dyd the LORDE stablyshe the kyngdome in his hāde. And all Iuda gaue presentes vnto Iosaphat, & he had greate riches & worshippe. And whan his hert was coraged in the wayes of the LORDE, he put downe styll the hye places and groues out of Iuda.

In the thirde yere of his reigne sent he his prynces, Benhail, Obadia, Zacharias, Nethaneel & Michaia, to teach in the cities of Iuda: & with them the Leuites: Semaia, Nethania, Sebadia, Asahel, Semiramoth, Ionathan, Adonia, Tobia & Tob Adonia, & with them  $\text{f}$  prestes Elisama & Ioram. And they taughte in Iuda, & had the boke of the lawe of  $\text{f}$  LORDE with them, & wente aboute in all  $\text{f}$  cities of Iuda, & taughte the people.

And the feare of the LORDE came vpon all  $\text{f}$  kyngdomes in the countrees that laye aboute Iuda, so  $\text{f}$  they foughte not agaynst Iosaphat. And the Philistynes broughte presentes and trybute of syluer vnto Iosaphat. And the Arabians broughte him seuen thousande and seuen hundredth rammes, and seuen thousande and seuen hundredth he goates. Thus increased Iosaphat, & grewe euer greater. And he buylded castels and corne cities in Iuda. And dyd moch in the cities of Iuda, and had valeaunt and mightie men at Ierusalem.

C And this was  $\text{f}$  ordinance thorow out the house of their fathers, which were rulers ouer the thousandes in Iuda. Adna a captayne, & with him were thre hūdreth thousande mightie men. Nexte vnto him was Iohanan  $\text{f}$  chefe, and with him were two hundredth and foure score thousande. Nexte him was Amasia the sonne of Sichri the fre wyllinge of  $\text{f}$  LORDE, and with him were two hundredth thousande valeaunt men. Of the children of Ben Iamin was Eliada a mightie man, and with him were two hundredth thousande ready with bowes and shyldes. Nexte vnto him was Iosabad, and with him were an hundredth and foure score thousande harnessed men of warre. All these wayted vpon the kynge, besydes those that the kynge had layed in the strōge cities thorow out all Iuda.

The xviij. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat had greate riches and worshippe, and made frendshippe with Achab. \* And after two yeaes wente he downe to Achab vnto Samaria. And Achab caused many shepe and oxen to be slayne for him and for  $\text{f}$  people that were with him. And he counceiled him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Achab the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat the kynge of Iuda: Go with me vnto Ramoth in Gilead. He sayde vnto him: I am as thou, and my people as thy people, we wyll go with the vnto the battayll.

But Iosaphat sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Axe counsell (I praye the) this daye at the worde of the LORDE. And the kynge of Israel gathered the prophetes together, euen foure hundredth men, & saide vnto them: Shal we go to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp, God shal deluyr it in to the kynges hāde. But Iosaphat sayde: Is there not yet one prophet of the LORDE here,  $\text{f}$  we maye axe at him? The kynge of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: There is yet one man, at whom we maye axe of  $\text{f}$  LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but allwaye euell, namely Micheas the sonne of Iemla. Iosaphat sayde: Let not the kynge saye so. And the kynge of Israel called one of his chamberlaynes, & sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Iemla.

In the thirde yere of his reigne sent he his prynces, Benhail, Obadia, Zacharias, Nethaneel & Michaia, to teach in the cities of Iuda: & with them the Leuites: Semaia, Nethania, Sebadia, Asahel, Semiramoth, Ionathan, Adonia, Tobia & Tob Adonia, & with them  $\text{f}$  prestes Elisama & Ioram. And they taughte in Iuda, & had the boke of the lawe of  $\text{f}$  LORDE with them, & wente aboute in all  $\text{f}$  cities of Iuda, & taughte the people. And the feare of the LORDE came vpon all  $\text{f}$  kyngdomes in the countrees that laye aboute Iuda, so  $\text{f}$  they foughte not agaynst Iosaphat. And the Philistynes broughte presentes and trybute of syluer vnto Iosaphat. And the Arabians broughte him seuen thousande and seuen hundredth rammes, and seuen thousande and seuen hundredth he goates. Thus increased Iosaphat, & grewe euer greater. And he buylded castels and corne cities in Iuda. And dyd moch in the cities of Iuda, and had valeaunt and mightie men at Ierusalem.

C And this was  $\text{f}$  ordinance thorow out the house of their fathers, which were rulers ouer the thousandes in Iuda. Adna a captayne, & with him were thre hūdreth thousande mightie men. Nexte vnto him was Iohanan  $\text{f}$  chefe, and with him were two hundredth and foure had made him hornes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou puszhe at the Syrians, tyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophetes prophecied likewyse, ⁊ sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, and thou shalt prospere, and ſ LORDEshal delyuer it in to the kynges hande.

And the messauger that wente to call Micheas, spake vnto him, and sayde: Beholde, ſ wordes of the prophetes are with one acorde good before the kyng: let thy worde (I praye the) be as one of theirs, and speake thou good also. But Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, loke what my God sayeth vnto me, ſ wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Micheas, shulde we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to the battayll, or shulde we let it alone? He saide: Go vp, and ye shal prospere. It shal be geue you in youre handes. But ſ kyng sayde vnto him: I charge ſ yet agayne, that thou tell me nothinge but ſ trueth in the name of the LORDE.

Then saide he: I sawe all Israel scattered abroad vpon the mountaynes, as the shepe ſ haue no shepherde. And the LORDE sayde: Hauē these no lorde? Let euery one turne home agayne in peace. Thē sayde the kyng of Israel vnto Iosaphat: Dyd not I tell the, ſ he wolde prophecie me no good, but euell?

And he sayde: Therefore heare ye the worde of the LORDE: *I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stondinge at his righte hande ⁊ at his left. And the LORDE sayde: Who wyl disceaue Achab the kyng of Israel, that he maye go vp ⁊ fall at Ramoth in Gilead? And whan one sayde thus, another so, there came forth a sprete, and stode before ſ LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceaue him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde: I wyl go forth, and be a false sprete in the mouth of all his prophetes. And he sayde: Thou shalt disceaue him, and shalt be able: go thy waye, and do so. Beholde now, †the LORDE hath geuen a false sprete in the mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spokē euell agaynst the.

Then stepte forth Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: Which waye is the sprete of ſ LORDE departed from me, to speake thorow the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt see it, whan thou comdest in to ſ ynnmost chamber to hyde the. But the kyng of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amōn the ruler of the cite, and with Ioas the sonne of Melech, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyng: Put this man in preson, and fede him with bred and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas saide: Yf thou comest agayne in peace, then bath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: Herken to all ye people.

So the kyng of Israel, and Iosaphat ſ kyng of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And ſ kyng of Israel sayde vnto Iosaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come to the battayll in thine araye. And ſ kyng of Israel chaunged his rayment, ⁊ came in to the battayll. But the kyng of Syria had commaunded the rulers of his charettes: Ye shal fighte nether agaynst small ner greate, but onely agaynst the kyng of Israel.

Now whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe Iosaphat, they thoughte: It is ſ kyng of Israel, and they wēt aboute to fighte agaynst him. But Iosaphat cryed, and the LORDE helped him. And God turned them from him: for whan the rulers of the charettes sawe that it was not ſ kyng of Israel, they turned back from him. But a certayne man bended his bowe harde, ⁊ shot the kyng of Israel between the mawe and the longes. Thē sayde he vnto his charet man: Turne thine hāde, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And the battayll was sore the same daye. And the kyng of Israel stode vpon his charet agaynst the Syrians vntyll the euenynge, and dyed whā the Sonne wente downe.

The xix. Chapter.

BUT Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda came home agayne in peace vnto Ierusalem. And Iehu ſ sonne of Hanani the Seer wēt forth to mete him, ⁊ sayde vnto kyng Iosaphat: Shuldest thou so helpe the vngodly, and loue them that hate the LORDE? And for this cause is ſ wrath vpon the from the LORDE: neuertheles there is some good founde in the, that thou hast put the groues out of the londe, and hast prepared thine hert to seke God. So Iosaphat abode at Ierusalem.

* 3 Re. 22. d. Esa. 6. a.

† Eze. 14. b.

B And he wente agayne amonge the people, from Berseba vnto mount Ephraim, and broughte them agayne to the LORDE God of their fathers. And he set Iudges thorow out the londe, in all the stronge cities of Iuda, and a certayne in euery cite. And sayde vnto the Iudges: Take hede what ye do: for ye execute not the iudgment of man, but of the LORDE, and he is with you in iudgmēt: therefore let the feare of the LORDE be with you, and bewarre, and do it: for with the LORDE oure God there is no vnrighteousnes, ner respecte of personnes, ner acceptinge of giftes.

C And at Ierusalem dyd Iosaphat ordeyne certayne of the Leuites and prestes, and of the awncēt fathers of Israel for ſ iudgment of the LORDE, and ouer the matter of the lawe, and caused them to dwell at Ierusalem, and commaunded them, and sayde: Se that ye do thus in the feare of the LORDE, in faithfulness & in a perfect hert. In all causes that come vnto you from youre brethren (which dwell in their cities) betwene bloude and bloude, betwene lawe and commaundement, betwene statutes and ordinaunces ye shal enforce them, ſ they synne not against the LORDE, and so the wrath to come vpon you and youre brethren. Do thus, and ye shal not offende.

Beholde, Amaria the prest is chefe ouer you in all causes of ſ LORDE: so is Sabadia the sonne of Ismael pryncie in the house of Iuda in all the kynges matters: Ye haue officers likewise the Leuites before you. Take a good corage vnto you, and be doyng, and the LORDE shalbe with the good.

The xx. Chapter.

AFTER this came the childrē of Moab, the children of Ammon, and certayne of Ananiam with them, to fighte against Iosaphat. And they came and tolde Iosaphat, and sayde: There cōmeth a greате multitude agaynst the from beyonde the See of Syria, & beholde, they are at Hazezon Thamar, that is Engaddi.

And Iosaphat was afraied, & set his face to seke ſ LORDE, & caused a fast to be proclaimed in all Iuda. And Iuda came together to seke the LORDE. And out of all ſ cities of Iuda came they to seke the LORDE. And Iosaphat stode amōge ſ cōgregation of Iuda & Ierusalem in the house of ſ LORDE before the new courte, and sayde:

O LORDE God of oure fathers, art not thou God in heauen, and hast domynion in all the kyngdomes of the Heythen? And in thy hande is strength and power, and there is no man that can withstōde thee. Hast not thou oure God expelled the inhabitors of this londe before thy people of Israel? and hast geuē it vnto the secle of Abraham thy louer for euer? so that they haue dwelt in it, & haue buylded the a Sanctuary vnto thy name therin, and sayde: Yf there come eny plague, swerde, iudgmēt, pestilence, or derth vpon vs, we wyl stonde before this house euen before the (for thy name is in this house) and wyl crye vnto the in oure trouble, and thou shalt heare, and shalt saue vs. Beholde now, the children of Ammon, of Moab, & they of mount Seir, vpon whom * thou woldest not suffre the children of Israel to go, whan they wente out of the londe of Egipte, but they were fayne to departe from thē, and not to destroye them: and beholde, they deale contrarely with vs, and come to thrust vs out of the inheritance, that thou hast geuen vs in possession. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them? For in vs is no strength to withstōde this greате multitude that commeth agaynst vs. We knowe not what we shulde do, but oure eyes loke vnto thee. And all Iuda stode before the LORDE, with their children, wyues and sonnes.

But vpon Iehasiel the sonne of Zacharias, the sonne of Benaia, the sonne of Iehiel, the sonne of Mathania the Leuite of ſ children of Assaph, came the sprete of the LORDE in the myddes of the cōgregation, and sayde: Geue hede all thou Iuda, and ye inhabitors of Ierusalem, and thou kynge Iosaphat: Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto you: Be not ye afraied, nether feare ye this greате multitude: for it is not ye that fighte, but God. Tomorrow shal ye go downe vnto thē. And beholde, they go vp by Sis, and ye shal fynde them at the reed see by the broke before the wyldernes of Ieruel: for ye shal not fighte in this cause. Do ye but steppe forth, and stonde, and se the health of the LORDE that is with you. Feare not O Iuda and Ierusalem, and be not afraied, tomorrow go ye forth agaynst them, and the LORDE shal be with you.

Thē Iosaphat bowed him selfe with his face to the earth, & all Iuda, & the inhabitors of * Deut. 2. c.

Ierusalem fell before the LORDE, ⁊ worshipped the LORDE. And the Leuites of ȝ childrē of the Kahathites ⁊ of the children of the Corahites arose to prayse the LORDE God of Israel with loude voyce on hye. And they gat them vp early in ȝ mornynge, and wete forth by the wyldemesse of Thekoa.

And whan they were goynge out, Iosaphat stode, ⁊ sayde: Herkē vnto me O Iuda, ⁊ ye indwellers of Ierusalē: Put youre trust in the LORDE youre God, ⁊ ye shal be safe: and geue credence vnto his prophetes, ⁊ ye shall prospere. And he gaue counsell vnto ȝ people, and appoynted the syngers vnto ȝ LORDE, and them that gaue prayse in the bewtye of holynes, to go before the harnessed mē, ⁊ to saye: O geue thanks vnto the LORDE, for his mercy endureth for euer. And whan they beganne to geue thanks and prayse, ⁊ the LORDE caused the hynder watch that was come agaynst Iuda, to come vpon the childrē of Ammon, Moab ⁊ them of mount Seir, and they smote them. Then stode the children of Ammon ⁊ Moab agaynst them of mount Seir, to damne them, and to destroye them. And whan they had destroyed them of mount Seir, one helped another to destroye them selues also. And whan Iuda came to Mispa vnto the wyldernes, they turned them towardes the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vpō the earth, so that none was escaped.

And Iosaphat came with his people to deuyde the spoyle of them. And they founde amonge them so moch goodes and rayment and precious Iewels (which they toke from them) that they coulde not beare them. And thre dayes were they deuydinge the spoyle, for it was so moch. On the fourth daye came they together in to the valley of blessinge: for they blessed they the LORDE. Therefore is the place called the valley of blessinge vnto this daye.

So euery man of Iuda ⁊ Ierusalem turned back agayne, ⁊ Iosaphat before them, to go to Ierusalē with ioye: for ȝ LORDE had geuen them gladnesse on their enemies. And they entred in to Ierusalem with psalteries, harpes ⁊ trompettes vnto the house of the LORDE. And there came a feare of God ouer all the kyngdomes in the londes, whan they herde that the LORDE had foughte agaynst ȝ enemies of Israel. Thus was ȝ kyngdome of Iosaphat in quyetnes, ⁊ God gaue him rest on euery syde.

And Iosaphat reigned ouer Iuda, ⁊ was ȝue ⁊ thirtie yeare olde whan he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned ȝue ⁊ twentye yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Asuba the daughter of Silhi. And he walked in the waye of his father Asa, ⁊ departed not asyde from doynge ȝ which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: sauynge that ȝ hye places were not put downe, for the people had not yet prepared their hert to the God of their fathers. What more there is to saye of Iosaphat, both the first ⁊ the last, beholde, it is wrytten in the actes of Iehu ȝ sonne of Hanani, which he noted vp in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

Afterwarde dyd Iosaphat the kyng of Iuda agree with Ahasia the kyng of Israel, which was yngodly in his doynge. And he agreed with him to make shippes, for to go vpon the see. And they made the shippes at Ezeon Gaber. But Elieser the sonne of Dodana of Maresa prophecied agaynst Iosaphat, and sayde: Because thou hast agreed with Ahasia, therefore hath the LORDE broken thy workes. And so ȝ shippes were broken, ⁊ mighte not go vpon the See.

The xxi. Chapter.

AND Iosaphat fell on slepe<sup>b</sup> with his fathers, ⁊ was buried with his fathers in the cite of Dauid, ⁊ Ioram his sonne was kyng in his steade. And he had brethrē the sonnes of Iosaphat: Asaria, Iehiel, Zacharias, Asaria, Michael ⁊ Sephatia. All these were the children of Iosaphat kyng of Iuda. And their father gaue them many giftes of syluer, golde ⁊ Iewels, with stronge cities in Iuda. But the kyngdome gaue he vnto Ioram: for he was the first borne.

But whan Ioram came vp ouer his fathers kyngdome, ⁊ had gotten the power of it, he slewe all his brethrē with the swerde, ⁊ certayne rulers also in Israel. ⁊ Two ⁊ thirtie yeare olde was Ioram whan he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned eight yeare at Ierusalē, ⁊ walked in the waye of ȝ kynges of Israel, euen as the house of Achiab dyd (for Achabs daughter was his wife) ⁊ he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.

B Neuertheles  $\S$  LORDE wolde not destroe the house of Dauid, for the couenantes sake, \* which he made with Dauid, and acordinge as he had sayde,  $\S$  he wolde geue him and his children a lanterne for euernore.

At  $\S$  same tyme fell  $\S$  Edomites awaye from Iuda, and made a kynge ouer them selues: for Ioram had gone ouer with his captaynes and all the charettes with him,  $\tau$  had gotten him  $\nu\phi$  in the night season, and slayne the Edomites on euery syde, and the rulers of the charettes: therfore fell  $\S$  Edomites awaye from Iuda vnto this daye. At  $\S$  same tyme fell Lybna awaye from him also: because he forsoke the LORDE God of his fathers. He made hye places also on the mountaynes in Iuda, and caused them of Ierusalē to go awhorynge, and disceaue Iuda.

C But there came a wrytinge vnto him frō the prophet Elias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of thy father Dauid: Because thou hast not walked in the wayes of thy father Iosaphat, nether in  $\S$  wayes of Asa the kynge of Iuda, but walkest in the waye of the kynges of Israel, and makest Iuda and them of Ierusalem to go awhorynge after the whordome of the house of Achab, and hast slayne thy brethren also of thy fathers house, which were better thā thou. Beholde, the LORDE shal smyte the with a greate plague on thy people, on thy children  $\tau$  thy wyues, and on all thy substance. But thou thy selfe shalt haue moch sicknesse in thy bowels, tyll thy bowels go forth from daye to daye for very disease.

D So  $\S$  LORDE raysed  $\nu\phi$  agaynst Ioram, the sprete of the Philistynes,  $\tau$  Arabians, which lye besyde the Morians, and they wente  $\nu\phi$  in to Iuda, and waysted it, and caried awaye all the substance that was founde in the kynges house,  $\tau$  his sonnes, and his wyues, so  $\S$  there was not one sonne lefte him, saue Ioahas his yōgest sonne. And after all this dyd  $\S$  LORDE smyte him in his bowels, with such a sicknesse as coulde not be healed. And whyle that endured from daye to daye, whan the tyme of two yeaes was expyred, his bowels wente from him with his sicknesse, and he dyed in euell diseases.

And they made not a burninge ouer him, as they dyd vnto his fathers. Two and thirtie yeaer olde was he whā he was made kynge, and reigned eight yeaer at Ierusalē, and walked not well. And they buried him in the cite of Dauid, but not amōge the sepulchres of the kynges.

The xxiij. Chapter.

AND they of Ierusalem<sup>a</sup> made Ochosias<sup>a</sup> his yōgest sonne kynge in his steade: for the men of warre that came with the hoost of the Arabians, had slayne all  $\S$  first, therfore reigned Ochosias the sonne of Ioram kynge of Iuda. Two and forty yeaer olde was Ochosias whan he was made kynge, and reigned one yeaer at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Athalia the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in  $\S$  wayes of the house of Achab: for his mother entysed him so  $\S$  he was vngodly. Therfore dyd he euell in  $\S$  sighte of the LORDE, euen as  $\S$  house of Achab: for they were his counsell geuers after his fathers death, to destroye him, and he walked after their counsell.

And he wente with Ioram the sonne of Achab kynge of Israel, to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, agaynst Hasael the kynge of Syria. But the Syriās smote Ioram, so  $\S$  he turned back to be healed at Iesreel: for he had woundes that were geuen him at Rama, whan he foughte with Hasael the kynge of Syria. And  $\dagger$  Asarias the sonne of Ioram kynge of Iuda wēte downe to vyset Ioram  $\S$  sonne of Achab at Iesreel, which laye sicke: For it was ordeyned of God vnto Ochosias, that he shulde come to Ioram,  $\tau$  so to go forth with Ioram agaynst Iehu  $\S$  sonne of Nimsi,  $\dagger$  whom the LORDE had anoynted to rote out the house of Achab.

C Now whan Iehu wolde be auēged of  $\S$  house of Achab, he founde certayne rulers of Iuda, and  $\S$  childrē of Ochosias brethern which serued Ochosias, and he slewe them.  $\S$  And he soughte Ochosias, and they ouertoke him, whā he had byd him at Samaria:  $\tau$  he was broughte vnto Iehu, which slewe him, and they buried him, for they sayde: He is the sonne of Iosaphat, which soughte  $\S$  LORDE with all his hert. And there was no man more of the house of Ochosias that mighte be kynge.

And he was hyd with them in the house of God sixe yeares, for so much as Athalia was quene in the londe.

The xxiij. Chapter.

BUT in the seuenth yeare was Ioiada bolde, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds: namely Asaria  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Ieraham, Ismael  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Iohanan, Asaria  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Obed, Maeseia  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Adaia, and Elisaphat  $\bar{y}$  sonne of Sichri with him, in to the couenaunt: and they wente aboute in Iuda, and broughte  $\bar{y}$  Leuites together out of all the cities of Iuda, and the chefe fathers of Israel, to come vnto Ierusalem. And all the cōgregacion made a couenaunt with the kyng in the house of God, and he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the kynges sonne shal be kyng, \* euē as the LORDE spake cōcernynge the children of Dauid.

B This is it therefore  $\bar{y}$  ye shal do: The thirde parte of you that entre on the Sabbath, shalbe amonge the prestes  $\tau$  Leuites, which are dore-keepers at the thresholdes:  $\tau$  one thirde parte in the kynges house, and one thirde parte at the grounde porte. But all the people shalbe in the courtes of the house of the LORDE, and that no man go in to the house of the LORDE, excepte the prestes and Leuites that mynister there, they shal go in: for they are halowed. And let all  $\bar{y}$  people wayte vpon the LORDE. And the Leuites shal get them rounde aboute  $\bar{y}$  kyng, euery one with his weapen in his hande. And who so els goeth in to  $\bar{y}$  house, let him dye. And they shal be with the kyng whā he goeth out  $\tau$  in.

C And the Leuites  $\tau$  all Iuda dyd as Ioiada  $\bar{y}$  prest had commaunded, and euery one toke his men that entred on the Sabbath, with those  $\bar{y}$  wente of on the Sabbath: for Ioiada  $\bar{y}$  prest suffred not those two compnies to parte asunder. And Ioiada  $\bar{y}$  prest gaue the captaynes ouer hundreds speares  $\tau$  shyldes, and kynged Dauids weapens, which were in the house of God, and set all the people euery one with his weapen in his hande, from the righte corner of the house, vnto the leftte corner of the altare, and to the house warde aboute the kyng. And they broughte forth the kynges sonne,  $\tau$  set the crowne vpon his heade, and gaue them the  $\dagger$  wytnesse,  $\tau$  made him kyng. And Ioiada with his sonnes anoynted him,  $\tau$  sayde: God saue the kyng.

But whan Athalia herde the noyse of  $\bar{y}$  people  $\bar{y}$  ranne together and prayded  $\bar{y}$  kyng, she wente forth to the people in to  $\bar{y}$  house of the LORDE, and loked: and beholde,  $\bar{y}$  kyng stode in his place at  $\bar{y}$  intraunce, and the rulers and troumpettes aboute  $\bar{y}$  kyng: and all the people of the londe were glad,  $\tau$  blew the troumpes, and there were syngers  $\bar{y}$  coulde playe with all maner of musiceall instruments. But she rōte hir clothes,  $\tau$  sayde: Sedicion, sedicion. Neuertheles Ioiada  $\bar{y}$  prest gat him forth with the captaynes ouer hundreds and rulers of the hoost, and sayde vnto them: Brynge her forth betwene  $\bar{y}$  walles,  $\tau$  who so euer foloweth her, shal be slayne with  $\bar{y}$  swerde: for the prest had cōmaunded, that she shulde not be slayne in  $\bar{y}$  house of the LORDE. And they layed handes on her. And whan she came at the intraunce of the horsgate of the kynges house, they put her to death there.

And Ioiada made a couenaunt betwene him and all the people, and the kyng,  $\bar{y}$  they shulde be the people of the LORDE. The wēte all the people in to the house of Baal and destroyed it,  $\tau$  brake downe his altares  $\tau$  ymages,  $\tau$  slewe Mathan the prest of Baal before the altare. And Ioiada appoynted  $\bar{y}$  officers in the house of the LORDE amōge the prestes  $\tau$  Leuites  $\dagger$  whom Dauid had ordeyned for  $\bar{y}$  house of the LORDE, to offere burnt sacrifices vnto  $\bar{y}$  LORDE, as it is wrytten in the  $\S$  lawe of Moses: with ioie  $\tau$  songes made by Dauid. And  $\bar{y}$  porters set he at  $\bar{y}$  gates of  $\bar{y}$  house of  $\bar{y}$  LORDE,  $\bar{y}$  none shulde entre, which were defiled with eny maner of thinge.

And he toke the captaynes ouer hūdreds and the mightie men and lordes of  $\bar{y}$  people, and all the people of the londe, and brought the kinge downe from the house of the LORDE, and broughte him thorow the hie porte of the kynges house, and caused the

The xliiiij. Chapter.

IOAS<sup>a</sup> was seuen yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned fortie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Zibea of Berseba. And Ioas dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada the prest lyued. And Ioiada gaue him two wiues, & he begat sonnes & daughters. Afterwarde deuyed Ioas to reneue the house of the LORDE, & gathered together the prestes and Leuites, & sayde vnto thē: Go forth vnto all the cities of Iuda, & gather the money of all Israel, to repayre ſ house of God yearly, and do it righte soone: but the Leuites made no haist.

Then the kynge called Ioiada the pryncipall, and sayde vnto him: Why lokest thou not vnto the Leuites, ſ they bringe in from Iuda and Ierusalem, *the colleccion which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE appoynted to be gathered amōge Israel for the Tabernacle of witnes? For ſ vngodly Athalia & hir sonnes haue waisted the house of God: and all that was halowed for the house of the LORDE, haue they bestowed on Baalim.

Then commaunded the kynge to make a chest, and to set it without at the intraunce of the house of the LORDE: & caused it to be proclaimed in Iuda and Ierusalē, that they shulde bringe in to the LORDE, the colleccio, which Moses the seruaunt of God appointed vnto Israel in ſ wilderness. Thē were all ſ rulers glad, & so were all ſ people, & brought it, and cast it in to the chest, tyll it was full.

And whan the tyme was ſ the Leuites shulde brynge the Arke at ſ kinges cōmaundement (whan they sawe ſ there was moche money therein) then came the kinges scribe, & he ſ was appoynted of the chefe prest, and emptied the chest, and caried it againe in to his place. Thus dyd they every daye, so that they gathered moche money together. And ſ kinge and Ioiada gaue it vnto ſ workmasters of ſ house of the LORDE, and they hired masons and carpenters to repayre the house of ſ LORDE, and men that coulde worke in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of ſ LORDE.

And the labourers wrought, so that ſ repairinge in ſ worke wente forwarde thorow their hande, and they set the house of God in his bewtye, and made it stronge. And whan they had perfourmed this, they brought the resydue of the money, before the kynge and Ioiada, wherof there were made vessels for the house of the LORDE, vessels for the ministracion and burnt offeringe, spones and ornantes of golde and siluer. And they offred burnt offeringes alwaye in the house of the LORDE, as longe as Ioiada lyued.

And Ioiada waxed olde, and had lyned longe ynough, and dyed, & was an hundreth and thirtie yeare olde whan he dyed: and they buried him in the cite of Dauid, amonge the kynge, because he had done good vnto Israel, and towarde God & his house. And after the death of Ioiada, came the rulers in Iuda, and worshipped the kynge.

Then consented the kynge vnto thē. And they forsoke the house of the LORDE God of their fathers, and serued ſ groues and ymages. Then came ſ wrath of the LORDE vpo Iuda and Ierusalem because of this trespass of theirs. Yet sent he prophetes vnto thē, ſ they shulde turne vnto the LORDE, & they testified vnto thē: but they wolde not heare.

And the sprete of God came vpon †Zachary the sonne of Ioiada the prest, which stode ouer ſ people, & sayde vnto thē: Thus sayeth God: Wherefore do ye transgresse the cōmaundementes of the LORDE, which shall not be to youre prosperite: for ye haue forsaken ſ LORDE, therefore shal he forsake you. Neuertheles they conspyred agaynst him, & stoned him at ſ kynges cōmaundement in ſ courte of the house of the LORDE. And Ioas ſ kinge thought not on the mercy ſ Ioiada his father had done for him, but slewe his sonne. Notwithstandinge whā he dyed, he sayde: The LORDE shal loke vpon it, and requyre it.

And whan the yeare was gone aboute, ſ power of the Syrians wente vp, & came to Iuda & Ierusalem, and destroyed the rulers in the people, and sent all the spoiles of them vnto Damascon. For the power of the Syrians came but with a fewe men, yet gaue ſ LORDE a very greate power in to their hande: because they had forsaken ſ LORDE God of their fathers. They executed iudgment also vpon loas. And whan they departed fro him, they lefte him in greate sicknesses.

Neuertheles his seruantes conspyred against him (because of the bloude of the childre of Ioiada the prest) ⁊ slewe him vpo his bed, ⁊ he dyed, and they buryed him in the cite of Dauid, but not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges. They that conspyred against him, were these: Sabad y sonne of Simeath the Ammonitisse, and Iosabad the sonne of Simrith the Moabitisse. As for his sonnes, and the summe that was gathered vnder him, and the buydinge of the house of God, beholde, they are wrytten in the storye in the boke of the kynges. And Amasias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The xxv. Chaptr.

A FYUE and twentye yere olde was Amasias whan he was made kynge, and reigned nyne and twentye yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ioadan of Ierusalem. And he dyd y which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, but not with a whole hert. Now whan his kingdome was in strēgth, he slewe his seruantes which had slayne the kinge his father. But their childre slewe he not, for so is it wrytten in the boke of the lawe of Moses, *where the LORDE comaundeth, and sayeth: The fathers shal not dye for the children, nether shal the children dye for the fathers: but euery one shal die for his awne synne.

And Amasias broughte Iuda together, and set them after the fathers houses, after the rulers ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundreds amonge all Iuda and Ben Iamin, and nombred them from twentye yere olde ⁊ aboue, and founde of the thre hundred thousande chosen men, which were able to go forth to the warre, and caryed speares and shyldes. And out of Israel appoynted he an hundred thousande stronge men of warre for an hundred talentes of siluer.

B But there came a man of God vnto him, and sayde: O kynge, Let not the hoost of Israel come with the: for the LORDE is not with Israel, nether with all the childre of Ephraim. For yf thou comest to shewe thy boldnes in the battail, God shal make the fall before thine enemies. For God hath power to helpe, and to cause for to fall. Amasias sayde vnto the man of God: What shal be done then with y hundred talentes y I haue geue y souldyers of Israel? The mā of God sayde: The LORDE hath yet more the this to geue the. So Amasias separated out the men of warre which were come to him out of Ephraim, y they shulde departe vnto their place. Then waxed their wrath very whote agaynst Iuda, and they wente agayne vnto their place in wrothfull displeasure. And Amasias strēgthed himselfe, and caried out his people, and wente forth in to the Salt valley, and smote ten thousande of the children of Seir.

And the childre of Iuda toke ten thousande of the alyue, whom they broughte vp to the toppe of a mountayne, and cast the downe headlings from the toppe of the mount, so that they all to barst in sunder. But y childre of the men of warre whom Amasias had sent awaye agayne (that they shulde not go to the battayll with his people) fell in to the cities of Iuda, from Samaria vnto Beth Horon, and smote thre thousande of me, and toke moch spoyle.

C And whan Amasias came agayne from the slaughter of the Edomites, he broughte the goddes of the children of Seir, and made them his goddes, and worshipped before them, ⁊ brent incense vnto them. Then was the LORDE very wroth at Amasias, ⁊ sent vnto him a prophet, which sayde vnto him: Why sekest thou the goddes of the people, which coulde not deluyer their folke from thy hande? And whan he talked with him, the kynge sayde vnto him: Haue they made y of the kynges counsell? Ceasse, why wilt thou be smytten? Then the prophet ceased, ⁊ sayde: I perceaue, that the LORDE is mynded to destroye y, because thou hast done this, and herkenest not vnto my counsell.

* And Amasias y kynge of Iuda toke counsell, ⁊ sent vnto Iosabab the sonne of Iohas y sonne of Iehu, kynge of Israel, sayge: Come, let vs se one another. But Iosabab the kynge of Israel sent vnto Amasias y kynge of Iuda, sayge: The hawthorne in Libanus sent vnto y Cedre tre in Libanus, sayge: Geue thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wylde beest in Libanus ranne ouer y hawthorne, ⁊ trode it downe. Thou thinkest: Beholde, I haue smytten the Edomites, therefore is thine hert proude to boaste. Now hyde at home: why stryuest thou after my fortune, that thou mayest fall ⁊ Iuda with the?

Neuertheles Amasias consented not: for so was it broughte to passe of God, ¶ they mighte be geuen in to the handes of the enemies, because they soughte the goddes of ¶ Edomites. Then wente Ioas the kynge of Israel vp, ¶ they sawe one another, he and Amasias the kynge of Iuda, at Beth Semes which lyeth in Iuda. But Iuda was smyttē before Israel, and they fled euery one vnto his tent.

What more there is to saye of Amasias (both the first and last) beholde, it is written in ¶ boke of the kynges of Iuda ¶ Israel. And frō the tyme forth that Amasias departed from the LORDE, they conspyred against him at Ierusalem. But he fled vnto Lachis. Thē sent they after him vnto Lachis, ¶ slewe him there. And they brought him vpō horses ¶ buried him beside his fathers in the cite of Iuda.

The xvi. Chapter.

¶ THEN all the people of Iuda toke Osias, ¶ which was syxtene yeare olde, and made him kynge in steade of his father Amasias. He builded Eloth, ¶ broughte it agayne vnto Iuda, after that the kynge was fallen on slepe with his fathers. Sixtene yeare olde was Osias when he was made kynge, and reigned two and fiftie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Iechalia of Ierusalem. And he did right in the syght of the LORDE, as his father Amasias had done, and soughte God as longe as Zacharias lyued, which taughte in the visions of God: and as longe as he sought the LORDE, God made him to prospere.

For he wente forth, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, and brake downe ¶ walles of Gath, and the walles of Iabne, and the walles of Aszdod, and buylded cities aboute Aszdod, ¶ amonge the Philistynes. For God helped him agaynst the Philistynes, against the Arabians, agaynst them of Gur Baal, ¶ agaynst the Meunites. And ¶ Ammonites gaue Osias presentes, ¶ his name came in to Egipte: for he was exceedinge stronge. And Osias buylded towres at Ierusalem vpon the cornerporte, and on the valley gate, and on other corners, and made them stronge. He buylded castels also in the wyldernesse, and dygged many welles: for he had many cattell, both in the medewes and in the playnes, huszbandmen also and wynegardeners on the mountaynes and on Carmel: for he delyted in huszbandrye.

And Osias had an hoost of men of warre ¶ goynge forth to the battail, which were nobred vnder the hande of Ieiel the scribe ¶ of Maesa the offyceer, vnder the hāde of Hanania of the kynges rulers. And the nombre of the chefe fathers amonge the stronge mē of warre, was two thousande and syxe hundreth. And vnder the hande of the hoost thre hundreth thousande, and seuen thousande and fyue hundreth mete for the battayll, in the strength of an armye to helpe the kinge agaynst the enemies. And Osias prepared for all the hoost, shyldes, speares, helmettes, brestplates, bowes and slingstones. And at Ierusalē he made ordinaunce coningly, to be vpon the towres and in the pynacles, to shute arowes and greate stones. And the fame of him came farre abroad, because he was specially helped, tyll he became mightie.

And whan his power was greate, his hert ¶ arose to his awne destruction: for he trespassed agaynst the LORDE his God, and wente in to the temple of the LORDE, to burne incense vpon the altare of incense. But Asarias the prest wente after him, and foure score prestes with him, valeaunt men, and withstode kynge Osias, and saide vnto him: *It belongeth not vnto thy offyce (Osias) to burne incense vnto the LORDE, but vnto the prestes belongeth it, euen vnto the children of Aaron, which are halowed to burne incense. Go forth out of the Sanctuary: for thou offendest, and it shall be no worshippe vnto the before God the LORDE.

And Osias was wroth, and had a censure in his haude. ¶ And whyle he murmured with the prestes, the leprosy spronge out of his foreheade in the presence of the prestes in the house of the LORDE before the altare of incense. And Asarias the chefe prest turned his heade towarde him, and so dyd all the prestes, and beholde, he was leper in his foreheade. And they put him out from thence. Yee he made haist himselfe to go forth, for his plage came of the LORDE. Thus became Osias y kyng a leper vnto his death, and dwelt full of leprosy in a fre house: for he was put out of the house of the LORDE. But Ioram his sonne had the ouersight of the kynges house, and iudged the people in the londe.

What more there is to saie of Osias (both first and last) Esay the sonne of Amos hath wrytten it. And Osias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him with his fathers in the pece of grounde beside y kynges sepulcres: for they sayde: He is leporous. And Iotham his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxvij. Chapter.

IOTHAM was fyue and twentye yeare olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Ierusa the daughter of Sadoc: and he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE as did Osias his father: sauynge y he wente not in to the temple of the LORDE, and the people yett marred them selues. He buylded the lyue porte of the house of y LORDE, and on the wall of Ophel buylded he moch, and buylded the cities vpon the mountaynes of Iuda, and in the woddess buylded he castels and towres.

And he fought with the kinge of the children of Ammon, and ouercame them, so that the childre of Ammon gaue him y same yeare an hundredth partes of siluer, ten thousande quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barley. So moch dyd the children of Ammon geue him also in y seconde and thirde yeare. Thus became Iotham mightye, for he gyded his wayes before the LORDE his God.

What more there is to saie of Iotham, and all his warres, and his waies, beholde, it is wrytten in y boke of the kinges of Israel and Iuda. Fyue and twentye yeare olde was he whan he was made kyng, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem. And Iotha fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in the cite of Dauid, and Ahas his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxvij. Chapter.

ACHAS was twentye yeare olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned sixtene yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd not that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as did Dauid his father, but walked in the wayes of the kinges of Israel, and made molten ymages vnto Baalim, and brent incense in the valley of the children of Hennon, and brent his awne sonnes in y fire, after the abhominacions of the Heithen, whō the LORDE expelled before the childre of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice and brent incense vpon the hye places and vpon the hilles, and amonge all grene trees.

Therefore dyd the LORDE his God deluyr him in to the hande of the kyng of Syria, so that they smote him, and caryed awaye a greate multitude of his men presoners, and broughte them to Damascon. He was geuen also vnder the hande of the kyng of Israel, so y he dyd a greate slaughter vpon him. For Peca the sonne of Romelia smote in Iuda an hundredth and twentye thousande in one daye (which all were valeaunt men) enē because they had forsaken y LORDE God of their fathers. And Sichri a mightie mā of Ephraim slewe Maeseia y kynges sonne, and Asrikam the prynce of the house, and Elkana the nexte vnto the kyng. And the children of Israel caried of their brethern presoners two hundredth thousande, wemen, sonnes and daughters, and toke a greate spoyle from them, and broughte the spoyle vnto Samaria.

But euē there was there a prophet of y LORDE, whose name was Obed, which wete out to mete y hoost that came to Samaria, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, because the LORDE God of youre fathers is wroth at Iuda, therefore hath he geuen them ouer in to youre handes: but ye haue slayne them so abhominably, that it is come vnto heauē. Now thinke ye to subdue the children of Iuda and Ierusalem, to be bondmen and bondmaydens vnto you. Is not this a trespace then with you agaynst the LORDE youre God? Herken now vnto me, and sende y presoners hence agayne, whom ye haue caried awaye from youre brethern: for the wrath of y LORDE is fearece ouer you.

Then gat vp certayne of the chefe of the children of Ephraim, Asarias the sonne of Iohanan, Barachias the sonne of Mesillemoth, Ezechias the sonne of Sallum, ⁊ Amasa ⁊ sonne of Hadlai, agaynst them ⁊ came from ⁊ battayll, ⁊ sayde vnto them: Ye shal not brynge the presoners in hither, for youre mynde is but to make vs trespase before the LORDE, to make oure synnes and offences the greater: for the trespase is to moch all-ready, ⁊ the wrath is feerce ouer Israel. So the hoost lefte the presoners ⁊ the spoyle before ⁊ rulers and before the whole cōgregation.

C Then stode vp the men (which now were reheared by name) and toke the presoners, and as many as were naked amonge them, clothed they with ⁊ spoyle, ⁊ deckte them, and put shues vpon their fete, and gaue thē to eate and drynke, and anoynted them, and caried them vpon asses (as many as were feble) and broughte them to Iericho to ⁊ Palme cite vnto their brethren, and came agayne to Samaria. * At the same tyme sent kyng Achas vnto the kynges of Assur, ⁊ they shulde helpe him. And the Edomites came agayne, and smote Iuda, and caried some awaye captiue. The Philistynes also fell in to the cities in the playne, ⁊ towarde ⁊ south parte of Iuda, ⁊ wanne Beth Semes, Aialon, Gederoth, and Socho with the vyllages therof, Timna with the vyllages therof, ⁊ Gimso with the vyllages therof, and dwelt therein. For ⁊ LORDE subdued Iuda for Achas sake ⁊ kyng of Iuda, because he made Iuda naked, and rebelled agaynst the LORDE. And Teglatpilnesser the kyng of Assur came agaynst him, and beseged him, ⁊ he was not mightie ynough for him.

D For Achas spoyled the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and of the rulers, to geue vnto ⁊ kyng of Assur, but it helped him not. Morouer kinge Achas trespassed yet more against the LORDE euen in his trouble, and dyd sacrifice vnto the goddes of them of Damascos, which had smitten him, ⁊ sayde: The goddes of the kynges of Syria helpe them, therefore wil I offre vnto them, that they maye helpe me also, where as the same yet were a fall vnto him and to all Israel.

And Achas gathered the vessels of ⁊ house of God together, and brake the vessels in ⁊ house of God, ⁊ ⁊ shut the dores of the house of ⁊ LORDE, and made him altares in all corners at Ierusalem, and euery where in the cyties of Iuda made he hye places to burne incense vnto other goddes, and prouoked ⁊ LORDE God of his fathers vnto wrath.

What more there is to saye of him and of all his wayes (both first and last) beholde, it is written in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Achas fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in ⁊ cite of Ierusalem: for they brought him not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges of Israel. And Ezechias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxij. Chapter.

EZECHIAS<sup>a</sup> was fyue ⁊ twentye yeare<sup>a</sup> olde whan he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned nyne ⁊ twentye yeares at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Abia ⁊ doughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as did his father Dauid. ⁊ He opened the dores of ⁊ house of the LORDE in the first moneth of ⁊ first yeare of his raigne, ⁊ made them stronge, ⁊ brought in the prestes and Leuites, and gathered them together vnto the East streate and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye Leuites, sanctiſye youre selues now, that ye maye halowe the house of the LORDE God of youre fathers, and put fylthines out of the Sanctuary: for oure fathers haue trespassed, and done ⁊ which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE oure God, and haue forsaken him. For they turned their faces from the habitaciō of ⁊ LORDE oure God, ⁊ turned their backes on it, and shut the dores of the Porche, and put out the lampes, and brent no incense, ⁊ offred no burntsacrifices in the Sanctuary vnto the God of Israel.

B Therefore is the wrath of the LORDE come ouer Iuda and Ierusalem, and he hath geuen them ouer to be scatred abroad, desolate and to be hyssed at, as ye se with youre eies. For beholde, euen for the same cause fell oure fathers thorow the swerde, oure sonnes doughters and wyues were caryed awaye captiue. Now am I mynded to make a couenant with the LORDE God of Israel, ⁊ he maye turne awaie from vs his wrath ⁊ indignaciō. Now my sonnes, be not ye negligent: for the LORDE hath chosen you to stode before him, and to be his mynisters and to burne incense vnto him.

Then rose the Leuites : Mahath the sonne of Amasai, and Ioel the sonne of Asaria of the children of the Kahathites. Of the children of Merari: Cis the sonne of Abdi, ⁊ Asaria the sonne of Iehaleleel. Of the children of the Gersonites: Ioah the sonne of Simma, and Eden the sonne of Ioah. And of the childrē of Elizaphan: Simri ⁊ Ieiel. And of the childrē of Assaph: Sachary and Mathania. And of the children of Heman: Ichiel and Simeï. And of the children of Iedithun: Semaia and Vsiel.

¶ And they gathered their brethren together, and were sanctified, and wente in aordinge to the kynges commaundement at the worde of the LORDE, to clesne the house of ȝ LORDE. And the prestes entred within in the house of the LORDE to purifye, and put out all the vncleennes that was founde in the tēple of the LORDE, in the courte of the LORDES house: and the prestes toke it vp, and caryed it out in to the broke Cedron. The fyrst daye of the fyrst moneth beganne they to sanctifye them selues, and on the eight daye of the moneth wente they in to the porche of the LORDE, and halowed the house of ȝ LORDE eight dayes, and fynished it on the sixteenth daye of the fyrst moneth.

And they wōte in to the kyngye Ezechias, and sayde: We haue clesned all the house of the LORDE, the altare of burntofferynges, and all his vessels, the table of the shewbred and all the apparell therof: and all the ornamente that kyngye Achas cast awaye whā he was kyngye, what tyme as he transgressed, those haue we prepared and halowed. Beholde, they are before the altare of the LORDE.

¶ Thē the kyngye Ezechias gat him vp early, and gathered together the Elders of the cite, and wōte vp vnto the house of the LORDE, and they broughte seven bullockes, seven rammes, seven lambes, and seven he goates to be the synofferynge, for the Sanctuary, ⁊ for Iuda. And he spake vnto the prestes the children of Aaron, that they shulde offre vpon the altare of the LORDE.

So they slewe the bullockes, and the prestes toke the bloude, and sprenkled it vpon ȝ altare: and slewe the rammes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altare: and slewe the lambes, and sprenkled the bloude vpon the altare. And the goates to ȝ synofferynge brought they before the kyngye and the congregaciō, and layed their handes vpon them: and the prestes slewe them, and sprenkled their bloude vpon the altare to make attonemēt for all Israel: for the kyngye commaunded to offre burntacrificyes and sinofferinges for all Israel.

And he set the Leuites in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, Psalteries and harpes, * as Dauid had commaunded, and Gad the kynges Seer, and the prophet Nathan, for it was the commaundement of the LORDE by his prophetes. And the Leuites stode with the musieall instrumentes of Dauid, ⁊ the prestes with the trompettes. And Ezechias commaunded them to offre burntacrificyes vpon the altare. And aboute the tyme that the burntacrifice begūne to be offed the songe of the LORDE beganne also, and ȝ trompettes, and dyuerse instrumentes of Dauid the kyngye of Israel and all the congregacion gaue praise ⁊ thankes: and the songe of the Musicians, and ȝ blowyngye of the trompetters, endured all tyll the burntofferynge was fynished.

Now whan the burntofferynge was perfourmed, the kyngye and all they that were with him, bowed them selues, and gaue praise and thankes. And Ezechias the kyngye with the rulers commaunded the Leuites to prayse the LORDE with the songes of Dauid and Asaph the Seer. And they gaue prayse tyll they were ioyfull, and they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

¶ And Ezechias answered and saide: Now haue ye fylled youre hādes vnto the LORDE steppe forth, and bryngye hither ȝ sacrificyes and thankofferynges vnto the house of the LORDE. And the congregacion broughte sacrificyes and thankofferynges, and euery mā of a fre wyllinge hert brought burntofferynges. And the nombre of the burntofferynges that the congregacion broughte, was thre score bullockes and ten, an hundreth rāmes, and two hundreth lambes, and all these for the burntofferynge vnto the LORDE, and they sanctified sixe hundreth bullockes, and thre thousande shepe.

But the prestes were to fewe, and coule not pluck of the skynnes of all the burnt-offerynges, therefore toke they their brethren the Leuites, tyll the worke was fynished, and tyll the prestes were halowed (for the Leuites are easier to be halowed then the prestes) and many of the burnt offerynges were with the fat of the thankofferynges and drynkofferynges to the burnt sacrifices. Thus was the ministracion of the house of the LORDE prepared. And Ezechias reioysed with all the people, that they were prepared with God: for it was done righte haistely.

The xxx. Chapter.

AND Ezechias sent in to all Israel and Iuda, and wrote letters vnto Ephraim and Manasses, that they shulde come to the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, to kepe easter vnto the LORDE God of Israel. And the kynge helde a counsell with his rulers, and all the cōgregacion at Ierusalem, *to kepe Passeouer in the seconde moneth: for at that tyme they coulde not kepe it, because the prestes were not sanctified ynough, and the people were not yet come together vnto Ierusalem. And it pleased the kynge well and all the cōgregacion. And they appointed it to be proclaimed thorow out all Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, that they shulde come to kepe Passeouer vnto the LORDE God of Israel: for they were not many to kepe it as it is wrytten.

And the postes wente with the letters from the hande of the kynge and of his rulers thorow out all Israell and Iuda, at y kynges commaundement, and sayde: Ye children of Israel, turne you vnto the LORDE God of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, and he shal turne to y escaped, which are lefte ouer amonge you from the hande of the kynge of Assur: and be not ye as youre fathers and brethren, which rebelled agaynst the LORDE God of their fathers, and he gaue the ouer in to desolacion as ye se youre selues. Be not ye hardnecked now as were youre fathers, but offre youre hāde vnto the LORDE, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the LORDE youre God, †so shal the indignacion of his wrath turne away from you. For yf ye turne vnto the LORDE, then shal youre brethren and children haue mercy in the sighte of them which holde them in captiuyte, that they maye come agayne in to this londe: †for the LORDE youre God is gracious and mercifull, and shal not turne away his face from you, yf ye conuerte vnto him.

† Exod. 34. c.

And the postes wente from one cite to another in the londe of Ephraim and Manasses, and vnto Zabulon. But they mocked them and laughed them to scorne. Yet were there some of Asser and Manasses, and of Zabulon, that submytted them selues, and came to Ierusalem. And the hande of God came in to Iuda, so that he gaue the one hert to do after the commaundement of the kynge and the rulers at the worde of the LORDE. And there came together vnto Ierusalē a greate people, to kepe the feast of vnuenuded bred in the seconde moneth, a very greate congregacion.

And they gat them vp, and put downe y altares that were at Ierusalem, and all the incense put they awaye, and cast it in to the broke Cedron, and slewe the Passeouer on the fourteenth daye of the secōde moneth. And y prestes and Leuites were ashamed, and halowed them selues, and broughte the burnt offerynges to the house of the LORDE, and stode in their ordinaunce, as it was accordinge, after the lawe off Moses the man of God. And the prestes sprenkled the bloude from the hande of the Leuites: for there were many in the cōgregacion which were not sanctified, therefore dyd the Leuites kyll Passeouer for them which were not censed, that they mighte be sanctified vnto the LORDE.

There were many people also of Ephraim, Manasses, Isachar and Zabulon, which were not cleane, but ate the Easter lambe not as it is wrytten: for Ezechias prayed for them, and sayde: The LORDE, which is gracious, shalbe mercifull vnto all them that prepare their hertes vnto God, to seke the LORDE God of their fathers, though they be not censed after the holy purificacion. And the LORDE herde Ezechias, and healed the people. Thus the children of Israel that were founde at Ierusalē, helde y feast of vnuenuded bred seuen dayes with greate ioye. And the Leuites and prestes praised the LORDE euery daye with the loude instrumentes of the LORDE. And Ezechias spake hertely vnto all y Leuites, which had good vnderstandinge in the LORDE, and they ate the feast seuen dayes, and offred thankofferynges, and gaue thanks vnto y LORDE God of their fathers.

And all the congregacion deuyseed to kepe

the feast yet other seuē dayes, and so they helde it those seuē dayes also with ioye: for Ezechias the kinge of Iuda gaue an Heue-offerynge for the cōgregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and seuē thousande shepe. But the rulers gaue an Heueofferinge for y congregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and ten thousande shepe. And many of the prestes sanctified them selues.

And the whole congregacion of Iuda reioysed, the prestes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came out of Israel, and the straungers that were come out of the londe of Israel, and they that dwelt in Iuda, and greate ioye was there at Ierusalem: for sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid the kyng of Israel, was there no soch (ioye) at Ierusalē. And the prestes and Leuites stode vp and blessed the people, and their voyce was herde, and their prayer came in to his holy habitacon in heauen.

The xxii. Chapter.

AND whan all this was fynished, all the Israelites that were founde in y cities of Iuda, wente out, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and brake downe the hye places and altares out of all Iuda, Ben Iamin, Ephraim and Manasses, tyll they had destroyed thē. And all the children of Israel wente agayne euery one to his possession vnto their cities.

But Ezechias set the prestes and Leuites in their ordinaunces, euery one after his office, both the prestes and Leuites, for the burnt-sacrifices and thankofferynges, to mynister, to geue thanks and prayse in the gates of the hoost of the LORDE. And the kyng gaue his porcion of his substaūce for the burnt-offerynges in the mornynge and euenynge, and for the burnt-offerynges of the Sabbath, and of the newmone and of the feastes, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of the LORDE.

B And he spake vnto y people which dwelt at Ierusalem, that they shulde geue porciōs vnto the prestes and Leuites, y they mighte the more stedfastly endure in the lawe of the LORDE. And whā y worde came forth, the childrē of Israel gaue many fyrst frutes of corne, wyne, oyle, hony, and all maner increace of the felde, and broughte in moch of all maner tithes. And the children of Israel and Iuda which dwelt in the cities of Iuda, broughte the tithes also of oxen and shepe, and the tithes of soch thinges as were sanctified, which they had halowed vnto the LORDE their God, and made here an heape, and there an heape. In the thirde moneth begine they to laye vpon heapes, and in the seuenth moneth dyd they fynishe it.

And whā Ezechias with the rulers wente in, and sawe the heapes, they prayed the LORDE, and his people of Israel. And Ezechias axed the prestes and Leuites concernynge the heapes. And Asaria the prest the chefe in the house of Sadoe, sayde vnto him: Sence the tyme that they beganne to brynge the Heueofferynges in to y house of the LORDE, we haue eaten, and are satisfied, and yet is there lefte ouer: for the LORDE hath blessed his people, therefore is this heape lefte ouer. Then commaunded the kyng, that they shulde prepare chestes in the house of the LORDE. And they prepared them, and put in the Heueofferynges, and tithes and that which was halowed, faithfully.

And the ouersight of the same had Chanania the Leuite, and Simei his brother the seconde, and Iehiel, Asasia, Naglath, Asahel, Ierimoth, Iosabad, Eliel, Iesmachia, Mahath and Benaia, ordeyned of the hande off Chanania and Simei his brother, acordinge to the commaundement of kyng Ezechias. But Asaria was pryncce in the house of God. And Core y sonne of Iemna the Leuite the porter of the Eastgate was ouer the frewyllinge giftes of God (which were geuen for Heueofferynges vnto the LORDE) and ouer the Most holy. And vnder his hande were, Eden, Miniamin, Iesua, Semaia, Amaria, and Sachania in the cities of the prestes vpon credence, that they shulde geue vnto their brethrē acordinge to their courses, to the leest as to the greatest.

And vnto them that were counted for men childrē from thre yere olde and aboue, amonge all thē that wēt in to the house of the LORDE, euery one vpō his daye to their office in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened for prestes in the house of their fathers, and the Leuites from twentye yere and aboue, in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened amonge their children, wyues, sonnes and daughters amōge the whole congregacion: for that which was halowed, sanctified they vpon credence. There were men also named by name amonge Aarons children the prestes vpon the felde of the suburbes in all fy cities, that they shulde geue porcions vnto all the men children amoge the prestes, and to all them that were nombred amonge the Leuites.

Thus dyd Ezechias in all Iuda, and dyd that which was good, righte and true in the sighte of the LORDE his God. And in all the busynes that he toke in hide concernynge the seruiyce of the house of God, acordinge to the lawe and commaundement, to seke his God, that dyd he with all his hert, and therefore prospered he well.

The xxvij. Chapter.

AFTER these actes and faithfulness came Sennacherib<sup>a</sup> the kynge of Assur, and wente in to Iuda, and pitched before the stroge cities, and thoughte to plucke them vnto him. And whan Ezechias sawe that Sennacherib came, and that his face stode to fighte agaynst Ierusalem, he deuyed with his rulers and mightie men, to couer the waters of the welles that were without the cite, and they helped him: and there gathered together a greate people, and couered all fy welles and water brokes in the myddes of the londe, and sayde: Lest the kynges of Assur fynde moch water whā they come. And he toke a corage vnto him, and buylded all the walles where they were in decaye, and made towres theron, and buylded yet another wall without, and strengthened Millo in the cite of Dauid. And made moch ordinaunce and shyldes, and set captaynes of warre ouer the people.

And gathered them vnto him vpon the brode strete by the gate of the cite, and spake hertely vnto them, and sayde: Be stronge and bolde, feare not, and be not afrayed for the kynge of Assur, ner all fy multitude that is with him: for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is a <sup>a</sup>fleshy arme, but with vs is the LORDE oure God, to helpe vs and to fighte for vs. And fy people trusted vnto the wordes of Ezechias kynge of Iuda.

ye youre trust ye that dwell in the beseged Ierusalem? Ezechias disceaueth you, that he maye delyuer you vnto death, hōger, and thyrst, and sayeth: The LORDE oure God shal delyuer vs from the hande of the kynge of Assur. Is it not Ezechias, that hath put away his hye places and altares, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalem: Before one altare shal ye worshippe, and burne incense theron?

Knowe ye not what I and my fathers haue done to all fy people in the londes? Haue the goddes of the Heythen in the londes bene able to delyuer their countrees fro my hande? What is he amonge all the goddes of these Heythen (whom my father damned) that was able to delyuer his people fro my hande? fy youre God shulde be able to delyuer fro my hande. Therefore let not Ezechias now disceauē you, and let him not persuaue you eny soch thinge, and beleue him not. For yf no god of all the Heythē and kyngdomes might delyuer his people fro my hande and from the hande of my progenitours, then shal not youre goddes be able to delyuer you fro my hande.

His seruauntes also spake yet more against the LORDE God, and agaynst his seruaunt Ezechias. And he wrote a letter to blaspheme the LORDE God of Israel, and spake of him, and sayde: Like as the goddes of the Heythen in their londes haue not bene able to delyuer their people from my hande, euen so shal not the God of Ezechias delyuer his people fro my hande.

And they cryed with loude voyce in the Iewish langage vnto the people of Ierusalem that were vpon the wall, to make them fearfull and to be fayntharted, that they might wyne the cite. And they spake agaynst the God off Ierusalem, euen as agaynst the goddes off the nacions vpon earth, which were but the workes of mens hondes.

But contrary wyse the kynge Ezechias and the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos prayed, and cryed vnto heauē. And the LORDE sent an angell, which destroyed all the mightie men of the hoost, and the prynces and rulers in fy tentes of the kynge of Assur, so that he departed agayne with shame in to his owne londe. <sup>e</sup>And whan he wente in to his gods house, they fy came of his owne body, slewe him there with the swerde. Thus the LORDE helped Ezechias and them at Ierusalem, out of the hāde of Sennacherib ꝑ kyng of Assur, and of all other, and mayntayned the frō all on euery syde, so ꝑ many broughte presentes vnto the LORDE to Ierusalem, and Iewels vnto Ezechias the kyng of Iuda. And afterwarde was he exalted in the sighte of all Heythen.

¶ At ꝑ same tyme was Ezechias deedisicke, and he prayed vnto the LORDE, <sup>a</sup> which made him promes, and gaue him a wonder-token. But Ezechias recōpens not acordinge as was geuen vnto him, for his hert was lifted vp: therfore came the wrath vpon him, and vpon Iuda and Ierusalem. Neuertheles Ezechias humbled him selfe because his hert had bene exalted, with them at Ierusalem: therfore came not the wrath of the LORDE vpon them, whyle Ezechias lyued.

And Ezechias had very greate riches and worshippe, and made him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spyces, shyldes, and all maner costly vessell, and corne houses for the increace of corne, wyne and oyle, and stalles for all maner catell, and foldes for the shepe, and buylded him cities, and had many catell of shepe and oxen: for God gaue him very moch good.

¶ It is the same Ezechias that couered the hye water condyte in Gihon, and conveyed it vnder on the west syde of ꝑ cite of Dauid: for Ezechias prospered in all his workes. But whan the interpreters the chefe of Babilon were sent vnto him, to axe question at him (concernynge the wondertokē that had happened in the londe) God lefte him *to be tempted, that it might be knowne what soeuer was in his hert.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and of his mercifulnes, beholde, it is writtē in the vision of the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, and in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him ouer the sepulchres of the children of Dauid, and all Iuda and they of Ierusalē dyd him worshippe in his death: and Manasses his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ MANASSES was twolue yeare olde whā he was made kyng, <sup>b</sup> and reigned fyue and fyfte yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE (euen after the abominacions of the Heythen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and turned backe, and buylded the hye places, († which his father Ezechias had broken downe) and set vp altares vnto Baalin, and made grouces, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. He buylded altares also in ꝑ LORDES house, wherof the LORDE had sayde: † At Ierusalem shal my name be for euer. And vnto all the hoost of heauen buylded he altares in both the courtes of ꝑ house of the LORDE. And in the valley of the sonne of Hemmon caused he his awne sonnes to go thorow the fyre, and chosed dayes, † regarded byrdescryenge, and witches, and founded soyshtsayers and expounders of tokens, and dyd moch that was euell in the sighte of the LORDE to prouoke him vnto wrath.

Carued ymages also and Idols (which he caused to make) set he vp in Gods house, wherof the LORDE saide vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house at Ierusalem which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, wyl I set my name for euer and wyl nomore let the fote of Israel remoue frō the londe that I appoynted for their fathers, so farre as they obserue to do all ꝑ I haue commaunded them, in all the lawe, statutes and ordinaunces by Moses. But Manasses disceaued Iuda and them of Ierusalē, so that they dyd worse then the Heythen, whom the LORDE destroyed before the children of Israel. And the LORDE spake vnto Manasses and his people, and they regarded it not.

¶ Therfore dyd the LORDE cause the rulers of the hoost of the kyng of Assur to come vpō thē, which toke Manasses prisoner with bōdes, and bounde him with cheynes, † broughte him vnto Babilon. † And whan he was in trouble, he made intercession before the LORDE his God, and humbled him selfe greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed and besoughte him. Then herde he his prayer, and broughte him agayne to Ierusalem to his kyngdome. And Manasses knewe that the LORDE is God.

Afterwarde buylded he ꝑ vttemost wall of the cite of Dauid, on the west syde of Gihon by the broke, and at the intraunce of the Fysshgate, and rounde aboute *Ophel, and made it very hye. And layed captaynes in fyströge cities of Iuda, and put away fystraunge goddes and Idols out of fy house of fy LORDE, and all the altares which he had buylded vpon the mount of the house of the LORDE, and in Ierusalem, and cast them out of the cite, and buylded the altare of the LORDE, and offred slaynofferynges and thankofferynges thereon. and commaunded Iuda, that they shulde serue the LORDE God of Israel. Nenertheles though the people offred vnto the LORDE their God, yet offred they vpon the hye places.

B What more there is to saye of Manasses and of his prayer to his God, and the wordes of the Seers that spake vnto him in the name of the LORDE God of Israel, beholde, they are amonge the actes of the kynges of Israel. And his prayer and intercession, and all his synne and offence, and the rowmes wherin he buylded the hye places and groues and founded ydols, afore he hūbled himselfe, beholde, they are wrytten amonge the actes of the Seers. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in his house, and Amon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Two and twētye yeare olde was Amon whā he was made kyng, and reigned two yeare at Ierusalē, and dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done. And Amon offred vnto all the Idols that his father Manasses had made and serned thē. Yet dyd not he humble himselfe before the LORDE, as Manasse his father had submitted himselfe: but Amon trespased euer more and more. And his seruauentes cōspyred agaynst him, and slewe him in his house. Then smote the people in the londe all them that had conspyred agaynst kyng Amon. And the people in the londe made Iosias his sonne kyng in his steade.

The xxxiiij. Chapter.

A IOSIAS was eight yeare olde whan he was made kyng, and reigned one and thyrty yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the wayes of Dauid his father, and turned not asyde, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte. For in the eight yeare of his reigne whā he was yet but a childe, he beganne to seke the God of his father Dauid: and in the twolueth yeare begāne he to clense Iuda and Ierusalē from the hye places and groues, and earued Idols, and molten ymages: and caused the altares of Baalim to be broken downe before him, and the ymages that were thereon, hewed he downe. And fy groues and earued Idols and molte ymages brake he in peeces, and made them to dust, and seattered it vpon the graues of them that had offred vnto them. And the bones of the prestes brent he vpon the altares, and so clēsed he Iuda and Ierusalē, and in fy cities of Manasses, Ephraim, Simeon, and vnto Nephtali in their wyldernesses on enery syde. And whā he had broken downe the altares and groues, and smytten the Idols in peeces, and hewed downe all the ymages in all the londe of Israel, he came agayne to Ierusalem.

In the eightēth yeare of his reigne <sup>b</sup> whā he had clensed the londe and the house, he sent Saphan the sonne of Asalia and Maescia the Shreue of the cite, and Ioth the sonne of Ioahas the Chaunceler, to repayre the house of the LORDE his God. And they came to Helchias fy hye prest, and there was deluynered vnto them the money that was broughte vnto the house of God, which the Leuites (that kepthe the threshouldes) had gathered, of Manasses, Epraim, and of all the residue in Israel, and of all Iuda and Ben Iamin, and of them that dwelt at Ierusalē, and they deluynered it vnto the hādes of the worke men in the house of the LORDE, and gaue it vnto those that wrought in the house of the LORDE, where it was in decaye, fy they shulde repayre it. And the same gaue it forth vnto the carpenters and buylders, to bye fre stone and hewen tymber for the balkes in the houses, which the kynges had destroyed. And the men laboured faithfully in the worke.

C And ouer them were ordeyned, Iahath and Obadia the Leuites of the children of Merari: Zachary and Mesullam of the children of the Kahathites, to further the worke, and they were all Leuites that coulede playe vpon instruments. But ouer them that bare burthens and furthered all maner of worke in all the offices, there were scribes, officers and dore keepers of the Leuites. And whā they toke out the money that was broughte vnto fy house of the LORDE, Helchias the prest founde the boke of the lawe of the LORDE geuen by Moses. And Helchias answered, and saide vnto Saphan the Serybe: *I haue founde the boke of the lawe in y house of y LORDE. And Helchias deliuered the boke vnto Saphan. And Saphan bare it vnto the kyng, and broughte y kyng worde agayne, and sayde: All that was geuen vnder the handes of thy seruantes, that make they: and y money that was founde in y house of the LORDE, haue they gathered together, and deliuered it vnto y officers, and to the workmen. And Saphan the Serybe tolde the kyng, and sayde: Helchias the prest hath deliuered me a boke.

D And Saphan red therin before the kyng. And when the kyng herde the wordes of the lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kyng commaunded Helchias and Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, and Abdon the sonne of Micha, and Saphan the Serybe, and Asaia the kynges seruante, and sayde: Go youre waye, axe counsell at the LORDE for me and for the remnaunt in Israel, and for Iuda, concernynge these wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the indignacion of the LORDE that is gone forth ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not kepte the worde of the LORDE, to do acordinge as it is wrytten in this boke. Then wete Helchias (with the other that were sent from the kyng) vnto the prophetisse Hulda the wife of Sallum the Sonne of Thecoath the sonne of Hasra the keper of the clothes, which dwelt at Ierusalem in the secōde parte, and they spake this vnto her.

E And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man y sent you vnto me: Thus sayeth y LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge plagues vpō this place and the inhabitors therof, euē all the curses which are wrytten in the boke, that was red before the kyng of Iuda: because they haue forsakē me, and brēt incēse vnto other goddes, to prouoke me with all the workes of their handes. And my indignacion shal go forth vpon this cite, and shal not be quenched.

And after this maner shal ye saye vnto the kyng of Iuda, that sent you to axe counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of Israel concernynge the wordes that thou hast herde: Because thine hert is moued, and because thou hast humbled thy selfe in the sighte of God, when thou herdest his wordes agaynst this place and the inhabitors therof, and hast submytted thy selfe before me, and rent thy clothes, and wepte before me, therefore haue I herde the, sayeth y LORDE. Beholde, I wil gather the vnto thy fathers, and thou shalt be layed in thy graue with peace, so y thine eyes shal not se all the euell that I wyl brynge ouer this place, and the indwellers therof. And they broughte the kyng worde agayne.

Then sent y kyng, and caused all the Elders in Iuda and Ierusalem to come together. And the kyng wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda and inhabitors of Ierusalē, the prestes, the Leuites, and all the people both small and greate: and all the wordes in the boke of the couenaunt that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And y kyng stode in his place, and made a couenaunt before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, to kepe his cōmaundementes, his testimonies, and his statutes with all their hert and with all their soule, to do acordinge vnto all the wordes of the couenaunt that are wrytten in this boke.

And there stode all they that were founde at Ierusalem and in Ben Iamin. And y inhabitors of Ierusalem dyd acordinge to the couenaunt of God the God of their fathers. And Iosias put awaye all abhominacions out of all the londes that were the children of Israels, and caused all them that were founde in Israel, to serue the LORDE their God. †As longe as Iosias lyued, departed they not from the LORDE the God of their fathers.

The xxx. Chapter.

AND Iosias kepte Passeouer<sup>a</sup> vnto the LORDE at Ierusalem, and slewed the Passeouer on the fourteenth daye off the first moneth, and set the prestes in their offices, and strenghted them to their mynistracion in the house of the LORDE, and sayde vnto the Leuites that taughte in all Israel, and were sanctified vnto y LORDE: Put the holy Arke in the house that Salomon y sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel dyd buylde. †Ye shal beare it nomore vpon youre sholders. Se that ye serue now the LORDE youre God, and his people of Israel, and prepare the house of youre fathers in youre courses, as it was appointed by Daud the kynge of Israel, and by Salomō his sonne: and stonde in the Sanctuary after ſ course of the fathers houses amonge youre brethren the children of the people, And after the course of the fathers houses amonge the Leuites, and kyll Passeouer, sanctifye and prepare youre brethren, that they maye do acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

B And Iosias gaue lambes and yonge kyddes which were males, to the Heueofferynge for the comontye (all to the Passeouer for euery one that was founde) in the nombre thirtie thousande, and thre thousande oxen, all of the kynges good. And his prynees of their awne good wyll gaue to the Heueofferynge for the people, 7 for the prestes and Leuites (namely, Helchias, Zachary and Iehiel the prynees in ʒ house of God amonge the prestes) for the Passeouer, two thousande and sixe hundreth, And thre hūdreth oxen. But Chanania, Se-maia, Nathaneel and his brethren, Gasabia, Ieiel and Iosabad the chefe of the Leuites gaue the Leuites to the Heue offerynge for the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, 7 fyue hundreth oxen.

Thus was the Gods seruyce prepared, and the prestes stode in their place, and the Leuites in their courses acordinge to the kynges commaundement. And they kylled the Passeouer, and the prestes toke it off their handes, and sprenkled it: and the Leuites toke the skynnes off them, and remoued the burntofferynge there from, to geue it amonge the porcions of the fathers houses in the multitudes of their congregacion to offre vnto the LORDE, *as it is wrytten in ʒ boke of Moses, Euen so dyd they with the oxen also. And they dighte the Passeouer at the fyre † acordinge to the lawe. And that which was halowed, dighte they in pottes, kettels, and pannes, and made haist for the comon people. Afterwarde prepared they for them selues also and for ʒ prestes: for the prestes the children of Aaron were occupied in the burntofferynges and fat vntyll the nighte. Therefore must the Leuites prepare for them selues and for the prestes the children of Aaron.

C And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their place (acordinge to † Dauids commaundement) and Asaph and Heman, and Iedithim the kynges Seer, and the porters at all the gates. And they departed not from their office. For the Leuites their brethren prepared for them. Thus was all the Gods seruyce prepared the same daye, that the Passeouer mighte be kepte, and the burnt-sacrifices offred vpon the altare off the LORDE acordinge to the commaundement of kynge Iosias.

So the children of Israel that were at hande, helde Passeouer at that tyme, and the feast of vnuenced bred, seuen dayes. Sence ʒ tyme of Samuel the prophet, was no Passeouer kepte in Israel like this: and no kynge of Israel had holdē such a Passeouer as Iosias dyd, and the prestes, Leuites, all Iuda, and soch as were founde of Israel, and the inhabitants of Ierusalem. In the eightēth yeare of the reigne of Iosias was this Passeouer kepte.

D After this, whan Iosias had prepared the house, Necho the kynge of Egipte wente vp to fighte agaynst Carcamis besyde Euphrates. And Iosias wcte forth agaynst him. But he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: What haue I to do with the O kynge off Iuda? I am not come now agaynst the, but I fighte agaynst another house: and God hath sayde, that I shal make haist. Ceasse from God which is with me, that he destroye the not. Neuertheles Iosias turned not his face from him, but prepared himselfe to fighte with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God, 7 came to fighte with him vpon the playne besyde Mageddo. But the Archers shot at kynge Iosias. And the kynge sayde vnto his seruauantes: Cary me awaye, for I am sore wounded. And his seruauantes toke him from the charet, and caried him vpon his seconde charet, and broughte him to Ierusalem. And he dyed, and was buried amonge the sepulchres off his fathers.

And All Iuda and Ierusalem mourned for Iosias, and Jeremy bewayled Iosias, and all the synginge men and women, spake their lamētacions ouer Iosias vnto this daye, and made a custome therof vnto this daye. Beholde, it is wrytten also amonge the Lamentacions. What more there is to saye of Iosias, and his mercy acordinge to the scripture in the lawe of the LORDE, and of his actes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda.

The rrrvi. Chapter.

AND the people of the londe toke Ioahas the sonne of Iosias, and made him kynge in his fathers steade at Ierusalem. There and twentye yere olde was Ioahas whan he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes at Ierusalem. For the kynge of Egipte deposid him at Ierusalem, and condemned the londe in an hundreth talentes of syluer, and one talent off golde. And the kynge of Egipte made Eliachim his brother kynge ouer Iuda and Ierusalem, and turned his name Ioachim. But Necho toke his brother Ioahas, and caried him in to Egipte.

Fyue and twentye yere olde was Ioachim whā he was made kynge, and reigned eleue yere at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE his God. * And Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon wente vp agaynst him, and bounde him with cheynes, to cary him vnto Babilon. And Nabuchodonosor broughte certayne vessels of y house of the LORDE vnto Babilon, and put them in his temple at Babilon. What more there is to saye of Ioachim, and off his abhominacions which he dyd, and that were founde in him, beholde, they are written in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda. And Ioachim his soune was kynge in his steade.

Eight yere olde was Ioachim whan he was made kynge, and reigned thre monethes and ten dayes at Ierusalem, and dyd y which was euell in the sighte of y LORDE. But whā the yere came aboute, Nabuchodonosor sent thither, and caused him be fetcht vnto Babilon with the costly vessels and Iewels of the house of the LORDE, and made Sedechias his brother kynge ouer Iuda and Ierusalem.

<sup>b</sup>One and twentye yere olde was Sedechias whan he was made kynge, ⁊ reigned eleuen yere at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE his God, and submytted not himselfe before the face of the prophet Ieremy, which spake out of the mouth of the LORDE. of Israel. And all y chefe amonge the prestes, and the people, multiplied their synnes, acordinge to all the abhominacions of the Heythen, and dyfyled the house of the LORDE, which he had sanctified at Ierusalem.

†And the LORDE God of their fathers sent vnto them early by his messaungers (for he spared his people and his habitacion) but they laughed the messaungers of God to scorne, and despysed his wordes, and had his prophetes in derision, so lōge tyll the indignacion of the LORDE increased ouer his people, and there was no remedye of healinge. ‡For he broughte the kynge of the Caldees vpon them, and caused for to slaye all their yonge men with the swerde in the house of their Sanctuary, and spared nether yonge mā ner virgin, nether aged ner grand father, but gaue them all in to his hande. And all the vessels in the house of God, greate and small, the treasures in the house of y LORDE, and the treasures of the kynge and of his prynces, all this caused he to be caried vnto Babilon. And they brent the house of God, and brake downe the wall of Ierusalem, and all the palaces therof brent they with fyre, so that all the costly ornaumes of it were destroyed.

And loke who escaped y swerde, he caried he awaye vnto Babilon, ⁊ they became his seruauētes, ⁊ the seruauētes of his sonnes, tyll the Persians had the empyre: § that y worde of the LORDE by the mouth of Ieremy mighte be performed, euen vntyll the londe had ynough of hir Sabbathes: for all the tyme of the desolacion was it Sabbath, vntyll the seuentye yeares were fulfilled.

¶But in the first yere of Cyrus the kynge of Persia (that the worde of the LORDE spoken by the mouth of Ieremy mighte be fulfilled) the LORDE raysed vp the sprete of Cyrus the kynge of Persia, that he caused it be proclaimed thorow out all his empyre, yee and by wrytinge also, sayenge: Thus sayeth Cyrus the kynge of Persia: The LORDE God of heauen hath geuen me all the kyngdomes in the londe, and hath commaunded me to buylde him an house at Ierusalem in Iuda. go vp, and to buyld the house of the LORDE at Ierusalē. And all they that were aboute them, strenghted their hande with vessels of syluer and golde, with good and catell, and Iewels, besydes that which they gaue of their awne frewill. And kynge Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the LORDES house, *which Nabuchodonosor had takē out of Ierusalem, and put in his gods house. But Cyrus y kynge of Persia brought thē forth by Mithredath the treasurer, and nombred thē vnto Seszbazar the prynce of Iuda. And this is the nombre of them: thirtie basens of golde, and a thousande basens of syluer, and nyne and twentye knyues, thirtie cuppes of golde, and of other syluer cuppes foure hundredth and ten, and of other vessels a thousande. So that all the vessels both of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande and foure hundredth. Seszbazar broughte them all vp, with them that came vp out of the captiuyte off Babilon vnto Ierusalem.

The ij. Chapter.

THESE are the childrē of the londe that wente vp out of the captiuyte (whō Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had caried awaye vnto Babilon) and came agayne to Ierusalem and in to Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and came with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Seraia, Reeieia, Mardachai, Bilsan, Mispar, Begeuai, Rehum and Baena. This is now the nombre of the men of the people of Israel: The children of Phares, two thousande, an hūdreth, and two and seentye: the children of Sephatia, thre hundredth and two and seentye: the children of Arath, seuē hundredth and fyue and seentye: the children of Pahath Moab amonge the children of Iesua Ioab, two thousande, eight hundredth and twolue: the children of Elam, a thousande, two hundredth and foure and fiftye: the children of Sathu, nyne hundredth, and fyue and fortye: the children of Sacai, seūē hundredth and thre score: the children of Bani, sixe hundredth and two and fortye: the children of Bebai, sixe hundredth and thre and twentye: the children of Asgad, a thousande two hundredth and two and twentye: the children of Adoniam, sixe hūdreth and sixe and sixtye: the children of Bigeui, two thousande and sixe and fiftye: the children of Adin, foure hundredth and foure and fiftye: the children of Ater of Ezechias, eight and nyntyē: the children of Bezai, thre hundredth and thre and twentye: the children of Iorath, an hundredth and twolue: the children of Hasum, two hundredth and thre and twentye: the children of Gibbar, fyue and nyntyē: the children off Bethleem, an hundredth and thre and twentye: the men off Netopha sixe and fiftye: the men off Anathot, an hundredth and eight and twentye: the children off Asmaueth, two and fortye: the children off Kiriath Arim, Caphira and Beeroth, seuē hundredth and thre and fortye: the children off Rama and Gaba, sixe hundredth and one and twētye: the men off Michmas, an hundredth and two and twentye: the men of Bethel and Ai, two hundredth and thre and twentye: the childrē of Nebo, two and fyfye: the children of Magbis, an hūdreth and sixe and fiftye: the childrē of the other Elam a thousande, two hundredth and foure and fiftye: the children of Harim, thre hundredth and twentye: the childrē of Lodhadid and Ono, seūē hundredth and fyue and twētye: the childrē of Ierieho, thre hundredth and fyue and fortye: the children of Senaa, thre thousande, sixe hundredth and thirtie.

The prestes. The children of Iedaia of the house of Iesua, nyne hundredth and thre and seentye: the childrē of lemmer, a thousande and two and fiftye: the children of Pashur, a thousande and two hūdreth, and seuē and fortye: the childrē of Harim, a thousande and seuentene.

The children of Salomons seruauntes. The children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Pruda, the children of Iaela, the childre of Darcon, the childre of Giddell, the childre of Sephatia, the children of Hattil, the children of Pochereth of Zebaim, the children of Ami. All the Nethinims and the children off Salomons seruauntes were altogether, thre hundredth and two and nyentye.

And these wete vp also, Mithel, Melath, Thel, Harso, Cherub, Addon and Immer. But they coulde not shewe their fathers house ner their sede, whether they were of Israel. The children of Delaia, the children of Tobias, the children of Necoda, sixe hundredth and two and fiftye.

And of the children of the prestes. The children of Habaia, the children of Hacom, the children of Barsillai, which toke one of the daughters of Barsillai the Gileadite to wife, and was counted amonge the same names: these soughte the register of their byrth, and founde none, therefore were they put from the presthode. And Hathirsatha sayde vnto them, that they shulde not eate of the most holy, tyll there rose vp a prest with the *lighte and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one man, was two and fortye thousande, thre hundredth and thre score: besyde their seruauntes and maydc̃s, of whom there were senē thousande, thre hundredth and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundredth singinge men and women, senē hundredth and sixe and thirtye horses, two hundredth and fyue and fortye Mules, foure hundredth and fyue and thirtye Camels, and sixe thousande, seuen hundredth and twentye Asses.

And certayne of the chefe fathers, when they came to the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, they were well mynded vnto the house of God, that it shulde be set in his place, and gaue after their abylyte vnto the treasure of the worke, one and thre score thousande guldens, and fyue thousande pounde of syluer, and an hundredth prestes garments. So the prestes and the Leuites, and certayne of & people, and the syngers, and the porters, and & Nethinims dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

The iij. Chapter.

AND when the seuenth moneth came, and the children of Israel were now in their cities, the people came together euen as one man, vnto Ierusalem. And there stode vp Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren the prestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and his brethren, and buylded the altare of the God of Israel, to offre burntofferynge theron, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moses the man of God, and the altare set they vpon his sokettes (for there was a fearfulness amonge them because of the nacions and lodes) and offred burntofferings theron vnto & LORDE, † in the mornynge and at euen. The iiii. Chapter.

A BUT when the aduersaries of Iuda and Ben Iamin herde, that the children of the captiuyte buylded the tēple vnto the LORDE God of Israel, they came to Zorobabel τ to the princypall fathers, and sayde vnto them: We wyl buylde with you: for we seke the LORDE youre God like as ye do. And we haue done sacrifice vnto him, *ŷ*ence the tyme that Assar Hadon the kyngē of Assur broughte vs vp hither. But Zorobabel and Iesua and the other awnciēt fathers of Israel, answered them: It is not mete for vs and you to buylde the house of oure God, but we wyl buylde alone vnto the LORDE God of Israel, *ŷ*as Cyrus the kyngē of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the londe hyndered the people of Iuda, and made them afraied to buylde, and hyred councelers aganst them and hyndered their deuyce, as longe as Cyrus the kyngē of Persia lyued, vntyll the reigne off Darius kyngē off Persia. But whan Ahasuerus was kyngē, in the begynnynge off

And in the tyme of Artaxerses, wrote B Bisellam, Mithridath, Tabeel and the other of their counsell vnto Artaxerses the kyngē of Persia. But the scripture of ŷ letter was written in the Syrians speach, and was interpreted in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum ŷ chaunceler, and Simsai the serybe, wrote this letter agaynst Ierusalem to Artaxerses the kyngē.

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, and other of the counsell of Dina, off Arphasath, off Tarplat, off Persia, off Arach, off Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people ŷ whom the greate and noble Asnaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cities of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Canaan. And this is ŷ summe of the letter that they sent vnto kyngē Artaxerses:

C Thy seruantes the men on this syde the water and in Canaan. Be it knowne vnto ŷ kyngē, that the Iewes which are come vp from the to vs vnto Ierusalē in to that sedicious τ wicked cite, buylde the same, and make vp ŷ walles of it, τ bryngē it out of ŷ foundation. Be it knowne now therfore vnto ŷ kyngē, ŷ yf this cite be buylded τ the walles made vp agayne, the shal not they geue tribute, toll, and yearly custome, and their deuyce shal do ŷ kyngē harme. But now that we all are therby which destroyed the temple, we wolde no longer se the kynges dishonoure. Therfore sent we out, and caused the kyngē to be certified therof: That it maye be soughte in ŷ Cronicles of thy progenitours, and so shalt thou fynde in the same Cronicles, and perceaue, that this cite is sedicious and noysome vnto kynges and londes, and that they cause other also to rebell of olde, and for the same cause was this cite destroyed. Therefore do we certifie the kyngē, that yf this cite be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou shalt kepe nothinge on this syde the water by the reason of it.

D Then sent ŷ kyngē an answere vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the Serybe, and to the other of their counsell that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde ŷ water. Peace and salutation. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene opely red before me, and I haue commaunded to make search: and it is founde, that this cite of olde hath made insurreccion agaynst kynges, ⁊ how ſþ vproure and rebellion hath bene comytted therein. There haue bene mightie kynges also at Ierusalē. which haue reigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and toll, tribute and yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaudemēt, forbyd the same men, that the cite be not builded, tyll I haue geuē cōmaudemēt. Take hede now that ye be not negligent here in, lest the kyngē haue harme there thorow.

Now whā kyngē Artaxerses letter was red before Rehum the chaunceler and Simsai the Scribe and their counsell, they wente vp in all the haist to Ierusalem vnto the Iewes, and forbad them with the arme and auctorite. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Ierusalem, and continued so vnto the seconde yeare of Darius kyngē of Persia.

The 6. Chapter.

A THE prophetes, Aggeus and Zachary ſþ sonne of Iddo, prophced vnto ſþ Iewes that were in Iuda and Ierusalē, in the name of the God of Israel. "Then gat vp Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesna the sonne of Iosedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, and with them the prophetes of God which strengthened thē. At the same tyme came to thē Thathnai the debite on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their councelers, and sayde thus vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? Then tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buyldinge. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Iewes, that they were not inhibyte, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll there came a wrytinge therof agayne.

B This is the summe of the letter ſþ Thathnai the Debyte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their councellers of Apharsach (which were on this syde the water) sent vnto kyngē Darius. And these are the wordes that they sent vnto him: Vnto Darius the kyngē, all peace. Be it knowne vnto the kyngē, that we came in to Iewry to the house of ſþ greate God, which is buylded with all maner of stone, and balckes are layed in the walles, and ſþ worke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in their handes. Neuertheles we axed the Elders and sayde vnto them: Who hath cōmaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We axed their names also, that we might certifye the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs with these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruāites of the God of heauen and earth, and buylde the house ſþ was buylded many yeares agoo, *which a greate kyngē of Israel buylded and set vp. Howbeit whan oure fathers prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, †he gaue them ouer in the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kyngē of Babilon the Caldee, which brake downe this house, ⁊ caried ſþ people awaye vnto Babilon.

‡ Neuertheles in the first yeare of Cyrus the kyngē of Babilon, ſþ same kyngē Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God: for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalē, and broughte thē in to ſþ temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kyngē take out of ſþ temple at Babilon, §and deliuered them vnto Seszbazer by name, whom he made Debyte, and sayde vnto him: Take these vessels, go thy waye and bryngē them vnto the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Seszbazar, and layed ſþ foundation of the house of God at Ierusalem. Sence that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet is it not fynished. Yf it please ſþ kyngē now, let there be search made in ſþ kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kyngē Cyrus commaundement, that the house of God at Ierusalem shulde be buylded: ⁊ sende vs ſþ kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The 6i. Chapter.

THEN cōmaunded kinge Darius, that A search shulde be made in ſþ library of ſþ kynges treasure house, which laye at Babilon. So at Egbathanis in a castell that lyeth in the londe of the Meedes, there was founde a boke, ⁊ in it was there an aete wrytten after this maner: In the first yeare of kyngē Cyrus, cōmaunded the same kyngē Cyrus to buylde ſþ house of God at Ierusalem, in the place where the sacrifice is made, ⁊ to laye the foundation to beare thre score cubites heyght, ⁊ thre score cubites bredth, ⁊ thre walles of all maner of stones, and one wall of tymber, ⁊ the expences shalbe geuen of the kynges house. And the golde and syluer vessell of ⁊ house of God (which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalem, and broughte vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, ⁊ they maye be broughte vnto the temple at Ierusalem to their place in to the house of God.

Get you farre from them therefore, thou Thathnai Debyte beyonde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, ⁊ youre councelers which are beyonde the water. Let them worke in ⁊ house of God, that the Debyte of ⁊ Iewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to ⁊ Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of the house of God, that there shal diligently be take of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, ⁊ geuen vnto the men, and that they be not hyndered.

And yf they haue nede of calues, lambes, or goates for the burntoffrynge vnto ⁊ God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Ierusalem, there shalbe geuen them daylie as is accordinge: and se that this be not done negligētly, that they maye offre swete sauoures vnto ⁊ God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I geuē. And what man so euer he be that altereth these wordes, there shal a balke be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shal be hanged thereon, and his house shalbe prysed for the dede.

But the God that dwelleth in heauen, destroye all kynges and people, that put to their hāde to alter and to breake downe the house of God at Ierusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathnai ⁊ Debyte beyonde ⁊ water, and Sethar of Bosen with their councelers (to whom kyng Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And ⁊ Elders of the Iewes buylded, and they prospered thorow the prophecie of Aggeus the prophet and Zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylded, and set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundement of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerses kynges of Persia. And they performed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was the sixte yeaere of the reigne of kyng Darius.

* And the children of Israel, the prestes, the Levites, and the other children of ⁊ captiuite helde the dedicacion of the house of God with ioye, and offered at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundreth calues, two hundreth lambes, foure hundreth goates: and for the synofferynge for all Israel, twolue he goates, accordinge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the prestes in their courses, and ⁊ Levites in their offices, to mynister vnto God which is at Ierusalem, as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captiuite helde Passeouer vpon the fourteenth daye of the first moneth: for ⁊ prestes and Levites had purified them selues, so ⁊ they were all cleane as one man, and kylled Passeouer for all the children of the captiuite, and for their brethren the prestes, and for them selues. And the childrē of Israel which were come agayne out of captiuite, and all such as had separated them selues vnto them from the fylthinesse of the Heythen in the londe, to seke the LORDE God of Israel, ate ⁊ helde the feast of vnleuēded bred seuen dayes with ioye: for the LORDE had made them glad, and turned the hert of the kyng of Assur vnto thē, so that their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, which is ⁊ God of Israel.

The vii. Chapter.

AFTER these actes in the reigne of Artaxerses kyng of Persia, there wente vp from Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Seraia, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Helchias, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne Meraioth, the sonne of Serahia, ⁊ sonne of Vsi, the sonne of Buki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleasar, the sonne of Aaron the chefe prest, which was a quyeke scribe in the lawe of Moses, ⁊ which the LORDE God of Israel dyd geue. And ⁊ kyng gaue him all that he requyred, accordinge to the hande of the LORDE his God vpon him.

And there wente vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the prestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Ierusalem, in the seuenth yeare of kynge Artaxerses. And they came to Ierusalem in the fifth moneth, that is the seuenth yeare of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, deuysed he to go vp from Babilon: and on y first daye of the fifth moneth came he to Ierusalem, accordinge to the good handle of God vpon him: For Eszdras prepared his hert to seke the lawe of the LORDE, and to do it, and to teach the precepte & iudgment in Israel.

3 And this is the summe of the letter, that kynge Artaxerses gaue vnto Eszdras the prest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the LORDE and of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Eszdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutacion. I haue commaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which are mynded of their awne good wyll to go vp to Ierusalem, that they go with the, beyng sent of the kynge and of the seuen lordes of the counsell, to vyset Iuda and Ierusalem, accordinge to the lawe of God, which is in thy hãde: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, which the kynge and the lordes of his counsell geue of their awne good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitation is at Ierusalem) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all y countre of Babilon: with it that the people and prestes geue of their awne good wil vnto the house of God at Ierusalem.

¶ Take thou the same, and bye diligently with the same money, calues, lambes, goates, and meatofferynges and drynkofferynges, to be offred vpon the altare of the house of youre God at Ierusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy brethren to do with the remnaunt of the money, that do after the wyll of youre God. And the vessels that are geuen the for the mynistracion in the house of thy God, those delyuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And what so euer thinge more shal be nedefull for the house of thy God, which is necessary for the to spende, let the same be geuē out of the kynges chamber. I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded all the treasurers beyonde the water, y loke what so euer Eszdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauē, requyreth of you, that ye fulfyll the same diligently, vntyll an hundreth talētes of syluer, and tyll an hundreth quarters of wheate, and tyll an hãdredth Bathes of wyne, and tyll an hundreth Bathes of oyle, and salt without measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauē, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme & his children.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall D haue no auctorite to requyre taxinge & custome, and yearly rentes vpon eny of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in y house of this God. But thou Eszdras (after the wysdome of thy God that is in thy hande) set thou iudges and arbiters, to iudge all the people that is beyonde Iordane, euen all soch as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyl not diligently fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shall haue his iudgmēt for the dede, whether it be vnto death, or to be banyshed, or to be condemned in good, or to be put in preson.

Praysed be the LORDE God of oure fathers, which so hath inspyred y kynges hert to garnysh the house of God at Ierusalem: and hath enclenyd his mercy vnto me in the presence of the kynge, and his councelers, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (accordinge to the hãde of the LORDE my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel together, y they mighte go vp with me.

The viij. Chapter.

THESE are the heades of their fathers A that were named. a which wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kynge Artaxerses reigned. Of the childrē of Phineas, Gersom: of the children of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of Dauid, Hattus: of the childrē of Pareos, Zachary, and the men childrē nombred with him, an hundreth and fiftye. Of the children of Pahath Moab, Eleoenai the sonne of Serahia, and with him two hundreth males.

Of the children of Sechania, the sonne of Iehasiel, and with him thre hundreth males. Of the children of Adin Ebed, the sonne of Ionathan, and with him fiftie males. Of the children of Elam, Iesaia the sonne of Athalia, and with him seuentie males. Of the children of Sephatia, Sebadia the sonne of Michael, and with him foure score males.

Of the children of Ioab, Obadia the sonne of Iehiel, and with him two hundreth & eightene men children. Of the children of Selomith, the sonne of Iosiphia, and with him an hundreth and thre score males.

B Of the children of Bebai, Zachary the sonne of Bebai, and with him eight and twentye males. Of the children of Asgad, Iohanan the yongest sonne, and with him an hundreth and ten males. Of the last children of Adoniam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Ieiel and Semaia, and with them thre score males. Of the children of Bigeuai, Vthai and Sabud, and with them seuē males. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Aheua, & there abode we thre dayes.

And whan I loked amonge the people & the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. The sent I Elieser, Ariel, Semaia, Elnathan, Iarib, Elnathan, Natha, Zachary and Mesullam the rulers, and Ioiarib and Elnathan the teachers, and those sent I vnto Iddo & chefest at Casiphia, that they shulde fetch us mynysters for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo and to his brethren the Nethinims at Casiphia.

C And (acordinge to the good hande of oure God vpon us) they broughte us a wyse man from amonge the children of Maheli the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israel, euen Serebia with his sonnes and brethren, eightene. And Hasabia, and with him Iesaja of the children of Merari, with his brethren & their sonnes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whom Dauid and the princes gaue to mynister vnto the Leuites, two hundreth & twentye, all named by name.

“And euen there at the water besyde Aheua, caused I a fastinge to be proclaimed, & we mighte humble oure selues before oure God, to seke of him a righte waye for us, & oure children and all oure substaunce. For I was ashamed to require of the kynge, soudyers & horsmen, to helpe us agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure God is for the best vpon all them that seke him, and his violence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he herde us.

And I toke out twolue of the chefe prestes, Serebia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them there the syluer and golde and vessels for the Heue offeringe vnto the house of oure God, which the kynge, and the lordes of his counsell and prynces, and all Israel that were at hande, had geuen to the Heue offeringe: and there weyed I them vnder their hande sixe hundreth and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundreth talentes, and in golde an hundreth talentes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande guldens, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the LORDE, therefore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the LORDE God of youre fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chefe prestes and Leuites, and awncient fathers of Israel at Ierusalem in the chestes of the house of the LORDE. Then toke the prestes and Leuites that weyed syluer and golde & vessell, to brynge it to Ierusalem vnto & house of oure God.

E So we brake vp, from the water of Aheua on the twolueth daye of the first moneth, to go vnto Ierusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon us, and delyuered us frō the hande of the enemies and preuy waytinges by the waye. And we came to Ierusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on & fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the prest, and with him Eleasar the sonne of Phineas, and with them Iosabad the sonne of Iesua, and Noadia & sonne of Benui the Leuites, acordinge to the nombre & weight of euery one. And the weight was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captiuyte, which were come out of preson, offred burntofferings vnto & God of Israel: twolue bullockes for all Israel, sixe and nyuety rammes, seuen and seuentye lambes, and twolue goates for a synofferynge, all to the burnt offeringe of the LORDE. And they delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers, & to the Debytes on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The ix. Chapter.

WHAN all this was performed, the rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the prestes, ⁊ Levites are not separated from the nacions in the londes as touching their abhominacions, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pheresites, Iebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egipcians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken the daughters of the same, ⁊ their sonnes, and haue myxte the holy sede with ꝑ nacions in the londes: and the hande of the rulers and lordes of counsell hath bene principall in this trespase.

Whan I herde this, I rente my clothes and my rayment, and plucte out the heer of my heade and of my beerd, and sat mournynge. And there resorted vnto me all such as feared the worde of the LORDE God of Israel because of the greate transgression. And I sat mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice I rose vp fro my heuynes, and rente my clothes and my raiment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the LORDE my God, and sayde:

My God, I am ashamed, and darre not lifte vp mine eies vnto the my God: for oure wickednesses are growne ouer oure heade, ⁊ oure trespases are waxen greate vnto ꝑ heauē. Sence the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greate trespase vnto this daie, † and because of oure wickednesses haue we and oure kynges bene delyuered in to the hande of ꝑ kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captiuyte, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daye.

But now is there a litle and sodane graciousnes come from the LORDE oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maie geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God maye lighte oure eyes, and geue vs a litle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and oure God hath not forsakē vs though we be bondmen, and hath enclynd mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kynges of Persia, that they shulde geue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, and to sett vp the desolacion therof, and to geue vs an hedge in Iuda and Ierusalem.

O oure God, what shall we saye now after this? that we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruantes the prophetes, and saide: The londe wherin ye shal come to possesse it, is an vnclene londe thorow the fylthines of the people of the londes, in their abhominacions wherwith they haue made it full of vnclennes on euery syde. Therefore shal ye not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes, and their daughters shall ye not take vnto youre sonnes, and seke not their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and enioye the good in the londe, and ꝑ ye and youre children maye haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes and greate trespase) thou oure God hast spared oure wickednesses, and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, ⁊ haue let go thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abhominacions. Wilt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that nothyng remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped, as it is this daie. Beholde, in thy presence are we in oure trespase, for because of it is there no standinge before the.

The x. Chapter.

AND whan Esdras prayed after this maner and knowleged, wepte, and laie before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very greate congregacion of men and women, and children: for the people wepte very sore. And Sachania the sonne of Iehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Esdras: We haue trespased agaynst the LORDE oure God, in that we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the londe. Now there is hope yet in Israel cōcerninge this, therefore let vs make a couenaūt now with oure God, that we shal put awaye all the wyues (and soch as are borne of them) acordynge to the counsell of ꝑ LORDE, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, ꝑ we maye do acordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therefore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We will be with the, be of good comforte, and do it.

Then rose Esdras, and toke an ooth of the rulers, prestes and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they shulde do acordinge to this worde : and they swore. And Eszdras stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chamber of Iohanan the sonne of Eliasab. And whan he came thither, he ate no bred, and dranke no water : for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuyte.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorow out Iuda and Ierusalem, vnto all the children which had bene in captiuite, ſ they shulde gather them selues together vnto Ierusalem: And that who soeuer came not within thre dayes acordinge to the deuycce of the rulers and Elders, all his substaunce shulde be forfett, and he put out from the cōgregacion of the captiue.

Then all the men of Iuda and Ben Iamin gathered them selues together vnto Ierusalem in thre dayes, ſ is on the twentieth daye of the nyenth moneth: and all the people sat in the strete before the house of God, and trembled because of the matter, and for the rayne. And Eszdras ſ prest stode vp, and sayde vnto them : * Ye haue transgressed, ſ ye haue taken straunge wyues, to make the trespass of Israel yet more: confesse now therfore vnto ſ LORDE God of youre fathers, ⁊ do his pleasure, and separate youre selues from the people of the londe, ⁊ from ſ straunge wyues. Thē answered all the cōgregacion, ⁊ sayde with loude voyce: Let it be done as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, ⁊ it is a raynye wether, ⁊ they cānot stōde here without, nether is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are many ſ haue offended in this transgression.

Let vs appoynte oure rulers therfore in all the congregacion, ſ all they which haue taken straunge wyues in oure cities, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the Elders of euery cite and their Iudges with them, tyll the wrath of oure God because of this matter be turned away from vs.

Then were appoynted Jonathan the sonne of Asahel ⁊ Iehasia the sonne of Thecua ouer this matter. And Mesullam and Sabthai the Leuites helped them. And the children of the captiuyte dyd euen so. And Eszdras the prest, and ſ awncient fathers thorow the house of their fathers, and all that were now re-heard by name, separated theselues, and sat them downe on the first daye of the tenth moneth, to examē this matter. And on ſ first daye of ſ first moneth broughte they the matter to a conclusion, concernyng all the men ſ had takē straunge wyues.

And amonge the childrē of the prestes there were men founde ſ had takē straunge wyues, namely amonge the children of Iesua the sonne of Iosedec ⁊ of his brethrē, Maeseia, Elieser, Iarib and Godolia. And they gaue their hādes there vpon, that they wolde put awaye their wyues: ⁊ for their trespass offerynge to geue a rāme for their trespass. Amonge the children of Immer, Hanani ⁊ Sabadia. Amonge the childrē of Harim, Maeseia, Elia, Semaia, Iehiel, and Vsia. Amonge ſ children of Pashur, Elioenai, Maeseia, Ismael, Nethaneel, Iosabad ⁊ Eleasa. THESE are the actes of Nehemias the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuneth in y<sup>e</sup> moneth Chisleu in y<sup>e</sup> twētieth yere, that I was in the castell at Susan: and Hanani one of my brethren came with certayne mē of Iuda, and I axed them how the Iewes dyd that were delyuered and escaped from the captiuyte, & how it wente at Ierusalē. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuyte are there in the londe in greate mysfortune & rebuke. *The wallles of Ierusalem are broken downe, and the portes therof are brent with fyre.

Whā I herde these wordes, I sat me downe & wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted & prayed before the God of heauen, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen, thou greate & terrible God, †thou y<sup>e</sup> kepest couenaunt & mercy for them þy loue the ⁊ obserue thy cōmaundementes: let thy cares marke, ⁊ let thine eies be open, þy thou mayest heare the prayer of thy seruauant, which I praye now before þy daye and nighte for the children of Israel thy seruauantes, ⁊ knowlege the synnes of the children of Israel, which we haue commytted agaynst the.

33 And I ⁊ my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in þy we haue not kepte the cōmaundementes, statutes ⁊ lawes, which thou cōmaundest thy seruauant Moses. Yet call to remembraunce þy worde that thou cōmaundest thy seruauant Moses, and saydest: *Yf ye trāsgresse, then wil I scatter you abrode amonge the naciōs. But yf ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes ⁊ do them: though ye were cast out vnto the vttemost parte of heauen yet wyl I gather you from thence, and wyl brynge you from thence, euē vnto the place, that I haue chosen for my name to dwell there. They are thy seruauantes, and thy people, whom thou hast deluyered thorow thy greute power ⁊ mightie haude. O LORDE, let thine eares marke the prayer of thy seruauant, ⁊ the prayer of thy seruauantes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, ⁊ let thy seruauant prospere this daye, ⁊ graunte him mercy in the sight of this man: for I was the kynges butlar.

The ij. Chapter.

8 I N the moneth Nisan of the twentieth yeare of kyng Artaxerses, whā the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto þy kyng, and I was heuy in his presence. Then sayde þy kyng vnto me: Why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not þy matter, but thou art heuy harted. Neuertheles I was sore afraied, ⁊ sayde vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges life for euer, shulde I not loke sadly? the cite of my fathers buryall lyeth wayest, ⁊ the portes therof are consumed with the fyre. Then sayde the kyng vnto me: What is thē thy request? Then made I my prayer to the God of heauē, and sayde vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruauant be fauoured in thy sighte, I beseke the sende me in to Iuda vnto þy cite of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

33 And þy kyng sayde vnto me, ⁊ so dyd the quene þy sat by him: How lōge shal thy iourney cōtinue, and whā wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased þy kyng to sende me, and I set him a tyme, ⁊ sayde vnto the kyng: Yf it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the Debites beyonde þy water, þy they maye conueye me ouer, tyll I come in to Iuda: ⁊ letters vnto Assaph the lorde of the kynges wode, þy he maye geue me wodd for balkes to the gates of the palace, which are harde on the house ⁊ harde on the walles of the cite, ⁊ for the house that I shal entre in to. And þy kyng gaue me accordinge to the good hande of God vpō me. And whan I came to þy Debites beyonde the water, I gaue them þy kynges letters. And the kyng sent captaynes ⁊ horsmen with me.

But whan Saneballath the Horonite, ⁊ Tobias the seruauant of the Ammonites herde þy, it greued them sore, þy there was come a man which soughte the welth of the children of Israel. And whan I came to Ierusalem, ⁊ had bene there thre daies, I gat me vp in þy night season, ⁊ a fewe men with me: for I tolde no man what God had geuē me in my hert to do at Ierusalem: ⁊ there was not one beest with me, saue it þy I rode vpon. And I rode by nighte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, ⁊ to the Dongporte, ⁊ considered þy walles of Ierusalem that were broken downe, ⁊ the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wente ouer vnto þy Well porte, ⁊ to the kynges condyte, ⁊ there was no rowme for my beest, þy it coule go vnder me. Then wēte I on in the nighte by the broke syde, ⁊ cōsidered þy wall, ⁊ turned back, ⁊ came home agayne to þy valley porte.

And þy rulers knewe not whither I wēte, or what I dyd: for hithēr to had I not tolde the Iewes ⁊ the prestes, the councelers ⁊ the rulers, ⁊ the other þy laboured in the worke, ⁊ I saide vnto thē: Ye se the myserye þy we are in, how Ierusalē lyeth wayst, ⁊ how þy gates therof are brent with fyre, come, let vs buylde vp þy walles of Ierusalē, þy we be nomore a rebuke. And I tolde thē of the good hāde of my God which was vpō me: And þy kynges wordes þy he had spokē vnto me. And they saide: Then let vs get vp. And we buylded, and their handes were strenghted to good.

But whan Saneballat þy Horonite, and Tobias the seruauant of þy Ammonites, ⁊ Gosem the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs, ⁊ sayde : What is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall awaye agayne from the kynge? Then answered I them, and sayde : The God of heauen shal cause vs to prospere : for we his seruantes are gotten vp, ⁊ are buyldinge. As for you, ye haue no porciō ner right, ner remembraunce in Ierusalē.

The iij. Chapter.

AND Eliasib the hye prest gat him vp with his brethern the prestes, and buylded the Shepegate. They halowed it, and set vp the dores of it: euen vnto the tower Mea halowed they it, namely vnto the *tower of Hananeel. Nexte vnto him buylded ⁊ men of Iericho. And besyde him buylded Sachur the sonne of Imri. But the Fysh-porte dyd the children of Senaa buylde, they couered it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres of it. Nexte vnto him buylded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Hacoꝝ. Nexte vnto him buylded Mesullam ⁊ sonne of Barachias ⁊ sonne of Mesesabeel. Nexte vnto him buylded Sadoc ⁊ sonne of Baena. Nexte vnto him buylded they of Thecoa. But their greate mē put not their neckes to ⁊ seruyce of their lorde.

B The Oldgate buylded Ioiada ⁊ sonne of Passeah, ⁊ Mesullam the sonne of Besodia: they couered it, and set on the dores, lockes ⁊ barres of it. Nexte vnto them buylded Melacia of Gibeon, and Iadon of Morono, mē of Gibeon and of Mispā, for the seate of the Debyte on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Vsiel the sonne of Harhaia the goldsmith. Nexte vnto him buylded Hanania ⁊ Apotecarys sonne, ⁊ they repayred Ierusalē vnto the brode wall. Nexte vnto him buylded Rephaia the sonne of Hur, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem. Nexte vnto him buylded Iedaia the sonne of Harumaph, ouer agaynst his house. Nexte vnto him buylded Hattus the sonne of Hasabenia. But Malchia the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the sonne of Pahath Moab buylded ⁊ other pece, and the tower beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Sallum the sonne of Halohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ierusalem, and his daughters.

C The valley gate buylded Hanum, and the citesins of Sanoah. They buylded it, and set on the dores, lockes and barres therof, and a thousande cubytes on the wall, vnto the Dōgeporte. But the Dongeporte buylded Malechia the sonne of Rechab, the ruler of the fourth parte of the vynyardes: He buylded it, ⁊ set on the dores, lockes ⁊ barres therof. But the Wellgate builded Sallum ⁊ sonne of Chal Hose, the ruler of the fourthparte of Mispā: He builded it, ⁊ couered it, ⁊ set on ⁊ dores, lockes, ⁊ barres therof, ⁊ the wall vnto the pole of Sybah by the kynges garden, vnto the steeptes that go downe from the cite of Dauid. After him builded Nehemia the sonne of Aszbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethzur, vntyll the other side ouer agaynst the sepulchres of Dauid, and to the pole Asua, ⁊ vnto the house of the mightie.

After him buylded the Levites, Rehūm the sonne of Bani. Nexte vnto him buylded Hasabia ⁊ ruler of the halfe quarter at Regila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethrē, Banai the sonne of Henadab, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Segila. After him buylded Eser the sonne of Iesua ⁊ ruler of Mispā, the other pece hard ouer against the Harnesse corner. After him buylded Baruc the sonne of Sabai the other pece worshipfully ⁊ costly, frō the corner vnto ⁊ dore of ⁊ house of Eliasib ⁊ hye prest. After him buylded Meremoth the sonne of Vria the sonne of Hacoꝝ the other pece, frō ⁊ dore of Eliasibs house, vnto the ende of the house of Eliasib. After him buylded the prestes, the mē of the countre. After him buylded Ben Iamin and Hasub ouer against their house. After thē buylded Asaria the sonne of Maeseia the sonne of Anania nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui ⁊ sonne of Henadad the other pece from the house of Asaria vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner.

After him buylded Palal the sonne of Vsai, ouer agaynst the corner ⁊ the hye tower, which lieth out ouer frō the kynges house, besyde the courte of the preson. After him Pedaia the sonne of Pareos (As for ⁊ Nethinims they dwelt in Ophel, vnto ⁊ Watergate, towarde the east where ⁊ tower lieth out). After him buylded they of Thecoa ⁊ other pece ouer against ⁊ greate tower, ⁊ lieth outwarde, and vnto the wall of †Ophel.

But from the Horsgate forth buylded ⁊ prestes, euery one ouer agaynst his house. After them buylded Sadoc ⁊ sonne of Immer ouer against his house. After him buylded Semaia the sonne of Sachania & keper of the eastgate. After him buylded Hanania the sonne of Selenia, & Hanum the sonne of Zalaph & sixte, & other peace. After him builded Mesullam the sonne of Berechia ouer against his chest. After him builded Malchia the goldsmithes sonne, vntill & house of the Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer agaynst the counsell gate, and to the perler in the corner. And betwene the perler of the corner vnto the Shepegate builded the goldsmithes and the marchauntes.

The iiii. Chapter.

BUT whan Saneballat herde that we builded & wall, he was wroth, & toke greate indignaciō & mocked & Iewes & saide before his brethrē & the mightie men of Samaria: What do the impotēt Iewes? shall they be thus suffred? shall they offre? shall they perourme it in one daie? shal they make & stones whole againe, & are brought to dust, & brent? And Tobias the Ammonite beside him saide: Let thē builde on, yf a foxe go vp, he shall breake downe their stonye wall. Heare O thou oure God, how we are despysed, turne their shame vpon their awne heade, & thou mayest geue them ouer in to despisinge in the londe of their captiuite. Couer not their wickednesse, & put not out their sinne frō thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the wall, & ioyned it whole together, vnto & halfe heigth. And the people were well mynded to labour.

BUT whan Saneballat, & Tobias, and & Arabiās, & Ammonites, & Aszdodites herde, & the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne to stoppe vp & gappes, they were very wroth, and cōspyrēd all together, to come and fight against Ierusalem, & to make an hinderance therin. Neuertheles we made oure praier vnto oure God, & set watchmē vpō the wall daye & night ouer against them. And Iuda saide: The strēghth of the bearers is to feble, & there is to moch dust, we are not able to builde on the wall. And oure aduersaries thought: They shall not knowe nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge thē, and slaye them, & hynder & worke. But whan the Iewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as tē tymes, then set I the people after their kynreds with their swerdes, speares & bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, & lokēd, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chefe men and rulers, & to the other people: Be not ye afrayed of them, thynke vpon & greate LORDE which ought to be feared, & fighte for youre brethren, sonnes, daughters, wyues, & houses. Neuertheles whan oure enemies herde & we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their counsell to naughte, and we turned all againe to the wall, euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forth it came to passe, & the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the labour, & the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brest-plates, and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Iuda, which buylded on the wall, & bare burthē, from those that laded thē. With one haunde dyd they & worke, and with the other helde the weapon. And euery one & buylded, had his swerde girde by his side, & so buylded they. And the trompetters stode beside me.

And I sayde vnto the pryncipall men, & rulers, and to & other people: The worke is greate & large, & we are separated vpon the wall one farr from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noise of & trompe, resort ye thither vnto vs. *Oure God shal fight for vs, & we wil be labourige in & worke. And the halfe parte of thē helde & speares frō & morninge springe, till & starres came forth. And at & same tyme sayde I vnto & people: Euery one abyde with his seruaut at Ierusalem, & in the night season we maye geue attendaunce to & watch, and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren, & my seruantes, and & men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe oure selues.

The v. Chapter.

AND there arose a greate complainte of & & people, & of their wyues against their brethren the Iewes. And there were some & sayde: oure sonnes and daughters are to many, let vs take corne for thē, & eate, that we maye lyue. Some saide: Let vs set oure londes, vynyards & houses to pledge, & take vp corne in the derth. But some saide: Let vs borowe money of the kinge vpō vsury for oure londes and vynyardes. Now are oure brethrens bodies as oure awne bodies, and their children as oure children: els shulde we subdue oure sonnes and daughters vnto bondage, and some of oure daughters are subdued already, and no strength is there in oure handes, and other men shal haue oure londes and vynyardes.

But whan I herde their complaynte and soch wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduysed so in my mynde, † I rebuked the counselors, and the rulers, and sayde vnto them: * Wyl ye requyre vsury one of another? And I brougte a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: We (after oure abilyte) haue boughte oure brethren the Iewes, which were solde vnto the Heythen. And wyl ye sell youre brethren, whom we haue boughte vnto vs? Then held they their peace, † coulde fynde nothinge to answer.

B And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the Heythen oure enemies? I and my brethrē, and my seruantes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsury, let vs leaue it. Therefore this same daye se that ye restore thē their londes agayne, their vynyardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundreth parte of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayde they: We wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothinge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an oath of thē, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frō his house and labour, that maynteyneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all † congregacion sayde: Amen, and praysed the LORDE. And the people dyd so.

C * And from the tyme forth that it was comytted vnto me to be a Debyte in the londe of Iuda, namely from the twentieth yere vnto the two and thirtieth yere off kynge Artaxerses (that is twolue yere) I and my brethrē lyued not of soch sustenance as was geuen to a Debyte: For the olde Debytes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had takē of thē bred and wyne, and fortye Sycles of syluer: Yee and their seruantes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lōde. And all my seruantes came thither together vnto † worke. Morouer there were at my table an hundreth and fiftie of the Iewes and rulers, which came vnto me, from amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me daylie an oxe, and sixe chosen shepe, and byrdes, and euer once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet required not I the lyuyng of a Debyte for † bondage was greuous vnto † people. Thynke vpō me my God vnto † best, acordige to all that * I haue done for this people.

The vi. Chapter.

A ND whan Saneballat, Tobias and Gosem A the Arabian, and the other of oure enemies herde, that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no mo gappes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Saneballat and Gosem sent vnto me, sayenge: Come and let us mete together in the vyllages vpon the playne of the cite Ono. Neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstandyng I sent messangers vnto them, sayenge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I can not come downe. The worke shulde stonde still, yf I were negligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue the same answer.

B Then sent Saneballat his seruauant vnto me the fifth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: It is tolde the Heythen, † Gosem hath sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for † which cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kynge in these matters, and hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Ierusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Iuda.

Now shal this come to the kynges eares: come now therefore, and let us take oure counsell together. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, sayenge: There is no soch thinge done as thou sayest: thou hast fayned it out of thine owne hert. For they were all mynyed to make us afayed, and thoughte: They shal withdrawe their handes from the worke, † they shal not labour. Howbeit I strēgthed my hande the more.

And I came vnto † house of Semaia †

* Deut. 23. c.    † 2 Esd. 2. a

* 2 Esd. 1. 3. c.

sonne of Delaia the sonne of Mechetabeel. ⁊ he had shut him selfe within, ⁊ sayde: Let us come together in to þy house of God, euē vnto þy myddes of þy tēple, ⁊ sparre þy dores of þy tēple: for they wyl come to slaye þy, yee euē in the night wyl they come to put the to death. But I sayde: Shulde soch a mā flye? Shulde soch a mā as I am, go in to þy tēple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

For I perceaued, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he prophecie vpon me, neuertheless Tobias and Saneballat had hired him for money. Therefore toke he the money, that I shulde be afraied, and so to do and synne, that they might haue an euell reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God thinke thou vpon Tobias and Saneballat, acordynge vnto these their workes, and of þy prophet Noadia, and of the other prophetes, þy wolde haue put me in feare.

⁊ And the wall was fynished on the fyue ⁊ twentyeth daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fyfthe dayes. And whan all oure enemies herde therof, all the Heithen þy were aboute vs, were afraied, and their corage failed thē: for they perceaued, that this worke came of God. And at þy same tyme were there many of þy chefe of Iuda, whose letters wēte vnto Tobias, ⁊ from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Iuda that were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sachania the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Iohanan had the doughter of Mesullam the sonne of Barachia, and they spake good of him before me, and tolde him my wordes.) And Tobias sent letters, to put me in feare.

The vij. Chapter.

⁊ NOW whan we had buylded the wall I hanged on the dores, and the porters, syngers and Leuites were appoynted. And I comaunded my brother Hanani, and Hanania the ruler of the palace at Ierusalem: (for he was a faithfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other) and I sayde vnto them: Let not the gates of Ierusalē be opened vntyll the Sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stondinge in the watch, the dores shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citesyns of Ierusalem appoynted to be watchmen, euery one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for þy cite, it was large of rowme, and greate, but þy people were fewe therin, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gatherd together the pryncipall men and þy people, to nombre them, and I founde a register of their nombre, * which came vp afore out of the captiuyte (whom Nabuchodonosor þy kynge of Babilō had caryed awaie) and dwelt at Ierusalem and in Iuda, euery one vnto his cite, and were come with Zorobabel, Iesua, Nehemias, Asaria, Raamia, Naheman, Mardachai, Bilsan, Mispereth, Bigeui, Nehum and Baena.

This is the nombre of the men of the people of Israel. The children of Pareos were two thousande, an hundreth and two and seuentye: The children of Sephatia, thre hundreth ⁊ two and seuentye: the children of Arah, sixe hundreth and two and fyfthe: þy children of Pahath Moab amonge the childre of Iesua and Ioab, two thousande, eight hūdreth, and eightene: the children of Elam, a thousande, two hundreth, and foure and fyfthe: the children of Sathu, eight hundreth ⁊ fyue and fortye, the children of Sacai, seuen hundreth and thre score: the children of Benni, sixe hundreth, and eight and fortye: þy children of Bebai, sixe hundreth and eight and twente: the children of Asgad, two thousande, thre hundreth and two and twente: the children of Adoniam, syxe hundreth ⁊ thre score: the children of Bigeui, two thousande, and seuen and thre score: the childrē of Adin, sixe hūdreth ⁊ fyue and fyfthe: the childrē of Atter of Ezechias, eight and nyentye.

The children of Hasum, thre hundreth ⁊ eighte and twente: the children of Bezai, thre hundreth and foure and twente: the children of Hariph, an hundreth and twolue: the children of Gibeon, fyue and nyentye: the men of Bethleem and Netopha, an hūdreth and eight and foure score: the men of Anathot, an hundreth and eight and twente: the men of Beth Asmaueth, two and fortye: the men of Kiriath Iearim, Caphira and Beeroth, seuen hundreth and thre and fortye: the men of Rama and Gaba, sixe hūdreth and one and twente: the men of Michmas, an hundreth and two and twente: the men of Bethel and Ai, an hundreth and thre and twente: the men of Nebo, an hundreth and two and fyfthe: the children of the other Elam, a thousande, two hundreth and foure and fyfthe: the children of Haram, thre hundreth and twente:
